The Deputy Chief reported the results of his review in a memorandum dated November 17, 2011. In that review, he determined that, based on current DOE classification guidance, some of the information previously withheld as classified information may be released. Much of the information previously withheld as classified information, however, is still properly classified as NSI by Executive Order 13526, and must continue to be withheld from disclosure. The information that the Deputy Chief identified as NSI falls within section 1.4(g) of the Executive Order, which exempts from public disclosure information that reveals "vulnerabilities or capabilities of systems, installations, infrastructures, projects, plans, or protection services relating to the national security." The Deputy Chief has provided this Office with a copy of the Risk Assessment from which the NSI has been deleted. Beside or within each deletion, "DOE (b)(1)" has been written in the margin of the document. The denying official for these withholdings is William A. Eckroade, Principal Deputy Chief for Mission Support Operations, Office of Health, Safety and Security, Department of Energy.

Based on the Deputy Chief's review, we have determined that Executive Order 13526 requires the DOE to continue withholding portions of the Risk Assessment pursuant to Exemption 1 of the FOIA. Although a finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemption 1, the disclosure is prohibited by executive order. Therefore, those portions of the Risk Assessment that the Deputy Chief has now determined to be properly identified as NSI must be withheld from disclosure. Nevertheless, the Deputy Chief has reduced the extent of the information previously deleted to permit releasing the maximum amount of information consistent with national security considerations.

In view of the Deputy Chief's findings, we will remand the Risk Assessment to the NNSA for a new review. In that review, NNSA must consider whether it should withhold, under any other authority provided in the FOIA, any portions of the document not determined to be NSI that were previously withheld as NSI from Tri-Valley CARES. After completing its review, the NNSA should either release those portions or issue a new determination that provides adequate justification for the withholding of any additional information from the version of the Risk Assessment that it provides to Tri-Valley CARES. Accordingly, Tri-Valley CARES's Appeal will be granted in part and denied in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Tri-Valley CARES on February 25, 2011, Case No. TFC-0008, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) The National Nuclear Security Administration shall review the redacted version of the "Biological Risk and Threat Assessment for Building 368 Biological Safety Laboratory Level 3" issued by the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, July 14, 2005, which bears markings indicating where all national security information has been properly deleted. Upon completing its review, the NNSA shall either release to Tri-Valley CARES the redacted version of the document described above, or issue a new determination that provides adequate justification for the withholding of any additional information from the version it provides to Tri-Valley CARES.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Decision and Order

The National Security Archive filed an Appeal from a determination that the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) issued on April 21, 2011. In that determination, NNSA denied in part a request for information that the National Security Archive had submitted on November 29, 2006, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. NNSA withheld information that was responsive to the request after it determined that the information was protected from mandatory disclosure under two provisions of the FOIA. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the portions of the document responsive to the National Security Archive's request that were withheld from disclosure under Exemption 1 of the FOIA.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b).

I. Background

On November 29, 2006, the National Security Archive requested a number of documents concerning an interagency training exercise entitled "Mighty Derringer" that took place in December 1986. On April 21, 2011, NNSA issued a determination in which it released one document responsive to the request, with portions of that document withheld from disclosure pursuant to Exemptions 1 and 3 of the FOIA. The National Security Archive challenged NNSA's determination to withhold information under Exemption 1 in an Appeal filed on May 12, 2011. In its Appeal, the National Security Archive contends that because "the scenario [underlying the exercise] was entirely hypothetical, declassification of more details may be possible without harm to national security." Appeal at 1. Because, as explained below, Exemption 1 concerns classified information, we referred the portion of the Appeal that challenged the withholdings under Exemption 1 to the Office of Health, Safety and Security (HSS), which reviewed the Exemption 1 withholdings to determine whether they were properly classified under current guidance. We have now received HSS's report.

II. Analysis

Exemption 1 of the FOIA provides that an agency may exempt from disclosure matters that are "(A) specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy and (B) are in fact properly classified pursuant to such Executive order." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1); accord 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1). Executive Order 13526 is the current Executive Order that provides for the classification, declassification and safeguarding of national security information (NSI). When properly classified under this Executive Order, NSI is exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 1. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1).

The Director of the Office of Security (the Director) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information and UCNI. DOE Delegation Order No. 00-030.00, Section 1.8 (December 6, 2001). This authority has now been delegated to the Principal Deputy Chief for Mission Support Operations, Office of Health, Safety and Security (Deputy Chief). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Deputy Chief reviewed the "Mighty Derringer" document, focusing on the applicability of Exemption 1 to its contents.

The Deputy Chief reported the results of his review in a memorandum dated July 24, 2012. In that review, he determined that, based on current DOE classification guidance, some of the information previously withheld as classified information may be released. Much of the information previously withheld as classified information, however, is still properly classified as NSI by Executive Order 13526, and must continue to be withheld from disclosure. The information that the Deputy Chief identified as NSI falls within section 1.4(g) of the Executive Order, which exempts from public disclosure information that reveals "vulnerabilities or capabilities of systems, installations, infrastructures, projects, plans, or protection services relating to the national security." The Deputy Chief has provided this Office with a copy of the "Mighty Derringer" document from which the NSI has been deleted. Beside or within each deletion, "DOE (b)(1)" has been written in the margin of the document. The denying official for these withholdings is William A. Eckroade, Principal Deputy Chief for Mission Support Operations, Office of Health, Safety and Security, Department of Energy.

Based on the Deputy Chief's review, we have determined that Executive Order 13526 requires the DOE to continue withholding portions of the "Mighty Derringer" document pursuant to Exemption 1 of the FOIA. Although a finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemption 1, the disclosure is prohibited by executive order. Therefore, those portions of the "Mighty Derringer" document that the Deputy Chief has now determined to be properly identified as NSI must be withheld from disclosure. Nevertheless, the Deputy Chief has reduced the extent of the information previously deleted to permit releasing the maximum amount of information consistent with national security considerations. Accordingly, the National Security Archive's Appeal will be granted in part and denied in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the National Security Archive on May 12, 2011, Case No. TFC-0010, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) A newly redacted version of the document entitled "Exercise Mighty Derringer" will be provided to the National Security Archive.

January 23, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: The National Security Archive

Date of Filing: December 21, 1994

Case Number: VFA-0015

On December 21, 1994, The National Security Archive (NSA) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it by the Director (Authorizing Official), Office of Arms Control and Nonproliferation of the Department of Energy (Arms Control), who denied a request for information filed by NSA under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his determination, the Authorizing Official stated that no documents responsive to NSA's request could be located. In its Appeal, NSA challenges the adequacy of the search conducted by Arms Control.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been destroyed or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

I. Background

On December 23, 1989, NSA filed a request for information in which it sought records relating to the Reagan Administration's negotiations with Japan and the transfer of plutonium to Japan between 1980 and 1983. On December 5, 1994, Arms Control issued a determination which stated that it conducted a search and that no documents exist that are responsive to NSA's request. In its determination, Arms Control also informed NSA that its request was being forwarded to the Department of State's Freedom of Information Office for a response because Arms Control located relevant documents that originated in that Department. On December 21, 1994, NSA filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). NSA asks that the OHA direct the Authorizing Official to conduct a new search for responsive documents.

II. Analysis

The OHA has consistently stated that a FOIA request warrants a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W.R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have remanded cases where it is evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., Cowles Publishing Co., 16 DOE ¶ 80,136 (1987); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80, 108 (1981). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In considering the present Appeal, we contacted Arms Control to ascertain whether its search was reasonably calculated to uncover the information sought by NSA. That Office explained that NSA's request was originally sent to the DOE Office of International Affairs and Energy Emergencies (IE). However, DOE failed to issue a determination at that time.

As a result of extensive internal reorganizations, NSA's request was rerouted to Arms Control in September 1994. In NSA's original request, it asked that a search be conducted in several offices including the Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary for International Affairs and the Office of the Director of Nuclear Nonproliferation Policy. Arms Control has indicated that it has assumed the functions and has been given the custody of the files of some of these offices. Arms Control searched all of its files that might pertain to the subject of the request and indicated that it did not possess responsive documents.

While we believe that Arms Control conducted a reasonable search for responsive documents in its files, it does not appear that the scope of the search was broad enough. We are convinced that the offices originally named in NSA's request are reasonable locations to search for responsive documents. Nevertheless, not all of the files in those offices have been searched. It appears that the files of some of the offices named in the request were never transferred to Arms Control. As a result, any search performed by Arms Control that was limited to its own files could not have been adequate. Accordingly, NSA's Appeal should be granted, and this matter remanded to the FOIA Office for a search of all of the offices or their successors originally named in NSA's request. However, the files already searched by Arms Control need not be searched again.

In addition, in its Appeal, NSA requests that the search be broadened to incorporate the records of several additional offices. Although we generally do not permit appellants to expand the scope of their request at the appellate level, in light of the significant agency delay and the complexity of extensive internal reorganizations since NSA originally filed its request, we will also direct the FOIA Office to coordinate a search of the additional offices or their successors named in the Appeal. A copy of the NSA Appeal will be forwarded to that Office.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by The National Security Archive on December 21, 1994, OHA Case No. VFA-0015, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is remanded to the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts Division which shall (i) coordinate a new search for information in the following offices or their successors which were listed in The National Security Archive's original request: the Offices of the Deputy Assistant Secretary for International Affairs, Director of Nuclear Non-Proliferation Policy, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Nuclear Materials, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Intelligence and Deputy Assistant Secretary for Security Affairs and (ii) coordinate a new search of those additional offices listed in The National Security Archive's Appeal.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Cowles Publishing Company

Date of Filing:January 17, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0018

On January 17, 1995, Cowles Publishing Company (Cowles) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on December 16, 1994 by the Director, Office of Communications, Department of Energy Operations Office, Richland, Washington. That determination followed the remand from this Office of a case in which Cowles had appealed a previous decision by the Richland Operations Office (Richland) denying in part a request for information submitted by Cowles pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. See Cowles Publishing Co., 24 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1994)(Cowles). If the present Appeal were granted, the DOE would be ordered to release in its entirety the information that was withheld in the December 16, 1994 determination.<1>

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Factual Background

The three withheld documents were prepared by an employee of General Electric d/b/a Hanford Atomic Products Operation (GE/Hanford) at DOE's Hanford, Washington facility.<2> The Hanford facility is a government-owned/contractor-operated (GOCO) laboratory under the jurisdiction of Richland. At the time the documents were written, GE/Hanford was the management and operating (M&O) contractor at the facility and conducted all that facility's research and development activities under contract with the DOE's predecessor, the Atomic Energy Commission. Cowles, 24 DOE at 80,504. However, in the mid-1960s, Battelle Memorial Institute (Battelle) assumed the research and development functions connected with the Hanford facility, and another contractor assumed the management and operation of that facility. Cowles, 24 DOE at 80,504. The contract between GE and DOE officially terminated on December 30, 1967, although a transition period took place several years before and after this date. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Jay Brown (outside counsel for GE), law firm of Perkins Coie, and Dawn Koren (January 25, 1995). In the course of the transition, GE turned over several thousand boxes of documents at Hanford to Battelle. Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis and Dawn Koren (February 7, 1995). Each box consists of approximately 2,500 pages. Between 50 and 100 of these boxes consist of GE's human radiation experiment records, later described by Battelle as "Human Subject Committee" files. The documents at issue here were obtained by Richland from two of these "Human Subject Committee" boxes, which apparently contained the personal working files of a scientist working under Mr. C.E. Newton, Manager, Composite Dose Studies and Records at Hanford. Id. Richland has advised us that the "Human Subject Committee" files in which the three withheld documents were found have been part of Battelle's files since the transition period at Hanford. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis and Dawn Koren (February 1, 1995).

Each of the three documents at issue in this proceeding was prepared in 1963 by Jules Pearlman, an attorney at Hanford. It appears from the documents that Mr. Newton sought legal advice from GE/Hanford's attorneys relating to certain legal aspects of experiments involving what was then described as "voluntary and planned human exposure" to radiation. Mr. Pearlman rendered the requested legal advice to Mr. Newton in the form of three written memoranda. Mr. Newton, in turn, prepared a memorandum on December 12, 1963 for Mr. A.R. Keene, Manager of Radiation Protection at Hanford, in which he related some of the legal advice provided by Pearlman, and attached a copy of a document labeled "Procedure for Radiological Experiments" with an enclosed form and one of the three memoranda prepared by Mr. Pearlman. Messrs. Newton, Keene and Pearlman were employed by GE/Hanford at the time the subject documents were prepared and disseminated.

II. Procedural History

In a January 21, 1994 FOIA request, Cowles, publisher of the Spokesman Review, a Spokane, Washington newspaper, sought information pertaining to experiments conducted on human subjects at the Hanford facility prior to 1963. In a February 2, 1994 determination, Richland noted the prior release to Cowles of one document responsive to the request, the "Procedure for Radiological Experiments" with an enclosed form, and then withheld pursuant to FOIA Exemption 5 the three legal memoranda prepared by Mr. Pearlman. Exemption 5 protects from mandatory disclosure agency memoranda or letters which would normally be privileged in the civil discovery context. The three primary privileges incorporated into Exemption 5 are the deliberative process privilege, the attorney work product doctrine, and the attorney-client communications privilege. Richland stated that the three memoranda fell within the attorney-client privilege, and that they had retained their confidential nature over the previous 30 years. Letter from Karen K. Randolph, Director, Office of Communications, Richland, to Karen Dorn Steele, Reporter, Spokesman Review (February 2, 1994)(Original Determination Letter).

Cowles appealed, and in the Cowles Decision and Order issued on March 30, 1994, this Office found that we were unable to render a determination on the threshold issue of whether the withheld documents constituted "agency records" for purposes of the FOIA. Accordingly, we remanded the matter to Richland with instructions to investigate the facts at issue further and determine whether the memoranda are "agency records" and therefore subject to the FOIA. If it determined that the records were "agency records," Richland then was to determine whether the documents fell within the attorney-client privilege and whether that privilege had been waived during the period since the documents were prepared. Cowles, 24 DOE at 80,507.

On remand, Richland determined that the documents are not "agency records." Richland further noted that even if the documents were "agency records," they would be properly withholdable under Exemption 5, because they are protected by the attorney-client privilege and have not lost their confidential status. Letter from Karen R. Randolph, Director, Office of Communications, Richland, to Karen Dorn Steele, the Spokesman Review (December 16, 1994) (Determination Letter). Cowles is appealing the withholding of these documents. It argues that these documents are agency records, and that Exemption 5 is inapplicable because the attorney-client privilege either has never attached or has been waived. Letter from Duane M. Swinton and Kathleen D. Jensen (attorneys for Cowles), Witherspoon, Kelley, Davenport & Toole, to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA)(January 13, 1995)(Appeal Letter) at 2-4.

III. Analysis

Our threshold inquiry in this case is whether the withheld materials are subject to the FOIA. Documents of this type can become subject to the FOIA in two different ways. First, documents can meet the criteria set out by the courts for determining "agency records." See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Second, they can become subject to the FOIA under a new DOE Freedom of Information Act regulation at 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e) concerning contractor records. See 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884 (December 12, 1994).<3> In this case, we must determine whether records which were generated by one DOE contractor, GE, and are now in the possession of another DOE contractor, Battelle, are subject to the FOIA. We conclude that the three withheld memoranda are not "agency records" and are not subject to the FOIA under the new regulation.

A. THE WITHHELD DOCUMENTS ARE NOT "AGENCY RECORDS"

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records" but merely lists examples of the types of information required to be made available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, this Office has applied a two-stage analysis fashioned by courts for determining whether documents created by nonfederal organizations are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., Cowles Publishing Co., 24 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1994) (unrelated case); Concord Oil Co., 24 DOE ¶ 80,109 (1994); International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, 22 DOE ¶ 80,101 (1992); B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1987). That analysis involves a determination (i) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA and if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987).

1. Neither GE or Battelle Can Be Considered an "Agency" for FOIA Purposes

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). A private organization will be considered a federal agency only where its organizational structure and daily operations are subject to substantial government control. See United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807, 815-816 (1976); Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977); see also Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169 (1980) (Forsham).

In Cowles, we held that, with respect to the Hanford facility, Battelle is not an "agency" under the FOIA because DOE does not supervise Battelle's day-to-day operations. 24 DOE at 80,505; cf. Vista Control Systems, 24 DOE ¶ 80,104 at 80,510 (1994)(Vista)(University of California found not to be "agency" because structure and daily operations not subject to substantial federal control). However, we were unable to render a determination as to whether GE, at the time of its contract with DOE, was an "agency" under the FOIA. We noted that fact-finding in this area would be difficult because GE operated the Hanford facility over a quarter of a century ago. Nevertheless, we requested that Richland conduct an investigation on this issue. Id. On remand, Richland has been unable to discover additional relevant information. It also has not found any facts which would suggest that the relationship between DOE and GE was any different from the relationship between DOE and Battelle. Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis and Dawn Koren (January 31, 1995). Accordingly, we will proceed with this FOIA Appeal on the assumption that GE was not an "agency" under the FOIA.

2. The Withheld Documents Do Not Meet the Tax Analysts Test For "Agency Records"

As for the second prong of the "agency record" analysis, we are guided by the United States Supreme Court's holding in Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 144-45. In that case, the Supreme Court held that "agency records" are documents which are (i) either created or obtained by an agency, and (ii) under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. For purposes of analysis, the term "obtain" means that the agency must have possession of the material at the time of the request in order for the material to qualify as an agency record. Id.

The documents at issue were not created by the DOE, but by a GE attorney employed at Hanford.

Moreover, the DOE had not obtained the subject documents prior to the time Cowles' FOIA request was made. Rather, the DOE sought access to the "Human Subject Committee" files only for the purposes of responding to Cowles' FOIA request. Cowles, 24 DOE at 80,506. Under these circumstances, the documents at issue do not meet the "agency records" test set forth in the Tax Analysts case, because the DOE did not possess or control the information at the time Cowles filed its request. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; E.O. Smelser, 24 DOE ¶ 80,143 (1994); Cowles Publishing Co., 24 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1994); see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86, Kissinger v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136, 150-51 (1980).

B. THE DOCUMENTS ARE NOT SUBJECT TO THE FOIA UNDER THE NEW 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e) <4>

Under this Office's previous case law, see, e.g., Vista; John Lohrenz, 23 DOE ¶ 80,116 (1993); Government Accountability Project, 22 DOE ¶ 80,103 (1992), and as set forth in the new 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1), even if a contractor-acquired or contractor-generated document fails to qualify as an "agency record," it may still be subject to the FOIA if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency.<5> However, Subsection 1004.3(e)(2) sets forth an exception to the broad principle contained in 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1). If DOE-owned documents are found to be validly privileged as a threshold matter, they are subject to mandatory disclosure under the regulation only if already in the possession of the Government and not otherwise exempt under the FOIA.<6>

1. The Withheld Documents Are "the Property of the Government"

Although Richland was previously unable to locate the DOE's contract with GE in effect at the time the three memoranda were prepared, it has since come to light.<7> Contract No. AT(45-1)-1350 was signed by GE and DOE's predecessor, the Atomic Energy Commission, in 1959 (the 1959 contract). Article XVI of that contract, as revised by Supplemental Agreement No. 6 (the Supplement),<8> provides in pertinent part:

1. The Contractor shall establish and maintain a separate and distinct set of accounts and records covering the work under this Contract performed at the Plant, except for accounts and records of the Contractor's general offices relating to General and Administrative Expense. The systems of accounting to be employed shall include records and books of account showing the cost to the Contractor of all items of labor, materials, equipment, supplies, and services and other reimbursable items under this Contract, and when the monetary values thereof are furnished by the [Atomic Energy] Commission, such records and books of account shall reflect all assets and property furnished by the Government which are in the custody or control of the Contractor . . . .

2(a).The Contractor and the Commission shall jointly have title to all books, records, correspondence, instructions, receipts, vouchers, and all writings of every description created by the Contractor heretofore in the course of work . . . hereafter under this Contract (apart from the drawings, designs, specifications, and other engineering, technical, scientific, and operating data referred to in Article XVII of this Contract), hereinafter referred to as "business records".

2(e).Upon the expiration of the aforesaid custody period, all business records then remaining in its custody may be removed and retained, in whole or in part, by the Contractor or at the option of the Contractor, delivered, in whole or part to the Commission . . . . In either event, the party thereafter having possession of said records will afford access thereto by the other party, . . . , at all times. In the event the removal of such business records, . . . , is . . . required for litigation or for Government investigations, the party in possession of such records shall immediately notify the other . . . . [T]he Commission shall have the right to notify the Contractor to pack and ship . . . all or any portion of such records. . . .

2(g).This Section 2 of Article XVI shall be applicable to the ownership, access, custody, storage and disposition of records created under this Contract . . . .

Article XVII further specified that "all drawings, designs, specifications, and other engineering, technical, scientific, and operating data" prepared by the Contractor under the contract were the property of the DOE.

According to Richland's interpretation of this contract, the DOE specifically reserved title to, and the right to inspect, only the financial and technical records of GE, not GE's legal records. Therefore, according to Richland, the contract expresses a "clear negative implication" that GE owns the legal documents arising from the DOE/GE contract exclusively. Determination Letter at 2. Cowles argues in response that "silence as to ownership of legal records is insufficient" to render the records those of GE. Appeal Letter at 2. In GE's opinion, Section 2(a) of Article XVI describes only the accounts and records referred to in Section 1 of that Article, as indicated by the fact that the title of the article is "Records and Accounts, Inspection and Audit." GE also notes that Section 2 is indented on that page in comparison with Section 1, thus indicating that it is a subset of Section 1. Thus, according to GE, because the withheld documents do not constitute accounting records covered by Article XVI.1 and are not covered by Article XVII, the DOE has no ownership interest in the documents. See GE Letter I at 2; GE Letter II at 1-2.

After careful examination of the revised 1959 contract between DOE and GE, we find not silence, but a clear answer as to the ownership of the three legal memoranda. We agree with Richland and GE that the withheld documents are not subject to Article XVI.1 which covers accounting and financial records or Article XVII which covers technical and scientific data. However, we find that Section 2 of Article XVI covers a much broader range of material than the documents described in Section 1, including the three withheld memoranda.

Article XVI.2(a) specifically states that GE and the DOE shall have joint title to all "records, correspondence, . . . and all writings of every description created by the Contractor heretofore in the course of work . . . under this Contract . . . hereinafter referred to as ?business records.'" Furthermore, Section 2(g) of the contract repeats the broad scope of Section 2(a) by stating that it applies to the "ownership . . . of records created under this Contract." This contract was prepared and executed by knowledgeable, experienced parties and if they had meant to restrict the definition of "business records" to records of the type described in Section 1, they could have placed that explicit limitation in either Section 2(a) or (g). The parties clearly knew how to draft limitations to Article XVI, because they did so in Article XVII (and explicitly described that limitation in Article XVI.2(a)), where they provided that DOE alone would own the scientific records.<9> Because we find that no limitation was placed on Article XVI.2, other than Article XVII, we conclude that the three memoranda are clearly encompassed by the extremely broad phrases "correspondence" and "all writings of every description." Therefore, according to the contract between DOE and GE, DOE possessed joint title to these withheld documents. Thus, by virtue of the DOE/GE contract, these records are by contract "the property of the Government" within the meaning of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

Even if GE's contract had not provided that DOE possessed a joint right of ownership over these documents, we also find that DOE owns these documents under the DOE/Battelle contract. Although it remains unclear as to how these documents found their way into Battelle's physical custody,<10> it is undisputed that Battelle acquired the records in its performance of its contract with DOE, see 10 C.F.R. 1004.3(e)(1), and therefore, the terms of its current contract with DOE must be examined.<11> Clause 8(H) of that contract states in pertinent part:

(a) Government's Records. Except as provided in (b) of this clause, all records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this contract shall be the property of the Government . . .

(b) Contractor's Own Records. The following records are considered the property of the Contractor and are not within the scope of Paragraph (a) above:

. . . (6)Correspondence (including privileged or confidential records, including legal files) between the Contractor's corporate offices (including governing bodies) and the Laboratory as well as records of this type related to the functions of the Contractor's corporate offices and governing bodies.

In the event of completion or termination of this contract, copies of any such contractor's own records with the exception of paragraph (b)(6), shall be, unless prohibited by law, delivered to DOE or its designees.

Under Clause 8(H)(b) set forth above, there is no question that the withheld documents, if they had been generated by or sent to Battelle's "corporate offices," would be Battelle's sole property and not owned by DOE. Consequently, they would not be subject to the FOIA. See Westinghouse Hanford Co., 23 DOE ¶ 80,165 (1993). However, since the documents appear to have been neither generated by nor sent to GE's corporate office, let alone Battelle's, we must analyze whether they are within the terms of Clause 8(H)(b)(6), i.e., whether they constitute "records of this type related to the functions of the Contractor's corporate offices and governing bodies." We find that records dealing with GE's opinion of its legal liability resulting from its own activities cannot be considered to relate to Battelle's "corporate offices and governing bodies." The purpose of Clause 8(H)(b)(6) is to afford the current contractor, Battelle, the ability to retain its purely internal, confidential records. That purpose would clearly not be served by finding GE's documents within the scope of that clause. Therefore, under Battelle's contract with the DOE, these records would fall under Clause 8(H)(a) of that contract, rendering them the property of the DOE pursuant to contract under the case law of this Office and the new 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

2. The Documents are "Privileged"

We must next analyze whether the documents contain "information for which the contractor claims a privilege recognized under state and federal law." See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(2). Although the words of the new regulation refer to the contractor merely "claiming" a recognized privilege, we believe that the regulation must be interpreted to refer to cases in which the contractor claims a privilege and the DOE finds a reasonable basis for that claim. Otherwise, any privilege claim, no matter how frivolous, would remove a DOE-owned record from the reach of Section 1004.3(e). Accordingly, we will consider the applicability of the attorney-client communications privilege and the attorney work product privilege (both of which are recognized by state and federal law) in this case.<12> After carefully reviewing the documents at issue, we conclude that each of these privileges attached to the documents when written and has not been waived.

a. The Withheld Documents Are Protected By the Attorney-Client Communications Privilege

The attorney-client privilege exists to protect confidential communications, including facts, (a) from a client to an attorney, if for the purpose of securing legal advice and (b) from an attorney to a client, if the communication is based on confidential information provided by the client. NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 154 (1975); In Re Grand Jury Proceedings 88-9 (MIA), 899 F.2d 1039, 1042 (11th Cir. 1990); Schefler v. United States, 702 F.2d 233, 245 (D.C. Cir. 1983); In Re Grand Jury Subpoena of Slaughter, 694 F.2d 1258, 1259-60 (11th Cir. 1982); Brinton v. Department of State, 636 F.2d 600, 603-04 (D.C. Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 905 (1981); Murphy v. Department of the Army, 613 F.2d 1151, 1154 n.8 (D.C. Cir. 1979); Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Department of the Air Force, 566 F.2d 242, 252-53 (D.C. Cir. 1977). Not all communications between attorney and client are privileged, however. Clarke v. American Commerce Nat'l Bank, 974 F.2d 127, 129 (9th Cir. 1992)(Clarke). The courts have limited the protection of the privilege to those disclosures necessary to obtain or provide legal advice. Fisher v. United States, 425 U.S. 391, 403-04 (1976). In other words, the privilege does not extend to social, informational, or procedural communications between attorney and client. Government Accountability Project, 24 DOE ¶ 80,129 at 80,570 (1994) (GAP); C.D. Varnadore & Betty Freels, 24 DOE ¶ 80,123 at 80,556 (1994)(Varnadore). Correspondence which reveals the motive of the client in seeking legal advice, litigation strategy or the specific nature of the services provided, such as researching particular areas of law, fall within the privilege. Clarke, 974 F.2d at 129; see also Matter of Fischel, 557 F.2d 209, 211 (9th Cir. 1977).

The three documents at issue in this Appeal were all authored by Mr. Pearlman, an attorney employed by GE/Hanford. For purposes of attorney-client privilege, in-house counsel generally are treated the same as outside attorneys. See Natta v. Hogan, 392 F.2d 686, 692 (10th Cir. 1968). In each of the three instances, GE/Hanford, through Mr. Newton, sought legal advice concerning a matter relating to research and development activities conducted by GE as the M&O contractor of DOE's Hanford facility.<13> The first document withheld is dated August 14, 1963 and expresses Mr. Pearlman's opinions, evaluations and legal advice concerning the subject of human exposure to radiation. The second withheld document is dated October 15, 1963 and describes proposed government regulations concerning safe levels of radiation exposure. The third document is dated November 21, 1963 and focuses on three legal aspects of experiments involving voluntary and planned human exposure. This last document contains extensive legal analysis, recommendations and advice. Based on our review of the three documents, we find that each of the three documents contains sufficient evidence of communications between Mr. Pearlman and Mr. Newton which, if released, would have a tendency to reveal confidences of a client.<14>

However, Cowles argues that the privilege never attached because the documents were not kept confidential when: (i) Mr. Newton disclosed the contents to Mr. Keene and (ii) when GE allowed these documents to find their way into Battelle's files. Appeal Letter at 3. The first contention is clearly incorrect because under the test laid out in Upjohn Co. v. United States, 449 U.S. 383, 394-95 (1981), the documents retained their confidentiality. The information was communicated for the express purpose of securing legal advice for the contractor, related to the specific duties of the communicating employee,<15> and appears to have been treated as confidential within GE/Hanford.<16> See id. at 394. With respect to the second contention, the attorney-client privilege attaches in the first instance as long as the communication is not intended to be disclosed to third persons not involved in the rendering of legal services. Rev. Uniform R. Evid. 502(a)(5) (1986 Amendment). No matter what occurred after the writing of the documents by Mr. Pearlman, they were clearly intended to remain confidential.

b.The Withheld Documents Are Protected By the Attorney Work Product Privilege

The attorney work product privilege protects from disclosure documents which reveal "the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation." Fed R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3); see also Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 511 (1947). This privilege is also limited. It does not extend to every written document generated by an attorney. In order to be afforded protection under the attorney work product privilege, a document must have been prepared either for trial or in anticipation of litigation. See, e.g., Coastal States Gas Corp. v. United States Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 865 (D.C. Cir. 1980)(Coastal States). So long as there is "some articulable claim likely to lead to litigation," id., or potential litigation has become "identifiable", the work product privilege will attach. William Hyde, 17 DOE ¶ 80,130 at 80,570 (1988)(citing Kent Corp. v. NLRB, 530 F.2d 612, 623 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 920 (1976)). Further, the term "litigation" encompasses administrative litigation. Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom, 22 DOE ¶ 80,155 at 80,620-21 (1992).

In this case, we find that at the time these documents were created there was cause to believe that GE/Hanford might become involved in court and administrative litigation related to radiation testing on human subjects. Although it does not appear that litigation (aside from this FOIA appeal) has yet arisen out of any human radiation experimentation conducted while GE was the M&O contractor at the Hanford facility, see Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis and Dawn Koren (February 17, 1995), potential claims were outlined and fully discussed by Mr. Pearlman within the documents. The documents contain detailed litigation strategies, legal opinions, mental impressions and legal theories of Mr. Pearlman. Moreover, no discrete, easily segregable issues for which no litigation was contemplated are discussed within the documents. See Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 at 80,698-99 (1994).

Accordingly, all the documents consist of information protected under the attorney work product privilege, as well as the attorney-client privilege.

c. Neither Privilege Has Been Waived

In its Appeal, Cowles argues that, even if a privilege attached at the time the withheld documents were prepared, the privilege was subsequently waived when the information found its way into Battelle's files. Appeal Letter at 3. As stated in Footnote 10, we are unable to come to a conclusion as to whether these documents were deliberately turned over to Battelle or not. Assuming that GE gave these documents to Battelle under DOE's direction, we cannot find that waiver resulted merely because DOE ordered GE to turn over DOE-owned documents to a new physical custodian, Battelle. But assuming that these documents were mistakenly turned over to Battelle, we still find that waiver did not occur. Although this type of unintentional release has been occasionally found to trigger a waiver, see, e.g., Artesian Indus. v. HHS, 646 F. Supp. 1004, 1008-09 (D.D.C. 1986)(Artesian), we find that the two privileges attached to the three withheld documents were not waived because GE, DOE and Battelle share a common interest in the privileged documents. Alternatively, even if Battelle or DOE is considered not to have a common interest with GE, the requirements for a finding of waiver have not been met.

i. Battelle, DOE and GE Share a Common Legal Interest

Under the common interest doctrine, there is no waiver of attorney-client privilege by disclosure of privileged communications to third parties with a community of interest.<17> A community of interest exists where different persons or entities "have an identical legal interest with respect to the subject matter of a communication between an attorney and a client concerning legal advice . . . . The key consideration is that the nature of the interest be identical, not similar, and be legal, not solely commercial." Duplan Corporation v. Deering Milliken, Inc., 397 F. Supp. 1146, 1172 (D.S.C. 1974)(Duplan); see also Hundyee v. United States, 355 F.2d 183 (9th Cir. 1965)(common legal interest applied in criminal context). The content of such communication may not be disclosed without the consent of all parties sharing the privilege, although in a later controversy between the parties, any party may waive it. See Polycast Technology Corp. v. Uniroyal, Inc., 125 F.R.D. 47, 50 (S.D.N.Y. 1989)(citing Matter of Grand Jury Subpoena Duces Tecum Dated November 16, 1974, 406 F. Supp. 381, 385 (S.D.N.Y. 1975)).

The common interest doctrine has been extended considerably since Duplan. Because "?[t]he need to protect the free flow of information from client to attorney is so great whenever multiple clients share a common interest about a legal matter,'" United States v. Schwimmer, 892 F.2d 237, 244 (2nd Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 112 S. Ct. 55 (1991)(Schwimmer), even potential co-parties to prospective litigation, In Re LTV Securities Litigation, 89 F.R.D. 595 (N.D. Tex. 1981)(LTV), and civil defendants sued in separate actions, Transmirra, 26 F.R.D. 572, can be considered to share a common legal interest. Grand Jury Subpoenas, 89-3 and 89-4, 902 F.2d at 249. Further, it is unnecessary that there be actual litigation in progress for the common interest rule to apply, or that the attorneys for each party be present when the communication is made. Schwimmer, 892 F.2d at 244. Thus, even where a non-party has never been sued on the matter of common interest and faces no immediate liability, it can still be found to have a common interest with the party seeking to protect the communication. United States v. Zolin, 809 F.2d 1411, 1417 (9th Cir. 1987), vacated on other grounds, 491 U.S. 554 (1989)(Zolin).

Because of the unusual nature of the DOE's GOCO facilities, we have found no case law on the common interest doctrine which directly addresses the types of facts at issue in this case. However, the considerations weighed in the cases cited above are equally applicable to the present circumstances. Under their contract, DOE was bound to indemnify GE and thus obligated to defend it in litigation. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis and Dawn Koren (February 17, 1995). We find that this indemnification provision between DOE and GE creates an identical legal interest in the subject documents. See Cheeves v. Southern Clays, Inc., 128 F.R.D. 128, 130 (M.D.Ga. 1989). Cf. Miller, Anderson, Nash, Yerke & Weiner v. United States Department of Energy, 499 F. Supp. 767, 771 (D. Or. 1980)(potential co-party deciding whether to intervene in action had common legal interest with contractor). In sum, the interest addressed in GE's attorney-client communication was the potential liability for injury due to experimental radiation exposure. If found liable, DOE would be the ultimately responsible party. The test set forth in Duplan has therefore been met. Similarly, because DOE is also contractually bound to indemnify Battelle, these two entities share a common legal interest in the privileged documents.

Further, we find that GE and Battelle share a common legal interest. Although we have found no cases directly on point, we believe Battelle became a successor-in-interest to GE with respect to these privileges. When corporations merge, the surviving corporation takes on the liabilities of the dissolved corporation. John Wiley & Sons, Inc. v. Livingston, 376 U.S. 543 (1964).<18> While this is not exactly the case here, Battelle essentially "stepped into the shoes" of GE at the Hanford facility, to assume precisely the same research and development functions which had triggered the request for legal advice by a GE employee at Hanford. Most likely, 80% to 90% of GE employees, primarily low and middle level, continued to work at the Hanford facility under Battelle, see Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis and Dawn Koren (February 17, 1995), and, of course, the physical location and "customer" remained the same. See Turner v. Bituminous Casualty Co., 244 N.W.2d 873, 879 (Mich. 1976); Exeter Shell Service, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 82,536 at 85,108-09 (1980)(where the site, operating assets, inventories, customers, and management continue unchanged through the transfer of ownership, the successor may be held liable for the predecessor's obligations). It also appears that Battelle and GE are potential co-parties to prospective litigation, such as was the case in LTV. Taking these circumstances into account in combination with the fact that the case law relevant to the transfer of GOCO facilities contains no precedents to the contrary, we conclude that GE and Battelle have so many interests in common that they must be considered to share a common legal interest in the withheld documents.<19> Thus, when the documents circulated from GE/Hanford to Battelle during the transition period, and then to DOE after the FOIA request, no waiver occurred.

ii.The Requirements for Waiver Have Not Been Met

Even if we were to find no common legal interest in the withheld documents exists among GE, DOE and Batelle, we would still find that the requirements for waiver have not been met. The trend in determining whether an inadvertent disclosure to a third party will be considered a waiver is to use a balancing test. Courts examine a number of different factors in making this determination, including reasonableness of precautions to prevent inadvertent disclosure, number of inadvertent disclosures, any delay taken to rectify error, the amount of documents involved in total, and the amount of documents inadvertently disclosed. See Fleet Nat. Bank v. Tonneson & Co., 150 F.R.D. 10, 16 (D. Mass. 1993)(Fleet); Martin v. Valley Nat'l Bank of Arizona, No. 89 Civ. 8361 PKL, 1992 WL 196798 (mem.)(S.D.N.Y. Aug. 6, 1992)(Martin); Eureka Financial Corp. v. Hartford Acc. And Indem. Co., 136 F.R.D. 179 (E.D. Cal. 1991); In re Consolidated Litigation Concerning Int'l Harvester's Disposition of Wisconsin Steel, 666 F. Supp. 1148, 1154-56 (N.D. Ill. 1987); Parkway Gallery v. Kittinger/Pennsylvania House Group, 116 F.R.D. 46, 50 (M.D.N.C. 1987)(Parkway); cf. Georgetown Manor, Inc. v. Ethan Allen, Inc., 753 F. Supp. 936, 938 (S.D. Fla. 1991); Mendenhall v. Barber-Green Co., 531 F. Supp. 951, 954 (N.D. Ill. 1982)(inadvertent disclosure by an attorney never results in waiver). But see In re Grand Jury Investigation of Ocean Transp., 604 F.2d 672, 675 (D.C. Cir.), cert. denied sub nom. Sea-Land Service, Inc., 444 U.S. 915 (1979); Artesian, 646 F. Supp. at 1008-09 (inadvertent disclosure results automatically in waiver). We note that it is quite difficult to waive the privilege attached to work-product material because release of this type of material would harm the vitality of the adversary system, in contrast to the attorney-client privilege, which is considered to impede the search for truth and thus construed narrowly. See, e.g., In re Sealed Case, 676 F.2d 793, 809 (D.C. Cir. 1982); United States v. American Tel. & Tel., 642 F.2d 1285, 1299 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Fleet, 150 F.R.D. at 14-15.

Although it is true that GE has allowed over twenty-five years to pass after transfer of the documents to Battelle before asserting its claim of privilege, we find the other factors in this case compel us to find in favor of non-waiver. There is no evidence that Battelle failed to treat the documents as confidential and privileged, Record of Telephone Conversation between Yvonne Sherman and Dawn Koren (February 23, 1995), and GE responded immediately after notification of Cowles' FOIA request by objecting to release of the documents and requesting return of the documents without delay. GE Letter I at 4. Most incredibly, although between 125,000 and 250,000 documents relating to human radiation experimentation were turned over to Battelle, the Pearlman memoranda appear to be the only privileged documents inadvertently turned over to Battelle.

Under these circumstances, we find that GE possesses a reasonable basis for its claim of privilege, has not waived the claim, and therefore meets the requirements of Section 1004.3(e)(2). To find otherwise, would be to draw an adverse inference from the fact that GE failed to find "a needle in a haystack" and impose an overwhelming, unfair burden on outgoing GOCO contractors. See, e.g., Transamerica Computer Co. v. International Business Machines Corp., 573 F.2d 646, 651-52 (9th Cir. 1978)(no waiver when 5,800 privileged documents produced along with 17 million non-privileged documents); Martin, 1992 WL 196798 at * 4 (no waiver where 5 protected documents produced out of 50,000); see also Richard Marcus, The Perils of Privilege: Waiver and the Litigator, 84 Mich. L. Rev. 1605 (1986). We cannot countenance a result so unreasonable in this case.<20>

3.The DOE Does Not Have "Possession" of the Documents Within the Meaning of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(2)

Section 1004.3(e)(2) exempts privileged documents, which are not in DOE's "possession," from the reach of the new regulation. We conclude that the term "possession" must refer to possession at the time of the request, in conformance with Tax Analysts. Otherwise, validly privileged documents which do not meet the test for "agency records" could be rendered subject to the FOIA under the new regulation simply by being identified and transmitted to DOE for its FOIA review. Instead, the DOE specifically protected these types of documents from the regulation's reach. See 59 Fed. Reg. 63,883 (1994). In this case, DOE obtained the subject documents after the FOIA request was made. Accordingly, because the three withheld documents are validly privileged and were not in the possession of the DOE at the time of the request, we find that they are not subject to the FOIA under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(2).<21>

IV. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the three withheld memoranda (with the attachments to the October 15, 1963 and November 21, 1963 memos) are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to the FOIA under the new DOE contractor records regulation. Although we find that under the revised 1959 DOE/GE contract and under Battelle's contract with the DOE, the DOE owns the documents at issue, we conclude that they are protected by the attorney-client communications privilege and the attorney work product privilege. We also find that the documents have maintained their privileged status over the past twenty-five years, and that their transmittal to Battelle and to DOE did not trigger a waiver of the two privileges. Thus, the documents are protected from disclosure by 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(2). Accordingly, we shall deny Cowles' FOIA Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Cowles Publishing Company on January 17, 1995, Case Number VFA-0018, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Date: February 28, 1995

<1>/ After the Appeal was filed, three pages of copies of the Federal Register, which were attached to one of the withheld documents, were released to Cowles, with the permission of General Electric (GE). See Letter from Harold J. Neems, Litigation Counsel, GE, to Dawn L. Koren, OHA Staff Attorney (January 27, 1995)(GE Letter I) and Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis, Office of Chief Counsel, Richland, and Dawn L. Koren (February 7, 1995).

<2>/ Two of the withheld documents were written on GE/Hanford's letterhead, which included its location of Richland, Washington.

<3>/ Even though the effective date of this regulation was January 11, 1995, after the date of the Richland determination, we will apply it in deciding this Appeal, as we consider ourselves bound by a regulation constituting a formal statement of DOE policy.

The new regulation creates a change in the terminology previously used by this Office. Relying on the wording of DOE Order 1700.1, we previously described a document contractually owned by the DOE as an "agency record" and therefore considered it subject to the FOIA. See Cowles, 24 DOE at 80,505 (citing John Lohrenz, 23 DOE ¶ 80,116 (1993); Government Accountability Project, 22 DOE ¶ 80,103 (1992)). However, the Preamble to the new regulation clarifies that although documents falling within the new regulation are indeed subject to the FOIA, they are not "agency records" within the meaning of Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 142-45 (1989)(Tax Analysts). See 59 Fed. Reg. 63,883 (1994). Accordingly, this Office will hereinafter use the terminology of the new regulation in cases involving contractor documents.

(1) When a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b).

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (e)(1) of this section, records owned by the Government under contract that contain . . . information for which the contractor claims a privilege recognized under federal or state law shall be made available only when they are in the possession of the Government and not otherwise exempt under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b).

<5>/ GE argues that Subsection 1004.3(e)(1) does not apply in this case because the DOE/GE contract did not use the exact wording utilized in the regulation, "any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government." Letter from Harold J. Neems, Litigation Counsel, GE, to Dawn L. Koren at 2 (February 2, 1995)(GE Letter II). We cannot accept this overly legalistic argument. It is clear from the regulatory preamble that the application of the new regulation is not tied to the use of a specific contractual formula, but instead applies to any contractual provision giving DOE ownership rights in any portion of records acquired or created by the contractor in its performance of that contract. See 59 Fed. Reg. 63,883 (1994)("DOE's management and operating contracts provide that most records . . . are the property of the government.")(emphasis added).

<6>/ However, Section 1004.3(e)(3)(i) states that the new regulation does not "affect or alter contractors' obligations to provide to DOE upon request any records that DOE owns under contract, or DOE's rights under contract to obtain any contractor records and to determine their disposition, including public dissemination."

<7>/ Richland, however, was unable to locate correspondence that might have aided in interpreting the contract's provisions. Determination Letter at 1.

<8>/ During the lengthy transition period between GE and Battelle, a series of supplements to the 1959 contract were signed. As far as can be discerned, only Supplement No. 6 was relevant to the ownership of records issue. This Supplement changed the period of custody (not ownership) of the business records described in Article XVI and stated that DOE would reimburse GE for the cost of removal of some of the records. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Jay Brown and Dawn L. Koren (January 25, 1995).

<9>/ In response to GE's indentation argument, we note that the indentation of Section 2 appears to have been done because it was composed of many subparts, unlike the other sections of Article XVI, which have no subparts and are not indented.

<10>/ Richland asserted that these memoranda, by their nature, indicate that they were clearly intended to remain confidential and the fact that these memoranda appear to be the only legal documents mixed in with a scientist's laboratory documents indicates they were misfiled. See Determination Letter at 2-3; Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis and Dawn Koren (February 7, 1995). However, it is also possible that DOE directed GE to turn over these documents to a new physical custodian for the documents, Battelle. Richland advised us that when a contract terminates at a government-owned/contractor-operated (GOCO) facility, the DOE customarily requires the exiting contractor to turn over all DOE-owned records to the successor contractor. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Davis and Dawn Koren (February 7, 1995). Because of the lapse in time, we find that it cannot now be determined how these documents found their way into Battelle's files.

<11>/ We requested in writing that Battelle express its views as to the applicability of the Battelle/DOE contract. It declined to do so. See Letter from Dawn L. Koren to Karen Hoewing, Manager of Legal Office, Battelle (January 24, 1995); Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Karen Hoewing (January 24, 1995).

<12>/ GE has not expressly relied on the attorney work product doctrine as a rationale for not disclosing the documents, as seems to be required under Section 1004.3(e)(2). However, because GE's analysis of the applicability of the attorney-client privilege so closely relates to a work product privilege argument, we find that it is appropriate to make a work product determination.

<13>/ In its Original Determination, Richland referred to Mr. Newton as the client of Mr. Pearlman. We believe the proper characterization of the relationship is that the client is the contractor, GE/Hanford, and that Mr. Newton was acting on behalf of the contractor and not on behalf of his personal interests. The fact that Mr. Newton relayed the legal information to another Hanford manager employed by GE, Mr. Keene, reinforces the fact that the client at issue is GE/Hanford.

<14>/ Attached to the third memo is a page containing the wording of several specific statutes, which Mr. Pearlman analyzed in response to information given him by GE/Hanford. We also find that this attachment, if revealed, would tend to reveal confidential communications between a client and its lawyer.

<15>/ Mr. Newton was the Manager of Composite Dose Studies and Records and Mr. Keene was the Manager of Radiation Protection. Their duties clearly necessitated the communication of Mr. Pearlman's legal advice.

<16>/ One of the three memos has each of its pages marked "Strictly Private." The three memos do not appear to have been widely distributed at Hanford.

<17>/ The common interest doctrine also applies to communications protected by the work product doctrine. See In Re Grand Jury Subpoenas, 89-3 and 89-4, 902 F.2d 244, 249 (4th Cir. 1990)(Grand Jury Subpoenas, 89-3 and 89-4)(citing Transmirra Products Corp. v. Monsanto Chemical Co., 26 F.R.D. 572, 578 (S.D.N.Y. 1960)(Transmirra)).

<18>/ Alternatively, if a corporation purchases the assets of another corporation, liabilities are assumed in those circumstances where the corporate seller dissolves and the corporate buyer is so similar to the corporate seller that it is in reality a "mere continuation" of the old corporation or where the transaction amounted to a de facto merger. See Robert Gregory, 11 DOE ¶ 82,527 at 85,114 (1983)(citing Oak Distributing Co. v. Miller Brewing Co., 370 F. Supp. 889, 903 (E.D. Mich. 1973)).

<19>/ Alternatively, Battelle could be characterized as a mere "physical custodian" of the privileged documents on behalf of DOE, rather than the holder of a common legal interest. It appears that the documents were not copied, distributed or even read while in Battelle's possession. Record of Telephone Conversation between Yvonne Sherman, FOI Officer, Office of Communications, Richland, and Dawn Koren (February 23, 1995). Thus, because GE's transfer to DOE would not be a waiver, GE's transfer to DOE's physical custodian is not a waiver.

<20>/ Cowles asserted that, because it had previously obtained the December 12, 1963 memorandum between Mr. Newton to Mr. Keene which referred to one of Mr. Pearlman's memoranda, a subject matter waiver had occurred and that the "fairness"/"selective disclosure" doctrine requires the release of all three Pearlman memoranda. Appeal Letter at 3-4. However, this doctrine presupposes a voluntary disclosure by the privilege holder. See In re Von Bulow, 828 F.2d 94, 101 (2nd Cir. 1987)(Von Bulow); In re Sealed Case, 676 F.2d at 809 n.54; Parkway, 116 F.R.D. at 52; Standard Chartered Bank PLC v. Ayala Int'l Holdings (U.S.) Inc., 111 F.R.D. 76, 85 (S.D.N.Y. 1986). That is not the case here. First, the December 12, 1963 memorandum was apparently not released by DOE, GE or Battelle. Record of Telephone Conversation between Yvonne Sherman and Dawn Koren (February 23, 1995). Second, these doctrines are primarily applicable when the party claiming privilege has sought to use the disclosed information in order to benefit itself, which has not occurred in this case. See Von Bulow, 828 F.2d at 103. Thus, no subject matter waiver has occurred.

<21>/ Thus, we need not address Richland's determination that the documents are exempt from disclosure under Exemption 5 and Cowles' response to that determination. Nor need we make a determination under Exemption 4, which would likely be applicable in this case if the documents were subject to the FOIA. See Varnadore and GAP (finding portions of contractors' attorney billing statements "privileged" and "confidential" and thus exempt from disclosure pursuant to Exemption 4).

February 1, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Lloyd Makey

Date of Filing: January 18, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0019

On January 18, 1995, Mr. Lloyd Makey filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on December 22, 1994, by the Assistant Inspector General for Investigations of the Office of Inspector General of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Assistant Inspector General released several documents responsive to the appellant's information request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA).

I. Background

In a July 6, 1994 request for information, the appellant sought copies of DOE Inspector General investigation case files I93ZZ189 and I93ZZ190. In response, the Assistant Inspector General released four sets of documents in their entirety (Documents 1, 2, 3 and 5). A fifth document set (known as Document 4), an "11-page handwritten statement," was not released because it had been provided to the Inspector General's Office by Mr. Makey. In his Appeal, the appellant contends that the DOE's search was inadequate. The Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to conduct a further search for documents responsive to his FOIA request.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that an FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). When an agency reports that no responsive documents can be found, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original). In addition, in previous cases we have held that challenges to the adequacy of the agency's search must be supported by the presentation of some evidence that a requested document, unidentified by the agency in its search, does in fact exist. See Sun Co., 11 DOE ¶ 80,114 (1983); Vinson & Elkins, 4 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1979).

In order to determine whether an agency's search was adequate, its actions are examined under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In his Appeal, the appellant stated that he could supply information to show there was an inadequate search for responsive records. After we contacted Mr. Makey, he provided material concerning a security matter, but nothing that would lead us to believe that additional information exists beyond the documents identified by the Assistant Inspector General. See Record of January 25, 1995 Telephone Conversation between Leonard M. Tao, OHA Staff Attorney, and Lloyd Makey. In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted the DOE Inspector General's Office to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed.<1>The FOIA representative from the DOE Inspector General's office stated that everything in investigative files I93ZZ189 and I93ZZ190 was released except for Document 4. In addition she stated that the "ZZ" designation given to these records indicates that the complaint was lodged with the Inspector General's office, but that the Inspector General's office decided not to take further action. Thus she concluded that no other records exist pertaining to these investigative files. Given these facts, we have no reason to believe that any other responsive documents exist and are convinced that the DOE Inspector General's office followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover all material within the scope of the appellant's July 6, 1994 information request. Accordingly, this Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Lloyd Makey on January 18, 1995 is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0020, 24 DOE ¶ 80,164

February 15, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Southwest Resource Development

Date of Filing: January 20, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0020

On January 20, 1995, Southwest Resource Development (Southwest) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on December 9, 1994, by the DOE's Office of Inspector General (IG). In the determination, IG partially denied Southwest's request for information under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the information withheld in the December 9 determination.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C § 522(b); 10 C.F.R § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In its FOIA request, Southwest sought documents relating to an IG investigation into allegations of mischarging on a sub-contract at the DOE's Pantex facility. In its determination, IG released sixteen documents to Southwest in their entirety. Thirty-three other documents responsive to Southwest's request were released with material withheld pursuant to FOIA Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Southwest appeals the withholding of information from only one document. The appellant asserts that some portions withheld from document number 32 (a typed memorandum and written notes of an IG interview) could not fall within the scope of FOIA Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Subsequent to Southwest's January 20, 1995 appeal, IG reconsidered its determination and released additional portions of document 32. See Memo from Jane Payne, IG, to OHA (January 25, 1995). After receiving this revised determination, Southwest has stated that it still believes there is insufficient justification for withholding three of the remaining deletions from Document 32. Specifically, Southwest has requested the release of the last three deletions on the first typed page of Document

32. It believes that these three deletions contain information other than the name or identity of an individual, and argues that they cannot fall within the scope of Exemptions 6 and 7(C).

II. Analysis

Exemption 6 of the FOIA allows an agency to withhold information if its release would constitute a

"clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). By contrast, Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information . . . (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). Because Exemption 7(C) does not require a showing of a "clearly" unwarranted invasion of privacy, the scope of Exemption 7(C) is broader than that of Exemption 6. Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee of Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989).

The threshold test for withholding information under Exemption 7(C) is whether such information is compiled as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The scope of Exemption 7 encompasses enforcement for both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974); Williams v. IRS, 479 F.2d 317, 318 (3d Cir. 1973), cert. denied sub nom. Donolon v. IRS, 414 U.S. 1024 (1973). By law, the IG is charged with investigating waste, fraud, and abuse in programs and operations administered or financed by the DOE. 5 U.S.C. Appendix 3 § 4. Individuals involved in IG investigations, including the source of an investigation, sources of information, DOE employees, and other individuals, are entitled to privacy protection so that they will be free from harassment, intimidation and other personal intrusions.

After reviewing the withheld paragraph, we conclude that the revised determination made by IG was consistent with the principles that we have outlined above. In Document 32, IG withheld certain verbs and other words in addition to the names of the individuals. Under Exemptions 6 and 7(C), names and other information that would tend to disclose the identity of certain individuals may be withheld. These withheld words alone do not themselves constitute personal information. However, within the context of the portion of Document 32 that has been released, they might identify an individual by indicating certain functions performed by that individual. In this case, the little public interest in the identity of the individuals whose names appear in the investigative file does not outweigh these individuals' privacy interest in being free from intrusion into their professional and private lives. Consequently, the release of identifying information would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy. Accordingly, this Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Southwest Resource Development on January 20, 1995, is hereby denied.

February 24, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: David K. Hackett

Case Number: VFA-0021

On January 25, 1995, David K. Hackett (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on December 28, 1994, by the Department of Energy's Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge), in response to a request for information submitted by the Appellant under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In that determination, Oak Ridge stated that it did not possess the document requested by the Appellant. In his Appeal, the Appellant argues that since the DOE is required by contract to pay for the requested document it must possess a copy of it and should release this to him pursuant to his FOIA Request.

I. Background

On December 5, 1994, the Appellant filed an FOIA request for a copy of the transcript of the deposition taken of him in the case of Hackett v. Martin Marietta, et al., filed in the United Stated District Court for the Eastern District of Tennessee (Hackett). On December 28, 1994, Oak Ridge stated that it did not possess the requested deposition transcript but that it was available in the public domain from Gibson-Sherrod Court Reporting for $510.40. See Determination Letter from Amy L. Rothrock, Acting FOIA Officer, Oak Ridge Operations Office, to David K. Hackett (December 28, 1994). In his Appeal, the Appellant argues that since the DOE is currently paying the costs of the Hackett litigation under its contract with Martin Marietta Energy Systems (MMES), the DOE should possess the deposition transcript. The Appellant requests that this deposition transcript be furnished to him.

II. Analysis

It is well established in our cases that a FOIA determination must have reasonably specific justifications for withholding all or parts of documents responsive to a FOIA request. Wisconsin Project on Nuclear Arms Control, 22 DOE ¶ 80,109 at 80,517 (1992); Davis Wright & Jones, 19 DOE ¶ 80,104 at 80,509 (1989). We enforce this rule so that the requesting party may prepare an adequate appeal, and so that this Office may make an effective review of the determination. In this case, we find that the determination letter does not permit an effective review regarding the possession and possible release of the deposition transcript.

In an effort to ascertain the status of the requested transcript, we spoke with the office responsible for preparing the determination letter. Representatives of that office stated that while DOE did not possess the document at the time of the FOIA request under the relevant contract with MMES, the DOE may own the subject document. See Memoranda of Telephone Conversations between Don Thress and Amy Rothrock, Office of Chief Counsel, Oak Ridge, and Ariane Cerlenko, Office of Hearings and Appeals (February 9-10, 1995); see also Ownership of Records clause, Contract Number DE-AC05-84OR21400, Modification No. M066, at 45; Litigation and Claims clause, Contract Number DE-AC05-84OR21400, February 1991, at 166.<1> Since Oak Ridge did not consider whether DOE owned the deposition transcript, but merely whether it possessed the transcript, we find that Oak Ridge did not adequately justify withholding the transcript. Consequently, we will remand this matter to Oak Ridge, which should reconsider its determination with respect to the deposition transcript and either release the transcript or adequately justify the reasons, if any, for withholding the transcript.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by David K. Hackett, Case Number VFA-0021, is hereby granted in part to the extent set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This case is remanded to the Oak Ridge Operations Office for a determination consistent with this Decision.

February 23, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:J/R/A Associates

Case Number:VFA-0022

On January 27, 1995, J/R/A Associates of Mitchellville, Maryland, a regulatory information and support systems firm, filed an Appeal from a determination issued on December 15, 1994, by the Associate Deputy Secretary for Field Management of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part J/R/A Associates' request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by a covered branch of the federal government and which have not been made public in an authorized manner generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

In this case, J/R/A Associates requested that the DOE's Office of Contractor Employee Protection (OCEP) release information on all complaints of discrimination which had been brought under the DOE program to protect contractor employee "whistleblowers." 10 C.F.R. Part 708. In particular, S/R/A Associates requested the release of the first page of each complaint or a page that contains the name of the complaining employee and the contractor or subcontractor complained against.<1>After consulting with the requester, OCEP released portions of a list of closed cases. The cases on the closed case compilation are categorized by type and list each case name (the name of the complainant), the date the complaint was received, and the contractor involved. Of this information, OCEP released the names of all of the contractors and all dates. It also released case (complainant) names in those cases where the name already had been made public. It withheld, however, case names where the complainant's name had not already become public. In addition, OCEP withheld all of this information for fifty-one "on-going" cases. All this material was withheld under Exemptions 6 and 7(C) of the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6), (7)(C), 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6), (7)(iii) and under 10 C.F.R. § 1008.12, a portion of the DOE regulations implementing the Privacy Act. 5 U.S.C. § 552a.<2>In its Appeal, J/R/A Associates limits its request to the names of contractors in the fifty-one "on-going" cases.

Analysis

Exemption 6 permits an agency to make discretionary withholding of information which must otherwise be released in response to a FOIA request if the materials are "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." Exemption 7(C) applies a similar but somewhat less exacting standard allowing withholding of portions of law enforcement records which "could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." The application of both exemptions requires an agency to balance the public interest in disclosure with the putative privacy interest involved. Department of State v. Ray, 502 U.S. 164, ___, 116 L.Ed.2d 526, 541, 112 S.Ct. 541, 548 (1991); Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989); Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976); James L. Schwab, 23 DOE ¶ 80,146 at 80,615 (1993); Harold H. Johnson, 21 DOE ¶ 80,148 at 80,639 (1991); Jerry O. Campbell, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 at 80,576 (1988).

In this case, the only information sought is the names of the contractors listed as respondents in pending OCEP cases. These are all corporate entities. As J/R/A Associates correctly points out, such entities have no privacy interest to protect. Sims v. Central Intelligence Agency, 642 F.2d 562, 572 n.47 (D.C. Cir. 1980); National Parks and Conservation Association v. Kleppe, 547 F.2d 673, 685 n.44 (D.C. Cir. 1976); Buffalo Evening News, Inc. v. Small Business Administration, 666 F. Supp. 467, 471 (W.D.N.Y. 1987); Ivanhoe Citrus Association v. Handley, 612 F. Supp. 1560, 1567 (D.D.C. 1985); Jon Berg, 23 DOE ¶ 80,129 at 80,568 (1993) (and cases cited therein); Mobil Mining & Minerals, 16 DOE ¶ 80,120 at 80,560 (1987). See also 1 Kenneth Culp Davis & Richard J. Pierce, Jr., Administrative Law Treatise § 5.12, at 209 (3rd ed. 1994); Annotation, When Are Government Records "personnel files" Exempt From Disclosure Under Freedom of Information Act Provision (5 U.S.C.S. § 552(b)(6)) Exempting Certain "personnel," Medical, and Similar Files, 104 A.L.R. Fed. 757, 768 (1991); 15 Fed. Proc. L.Ed. § 38:169, at 190 (1990); 15 Fed. Proc. L.Ed. § 38:213 at 229 (1990). Cf. Samuel D. Warren & Louis D. Brandeis, The Right to Privacy, 4 Harv. L. Rev. 193 (1890) (privacy interests accrue to and protect individuals). The Exemption 6 and 7(C) balancing tests presuppose that there is some privacy interest to balance. William D. Lawrence, 24 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,600 (1994); Virginia Johnson, 23 DOE ¶ 80,168 at 80-664-65 (1993). Thus, where there is no privacy interest to balance, as in this case, whatever public interest there is in disclosure must prevail. Therefore, these corporate names cannot be withheld under either Exemption 6 or Exemption 7(C). Accordingly, we will remand this matter to the Associate Deputy Secretary for Field Management with a direction either to promptly release the corporate names requested or to issue a new determination which fully explains the reasons for the continued withholding of this information.<3>

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by J/R/A Associates of Mitchellville, Maryland, on January 27, 1995, OHA Case No. VFA-0022, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Associate Deputy Secretary for Field Management who shall either promptly release the names of the contractors involved in pending OCEP cases or issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision.

<1>/ In this Decision and Order, we use the term "contractor" to include subcontractors.

<2>/ Section 1008.12 lists exemptions from information which must be disclosed in response to a Privacy Act request. This reference was inapposite in this case. First, the request was made only under the FOIA, not under the Privacy Act. Second, by its very terms, the Privacy Act cannot be relied on as a justification for withholding information which must be released in response to a FOIA request. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(q)(2). Accordingly, we will not consider this claim any further.

<3>/ OCEP has delivered to this Office a short memorandum explaining why the material may be withholdable under Exemption 7(A) of the FOIA. Because we are remanding this matter to OCEP for its further consideration, we need not address the possible application of this additional claim of exemption.

March 1, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Kenneth W. Warden

Date of Filing: February 1, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0023

On February 1, 1995, Kenneth W. Warden filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on January 13, 1995, by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge) of the Department of Energy. In that determination, Oak Ridge denied a request for information filed by the Appellant pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, the Appellant asks that we direct Oak Ridge to release the information that it withheld.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his request, the Appellant sought "a copy of any investigative file . . . in which my name appears, especially Case No. I92 OR020." Mr. Warden's request was referred to the Office of Inspector General for a determination. The Inspector General in turn referred two documents that originated at Oak Ridge to that office for a separate determination. The present Appeal concerns the determination issued by Oak Ridge. Oak Ridge found that the documents referred to it fell within the scope of Exemption 6 which shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6).

The two documents at issue in this Appeal concern an employee of Martin Marietta Energy Systems (MMES) who had been accused of misappropriating government property. Document 17 summarizes an interview conducted by two DOE employees with this MMES employee. The document concerns various activities by the employee in addition to his alleged misconduct. In this regard, it describes his relationships with, and the activities of, other individuals, including Mr. Warden. This document contains a number of references to Mr. Warden, but none of them implicate Mr. Warden in the alleged thefts. Document 23 is an internal report prepared by MMES on the alleged misconduct by the same employee. Document 23 does not refer, either directly or indirectly, to Mr. Warden.

In his Appeal, Mr. Warden asserts that these two documents may contain accusations that he has been guilty of wrongdoing. Mr. Warden contends that an effort has been made to retaliate against him for alleged whistleblowing activities. As part of this effort, Mr. Warden believes that the authors of these documents might have fabricated statements by the employee being investigated and then used these misstatements to justify a further investigation of Mr. Warden. The appellant states that he has been unable to determine exactly what he is alleged to have done wrong, and he claims that he must see these documents to verify the reasons for the investigation of him. */

The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982). In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. In making this analysis, the agency does not consider any privacy interest that the requester might have in the documents. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of HUD, 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Second, the agency must determine whether release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Hopkins v. Department of HUD, 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991) (Hopkins); FLRA v. Department of Treasury Fin. Management Serv., 884 F.2d 1446, 1451 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 864 (1990). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762-70.

The Supreme Court's decision in Reporters Committee has greatly narrowed the scope of the public interest in the context of the FOIA. The Court held that neither the identity of the requester nor the purpose for which the request is being made are relevant to whether information is exempt from disclosure. 489 U.S. at 771. Thus, rather than depend upon the requester's proposed use of the information, the determination "must turn on the nature of the requested document and its relationship to" the public interest. Id. at 772. The Court further distinguished between the general benefits to the public which may result from the release of information, and those benefits that Congress sought to provide the public when it enacted the FOIA. The Court found that with regard to the FOIA, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the core purpose of the Act, i.e., "public understanding of the operations and activities of the Government." Id. at 775 (quoting 5 U.S.C. § 552 (a) (4) (A) (iii)). The Court indicated that only information which contributes significantly to this understanding is within "the ambit of the public interest which the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id.

Accordingly, the amount of public interest in disclosure must be evaluated with respect to the degree to which disclosure would further the public's understanding of the workings of government. Therefore, whether disclosure in this case would assist Mr. Warden in understanding the reasons for any action taken regarding him is irrelevant to our analysis of Exemption 6. What is relevant to our analysis is the degree to which the documents will assist the public in understanding governmental operations.

The public interest in Document 17 is slight. The document describes in general terms MMES's preliminary investigation into a minor theft of property by an MMES employee. It summarizes interviews with the subject of the investigation and several witnesses. Document 17 sheds little light on government operations. There is, however, a greater public interest in the contents of Document 23, since it concerns the manner in which the government conducted certain activities. With both of these documents, however, the public's interest in them does not outweigh the very substantial privacy interests of the individuals concerned. The documents deal with criminal allegations concerning a number of people in addition to the subject of the investigation, a report by a psychologist concerning an individual, and other matters that are of a personal nature or which the individuals involved would normally wish to keep private. Under these circumstances, we find that the public interest that would be furthered by release of these two documents is outweighed by the substantial interest that the individuals mentioned in them have in maintaining their privacy.

The fact that a document contains material which is exempt from disclosure does not necessarily make the entire document exempt. The FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt. . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b) (1982). See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 89, 91 (1973); Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Air Force, 556 F.2d 242, 259-62 (D.C. Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 927 (1978); Casson, Calligaro & Mutryn, 10 DOE ¶ 80,137 at 80,615 (1983). However, segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary where it is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material so that release of the non-exempt material would "compromise" the withheld material, or where the amount of non-exempt material is small and so interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate. Lead Indus. Ass'n v. OSHA, 610 F.2d 70, 83-86 (2d Cir. 1979). The two documents at issue in this case contain no reasonably segregable non-exempt information.

Consequently, it is clear that disclosure of the two documents at issue here would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, and therefore Oak Ridge properly withheld them pursuant to Exemption 6. Accordingly, the Appellant's Appeal shall be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Kenneth W. Warden on February 1, 1995, is hereby denied.

March 16, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Robert S. Foote

Date of Filing: February 15, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0024

On February 15, 1995, Robert S. Foote filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on January 18, 1995 by the Acting Associate Director for Health and Environmental Research (OHER) in the Office of Energy Research of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the OHER denied in part requests for information filed by Mr. Foote on July 26, 1994, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On July 26, 1994, Mr. Foote filed three separate FOIA requests in which he sought the following information relating to the review of research proposals he submitted to the DOE in 1989, 1990, and 1993: (1) names of principal reviewers; (2) names of panel members present during discussions of the proposals; (3) names and affiliations of other individuals having access to the proposals; and (4) copies of documents, memoranda, notes and other materials resulting from or related to review of the proposals. On January 18, 1995, the OHER partially denied Mr. Foote's request for the above documents. The OHER released item (3) and partially released item (4). It withheld items (1) and (2) in their entirety and partially withheld item (4) pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5) (Exemption 5).

On February 15, 1995, Mr. Foote filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). In his Appeal, Mr. Foote challenges the OHER's determination with respect to items 1 and 2 and asserts that i) the names of panel members present during the discussions of the proposals (which include the principal reviewers) are factual information that should not be withheld under Exemption 5, and ii) the refusal to disclose the names of members of the 1993 panel was an abuse of discretion in light of the fact that OHER previously disclosed names of panel members in 1989 and 1990. For these reasons, Mr. Foote requests that the OHA direct the OHER to release the withheld information.

II. Analysis

As stated above, the OHER stated in its determination that it was withholding the names of the panel members requested by Mr. Foote pursuant to FOIA Exemption 5. Exemption 5 protects "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). Exemption 5 is generally recognized as encompassing certain distinct privileges, including the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege, and the governmental deliberative process privilege. See Coastal States Gas Corp. v. DOE, 617 F.2d 854 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In the present case, the OHER relied on the deliberative process element of Exemption 5.

The deliberative process privilege shields from public disclosure records reflecting the predecisional, consultative process of an agency. Benedetto Enterprises, Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1989); Darci L. Rock, 13 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1985). Predecisional materials are not exempt merely because they are prepared prior to a final action, policy, or interpretation. These materials must be a part of the agency's deliberative process by which decisions are made. Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F.2d 1136, 1144 (D.C. Cir. 1975). This privilege was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsive for making government decisions. EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F.Supp. 939 (Cl. Ct. 1958)). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. NLRB v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 151 (1975). The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id. Even then, however, the exemption only covers the subjective, deliberative portion of the document. Mink, 410 U.S. at 87-91. Factual information contained in the protected document must be disclosed unless the factual material is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material. Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1077 (D.C. Cir. 1971).

The information withheld by the OHER consists of a list of names of individuals who served on the 1989, 1990, and 1993 DOE Special Review Panel on the Human Genome Program. The OHER argues that the identity of these panel members is exempt from disclosure pursuant to Exemption 5 because the release of this information would have a chilling effect on the deliberative process. See Determination Letter at 2. Specifically, the OHER argues that these panel members would be less likely to serve on future panels and provide frank and candid opinions if they believed their personal views would be subject to public scrutiny. Id. Although we have in the past analyzed this kind of information under the deliberative process element of Exemption 5, see, e.g. Eugene S. Post, 17 DOE ¶ 80,142 at 80,603 (1988), for the reasons set forth below we believe it is more appropriate to apply FOIA Exemption 6 to the names of the panel members. Therefore, we will not conduct an analysis of whether the names of the panel members were properly withheld under Exemption 5. Rather, we will examine this Appeal in light of FOIA Exemption 6.

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether a substantial privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d at 874 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990). If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Second, the agency must determine whether release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Hopkins v. Dep't of Housing and Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991) (Hopkins); FLRA v. Dep't of Treasury Fin. Management Service, 884 F.2d 1446, 1451 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 864 (1990) (FLRA). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762-70.

In sum, a determination on the application of Exemption 6 requires evaluation of the following issues: whether disclosure will result in an invasion of privacy; how serious the invasion is likely to be; the public interest to be served by the disclosure; and how the strength of the public interest in disclosure compares to the potential damage to personal privacy which would result from the release of the material. The latter determination should include an evaluation of whether that public purpose may be accomplished by alternative and less intrusive means. Church of Scientology v. Department of the Army, 611 F.2d 738, 746 (9th Cir. 1979); Douglas L. Miller, 13 DOE ¶ 80,122 at 80,573 (1985).

We have previously analyzed whether the names of reviewers or evaluators should be withheld under Exemption 6. For example, in the past we have determined that the names of DOE evaluators of contract proposals should be withheld under Exemption 6. Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, 20 DOE at 80,687. In that case we concluded that the DOE evaluators had significant privacy interests in avoiding the public disclosure of their names. In addition, we have determined that there was not a public interest in the names of individuals who conducted a Radiological Controls inspection. Knolls Action Project, 19 DOE ¶ 80,103, at 80,508 (1989). In that case we stated that, in the absence of any discernible public interest in the inspector's names, their release would constitute a "clearly unwarranted" invasion of privacy.

While the OHA may conduct a de novo review of an initial FOIA determination on appeal, we are reluctant to do so in this case because the record does not reveal the extent of privacy interests involved, whether disclosure will result in an invasion of privacy, or the public interest to be served by disclosure. Under these circumstances, we find that the best course is to remand this matter to the OHER. As the office most familiar with this information, the OHER is in the best position to make the initial determination as to whether this information should be protected under Exemption 6.

The OHER should either release this information or prepare a new determination that explains in detail the reasons which justify withholding the names of the panel members. In doing so, the OHER should carefully consider the nature and magnitude of the harm to the personal privacy which might be caused by release of the names, as well as the public interest which might be served by their release. In his Appeal, Mr. Foote asserts that the OHER abused its discretion by releasing the names of panel members who served in 1989 and 1990 and not the panel members who served in 1993. Therefore, on remand the OHER should also determine whether it has waived the protection of Exemption 6 with respect to its previous disclosures of identities of 1989 and 1990 panel members.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Robert S. Foote on February 15, 1995, Case Number VFA-0024, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Office of Health and Environmental Research in the Office of Energy Research of the Department of Energy, which should issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth above.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Richard J. Levernier

Date of Filing: February 21, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0025

On February 21, 1995, Richard J. Levernier filed an Appeal from a determination issued by the Manager of the Department of Energy's Rocky Flats Office (DOE/RF) on January 31, 1995. The determination concerned a request submitted by Levernier under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its determination, DOE/RF stated that it could not locate records responsive to Levernier's request. In his Appeal, Levernier challenges the adequacy of DOE/RF's search for responsive records.

I. Background

In a request dated July 1, 1994, Levernier sought "'records', including tape recordings, written transcripts or summaries, of recordings of telephone conversations" between Levernier and personnel of Wackenhut Services, Inc. (WSI), a DOE contractor. Letter from Richard J. Levernier to Mary O. Hammack, FOIA/PA Officer, DOE/RF (July 1, 1994). Levernier stated in his request that he believed these recordings had been reviewed by the Manager of DOE/RF, DOE/RF's Chief Counsel, and the Acting Director of DOE/RF's Human Resources and Internal Security Division. Id. In its January 31, 1995 determination, DOE/RF stated that neither the Office of the Manager nor the Office of Chief Counsel had records responsive to Levernier's request. Letter from Mark Silverman, Manager, DOE/RL, to Richard J. Levernier (January 31, 1995). The determination further stated that although the Acting Director, Human Resources and Internal Security Division, knew of the taped conversations that were the subject of Levernier's request, the Acting Director "did not know the whereabouts of these tapes." Id.

Levernier argues in his Appeal that DOE's search was "obviously inadequate," noting that his request was to the DOE "in its entirety," including DOE contractors and DOE offices other than DOE/RF. Levernier also submitted several documents in support of his Appeal. Among them is a document entitled "Report of Management Review of Security Concerns at Rocky Flats" and another document with the same title and the label "Appendix." This report was prepared by the Inglewood Group, Inc., under a contract with the DOE. The report was the result of an investigation by the Inglewood Group into allegations of wrongdoing leveled by WSI against DOE/RF staff. Contained in the report are lengthy verbatim excerpts from "tape recordings secretly made by the [WSI] Protective Force Director of numerous conversations he had with the [DOE/RF] Security Director [Levernier] during 1993." Levernier received a copy of this report in response to an earlier FOIA request he filed with DOE/RF. Levernier also submitted with his Appeal a copy of a letter from the Government Accountability Project to the DOE/RF Manager, which Levernier obtained from the public reading room at DOE/RF. Attached to this letter were excerpts from what appears to be a transcript of the same telephone conversations referred to in the report of the Inglewood Group.

II. Analysis

The OHA has stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive records, and the Office has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991); Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1988). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In reviewing the present Appeal, we have obtained further information from DOE/RF regarding its search for responsive records. As noted above, the FOIA/Privacy Act Officer (FOIA/PA Officer) at DOE/RF consulted the Offices of the Manager, Chief Counsel, and the Acting Director, Human Resources and Internal Security Division, in her attempt to locate the records requested by Levernier. Each office reported that it did not have records responsive to the request. The FOIA/PA Officer also forwarded the request to WSI. The company responded that it had "verbal information" indicating that one of its employees "has tapes" but that the tapes "do not belong to [WSI]." Letter from Cheryl A. Arnold, WSI, to Mary Hammack, DOE/RF (September 27, 1994).

Though the Office of Chief Counsel reported that it had no records responsive to Levernier's request, that office did state that responsive records had been given to the DOE Office of Inspector General (IG). Therefore, the FOIA/PA Officer also forwarded Levernier's request to the IG. The IG informed DOE/RF that it would respond directly to Levernier's request.

The information we have regarding the turning over of records to the IG does not rule out the possibility that additional copies of the records in question were kept at DOE/RF. However, the FOIA/PA Officer consulted each of the offices at DOE/RF that were likely to possess the records, including the offices that Levernier believed had reviewed them. While these offices may have at some point reviewed the records in question, we have no reason to believe that DOE/RF was in possession of those records at the time of Levernier's request. Further, although the determination issued to Levernier understandably gave him the impression that only offices at DOE/RF were searched, the FOIA/PA Officer also referred the request to DOE contractor WSI and to the IG. We are therefore persuaded that the FOIA/PA Officer conducted a search that was reasonably calculated to uncover the records sought by the Appellant.

We will therefore deny the present Appeal. Regarding any responsive records that are in the possession of the IG, that office is aware of the need to provide a timely response to Levernier's FOIA request. When Levernier has received a determination regarding those records, if he disagrees with that ruling he may at that time appeal it to the OHA.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Richard J. Levernier on February 21, 1995, Case Number VFA-0025, is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Robert L. Hale

Date of Filing: February 22, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0026

On February 22, 1995, Robert L. Hale filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him by the Acting Freedom of Information Officer at the DOE's Oak Ridge Operations Office (FOI Officer). This determination was issued in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the FOI Officer to conduct another search for documents responsive to Mr. Hale's request.

I. Background

On January 4, 1995, Mr. Hale requested "all employee records, and any or all medical records for William Cleo Hale." William C. Hale, the father of the appellant, was a contractor employee whom the appellant claims died at the Oak Ridge facility on August 21, 1945. In its response to Mr. Hale's request, the FOI Officer stated that the only document found to be responsive to Mr. Hale's request was William Hale's "employment card." A copy of this card was included with the FOI Officer's response.

In his Appeal, Mr. Hale contends that the search for responsive documents was inadequate, and he requests that this matter be remanded to the FOI Officer for another search. Mr. Hale cites the existence of several unanswered questions concerning his father's death as support for his claim that the search was inadequate.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by federal agencies be released to the public upon request. Accordingly, upon receiving an appropriate FOIA request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3); Energy Products, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,528 (1993). We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., In Defense of Animals, 24 DOE ¶ 80,151 (1994); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981).

In considering this Appeal, we contacted the FOI Officer in order to determine the extent of the search for responsive documents. We were informed that three different records systems (personnel records of contractors, personnel medical records and personnel radiation experiment records) at each of five Oak Ridge locations were searched. Three of the five locations searched are operated by Martin Marietta Energy Systems, Inc., the DOE management and operations contractor: the K-25 Gaseous Diffusion Plant, the Y-12 Weapons facility, and the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. The other two locations included in the search were the Oak Ridge Records Center, and the offices of the Oak Ridge Associated Universities, a contractor that conducts epidemiology studies for the DOE. See memorandum of March 10, 1995 telephone conversation between Amy L. Rothrock, FOI Officer, and Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney.

Based on the information before us, we conclude that the FOI Officer's search for responsive documents was adequate. As set forth above, that search encompassed three different record systems at the five Oak Ridge facilities. Accordingly, we are not persuaded by Mr. Hale's claim that the existence of unanswered questions concerning his father's death proves that the search for responsive documents was inadequate. That the results of an FOIA request do not meet the requester's expectations is not necessarily evidence of an inadequate search. In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, we conclude that a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents was made with respect to Mr. Hale's FOIA request.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Robert L. Hale on February 8, 1995 is hereby denied.

March 16, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Casey O. Ruud

Date of Filing: February 23, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0027

On February 23, 1995, Casey O. Ruud (hereinafter "Appellant") filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on January 26, 1995 by the Director of the Office of Communications of the Department of Energy's Richland Operations Office (hereinafter "Authorizing Official"). In that determination, the Authorizing Official denied in part a request for information which Ruud had filed pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Ruud requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) order the release of the withheld information.

I. Background

On January 13, 1995, Ruud filed a FOIA request for a complete and unredacted copy of a letter dated November 20, 1994, addressed to the Secretary of Energy concerning Ruud's employment qualifications. He also requested a complete and unredacted copy of a similar letter written by the same author dated May 14, 1994 and addressed to Representative Jay Inslee. On January 26, 1995, the Richland Operations Office released copies of the two letters with the name and address of the author deleted. The Authorizing Official determined that the release of such personal information would result in a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy and withheld it under Exemption 6 of the FOIA.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." United States Dep't of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post Co.).

To warrant protection under Exemption 6, information must first meet its threshold requirement. It must fall within the category of "personnel and medical files [or] similar files." 5 U.S.C § 552(b)(6). It is clear that the letters in this case are neither medical files nor personnel files. The term "similar files", however, has been interpreted broadly by the Supreme Court to include all information which "applies to a particular individual". Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. at 601. The D.C. Circuit has reinforced this interpretation by concluding that Exemption 6 is equally applicable to the "author" and the "subject" of the file. New York Times Co. v. NASA, 920 F.2d 1002, 1005 (D.C. Cir. 1990). Here, letters that disclose the author's identity qualify as similar files and, therefore, meet the threshold requirement of Exemption 6.

Next, we must undertake a three-step analysis to determine whether the author's identity may be withheld under Exemption 6. First, we must determine whether a substantial privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d at 874 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990) (Horner). Second, we must determine whether the release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. United States Dep't of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee). Finally, if we find both privacy and public interests in the requested information, we must weigh the privacy interest against the public interest in order to determine whether release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Id. at 762-70.

A. Privacy Interest

The Supreme Court has long found a privacy interest in the names and addresses of individuals significant enough to warrant protection from disclosure under Exemption 6. Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976). Moreover, at least seven Circuit Courts have found that an individual has a significant privacy interest in avoiding the unlimited disclosure of his or her name. See, e.g., Hopkins v. United States Dep't of Hous. & Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991); Painting & Drywall Work Preservation Fund v. Department of Hous. & Urban Dev., 936 F.2d 1300 (D.C. Cir. 1991); National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873, 875 (D.C. Cir. 1989); Halloran v. Veterans Admin., 874 F.2d 315, 323 (5th Cir. 1989); United States Dep't of Agric. v. Federal Labor Relations Auth., 836 F.2d 1139, 1143 (8th Cir. 1988); Minnis v. United States Dep't of Agric., 737 F.2d 784, 787 (9th Cir. 1984); Heights Community Congress v. Veterans Admin., 732 F.2d 526, 529 (6th Cir. 1984); American Fed'n of Gov't Employees v. United States, 712 F.2d 931, 932 (4th Cir. 1983). This privacy interest has been specifically recognized with respect to authors of letters to the government. Holy Spirit Ass'n v. FBI, 683 F.2d 562, 567 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (Mackinnon, J., concurring) (Holy Spirit).

In the initial determination letter, the Authorizing Official decided to withhold the writer's identity explaining that "an individual who addresses a letter to the Secretary of Energy and/or an elected official can reasonably expect his/her name to be revealed to staff who will prepare a response to such a letter, but that individual can also reasonably expect his/her identity to go no further than the circle of those who have access to it in the normal course of their duties."

The Appellant asserts, in response, that the author of the requested letters had no "actual expectation of privacy" for two reasons. First, the Appellant argues that since the author accuses the Appellant and Secretary O'Leary of a "criminal conflict of interest," the author should expect to be "held personally accountable for such" statements by having his identity revealed. Secondly, the Appellant points out that the author sent the letters to several Congressional Representatives, the United States Attorney General Janet Reno and DOE Secretary Hazel O'Leary, thereby obviating any expectation of privacy.

The Appellant's first argument fails because the Supreme Court has held that the identity of the requesting party has no bearing on the merits of his or her FOIA request. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 771. In other words, the Appellant's status as an individual accused of criminal activity is irrelevant to the analysis of whether or not the author's identity should be disclosed. Id. The Appellant's second argument, which suggests that the writer has waived any expectation of privacy, also fails. First, sending the letters to Secretary O'Leary does not constitute a waiver because of the long line of cases outlined above which protects names and addresses from disclosure. Secondly, sending the letters to a law enforcement agency such as the Justice Department (Attorney General Janet Reno), either directly or through elected representatives, does not preclude a finding that a privacy interest exists. Holy Spirit, 683 F.2d at 564. In light of the overwhelming weight of authority, we find that disclosure of the name and address of the author of these letters would result in a substantial invasion of personal privacy.

B. Public Interest

The Supreme Court has held that there is a public interest in disclosure of information that "sheds light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 773. However, it is not enough that the information would permit speculative inferences about the conduct of an agency or a government official. Id. at 774. The burden of establishing that disclosure would serve the public interest is on the requester. Carter v. United States Dep't of Commerce, 830 F.2d 388 (D.C. Cir. 1987).

The Appellant argues that this is a "huge case" and that there is a lot of background information that makes disclosure of the writer's identity proper. He asserts that he is a notorious whistleblower whose life has been threatened. He claims further that the writer "could be an agent of the government" and, therefore, there is a significant public interest in disclosure of the writer's identity. This argument is speculative at best and does not sufficiently demonstrate that disclosure would aid the public in understanding something directly about the workings of the government. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 773.

As we have found in other cases where names and addresses have been withheld but the remainder of the document has been released, there is in the present case no discernible public interest in disclosing the author's identity. See, e.g., Morrison & Foerster, 24 DOE ¶ 80,107 at 80,518 (1994).

III. Conclusion

If no public interest exists, the requested information should be protected. Horner, 879 F.2d at 879. As the D.C. Circuit has observed, "something, even a modest privacy interest, outweighs nothing every time." Id.

In light of the privacy interest at stake and the absence of any public interest in disclosure, we conclude that the Authorizing Official correctly withheld the author's name and address under Exemption 6.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Casey O. Ruud on February 23, 1995 is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Mid-Missouri Nuclear Weapons Freeze, Inc.

Date of Filing: February 27, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0029

On February 27, 1995, Mid-Missouri Nuclear Weapons Freeze, Inc. (MNWF) filed an Appeal from (1) the denial of information issued to it on January 30, 1995 by the Director of the FOIA/Privacy Act Division and (2) the partial denial of information issued to it on January 31, 1995 by the FOIA Coordinator of the Office of Nuclear Energy.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by federal agencies be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In a letter dated November 9, 1992, MNWF filed a request with the FOIA Public Information Officer seeking a copy of documents related to three projects undertaken for DOE by researchers at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) related to the Integral Fast Reactor (IFR) and associated pyroprocessing/actinide recycle technologies. See Letter from Mark Haim, Director, MNWF to FOIA Public Information Officer (November 9, 1992). The IFR program was proposed by Argonne National Laboratory (ANL) as an improvement in the management of high level radioactive waste. In the process under study, long half-life isotopes are removed from spent nuclear fuel and returned to the reactor, where they are transmuted into safer fission by-products with shorter half-lives. On July 29, 1994, the DOE Chicago Operations Office issued a final determination stating that no responsive documents were found in that office. The IFR project was found to have been conducted under a subcontract between Martin Marietta, the management and operating contractor of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory (ORNL) in Oak Ridge, Tennessee, and MIT. On August 23, 1994, MNWF appealed that determination to the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA), which remanded the matter to the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts Branch at DOE Headquarters for a search of the Oak Ridge Operations Office and the Office of Nuclear Energy. Mid-Missouri Nuclear Weapons Freeze, 24 DOE ¶ 80,142 (1994).

In a final determination dated January 30, 1995, the FOIA/Privacy Act Division stated that after a search of the Oak Ridge Operations Office, no responsive records could be found. The determination also stated that the work was done under a subcontract and pursuant to Martin Marietta's Operating Contract, subcontractor records are not agency records for purposes of the FOIA unless the Department has possession of the records. See Letter from GayLa D. Sessoms, Director, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, to Mark Haim, Director, MNWF (January 30, 1995); see also Contract No. DE-AC05-84OR21400, §H.23(b)(8) (Contract). However, as discussed in Section II.B. of this Decision, that statement gave MNWF the erroneous impression that subcontractor (i.e., MIT) records had been found. In fact, none were located. The Office of Nuclear Energy responded in its determination letter by submitting four responsive documents and informing the requester that the project terminated in less than one year, and that individuals who worked on the program have retired or moved to other positions within DOE. See Letter from Charles W. Dougherty, FOIA Coordinator, Office of Nuclear Energy, to Mark Haim, Director, MNWF (January 31, 1995). On February 27, 1995, MNWF filed an Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). See Letter from Mark Haim, Director, MNWF, to Director, OHA (February 27, 1995) (Appeal Letter).

In this Appeal, MNWF challenges the adequacy of the search for IFR information and alleges a violation of the new DOE regulations relating to the disclosure of contractor records. MNWF maintains that DOE did not search ORNL, did not contact key individuals at Argonne National Labs (ANL), ORNL, or MIT, did not adequately search DOE headquarters, provided no verification that the project terminated in less than one year, and violated the contractor records provision of DOE's FOIA regulations.

II. Analysis

A. Adequacy of the Search

The OHA has stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. The OHA has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., In Defense of Animals, 24 DOE ¶ 80,151 (1994); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991). However, the FOIA requires that the search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In considering the present Appeal, we contacted the Oak Ridge Operations Office and the Office of Nuclear Energy to ascertain whether the searches conducted were reasonably calculated to uncover the information sought by MNWF. Oak Ridge advised us that, contrary to MNWF's statement, a search was conducted at ORNL and no responsive documents were found. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amy Rothrock, FOIA Officer, Oak Ridge Operations Office, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 16, 1995); see also Memorandum from Jennifer Houghton, FOIA/Privacy Act Specialist, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, to Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 16, 1995).

We contacted an employee of the Oak Ridge Operations Office who is physically located at ORNL. He informed us that ORNL had indeed been searched and in fact was the primary search site in this case since it maintains a filing system for records and has more space than the Oak Ridge Operations Office. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Gary Clifton, Oak Ridge Operations Office, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 17, 1995). Some responsive documents were located recently at ORNL, and are currently in transit to the FOIA Office in Oak Ridge before being sent to the FOIA/Privacy Act Division at DOE headquarters for review. Id. We find no reason to question the veracity of the Oak Ridge employees who performed the search, and therefore find that the search of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory was reasonably calculated to locate the documents requested.

The Office of Nuclear Energy (NE) released four responsive documents to MNWF after conducting a search of its offices. MNWF alleges that certain key employees of NE were never contacted. Specifically mentioned are Sol Rosen, Andy Millunzi, Frank Goldner, and Jerry Griffith. See Appeal Letter at 7. We contacted all of the individuals except Mr. Griffith (who has retired). Mr. Rosen recalls that the project was terminated around April 1992 1/, but had no documents. He confirmed that Mr. Griffith is retired. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Sol Rosen, DOE, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye (March 16, 1995). Mr. Millunzi left NE in October 1992 and did not take any papers from the project when he left. He left all files in NE. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Andy Millunzi, DOE/DP, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 15, 1995). Mr. Goldner said that he released all of the documents in his possession to the NE FOIA Coordinator. He said that the project ran out of money in mid-1992 and, after checking personally, he found that it never received an extension. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Frank Goldner, DOE/NE, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 15, 1995).

Challenges to the adequacy of an agency's search must be supported by the presentation of a reasoned argument that a requested document, unidentified by the agency in its search, does in fact exist. See Mark S. Boggs, 22 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1992). We note that MNWF presents copies of documents referring to final reports due in April 1992. However, no one connected with the project could confirm that the project reached the stage where these reports were completed. 2/ Therefore, we conclude that the Oak Ridge Operations Office and the Office of Nuclear Energy have conducted searches reasonably calculated to find the information requested by MNWF.

B. Agency Records

The FOIA provides for disclosure of agency records. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Records are "agency records" for FOIA purposes if they 1) were created or obtained by an agency; and 2) are under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. United States Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-45 (1989).

MNWF contends that the withholding of subcontractor records violates DOE's FOIA regulations which state that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. 552(b)." See 59 Fed. Reg. 63882 (December 12, 1994); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1). However, when they were contacted during our analysis of this Appeal, FOIA officers at DOE Headquarters and Oak Ridge Operations Office stated that no subcontractor records were withheld by their offices because none were found during the search. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Jennifer Houghton, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 16, 1995); Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amy Rothrock, FOIA Officer, Oak Ridge Operations Office and Valerie Vance Adeyeye (March 16, 1995).

It appears that MNWF believes that the Oak Ridge Operations Office located and subsequently withheld subcontractor records. Although the January 30, 1995 determination letter from the FOIA/Privacy Act Division states that subcontractor records are not agency records for purposes of the FOIA unless the Department has possession of the records, the letter did not mean to imply that subcontractor records had been found. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Jennifer Houghton, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 23, 1995). As discussed above, no records were located during the previous searches, and we do not need to give this argument any further consideration.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, we find that the Oak Ridge Operations Office and the Office of Nuclear Energy have performed searches reasonably calculated to find the information requested by MNWF. Nevertheless, a subsequent search of ORNL has located some responsive documents which will be the subject of a determination letter issued by the Oak Ridge Operations Office in the near future.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Mid-Missouri Nuclear Weapons Freeze, Inc., Case No. VFA-0029, is hereby denied.

1/ MNWF also alleges that no termination letter was provided. DOE/NE informed this office, in a response to the Appeal, that termination notices are not always provided when funding ceases. See Memorandum from Charles M. Dougherty, FOIA Coordinator, DOE/NE, to Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 17, 1995).

2/ In a previous appeal by MNWF, an OHA attorney contacted Dr. Yoon Chang, General Manager of the IFR Program at ANL. Dr. Chang said that he has never seen a copy of the completed study, is not sure that it was completed, and feels that he would have seen a copy of the study if it had been completed. See OHA Case File #LFA-0414, Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Len Tao, OHA Staff Attorney, and Dr. Yoon Chang, ANL (September 21, 1994).

March 29, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Physicians for Social Responsibility, Inc.

Date of Filing: March 1, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0030

On March 1, 1995, Physicians for Social Responsibility, Inc. (PSR) filed an Appeal from (1) the denial of information issued to it on January 30, 1995 by the Director of the FOIA/Privacy Act Division and (2) the partial denial of information issued to it on January 31, 1995 by the FOIA Coordinator of the Office of Nuclear Energy.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by federal agencies be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On August 22, 1994, PSR filed a request with the FOI and Privacy Acts Branch of DOE Headquarters asking for a copy of documents relating to work done by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT) under contract with DOE in the area of the Integral Fast Reactor (IFR) project. The program was proposed by Argonne National Laboratory (ANL) as an improvement in waste management. In the process under study, long half-life isotopes are removed from spent fuel and returned to the reactor, simplifying waste management. The request was expanded on August 25, 1994 to include documents released under a FOIA request 1/ filed in November 1992 by the Mid-Missouri Nuclear Weapons Freeze (MNWF), Inc. See Letter from Denise Diggin, Chief, FOI and Privacy Acts Branch, DOE, to Dr. Robert Gould, PSR (August 26, 1994). The FOI and Privacy Acts Branch issued a determination stating that no responsive documents could be found. See Letter from Denise Diggin, Chief, FOI and Privacy Acts Branch, to Dr. Robert Gould (August 26, 1994). On September 30, 1994, PSR filed an appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals, incorporating by reference the August 23, 1994 appeal filed by MNWF. On October 7, 1994, the OHA remanded the matter to the Office of Nuclear Energy and the FOIA/Privacy Act Division for a more thorough search. Physicians for Social Responsibility, 24 DOE § 80,146 (1994). The decision was similar to that issued to MNWF the previous month. Mid-Missouri Nuclear Weapons Freeze, 24 DOE ¶ 80,142 (1994).

In a final determination dated January 30, 1995, the FOIA/Privacy Act Division stated that after a search of the Oak Ridge Operations Office, no responsive records could be found. The determination also stated that the work was done under a contract and pursuant to Martin Marietta's Operating Contract, subcontractor records are not agency records for purposes of the FOIA unless the Department has possession of the records. See Letter from GayLa D. Sessoms, Director, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, to

Dr. Robert M. Gould, PSR (January 30, 1995); see also Contract No. DE-AC05-84OR21400, §H.23(b)(8) (Contract). The Office of Nuclear Energy responded in its determination letter by submitting four responsive documents and informing the requester that the project terminated in less than one year, and that individuals who worked on the program have retired or moved to other positions within DOE. See Letter from Charles W. Dougherty, FOIA Coordinator, Office of Nuclear Energy, to Dr. Robert Gould, PSR (January 31, 1995). On March 1, 1995, PSR filed an Appeal with the Director of the OHA. See Letter from Dr. Robert Gould, PSR, to Director, OHA (March 1, 1995) (Appeal Letter).

In this Appeal 2/, PSR challenges the adequacy of the search for IFR information and alleges a violation of the new DOE regulations relating to the disclosure of contractor records. PSR maintains that DOE did not search ORNL, did not contact key individuals at ANL, ORNL, or MIT, did not adequately search DOE headquarters, provided no verification that the project terminated in less than one year, and violated the contractor records provision of DOE's FOIA regulations.

II. Analysis

A. Adequacy of the Search

The OHA has stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. The OHA has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., In Defense of Animals, 24 DOE ¶ 80,151 (1994); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991). In considering the present Appeal, we contacted the Oak Ridge Operations Office and the Office of Nuclear Energy to ascertain whether the searches conducted were reasonably calculated to uncover the information sought by PSR. Oak Ridge advised us that, contrary to PSR's statement, a search was conducted at ORNL and no responsive documents were found. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amy Rothrock, Oak Ridge Operations Office, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 16, 1995); see also Memorandum from Jennifer Houghton, FOIA/Privacy Act Specialist, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, to Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 16, 1995).

Some responsive documents were located recently at ORNL, and are currently in transit to the FOIA Office in Oak Ridge before being sent to the FOIA/Privacy Division at DOE headquarters for review. Id. We find no reason to question the veracity of the Oak Ridge employees who performed the search, and therefore find that the search of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory was reasonably calculated to locate the documents requested.

The Office of Nuclear Energy (NE) released four responsive documents to PSR after conducting a search of its offices. PSR alleges that certain key employees of NE were never contacted. Specifically mentioned are Sol Rosen, Andy Millunzi, Frank Goldner, and Jerry Griffith. See Appeal Letter at 7. We contacted all of the individuals except Mr. Griffith (who has retired). Mr. Rosen recalls that the project was terminated around April 1992 3/, but had no documents. He confirmed that Mr. Griffith is retired. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Sol Rosen, DOE, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 16, 1995). Mr. Millunzi left NE in October 1992 and did not take any papers from the project when he left. He left all files in NE. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Andy Millunzi, DOE/DP, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 15, 1995). Mr. Goldner said that he released all of the documents in his possession to the NE FOIA Coordinator. He said that the project ran out of money in mid-1992 and, after checking personally, he found that it never received an extension. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Frank Goldner, DOE/NE, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 15, 1995).

Challenges to the adequacy of an agency's search must be supported by the presentation of a reasoned argument that a requested document, unidentified by the agency in its search, does in fact exist. See Mark S. Boggs, 22 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1992). We note that PSR presents copies of documents referring to final reports due in April 1992. However, no one connected with the project could confirm that the project reached the stage where these reports were completed. 4/ Therefore, we conclude that the Oak Ridge Operations Office and the Office of Nuclear Energy have conducted searches reasonably calculated to find the information requested by PSR.

B. Agency Records

The FOIA provides for disclosure of agency records. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Records are "agency records" for FOIA purposes if they 1) were created or obtained by an agency; and 2) are under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. United States Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-45 (1989).

PSR contends that the withholding of subcontractor records violates DOE's FOIA regulations which state that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. 552(b)." See 59 Fed. Reg. 63882 (December 12, 1994); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1). However, when they were contacted during our analysis of this Appeal, FOIA officers at DOE Headquarters and Oak Ridge Operations Office stated that no subcontractor records were withheld by their offices because none were found during the search. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Jennifer Houghton, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 16, 1995); Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amy Rothrock, FOIA Officer, Oak Ridge Operations Office and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 16, 1995).

It appears that PSR believed that the Oak Ridge Operations Office located and subsequently withheld subcontractor records. Although the January 30, 1995 determination letter from the FOIA/Privacy Act Division states that subcontractor records are not agency records for purposes of the FOIA unless the Department has possession of the records, the letter did not mean to imply that subcontractor records had been found. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Jennifer Houghton, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (March 23, 1995). As discussed above, no records were located during the previous searches, and we do not need to give this argument any further consideration.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, we find that the Oak Ridge Operations Office and the Office of Nuclear Energy have performed searches reasonably calculated to find the information requested by PSR. Nevertheless, a subsequent search of ORNL has located some responsive documents which will be the subject of a determination letter issued by the Oak Ridge Operations Office in the near future.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Physicians for Social Responsibility, Inc., Case NO. VFA-0030, is hereby denied.

District of Columbia.

1/ Mid-Missouri Nuclear Weapons Freeze, Inc. filed a request on November 9, 1992 with the FOIA Public Information Officer seeking a copy of documents related to three projects undertaken for DOE by researchers at MIT related to the IFR and associated pyroprocessing/actinide recycle technologies. See Case File, OHA Case No. VFA-0029, Letter from Mark Haim, Director, MNWF, to FOIA Public Information Officer, DOE (November 9, 1992).

2/ In its Appeal, PSR incorporates by reference the complete appeal, including enclosures, that was submitted by MNWF and is now OHA Case No. VFA-0029. See Appeal Letter at 2. Because MNWF and PSR received equivalent determination letters, our analysis of both cases is the same.

3/ PSR also alleges that no termination letter was provided. DOE/NE informed this office, in a response to the Appeal, that termination notices are not always provided when funding ceases. See Memorandum from Charles M. Dougherty, FOIA Coordinator, DOE/NE, to Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 17, 1995).

4/ In the previous appeal by MNWF (which is incorporated by reference into PSR's Appeal now under discussion) an OHA attorney contacted Dr. Yoon Chang, General Manager of the IFR Program at ANL. Dr. Chang said that he has never seen a copy of the completed study, is not sure that it was completed, and feels that he would have seen a copy of the study if it had been completed. See OHA Case File #LFA-0414, Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Len Tao, OHA Staff Attorney, and Dr. Yoon Chang, ANL (September 21, 1994).

March 27, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: J. Eileen Price

Case Number: VFA-0031

On March 3, 1995, J. Eileen Price (Price) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on February 16, 1995 by the Assistant Administrator for Management of the Department of Energy's Western Area Power Administration (WAPA). In her Appeal, Price asserts that WAPA failed to provide her with all of the responsive documents in its possession regarding a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) Request she submitted on February 8, 1995.

I. Background

On February 8, 1995, Price filed a FOIA Request with WAPA requesting all employee performance appraisal information in her performance appraisal file and all unofficial information not contained in her personnel file including any unofficial documents, notes and files which pertain to her or her employment in the Loveland Area Office beginning in October 1992. Additionally, Price requested that if, in the future, any information is added to any responsive files or the information in those files is changed in any way, she be provided a copy of the new or modified document. WAPA, in its February 16, 1995 Determination Letter, provided Price with copies of responsive documents in her official personnel file. WAPA also provided Price with various other documents contained in other files maintained by her supervisors.

In her Appeal, Price argues that WAPA conducted an inadequate search for responsive documents and gives examples of documents she believes exist yet were not provided to her by WAPA. Specifically, Price alleges that from October 1992 her immediate supervisor, Ms. Janet Campbell (Campbell), kept daily notes in her "Franklin Day Planner" regarding all conversations she had with Price during the period she was Price's supervisor. Price also asserts that Campbell and Ronald Steinbach (Steinbach), her new immediate supervisor, took extensive notes during the course of an August 2, 1994 meeting which she and her union representative attended to discuss matters pertaining to her performance and an EEO complaint she had filed. Further, Price asserts that at the August 2 meeting both Campbell and Steinbach stated that they were maintaining "informal personnel files" on her. Price states that none of the above described documents were provided to her. Lastly, Price asserts that WAPA failed to respond to her request for documents generated in the future. 1/

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

As an initial matter, we reject Price's apparent argument that WAPA is required under the FOIA to automatically provide to her any responsive documents it may obtain in the future. While the FOIA requires an agency to make records promptly available to any person, the courts have interpreted the FOIA as not requiring agencies to establish services automatically disseminating agency records or information. See Mandel Grunfeld & Herrick v. United States Customs Service, 709 F. 2d 41, 43 (11th Cir. 1983) (plaintiff not entitled to automatic mailing of materials as they are updated); Lybarger v. Cardwell, 577 F.2d 764 (1st Cir. 1978) (FOIA does not require that a requester be placed on agency mailing list to receive agency updated handbooks and materials). Consequently, we find Price's argument to be without merit.

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted officials at WAPA to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. We were informed that officials at WAPA searched Price's official personnel file along with the files that each of Price's supervisors maintained on the employees that they supervised. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Gloria Bogans, Director, Division of Human Resource Management, WAPA, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (March 8, 1995). All of the documents which were discovered in these searches were provided to Price. 2/ However, on receiving a copy of Price's FOIA Appeal, WAPA conducted another search to ascertain whether the documents described in her Appeal existed. WAPA informed us that Campbell stated that to the best of her knowledge she had destroyed all her notes regarding Price after she ceased being Price's supervisor and that she did not take substantive notes regarding Price on the pages of her day planner. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Jim Kisselburg, WAPA, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (March 17, 1995). We were also informed that Steinbach had destroyed his notes regarding the August 2 meeting after having offered them to Price's union representative. Id. However, an additional search of all of Campbell's and Steinbach's files, along with the files of their supervisor, Jim Kisselburg, uncovered several potentially responsive documents. See id.; Memorandum of telephone conversation between Doug Harness, Esq., counsel for WAPA, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (March 22, 1995). Consequently, we will remand this matter back to WAPA. On remand, WAPA shall either release the newly discovered documents or issue a determination explaining the withholding of any material pursuant to the FOIA. 3/

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

1. The Appeal filed by J. Eileen Price on March 3, 1995 is granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

2. This matter is remanded to theWestern Area Power Administration who shall either release the newly discovered documents described above or issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision.

3. This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

1/ Price also argues that WAPA failed to apprise her of her appeal rights as required by the FOIA. While DOE FOIA regulations require an agency to notify a requestor of her right to appeal when a request has been denied by the agency, it is apparent that WAPA believed it had provided Price with all of the responsive documents in its possession and thus believed that no statement of appeal rights was required. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7 (b)(5) (provision requiring statement of right of administrative appeal for a FOIA denial).

2/ WAPA interpreted Price's request for "unofficial files" to refer to the files supervisors often keep regarding the employees they supervise. Such files might contain documents such as copies of an individual's performance appraisal. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Gloria Bogans, Director of Human Resource Management and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (March 8, 1995).

3/ We have been informed that one of the documents is a page from an individual's day planner. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Jim Kisselburg, WAPA, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (March 17, 1995). WAPA may wish to consider whether such a document is in fact an agency record subject to the FOIA. See William D. Lawrence, 24 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,601 (1994) (listing factors to be considered in the determination of whether a document is an agency record for the purposes of the FOIA); OXY USA, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,161 (1993) (telephone logs and appointment books held not to be agency records).

March 31, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: David K. Hackett

Date of Filing: March 8, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0032

On March 8, 1995, David K. Hackett (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on February 22, 1995 by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge) of the Department of Energy. In its determination, Oak Ridge stated that it was providing all documents responsive to the Appellant's November 6, 1994 request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) which were in the possession of Oak Ridge. This Appeal, if granted, would require Oak Ridge to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On November 6, 1994, the Appellant submitted a FOIA request to DOE Headquarters (DOE HQ) seeking information relating to his complaints against Martin Marietta Energy Systems, including all documents resulting from the complaints located in the following DOE offices: Oak Ridge, the Office of Contractor Employee Protection (OCEP), the Office of Inspector General (IG), Office of Declassification, Office of the Executive Secretariat, and any other DOE office which may have become involved in the Appellant's complaints.

DOE HQ coordinated a department-wide search for documents responsive to the Appellant's Request. In a December 2, 1994 letter, DOE HQ notified the Appellant that his request had been forwarded to the three offices where responsive documents might be stored, Oak Ridge, IG and the Office of Field Management (FM), and that the three offices would respond separately. On February 22, 1995, Oak Ridge issued its determination, releasing 64 pages of responsive documents and stating that no other documents responsive to Appellant's request were found at that location. On March 8, 1995, the Appellant filed the present Appeal in which he contends that Oak Ridge's search for responsive documents was inadequate. 1/ Thus, it is only Oak Ridge's response which is at issue in this Appeal. 2/ See Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and David K. Hackett, Appellant (March 21, 1995).

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981);

Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

The Appellant challenges in both general and specific terms the adequacy of the search performed for responsive documents. We contacted Oak Ridge to determine the extent of the search which had been performed. We were informed that the search was coordinated by the FOI Officer at Oak Ridge, Amy L. Rothrock. Ms. Rothrock informed us that the Equal Employment Office, Safety and Health Division and the Office of Chief Counsel were searched for responsive documents. 3/ Each of these offices certified to Ms. Rothrock that the search was done in a reasonable manner, but the only location in which responsive documents were found was the Office of Chief Counsel. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Amy Rothrock (March 15, 1995). However, based on discussions between the Appellant, the OHA, and Oak Ridge during the course of the present Appeal, we have determined that there may be responsive documents that were not identified in the initial search. 4/ Consequently, we will remand the Appellant's request so that a thorough and conscientious search can be made for additional responsive documents. On remand, Oak Ridge shall identify all documents responsive to the Appellant's current request and either release them or provide adequate justification for withholding any portion of them. 5/

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by David P. Hackett on March 8, 1995, Case Number VFA-0032, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to Oak Ridge, which shall conduct a search for documents responsive to the Appellant's request as described in the above Decision and Order, and shall promptly issue a new determination regarding those documents.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

George B. Breznay

Director

Date: March 31, 1995

1/ Appellant also notes in his Appeal that he wishes to "hereby lodge a formal complaint for noncompliance" with his FOIA request. The Appellant's only means for "complaint" through this Office is to file an appeal under the FOIA, which he has already done.

2/ FM has been instructed by DOE HQ to coordinate its response with that of the Office of Declassification, the Office of the Executive Secretariat and OCEP. FM has not yet provided that coordinated response to the Appellant. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren, OHA Staff Attorney, and Geoffrey Gray, OCEP Staff Attorney (March 17, 1995). The IG intends to issue its response to the Appellant's Request forthwith. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Jane Payne, FOI Officer, IG (March 17, 1995). Further, when the Appellant filed a second FOIA request on November 23, 1994, he brought to DOE HQ's attention the fact that responsive documents may also be located in the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity (ED). ED has been instructed to provide a fourth, separate response to the Appellant. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Eldyne E. Bordner, FOI and Privacy Acts Division, DOE HQ (March 21, 1995). Finally, we note that the Appellant has apparently filed a third FOIA request for documents generated in connection with his complaint which are in the possession of Martin Marietta Energy Systems. The Appellant has not yet received a response to that request. See Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and David K. Hackett (March 23, 1995). Although it is possible that those types of documents might fall within the scope of the November 6, 1994 request at issue in this Appeal, we believe the most sensible course of action is to permit Oak Ridge to respond to the issue of those documents within the context of the more specific request.

3/ The Appellant also argues that the branch of the IG located at Oak Ridge (IG-Oak Ridge) should have been searched by Oak Ridge. However, IG Headquarters is coordinating its own search with that of IG-Oak Ridge in responding to the Appellant's request. Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Jane Payne (March 17, 1995). We therefore find that Oak Ridge did not err in not searching for responsive records located at IG-Oak Ridge. Further, Appellant has stated that he made telephone calls to the Employee Concerns Hotline number, located at DOE HQ. Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and David K. Hackett (March 24, 1995). Calls concerning Oak Ridge would have been directed to the Oak Ridge office responsible for the Employee Concerns program. Previously, Oak Ridge-Safety and Health Division was responsible for responding to these calls, but currently, they are in the province of Oak Ridge-EEO. Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Amy Rothrock (March 28, 1995). Both places were searched, and we are confident, in light of the record before us, that an adequate search was performed. (Any documentation of the calls to the Hotline located at HQ will be searched for in connection with the FM response. Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Eldyne E. Bordner (March 29, 1995)).

4/ For example, various correspondence between a former employee in the Office of Chief Counsel, William Stevens, and the Appellant's Representative, John Duncan, may be located in an unsearched portion of Oak Ridge. Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Amy Rothrock (March 24, 1995). Ms. Rothrock has agreed to search further for Mr. Stevens' files and telephone memoranda. Further, the Appellant has informed us that he was told within the last two years by the head of the Oak Ridge EEO office, Rufus Smith, that Mr. Smith was keeping a file on the Appellant. Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and David K. Hackett (March 24, 1995). Ms. Rothrock spoke to Mr. Smith and she was informed that he has not spoken with the Appellant for at least the last three years, has never kept file on him nor told him that he was keeping a file. In view of the fact that we are remanding this case, we ask Oak Ridge to conduct a further investigation to determine the facts as to this issue.

5/ We note that Oak Ridge failed to identify one responsive document generated in connection with the Appellant's complaints against Martin Marietta Energy Systems, a transcript of a deposition. However, we will not address Oak Ridge's failure to identify this document, as that transcript has been the specific subject of a separate FOIA request (December 5, 1994) and appeal by the Appellant. See David K. Hackett, 24 DOE ¶ 80,166 (1995).

September 13, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: National Security Archive

Date of Filing: March 13, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0033

The National Security Archive filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on February 3, 1995, by the Department of Energy's Oakland Operations Office (Oakland). In that determination, Oakland denied in part a request for information that the National Security Archive filed on April 7, 1988, and modified on April 26, 1988, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. The information deleted from the document released to the National Security Archive in that determination was withheld after a review of the document had been performed by the predecessor of the Office of Declassification of the Department of Energy's Office of Security Affairs. This Appeal, if granted, would require Oakland to release the information that it withheld in the February 3, 1995 determination.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On April 7, 1988, Craig Keller of the National Security Archive submitted a request under the FOIA to the Department of Defense (DOD) for "[c]opies of all records including but not limited to reports, memoranda, interviews, meeting minutes, and correspondence cited in or relating in whole or in part to the ?Nth Country Experiment,' an experiment initiated by the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in May 1964." The National Security Archive amended its request on April 26, 1988, and requested only the formal report, "Summary Report of the Nth Country Experiment (UCRL-50249)" (the Report). A May 6, 1988 letter to Mr. Keller informed him that the Report contained classified information and was being forwarded to the DOE's Office of Classification (now the Office of Declassification) for review. On February 3, 1995, after the Office of Declassification completed its review, Oakland released to Mr. Keller a copy of the Report from which it withheld information it claimed to be classified as National Security Information pursuant to Executive Order 12356 and as Restricted Data pursuant to the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, and therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemptions 1 and 3, respectively, of the FOIA.

The present Appeal seeks the disclosure of the withheld portions of the requested document. In its Appeal, the National Security Archive contends that release of at least some of those portions could no longer reasonably be expected to cause damage to the national security and that there is substantial public interest in the withheld information.

II. Analysis

Exemption 1 of the FOIA provides that an agency may exempt from disclosure matters that are "(A) specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy and (B) are in fact properly classified pursuant to such Executive order." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1). Executive Order 12958 is the current Executive Order that provides for the classification, declassification and safeguarding of national security information. Its predecessor, Executive Order 12356, was in effect at the time the initial determination was issued. When properly classified under this Executive Order, national security information is exempt from mandatory disclosure by Exemption 1. See Keith E. Loomis, 25 DOE ¶ 80,183 (1996); A. Victorian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,166 (1996). According to the Office of Declassification, the information withheld pursuant to Exemption 1 in this case consists of sensitive details of nuclear weapons design.

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). We have previously determined that the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2011-2296, is a statute to which Exemption 3 is applicable. See, e.g., Barton J. Bernstein, 22 DOE ¶ 80,165 (1992); William R. Bolling, II, 20 DOE ¶ 80,134 (1990). According to the Office of Declassification, the portions that the DOE deleted from the requested document under Exemption 3 were withheld on the grounds that they contain information about nuclear weapons design that has been classified as Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act and is therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure.

The Director of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of SA reviewed those portions of the requested document for which the DOE had claimed exemptions from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA.

In performing his review the Director of SA considered the two issues that the National Security Archive has raised on appeal. The National Security Archive's first contention is that the predecessor Executive Order to Executive Order 12958 (Executive Order 12356) contained language, as does the current Order, specifying that information should be classified only if its disclosure could reasonably be expected to cause damage to the national security, and that some of the withheld information no longer meets that criterion. In consideration of this contention, the Director of SA reviewed all the information that was deleted from the copy of the Report provided in the DOE's initial response. As a result of that review, the Director of SA determined that no additional portions of the Report may now be declassified, because all of the information initially withheld continues to be classified as either National Security Information or Restricted Data.

Its second contention is that, despite the public interest in the information, the DOE has withheld the Report's conclusions that appear on page 8. The Director of SA informed us that the information withheld on page 8 of the Report does not consist of conclusions; the Report's conclusions start at page 15, and the great majority of them have been released. He also informed us that those portions of the conclusions that were withheld initially continue to be properly classified as either National Security Information or Restricted Data.

Based on the review performed by the Director of SA, we have determined that Executive Order 12958 and the Atomic Energy Act require the continued withholding of those portions of the Report that were previously identified as classified information. Although a finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information nevertheless, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemptions 1 and 3, the disclosure is prohibited by statute or Executive Order. Therefore, those portions of the Report that the Director of SA has determined to be properly classified must continue to be withheld from disclosure. However, on review the Director of SA was able to perform more precise deletions throughout the Report, and as a result we can now release some information that had previously been withheld. A newly redacted version of the Report will be provided to the National Security Archive under separate cover. Accordingly, the National Security Archive's Appeal will be granted in part and denied in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the National Security Archive on May 14, 1993, Case No. VFA-0033, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) A newly redacted version of the "Summary Report of the Nth Country Experiment (UCRL-50249)," in which additional information is released, will be provided to the National Security Archive.

May 18, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers

Date of Filing:April 18, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0034

On April 18, 1995, the International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers (IFPTE), through its President, Dennis C. Morey, filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on March 20, 1995 by the Freedom of Information Officer at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Idaho Operations Office (hereinafter "Authorizing Official" or "Idaho"). In that determination, the Authorizing Official denied a request for information which IFPTE had filed pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, IFPTE requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) order the release of the withheld information.

I. Background

On March 6, 1995, IFPTE filed a FOIA request for the following information:

1. Copy of the Contract Between DOE and Augustine Pitrolo for Consulting Support.
2. Short List of Qualified Candidates for the SES Position of Deputy in the Office of Program Execution (OPE).

On March 20, 1995, Idaho informed IFPTE that, with respect to item 1, no contract between Augustine Pitrolo and DOE exists.<1> With respect to item 2, Idaho withheld the requested information pursuant to Exemption 5. The Authorizing Official explained that the OPE Deputy selection is in a predecisional status due to the Department's Strategic Alignment Plan and has been placed on hold until the Plan is completed. Moreover, the short list consists of preliminary analyses or tentative recommendations, which are part of the deliberative process. Determination Letter from Carl R. Robertson, dated March 20, 1995. The short list is comprised of the names of the best qualified candidates, the position title and vacancy number, and the name of the selecting official.

Because IFPTE's Appeal does not challenge Idaho's determination with respect to item 1, our analysis will focus on item 2 of the request.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b).

A. Exemption 5

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency memoranda or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege, and the "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In the present case, the Idaho Operations Office relied solely upon the deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5.

The "deliberative process" privilege shields from public disclosure records reflecting the predecisional, consultative process of an agency. Benedetto Enterprises, Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1989). Predecisional materials are not exempt merely because they are prepared prior to a final action, policy or interpretation. These materials must be a part of the agency's deliberative process by which decisions are made. Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F.2d 1136, 1144 (D.C. Cir. 1975). This privilege was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making government decisions. EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939 (Cl. Ct. 1958) (Mink). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151.

In order to be shielded by Exemption 5, a document must be both predecisional, i.e., generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e., reflecting the give and take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id.

The Appellant, citing NLRB v. Sears, maintains that the list does not reveal the deliberative process in any manner. He claims further that "the list is final and the selection, if allowed to proceed, must be made from the list by the selecting official without any further open and frank discussion." Appeal Letter dated April 15, 1995. We find the Appellant's arguments unpersuasive and find the requested list both predecisional and deliberative. Everyone on the short list will not be chosen for the position. There must be one final decision regarding the selection of one person for the position of Deputy Assistant Manager for Program Execution in the Idaho Operations Office. Therefore, while the list is final, it is predecisional as to the selection process. To receive Exemption 5 protection, a predecisional document must also be part of the agency's deliberative process by which decisions are made, i.e. the document must make recommendations or express opinions. Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F.2d 1136. Here, the short list is deliberative since it represents the opinions of a group of people concerning the most qualified applicants. It also makes a recommendation to the selecting official.

The Appellant also argues that since Idaho will rely solely on the list to make the final decision, the list must be released, citing Niemeier v. Watergate Spec. Prosecution Force, 565 F.2d 967 (1977). Niemeier is distinguishable from the instant case, however, because it involved a memo that was quoted and expressly adopted or incorporated by reference into a final agency document. This case involves a list of names which will not be incorporated into any final agency dispositional document.<2> Rather, a final selection of one name will be made from the list.

Even though the short list satisfies the predecisional-and-deliberative test, parts of it may be subject to mandatory release because Exemption 5 only covers the subjective, deliberative portion of the document. Mink, 410 U.S. at 87-91. Factual information contained in the protected document must be disclosed unless the factual material is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material. Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1077 (D.C. Cir. 1971). Since the short list form (Senior Executive Service Selection Certificate) contains factual information in addition to the list of names, a copy with the names redacted could have been properly released under the FOIA. Similarly, the name of the selecting official which appears on the short list is not predecisional, nor deliberative. Therefore, it is not exempt from disclosure and could be properly released under Exemption 5 as well.<3> Since, however, the Appellant requested "a short list of the qualified candidates with an indication of ranking," a release of such factual information, i.e. the form without the names, would not have been responsive to the Appellant's request. See Original Request Letter dated March 6, 1995. Accordingly, we will not order the release of this factual information.

An agency must consider the public interest in releasing a document even where discretionary withholding is permitted under one of the FOIA's exemptions. When the requester's and the general public's interests are complementary, the basic purposes of the FOIA -- "to ensure an informed citizenry" and "to hold the governors accountable to the governed" -- can often be met through disclosure. NLRB v. Robbins Tire and Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214, 242 (1978). A standard announced by the Attorney General applies a presumption of disclosure which, in the absence of a reasonably foreseeable harm to an interest protected by an exemption, should result in a determination by the agency that the public interest lies with disclosure. See J. Reno, Memorandum to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993).

We must determine what harm would result from release of the withheld document. We conclude that release of the deliberative portions of the short list would have a chilling effect on the frank and independent exchange of views among those responsible for making government decisions. An employee would be unlikely to communicate his or her candid and direct opinions or beliefs about a job applicant's true qualifications if he or she knew or suspected that the communication would be released. We find that this satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard recently set forth by the Attorney General and that the short list was properly withheld under Exemption 5. However, there is no foreseeable harm in releasing the name of the selecting official and the factual information contained on the short list. Nevertheless, as stated above, that information is not responsive to the Appellant's request, and therefore need not be released.

B. Exemption 6

Given the circumstances of this case, it is also appropriate to conduct an Exemption 6 analysis of whether the list of names on the short list should be withheld. Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post).

To warrant protection under Exemption 6, information must first meet its threshold requirement. It must fall within the category of "personnel and medical files [or] similar files." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6). The short list qualifies as a personnel file since it was generated during the hiring process. The term "similar files" has been interpreted broadly by the Supreme Court to include all information which "applies to a particular individual." Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 602. Here, the names on the short list also qualify as similar files and, therefore, meet the threshold requirement of Exemption 6.

Next, we must undertake a three-step analysis to determine whether the names on the short list may be withheld under Exemption 6. First, we must determine whether a substantial privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the names. National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873, 874 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990) (Horner). Second, we must determine whether the release of the names would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee). Finally, if we find both privacy and public interests in the requested information, we must weigh the privacy interest against the public interest in order to determine whether release of the list would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Id. at 762-70.

1. Privacy Interest

The Supreme Court has long found a privacy interest in the names and addresses of individuals significant enough to warrant protection from disclosure under Exemption 6. Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976). Moreover, at least seven Circuit Courts have found that an individual has a significant privacy interest in avoiding the unlimited disclosure of his or her name. See, e.g., Hopkins v. Department of Hous. & Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991); Painting & Drywall Work Preservation Fund v. Hous. & Urban Dev., 936 F.2d 1300 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Horner, 879 F.2d at 875; Halloran v. Veterans Admin., 874 F.2d 315, 323 (5th Cir. 1989); Department of Agric. v. FLRA, 836 F.2d 1139, 1143 (8th Cir. 1988); Minnis v. Department of Agric., 737 F.2d 784, 787 (9th Cir. 1984); Heights Community Congress v. Veterans Admin., 732 F.2d 526, 529 (6th Cir. 1984); American Fed'n of Gov't Employees v. United States, 712 F.2d 931, 932 (4th Cir. 1983). In light of the overwhelming weight of authority, we find that disclosure of the names of the individuals on the short list would result in a substantial invasion of personal privacy.

2. Public Interest

The Supreme Court has held that there is a public interest in disclosure of information that "sheds light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 773. The burden of establishing that disclosure would serve the public interest is on the requester. Carter v. United States Dep't of Commerce, 830 F.2d 388 (D.C. Cir. 1987). In the absence of any such showing, we find that disclosure of the names on the short list would not aid the public in understanding anything directly about the workings of the government. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 773.

III. Conclusion

The names on the short list were properly withheld under Exemptions 5 and 6. The short list is predecisional and deliberative and, therefore, the names contained therein are protected from disclosure under Exemption 5. The individuals on the short list have a significant privacy interest in their names and there is no corresponding public interest in their disclosure. Therefore, their names are protected from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 6.

Under Exemption 5, the factual information on the short list and the name of the selecting official could have been properly released. However, we will not order the release of the factual information nor the selecting official's name because they are not responsive to the Appellant's request.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by International Federation of Professional and Technical Engineers on April 18, 1995 is hereby denied.

<1>The Authorizing Official stated in the determination letter that they have conducted a thorough search of their files for the requested contract. There is nothing in the file to suggest that they have not done so. Furthermore, IFPTE's Appeal does not challenge Idaho's determination with respect to the contract. Therefore, we will not address the issue of whether the search was adequate.

<3>Since the selecting official is a higher level government official, there is some public interest in knowing his identity. Stern v. FBI, 737 F. 2d at 94 (D.C. Cir. 1977). In this case, there would be no unwarranted invasion of privacy under Exemption 6. Id.

May 19, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:U.A. Plumbers and Pipefitters, Local No. 36

Date of Filing: April 21, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0035

On April 21, 1995, the U.A. Plumbers and Pipefitters, Local No. 36 (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Idaho Operations Office (Idaho). The Appellant challenges Idaho's determination that certain documents sought by it are not agency records and therefore are not subject to mandatory disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). 5 U.S.C. § 552; 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require Idaho to consider whether the requested documents could be released under the FOIA.

I. Background

On October 4, 1993, the Appellant filed a Request for Information seeking documents relating to the West Valley Demonstration Project (the West Valley Project) which was owned by the DOE, but managed and operated by West Valley Nuclear Services (the M&O contractor). Because some of the documents requested by the Appellant contained information submitted to the M&O contractor by a subcontractor, Bell Power Corporation (the subcontractor), the DOE informed the subcontractor that it was considering releasing this information and solicited its comments, as required under the DOE's FOIA regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11. The subcontractor filed comments on October 22, 1993 and on March 11, 1994, claiming that no records responsive to the Appellant's request could be disclosed because all such records were either exempt from disclosure under the FOIA or are prohibited from disclosure by the Trade Secrets Act. On February 23, 1994 and March 31, 1994, DOE informed the subcontractor, by letter, that its claims were applied in much too broad a manner because the subcontractor had thereby excluded every record responsive to the Appellant's original request. On April 21, 1994, the subcontractor filed a "reverse FOIA" lawsuit against the DOE in the United States District Court for the Western District of New York seeking both a Temporary Restraining Order (TRO) and a Declaratory Judgement barring the release of any documents responsive to the Appellant's Request. Bell Power Corp. v. Department of Energy, Civil Action No. 94-CV-0298s(M). On April 25, 1994, the Court issued a Temporary Restraining Order preventing disclosure of the records in question until resolution of the lawsuit. On June 20, 1994, the Appellant entered the lawsuit as an intervening party. After filing at least one other reformulation of its original request, the Appellant filed a reformulated request on January 13, 1995 seeking:

1. The contract(s) and purchase order(s) between [the subcontractor] and [the M&O contractor], including all general conditions....
2. Requests for change orders or other revisions to the contract(s)....
3. Surveillance Reports, Logs, Transmittals and Findings and Bell Responses thereto.

4. Nonconformance Reports, Logs, Transmittals and Findings and Bell Responses thereto.
5. Requests for Corrective Action ("RCA") and RCA Logs, RCA Reports, RCA Transmittals and Findings, and [subcontractor] findings thereto.
6. Corrective Action Reports, Logs, Transmittals and Findings and Bell responses thereto.
7. Technical Advisory Logs, Transmittals and Findings and Bell Responses thereto.
8. Open Items Tracking System Logs, or Deficiency Lists.
9. Stop Work Orders and Bell Responses thereto.
10. Certified Welder Inspector Training Attendance Records.
11. Financial Audit Reports or analyses Prepared by [the M&O contractor] and Bell responses thereto.

January 13, 1995 request at pages 1-2. On March 20, 1995, Idaho issued a four page determination letter containing a number of findings. Most of these findings are not yet ripe for review and therefore are not proper subjects for administrative review under the DOE's FOIA regulations. <1> See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.8(a). However, Idaho's threshold determinations that documents in the possession of the M&O contractor are not "agency records," and therefore are not subject to the FOIA, do constitute appealable determinations which we have jurisdiction to consider.

Idaho has categorized the responsive documents into four separate categories, only two of which, Categories 2 and 3, are relevant to the present Appeal. "Category 2" consists of those responsive documents located at the West Valley site that were created by the M&O contractor and are clearly owned by the DOE by virtue of the M&O Contract. Category 3 consists of responsive documents located at the West Valley Site that were created by the subcontractor and then submitted to the M&O contractor. Whether such documents are the property of DOE is one of the issues before us in the present Appeal.

Idaho determined that those documents in Category 2 are not agency records, even though they are the property of DOE, because DOE does not have physical possession of them. Idaho also determined that the Category 3 documents were not agency records, since the documents are not in DOE's physical possession. In addition, Idaho notes that the Category 3 documents were not the property of DOE under the terms of the M&O Contract, and therefore were even further removed from agency record status.

II. Analysis

Although Idaho correctly found that the Category 2 documents are not "agency records" under FOIA case law, the DOE's FOIA regulations may require Idaho to treat the Category 2 records in the same manner as agency records. The DOE's FOIA regulations specifically provide:

When a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b).

59 Fed. Reg. 63884 (December 12, 1994), to be codified at 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1). Because the category 2 documents were generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract and are the property of the Government under the terms of the contract, we are remanding that portion of this Appeal concerning Category 2 documents to Idaho for a determination of their suitability for release under DOE's FOIA regulations.

We next consider Idaho's determination that Category 3 documents are not agency records. Category 3 documents are those documents responsive to the Appellant's request that were created by the subcontractor and then submitted to the M&O contractor. The issue here is whether, under DOE's contract with the M&O contractor, Category 3 documents are the property of DOE. The contract states in pertinent part:

(a) All records generated by the contractor in the course of performance of this contract. . . shall be the property of the Government and shall be subject to inspection, copying and audit by DOE at all reasonable times . . . .

Clause H.7(a), Ownership of Records Clause, Contract between DOE and West Valley Nuclear Services (emphasis supplied). The point of contention in the present case is whether this language confers DOE ownership upon the Category 3 documents. The Appellant contends that the term "generated" is meant to apply both to those documents actually created by the M&O contractor and to documents acquired by the M&O contractor during the course of its management and operation of the DOE facility. Idaho argues to the contrary, noting that the West Valley Nuclear Services Contract's Ownership of Records clause deviates from DOE's standard M&O contract language which usually confers DOE ownership upon documents that are "generated or acquired " by the M&O contractor (emphasis supplied) by omitting the term "acquired." Since the West Valley Nuclear Services M&O contract omits the term "acquired" from the ownership of records clause, Idaho argues, the contract excludes from DOE's ownership documents which are acquired, as opposed to generated, by the M&O contractor.

We agree with Idaho's interpretation of the contract. When interpreting a contract, the focus of the inquiry is to determine the intent of the parties. Subpart(c) of the ownership of records clause, which confers upon DOE the right of access to records held by the M&O Contractor, uses the term: "generated or acquired by [the M&O contractor]." DOE Contract with West Valley Nuclear Services, H.7(c) (emphasis supplied). This language, obviously intended to broaden the scope of DOE's access beyond its ownership rights, strongly suggests that the parties interpret the term "generated" in the manner suggested by Idaho. Accordingly, we conclude that DOE does not own the records in Category 3.

Since DOE does not own the Category 3 documents, our inquiry must turn to whether there is any other basis for concluding that the documents are subject to the FOIA. The Appellant contends that DOE has "control" of the Category 3 documents because it can order the M&O contractor to provide copies of them. This contention is without merit. The Supreme Court has expressly held that a mere right of access or ability to obtain a document does not confer agency record status upon a document. Forsham v. Harris , supra. Accordingly, we find that Idaho has correctly determined that Category 3 documents are not agency records. In addition, we find that the documents are likewise not subject to the FOIA under the regulation discussed above.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, we have determined that the documents in Category 2 are subject to the DOE's FOIA regulations while the documents in Category 3 are not. Accordingly, we are: (1) remanding this matter to Idaho with instructions to process the Category 2 documents under the DOE's FOIA regulations (2) denying that portion of the Appeal concerning Category 3, and (3) dismissing all other aspects of the Appeal without prejudice.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by U.A. Plumbers and Pipefitters, Local 36, on April 21, 1995 (Case Number VFA-0035) is hereby granted in part, denied in part, and dismissed as to all other aspects, as set forth in Paragraphs (2) through (4).

(2) The portion of the Appeal concerning the responsive documents which are the property of the Department of Energy ("Category 2 records") is hereby granted, and remanded to the Idaho Operations Office for further processing under the DOE's Regulations.

(3) The portion of the Appeal concerning the documents that are not owned by the DOE ("Category 3 records") is hereby denied.

(4) All other aspects of the Appeal are hereby dismissed.

(5) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1> For example, Idaho has determined that if it were to release any of the responsive documents it would withhold certain types of information from them under exemptions 4 and 6. Because Idaho has yet to actually withhold or even sufficiently identify the information it plans to withhold, we have determined that Idaho's findings that it would withhold information under these exemptions are not yet ripe for review.

May 22, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:A. Victorian

Case Number: VFA-0036

On April 24, 1995, Dr. A. Victorian (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a final determination issued to him on March 23, 1995 by the Albuquerque Operations Office of the Department of Energy (DOE/AL). In that determination, DOE/AL released three packets of documents responsive to Appellant's request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. DOE/AL identified a fourth packet of documents as responsive to Appellant's request, but withheld them pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6) (Exemption 6). See also 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). This Appeal, if granted, would require DOE/AL to release the withheld information.

I. Background

On November 13, 1974, Karen Silkwood died in an automobile accident while en route to talk to a reporter about possible radioactive contamination at the plutonium processing plant in Cimarron, Oklahoma, where she worked. This plant was operated by Kerr-McGee, a subcontractor for the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC), a predecessor of the DOE, through the AEC's Hanford, Washington facility. The plant manufactured plutonium fuel pellets for an experimental "breeder" reactor. Kerr-McGee closed the plant in 1975. The circumstances surrounding Silkwood's death and possible radiation contamination attracted wide-spread interest, leading to a Congressional investigation of the Cimarron plant and Kerr-McGee, a lengthy law suit, media scrutiny of both the incident and the nuclear industry generally, and speculation by the news and entertainment media about a government cover-up. On March 25, 1994, the Appellant filed a FOIA request with DOE/AL for "a copy of all documents, findings, reports compiled by LANL [Los Alamos National Laboratory] or other DOE components on the study of KAREN SILKWOOD's bones withheld in the LANL." (Emphasis in the original.)

In response to this request, a search was conducted of the LANL and four packets of documents were identified as responsive to the Appellant's request. Three of these were:

1) A letter dated February 18, 1994, and attachments from Alan C. McMillan, former leader of the LANL Human Studies Project, to Billie Silkwood, Karen Silkwood's father.

2) A letter dated March 19, 1979, from J.W. Healy, apparently of the LANL, to Robert Yoder of the Rocky Flats Area Office.

3) An undated "Karen Silkwood Case Summary."

See Letter of Gloria E. Inlow, Acting Director, Office of Intergovernmental and External Affairs,

DOE/AL (denying official), March 23, 1995 (final determination). These documents were released to the Appellant. The final determination also identified a number of responsive documents which dealt with the autopsy of Karen Silkwood and the disposal of her remains. This group of documents included: correspondence with Billie Silkwood, Karen Silkwood's father, regarding the disposal of the remains; an inventory of organs and tissue samples received by LANL; copies of the lab notebook and other records of LANL scientists who conducted tests for radioactive materials in Karen Silkwood's remains, including a description of the original autopsy results, descriptions of the processes used and immediate impressions of results; and a report, dated February 6, 1975, apparently prepared for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, entitled "Summary Report of Evaluation of Biomedical Aspects of the Kerr-McGee Personnel Contamination Incident Reported November 7, 1974." The denying official concluded that these documents contained "sensitive, personal information to the surviving family members" and therefore withheld them under Exemption 6. Id.

Appellant argues that there is a strong public interest in the details surrounding Karen Silkwood's death. Appeal of Dr. A. Victorian, April 24, 1995 (Appeal Letter). The Appellant notes the ongoing public and media scrutiny of both the United States nuclear industry and the government's involvement in it that was sparked by Silkwood's death. Id. Therefore, the Appellant contends, the public interest in releasing this material should outweigh any privacy considerations of Karen Silkwood's next of kin. Id.

II.Analysis

While the FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Only Exemption 6 is at issue here. Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982); see also Morrison & Foerster, 24 DOE ¶ 80,107 (1994).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Depaptment of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (Ripskis). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 773 (1989) (Reporters Committee). See also Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 (1994). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

A. Privacy Interest

The denying official found a strong privacy interest in the withheld documents, in that releasing the information would distress close associates or the next of kin of Karen Silkwood. Final determination at 1. In the past, we have found that while a right of privacy is not generally heritable, the next of kin of the deceased do have a privacy right in information pertaining to the deceased. See Morrison & Foerster, 24 DOE at 80,517; Thurm & Heller, 20 DOE ¶ 80,104 (1990). Accord, Marzen v. HHS, 825 F.2d 1148, 1154 (7th Cir. 1987) (holding that a family has a privacy interest in preventing disclosure of medical records). We have, however, held that this privacy interest is narrower than generally applicable under Exemption 6. "The scope of the privacy interest is narrower under these circumstances-- the test being whether release of the information would cause survivors injury, embarrassment or undue emotional distress." Thurm & Heller, 20 DOE at 80,513. See also Badwhar v. Department of the Air Force, 829 F.2d 182, 186 (D.C. Cir. 1987) ("some autopsy reports...would shock the sensibilities of surviving kin.")

We find that the denying official correctly identified a privacy interest under Exemption 6. In the past, we have held that documents relating to the body of the deceased have a very strong privacy interest for surviving relatives, given the special religious and emotional attachment in our society for the bodies of loved ones. Independent Documentary Group, 7 DOE ¶ 80,174 (1981) (IDG); KUTV, Inc., 4 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1979) (KUTV) (release of autopsy report and pictures of deceased "would certainly be a substantial invasion of privacy, which Congress sought to avoid by adoption of Exemption 6"). We therefore agree that a substantial privacy interest exists in the unreleased documents, which include the autopsy report and details regarding the disposal of Karen Silkwood's remains.

B. Public Interest in Disclosure

Once a privacy interest is identified, we must balance that interest against the public interest in releasing the document. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 772-73. In Reporters Committee, the Supreme Court greatly narrowed the scope of public interest in the FOIA. The Court distinguished between the benefits to the public which may result from the release of information and those benefits that Congress sought to provide the public when it enacted the FOIA. The Court found that, in FOIA contexts, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the FOIA's core purpose. Id. The Court identified the core purpose of the FOIA as "public understanding of the operations and activities of the government." Id. at 775. Therefore, the Court held, only that information which contributes significantly to the public's understanding of the operations or activities of the government is within "the ambit of the public interest which the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id. The Court therefore found that unless the public would learn something directly about the workings of the government from the release of the document, its disclosure is not "affected with the public interest." Id. See also Morrison & Foerster, 24 DOE at 80,518.

In his Appeal, Dr. Victorian argues that there is substantial public interest in the information pertaining to Karen Silkwood. We agree. It is true that, in the past, we have found that detailed personal information of this nature has not added to the public interest. See, e.g., IDG, 7 DOE at 80,812-13; KUTV, 4 DOE at 80,809. However, even in cases of this nature, we have made no categorical determination but rather have limited ourselves to a fact-based review and balancing test. Id. <1> In the present case, several public interest groups and individuals have continued to raise questions about the manner in which the government conducted its investigation of Karen Silkwood's death.

The autopsy was performed by a team that included at least one LANL employee, under the authority of the Chief Medical Examiner for the State of Oklahoma. Subsequent testing of remains was performed at LANL by LANL personnel. Therefore, the withheld descriptions of the autopsy and subsequent tests on tissue samples, recorded at the time the tests were conducted and detailing the steps taken by the investigators, may shed significant light on the government's operations and activities. They could provide information on what was known regarding the death and possible contamination of Karen Silkwood, who knew it, and when these facts were discovered. They also may shed light on the manner in which the government conducted its investigation. In addition, the lab notebook includes handwritten notes dated 1979, 1986 and 1987. This information may provide insight into the government's conduct in this matter by indicating the extent to which the government performed additional tests on Karen Silkwood's remains long after her death.

While it is true Karen Silkwood was but one individual, we have held in the past that the manner in which the government treats even one individual can shed light on government operations and activities. See James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,154 (1991). Indeed, given the ongoing public concern about the government's handling of this case, the withheld documents seem to us to be the sort of information that the FOIA was meant to reveal. It may well permit the people "to know what their government is up to." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 773.

C. The Balancing Test

Just as the identification of a privacy interest under Exemption 6 does not mean that a document will automatically be withheld, the identification of a public interest in the information does not guarantee that the document will be released. Under Reporters Committee, an agency must balance any existing privacy right against the public interest in releasing the information. Id. at 772. Based on the record before us, however, we find no evidence that the denying official identified the public interest in the information or sought to balance the public interest against the properly identified privacy interest in the information. In the past, we have required the denying official to clearly state the factors considered in balancing an interest in privacy against the public interest in the information, and to articulate his motivation to strike the balance in a particular way. Center for Community Action, 20 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1990) (CCA). This requirement is important, because it provides the Appellant with the information necessary to understand the determination reached and to prepare an effective Appeal. It also provides us with the information necessary to review the determination in light of the general presumption favoring disclosure inherent in the FOIA. Id. at 80,559-60. See also Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Department of the Air Force, 566 F.2d 242, 251 (D.C. Cir. 1977).

III.Conclusion

Since the required balancing has not been performed, we will remand this matter to the denying official with instructions to balance the properly identified privacy interest of Karen Silkwood's surviving kin with the public interest in releasing information on the government's handling of the investigation. See CCA, 20 DOE at 80,560. On remand, the denying official should consider whether elements of the withheld material can be redacted to preserve the privacy interest of surviving kin while providing sufficient insight into the manner in which the government conducted the investigation of Karen Silkwood's death.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1)The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by A. Victorian on April 24, 1995, Case No. VFA-0036, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2)This matter is remanded to the Office of Intergovernmental and External Affairs, Albuquerque Operations Office, which shall conduct a new evaluation of the withheld material consistent with the analysis set forth in this Decision and Order.

<1>Both IDG and KUTV were decided before Reporters Committee and used a broader definition of public interest, i.e. whether the information would contribute to the public understanding generally. IDG, 7 DOE at 80,812-13; KUTV, 4 DOE at 80,809. We held, however, that the pictures and autopsy report would not add any new information, and that therefore there was only a minimal interest in releasing the information. Id.

May 30, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:U.S. Solar Roof

Date of Filing:May 2, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0037

On May 2, 1995, U.S. Solar Roof, Inc. (Solar Roof) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on April 4, 1995 by the Director of the Photovoltaic Technology Division of the Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy (EE) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination concerned a request for information submitted by Solar Roof pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require EE to release the information requested by Solar Roof.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. §1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On February 27, 1995, Solar Roof filed a FOIA request in which it sought information relating to an unsolicited proposal submitted by Solar Roof entitled "Solar Tile Technologies: Demonstration and Validation." Solar Roof also sought information relating to another proposal it submitted entitled "Modular Integrated Solar Energy Tiles," as part of DOE's PV:BONUS Program. In its April 4, 1995 determination, EE partially denied Solar Roof's nine item request for information. EE released two specific items but withheld seven items in their entirety pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5) (Exemption 5).

On May 2, 1995, Solar Roof filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). In its Appeal, Solar Roof challenges EE's April 4, 1995 determination and asserts that EE improperly applied Exemption 5 to the withheld information. For this reason, Solar Roof requests that the OHA direct EE to release the withheld information.

II. Analysis

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents which are "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege, and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corporation v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States).

The deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5 permits the government to withhold documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government decisions and policies are formulated. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. It is intended to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making governmental decisions. EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (Mink) (citing Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939 (Cl. Ct. 1958)). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151. In order to be shielded by Exemption 5, a document must be both predecisional, i.e. generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e. reflecting the give-and-take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id.

The deliberative process privilege is inapplicable to purely factual matters. Accordingly, facts must generally be segregated from documents withheld under the deliberative process privilege and then released. There are two exceptions to this general rule. The first exception is for those circumstances where the specific factual information at issue was selected from a larger body of facts as part of the agency's deliberative process and the release of those facts would reveal that deliberative process. See Montrose v. Train, 491 F.2d 63, 71 (D.C. Cir. 1974). The second exception is for factual information that is so inextricably intertwined with deliberative material that its exposure would reveal the agency's deliberative process. Wolfe v. HHS, 839 F.2d 769, 774-76 (D.C. Cir. 1988).

After reviewing most of the withheld information, we have concluded that the determination made by EE in applying Exemption 5 was correct and consistent with the principles outlined above.<1>The information contains comments and recommendations from reviewers of two proposals submitted by Solar Roof. These review comments and recommendations were used only for internal DOE purposes and thus constitute "intra-agency memoranda." In addition, the reviewers' comments and recommendations are clearly predecisional and deliberative. They were created before the DOE adopted a final position on whether to fund the proposals and they consist of personal opinions which reflect the consultative process. Furthermore, we note that the release of these comments and recommendations could inhibit reviewers from expressing their candid views if they believed that those views could become public knowledge. As such, the withheld material is precisely the sort of deliberative and "group thinking" process which Exemption 5 is designed to protect. Sears, 421 U.S. at 153 (quoting Davis, The Information Act: A Preliminary Analysis, 34 U. Chi L. Rev. 761, 797 (1967)). Accordingly, we hold that the review comments and recommendations of the above mentioned proposals meet all the requirements for withholding material under the Exemption 5 deliberative process privilege.

However, we find that EE did not adequately consider the public interest in disclosing the withheld information. On October 4, 1993, the Department of Justice (DOJ) adopted a new policy for the administration of the FOIA. The DOJ will defend the assertion of a FOIA exemption "only in those cases where the agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would be harmful to an interest protected by that exemption. Where an item of information might technically or arguably fall within an exemption, it ought not be withheld from a FOIA requester unless it need be." See Memorandum from the Attorney General to Heads of Departments and Agencies, Subject: The Freedom of Information Act (October 4, 1993) (AG Memo). This "foreseeable harm" standard places a greater burden on an agency to provide specific references of harm to protected interests. If possible, FOIA officers are encouraged to make "discretionary disclosures." AG Memo. This DOJ policy, which DOE will follow, requires EE to be as clear as possible in providing an adequate justification for withholding under Exemption 5 and to provide specific references to a foreseeable harm. EE did not meet its burden under this policy, and there is not sufficient information in the record on appeal to consider whether the withheld material could be released without causing a foreseeable harm.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, the OHA finds that the EE properly applied the threshold requirements of Exemption 5 to the reviewers' comments and recommendations. However, we are remanding this matter to EE to issue a new determination, either releasing the withheld information or providing a more adequate consideration of the public interest in disclosure, that is, providing specific references to a foreseeable harm to protected interests. In addition, because we were unable to review item 9 due to its unavailability, EE should either release that item to Solar Roof or issue a new determination providing a complete justification for withholding this information. In the event that item 9 can no longer be located, EE should provide Solar Roof with an explanation of its unavailability as required by 10 C.F.R. 1004.4(d).

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by U.S. Solar Roof on May 2, 1995, Case Number VFA-0037, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Photovoltaic Technology Division of the Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy of the Department of Energy, which should issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth above.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

June 1, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: J. Eileen Price

Date of Filing: May 3, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0038

On May 3, 1995, J. Eileen Price (Price) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on April 21, 1995 by the Department of Energy's Western Area Power Administration (WAPA). In her Appeal, Price asserts that WAPA incorrectly withheld several responsive documents in its possession regarding a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) Request she submitted on February 8, 1995.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On February 8, 1995, Price filed a FOIA Request with WAPA requesting inter alia all employee performance appraisal information in her performance appraisal file and all unofficial information not contained in her personnel file pertaining to her or her employment in the Loveland Area Office beginning in October 1992. WAPA, in a February 16, 1995 Determination Letter, provided Price with copies of various responsive documents. On March 3, 1995, Price appealed WAPA's determination arguing among other issues that WAPA had failed to conduct an adequate search. During the pendency of that Appeal, OHA was informed by WAPA that additional searching had uncovered other documents. Consequently, OHA remanded the matter to WAPA so that it could issue a determination regarding the newly discovered documents. J. Eileen Price, 25 DOE ¶ 80,105 (1995).

On April 21, 1995, WAPA issued its determination regarding the newly discovered documents. In its April 21 determination letter, WAPA identified as responsive to Price's request assorted notes on pages from the day planners (Day Planner Notes) of Ron Steinbach (Steinbach) and Jan Campbell and thus not subject to disclosure. In her Appeal, Price asserts that WAPA improperly failed to provide her with the Grievance Document and the Day Planner Notes. Price, however, provides no specific arguments as to why this was improper.

(Campbell), a grievance investigation document dated December 30, 1994 (Grievance Document) prepared by Jim Kesselburg (Kesselburg), and a document prepared by Steinbach containing a listing of events related to "unfair practices" prepared by Steinbach (Chronology). WAPA provided Price with a copy of the Chronology but withheld the Grievance Document. WAPA asserted that the Grievance Document was an intra-agency document which was predecisional and deliberative in nature and therefore fell within Exemption 5 of the FOIA. Additionally, WAPA stated that because the Day Planner Notes were created by employees for their personal convenience, they were not agency records for the purposes of the FOIA

II. Analysis

A. The Day Planner Notes

We have considered WAPA's determination that the Day Planner Notes were not agency records and find it to be correct. Under the FOIA, an "agency record" is a document which is (1) either created or obtained by an agency, and (2) under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-45 (1989). Clear indications that a document is an "agency record" are when a document of this type is part of an agency file, and it was used for an agency purpose. Kissinger v. Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136, 157 (1980); Bureau of Nat'l Affairs, Inc. v. Department of Justice, 742 F.2d 1484, 1489-90 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (BNA); Ben Franklin, 20 DOE ¶ 80,110 at 80,526 (1990).

In making the "agency records" determination, we look at the totality of circumstances surrounding the creation, maintenance, and use of the document(s) in question. BNA, 742 F.2d at 1492-93. We contacted officials at WAPA to inquire as to the use and nature of the Day Planner Notes. We were informed by an official at WAPA that the Day Planner Notes were pages from Steinbach's and Campbell's personal day planners and that each of these individuals had created these notes for their personal convenience in scheduling matters. At the time of Price's FOIA Request, none of these pages were maintained in any official DOE files and DOE personnel did not have official access to these documents. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Doug Harness, Esq., Office of General Counsel, WAPA, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (May 17, 1995). From the facts regarding the nature of the Day Planner Notes, it is apparent that they possess none of the attributes of an agency record. The Day Planner Notes were never maintained in an agency file nor used for any official agency purpose. Consequently, we find that WAPA correctly determined that the Day Planner Notes were not agency records under the FOIA.

B. The Grievance Document

In its determination, WAPA withheld the Grievance Document pursuant to Exemption 5 of the FOIA claiming that the document was predecisional and deliberative. After reviewing the Grievance Document, we have determined that this document is predecisional and that WAPA correctly withheld portions of the document which were deliberative. However, we also find that WAPA incorrectly withheld portions of the Grievance Document containing segregable factual material.

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears) (footnote omitted). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). Only the "deliberative process" privilege is at issue in this case.

The "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5 permits the government to withhold documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government decisions and policies are formulated. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. This privilege of Exemption 5 was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making governmental decisions. See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939, 946 (Ct. Cl. 1958)) (Mink). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151.

In order to be shielded by Exemption 5, a document must be both predecisional, i.e., generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e., reflecting the give-and-take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id. Even then, however, the exemption only covers the subjective, deliberative portions of the document. Mink, 410 U.S. at 87-91. Factual information contained in the protected document must be disclosed unless the factual material is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material. Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1077 (D.C. Cir. 1971).

The Grievance Document is a one page document outlining Kesselburg's investigation into the facts and circumstances regarding a grievance Price had initiated against WAPA. Additionally, the document contains Kesselburg's opinion as to the causes and nature of the dispute between WAPA and Price. This document is predecisional and the analysis contained in the document has not been incorporated into an official agency decision. Further, significant portions of the Grievance Document are deliberative in nature because they reflect the opinions of Kesselburg regarding the origin and nature of Price's grievance. Consequently, we find that part of the Grievance Document was properly withheld under Exemption 5. There is, however, a significant portion of segregable factual material contained in the Grievance Document. Consequently, we will send to Price under separate cover a redacted copy of the Grievance Document. <1>

Notwithstanding our finding that Exemption 5 was properly applied to a portion of the Grievance Document, we must consider another factor. The DOE regulations state that a document should be released to a requester if disclosure is consistent with other laws, and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R § 1004.1. In applying this regulation, we note that the Department of Justice has reviewed its administration of the FOIA and adopted a "foreseeable harm" standard for defending FOIA exemptions. Memorandum from the Attorney General to Heads of Departments and Agencies, Subject: The Freedom of Information Act (October 4, 1993) (Reno Memorandum). The Reno Memorandum indicates that whether or not there is a legally correct application of an exemption, it is the policy of the Department of Justice to defend the assertion of a FOIA exemption only in those cases where the agency articulates a reasonably foreseeable harm to an interest protected by that exemption. See Reno Memorandum at 1, 2. In the present case, the material withheld consists of the opinion of an individual regarding the nature and causes of a grievance filed by Price. The release of this information would in our opinion have a chilling effect on the willingness of employees and managers to make candid statements of opinion regarding employee grievances. Employees and managers would be less likely to communicate their opinions regarding an employee grievance if they knew or suspected that such opinions would be released to the individual who had filed the grievance. Consequently, we find that this harm satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard articulated by the Attorney General and that the portions of the Grievance Document not being provided to Price were properly withheld.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by J. Eileen Price on May 3, 1995 is granted in part as set forth in the above Decision, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>A portion of the factual material, regarding Price's performance ratings, that we are releasing to Price might arguably be withheld under Exemption 6 from a third party requester. Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). In applying Exemption 6, an agency must weigh the privacy interests invaded by release of the document against the public interest that would be furthered by release of the document. Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S 749, 762-70 (1989). However, in the case where the only privacy interest at stake is that of the FOIA requestor, Exemption 6 cannot be used to withhold the document. See Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 at 80,701 n.2 (1994).

June 2, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Elizabeth H. Donnelly

Date of Filing: May 4, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0039

Elizabeth H. Donnelly filed an Appeal of an April 3, 1995 determination issued to her by the Nevada Operations Office of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Acting Director of the Office of External Affairs of the Nevada Operations Office (Acting Director) denied a request for information that Ms. Donnelly filed on March 1, 1995 pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b).

Background

In her March 1, 1995 request, Ms. Donnelly sought "a copy of the hostile work environment study conducted by Andrea Kato and Marcella Guerra, Office of Equal Employment Opportunity, in January 1995." The Acting Director informed Ms. Donnelly in his determination that he was withholding the requested document in its entirety pursuant to Exemption 5 of the FOIA. Specifically, the Acting Director stated that the requested document is so candid and personal in nature that public disclosure is likely, in the future, to stifle honest and frank communication within the agency. Furthermore, the Acting Director stated that the requested document contains opinions of co-workers who, when interviewed, were given an expressed understanding of confidentiality, and therefore these opinions are exempt from public disclosure. Finally, the Acting Director determined that since any factual information contained in the requested document is inextricably intertwined with opinions, it cannot be segregated for public release.

In her May 4, 1995 Appeal, Ms. Donnelly requested that the DOE release the requested document. Ms. Donnelly contends that Exemption 5 does not apply to the requested "study" because Exemption 5 applies only to memorandums and letters. Furthermore, Ms. Donnelly states that the "study" was not conducted in a confidential manner and that neither she nor any of the witnesses she talked to were ever told that their statements would be kept confidential.

Analysis

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears) (footnote omitted). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). Only the "deliberative process" privilege is at issue in this case.

The "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5 permits the government to withhold documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government decisions and policies are formulated. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. This privilege of Exemption 5 was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making governmental decisions. See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939, 946 (Ct. Cl. 1958)) (Mink). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151.

In order to be shielded by Exemption 5, a document must be both predecisional, i.e., generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e., reflecting the give-and-take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id. Even then, however, the exemption only covers the subjective, deliberative portion of the document. Mink, 410 U.S. at 87-91. Factual information contained in the protected document must be disclosed unless the factual material is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material. Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1077 (D.C. Cir. 1971).

Ms. Donnelly bases her argument that Exemption 5 applies only to memorandums and letters, and does not apply to the requested document, on her literal reading of Exemption 5. While it is easy to see the reason for Ms. Donnelly's confusion, she clearly is unaware that the scope of Exemption 5 is broader than the literal statutory language. As stated above, the Supreme Court held in Sears that Exemption 5 applies to "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." Sears at 149 (footnote omitted). Thus, Exemption 5 affords protection to all documents that are part of the "deliberative process" or subject to the "predecisional privilege" and not only memorandums or letters.

We have reviewed the requested document and find that it clearly is both predecisional and deliberative pursuant to Exemption 5. There is no doubt that the requested document was prepared at the request of Robert Nelson, then Manager (since retired) of the Nevada Operations Office and Marcella Guerra, EEO Manager of the Nevada Operations Office, and served as part of an investigation before a final decision could be made. In fact, a final decision reporting the result of the investigation was sent to Ms. Donnelly on February 13, 1995 by Terry Vaeth, Acting Manager of the Nevada Operations Office. Furthermore, we have confirmed that the requested document contains opinions, recommendations and interpretations of the investigator, the disclosure of which would discourage open, frank discussions between the investigator and her superiors. Finally, the requested document contains facts, such as the summarized observations of several witnesses, that are "inextricably intertwined" with the deliberative material. Thus, we conclude that the determination made by the Acting Director was correct and consistent with the principles that we have outlined above. Accordingly, the requested document was properly withheld pursuant to Exemption 5.

The Public Interest in Disclosure

Notwithstanding our finding that Exemption 5 was properly applied to the requested document, we must consider another factor. The DOE regulations state that a document should be released to a requester if disclosure is consistent with other laws, and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R § 1004.1. In applying this regulation, we note that the Department of Justice has reviewed its administration of the FOIA and adopted a "foreseeable harm" standard for defending FOIA exemptions. Memorandum from the Attorney General to Heads of Departments and Agencies, Subject: The Freedom of Information Act (October 4, 1993) (Reno Memorandum). The Reno Memorandum indicates that whether or not there is a legally correct application of an exemption, it is the policy of the Department of Justice to defend the assertion of a FOIA exemption only in those cases where the agency articulates a reasonably foreseeable harm to an interest protected by that exemption. See Reno Memorandum at 1, 2. In the present case, the requested document consists of the opinion of individuals regarding the work environment of a particular office. The release of this information would in our opinion have a chilling effect on the willingness of employees and managers to make candid statements of opinion regarding employee grievances. Employees and managers would be less likely to communicate their opinions regarding an employee grievance if they knew or suspected that such opinions would be released to the individual who had filed the grievance. Consequently, we find that this harm satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard articulated by the Attorney General and that the release of the requested document would not be in the public interest.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Elizabeth Donnelly on May 4, 1995, Case No. VFA-0039, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

June 1, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Gayle M. Adams

Date of Filing:May 4, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0040

On May 4, 1995, Gayle M. Adams filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on April 7, 1995 by the Director of the Office of External Affairs of the Department of Energy's (DOE) Richland Operations Office (hereinafter "Authorizing Official" or "Richland"). She had filed a request for information pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If this Appeal were granted, Richland would be ordered to conduct a further search for material responsive to Ms. Adams' request.

I. Background

On March 29, 1995, Ms. Adams filed a FOIA request for information concerning dietary studies that were conducted on school children in Richland, Washington in April 1967. Ms. Adams participated in these dietary studies and wanted a copy of her personal records including any records related to an actual whole body count.<1> Richland responded by sending her records pertaining to her enrollment in the study and some general information including the following:

1. The 11/17/94 DOE news release, entitled, "DOE Offers Historical Hanford Diet Study Results to Participants."
2. A list of published articles regarding the dietary studies at Hanford.
3. A legend for the school children dietary studies data which explains the headings used in the data ledgers.
4. Copies of five related Tri-City Herald newspaper articles.
5. The introduction and summary sections of the technical report on the dietary studies regarding school children.
6. A copy of a certificate of appreciation given to participants.

However, Richland was unable to locate whole body count information on Ms. Adams. On May 4, 1995, Ms. Adams filed the present Appeal challenging the adequacy of Richland's search for that information.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires federal agencies to release documents to the public upon request. The Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) has stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. In fact, the office has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g. James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991); Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1988). However, the FOIA requires only that the search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985) (Miller); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d at 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984). We must determine whether Richland's search for Ms. Adams' whole body count records was reasonable.

We contacted Richland for an explanation of the steps taken to locate the requested information. We were informed that the results of the study were stored in 20 boxes and filed by school, year of participation in the study, class, number assigned and name. The whole body count records were all stored, by name and number, in one box for all of the studentswho participated in the study. Richland searched that entire box for Ms. Adams' whole body count records, but they were unable to locate them. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Yvonne Sherman, Privacy Act Officer, Richland (May 22,1995). Ms. Sherman informed us that Judy Hays, the staff member who conducted the search, is intimately familiar with the records and the manner in which they are stored. Ms. Hays has been handling these records and these types of requests at the Richland Office for three years. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Judy Hays, Richland (May 23, 1995). Based on this information, we find that the search for responsive material was reasonable.

Ms. Hays could have searched each of the other 19 boxes for Ms. Adams' whole body count records. However, because the actual search was reasonable, we find that a search of all 20 boxes would be unnecessarily exhaustive and is, therefore, not required. Miller, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85. Furthermore, we find that such a search would be unreasonable because the other 19 boxes contained consent forms and dietary information only; the whole body count records were stored in one, separate box which was thoroughly searched.

III. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, we find that the search performed by Richland was reasonably calculated to uncover the materials sought by the Appellant. Accordingly, we will deny this Appeal.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Gayle M. Adams on May 4, 1995 is hereby denied.

June 8, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Richard M. Ross

Date of Filing: May 10, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0041

On May 10, 1995, Richard M. Ross filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on April 6, 1995, by the Oakland Operations Office (Oakland) of the Department of Energy. That determination denied in part a request for information submitted by Ross pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require Oakland to provide information responsive to the appellant's request.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been disposed of or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d). The FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. BACKGROUND

In his FOIA request dated February 17, 1995, Ross sought, inter alia, copies of records and other information concerning (1) personnel actions relating to Robert Padilla (Padilla); and (2) past and present employment of nine identified DOE employees. In its April 6, 1995 determination, Oakland provided some of the information sought by the appellant, but withheld portions of some documents under Exemption 6 of the FOIA.

Ross filed this Appeal contending that Oakland (1) failed to conduct an adequate search for personnel action forms relating to Padilla and other information relating to the federal employment of certain DOE employees;<1> and (2) wrongfully withheld certain documents pertaining to the employment history of certain DOE employees under Exemption 6 of FOIA, which protects from mandatory disclosure information in which an individual has a privacy interest.<2>

II. ANALYSIS

A. The Adequacy of the Search

We have held that an FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we find that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g. Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1993); Marlene R. Flor, 23 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1993); Native Americans for a Clean Environment, 23 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1993).

1. The personnel action forms relating to Robert Padilla

In his FOIA request, Ross sought copies of records and other information concerning all Notifications of Personnel Actions (Standard Form 50-B) ("personnel action forms") relating to Robert Padilla. In response to this Request, Oakland produced several documents, including a personnel action form, effective August 7, 1994, and approved February 16, 1995, reflecting the appointment of Robert Padilla to the position of "Attorney-Advisor". On its face, this document indicates that it replaces a previous personnel action form. Oakland did not provide the personnel action form which was replaced by this document.

The Appellant claims that Oakland conducted an inadequate search for responsive documents because of its failure to produce the original personnel action form relating to the appointment of Padilla as an attorney. We disagree.

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted Oakland to discuss the search for the original personnel action form. Oakland informed us that this document no longer exists. We were further informed that it is general practice to destroy an original personnel action form when it is replaced by a corrected form. Oakland informed us that it based this practice upon the Federal Personnel Management Supplement (FPM) 296-33, Subchapter 32-5, Parts (c) and (d). Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Linda Lazarus, Staff Attorney, Office of Hearings and Appeals, and Rose Ann Pelzner, FOIA Specialist, Oakland (May 18, 1995). Because the original personnel action form appointing Padilla to the position of attorney was destroyed, it could not have been produced. Thus, the fact that it was not produced does not reflect upon the adequacy of the search. Therefore, there is no evidence in the record to support the contention that the search was inadequate.

2. Federal career information about certain DOE employees

In his original FOIA request, Ross asked for the following information concerning nine identified DOE employees:

a) present and past position titles and occupational series;

b) present and past grades;

c) present and past duty stations; and

d) date of commencement of employment with DOE.

In its determination, Oakland did not respond to this request. It neither provided documents nor indicated that such documents were being withheld pursuant to an exemption from the FOIA.

In an effort to ascertain the basis for this omission, we contacted the Oakland office. A representative of the Oakland office stated that this information was not provided because of an oversight. Id. On June 7, 1995, Oakland issued a supplemental response with respect to this issue. This portion of Ross' Appeal is therefore moot. Ross may appeal this supplemental determination.

B. Exemption 6

In his FOIA request, Ross sought certain information regarding the prior employment of nine identified DOE employees. More specifically, Ross sought the identity of each employer, position held, dates of employment, and description of job duties performed for each such employer. Oakland released this information with respect to prior federal jobs. However, for non-federal jobs, Oakland withheld this information, except for the job description where it found that the duties were related to the employee's present employment. This information was withheld pursuant to Exemption 6 of the FOIA. In his appeal, Ross contends that Oakland wrongfully withheld information under this Exemption. As detailed below, we agree.

Exemption 6 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory public disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10 (b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982). In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of HUD, 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Second, the agency must determine whether release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Hopkins v. Department of HUD, 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991); FLRA v. Department of Treasury Fin. Management Serv., 884 F.2d 1446, 1451 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 864 (1990). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762-70.

The Supreme Court's decision in Reporters Committee has greatly narrowed the scope of the public interest in the context of the FOIA. The Court held that neither the identity of the requester nor the purpose for which the request is being made are relevant to whether information is exempt from disclosure. 489 U.S. at 771. Thus, rather than depend upon the requester's proposed use of the information, the determination "must turn on the nature of the requested document and its relationship to" the public interest. Id. at 772. The Court further distinguished between the general benefits to the public which may result from the release of information, and those benefits that Congress sought to provide the public when it enacted the FOIA. The Court found that with regard to the FOIA, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the core purpose of the Act, i.e., "public understanding of the operations and activities of the Government." Id. at 775 (quoting 5 U.S.C. § 552 (a) (4) (A) (iii)). The Court indicated that only information which contributes significantly to this understanding is within "the ambit of the public interest which the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id.

Here the appellant is seeking information concerning the prior employment of government employees. The privacy interest in the employment history of government employees is very small. This information was voluntarily provided by the employee when seeking government employment, under no promise of confidentiality, and the release of such information is unlikely to harm the employee. On the other hand, the public interest in this information is substantial. This information would increase public knowledge of government activities and operations by providing additional information concerning the qualifications of government employees. The public has an interest in the competence of such employees and the process by which they are selected.

After balancing the privacy interest of the Federal employees against the public interest in disclosure, we conclude that Exemption 6 does not apply to this information. See Core v. U.S. Postal Serv., 730 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984) (Freedom of Information Act required release of information concerning employment histories of successful applicants for federal employment); Washington Post Co. v. HHS, 690 F.2d 252, 261-264 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (privacy interest in information regarding non-federal employment of agency consultants is minimal); and Associated General Contractors v. United States, 488 F. Supp. 861 (D. Nev. 1980) (information regarding former employment of federal employees is not so personal that disclosure would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy within FOIA).

This matter will be remanded to Oakland to provide appellant with documents which are relevant to the prior employment of nine identified DOE employees. Oakland will be required to release those portions of the documents which contain the identity of each employer, position held, dates of employment, the hours worked per week, and description of job duties performed for each such employer.<3>

III. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, the OHA finds that the Appeal should be granted in part. The search conducted by Oakland for the personnel action forms relating to Robert Padilla was adequate. However, the search for federal career information relating to certain DOE employees was incomplete and Oakland has since issued a new determination on this matter. Oakland erred in its decision to withhold certain information regarding the private employment history of certain DOE employees. We will therefore remand this matter to Oakland with instructions to release to the Appellant the portions of the documents that contain the identity of each private employer, position held, dates of employment, number of hours worked, and description of job duties performed for each such employer.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Richard Ross on May 10, 1995, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Oakland Operations Office which shall issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

<1>Ross characterized the issue on appeal arising from Oakland's non-production of certain documents relating to the federal employment of DOE employees as a failure to meet the FOIA statutory time requirements. However, after investigation, we have concluded that Oakland attempted to respond to this request for information. We will therefore decide whether the search that was originally conducted by Oakland was adequate.

<2>Ross also argued that Oakland failed to meet FOIA statutory deadlines with respect to certain documents contained in the file of an Equal Employment Opportunity Counselor. However, on June 7, 1995, subsequent to the filing of Ross' Appeal, Oakland issued a supplemental determination on this issue. Accordingly, this portion of the Appeal is moot.

<3>It is unclear whether Ross appealed the redaction of information concerning the employee's "reason for wanting to leave", salary information or the name and phone number of immediate supervisor. However, even if these matters were before us, we would not compel the release of such information because this material is exempt from disclosure under Exemption 6 of the FOIA. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (privacy interest in names and addresses of individuals significant enough to warrant protection from disclosure under Exemption 6).

June 22, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: A. Victorian

Case Number: VFA-0043

On May 24, 1995, Dr. A. Victorian filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on May 5, 1995, by the Oakland Operations Office (Oakland) of the Department of Energy. That determination denied a request for information submitted by Victorian under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require Oakland to conduct a further search for responsive documents.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been disposed of or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

I. BACKGROUND

In his FOIA request dated April 9, 1994, Victorian sought documents containing the following information concerning "Project Woodpecker" at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory (LLNL):

(1) the nature of the project;

(2) the starting date;

(3) the goals and functions; and

(4) the "OPR"<1>.

In its May 5, 1995 determination, Oakland stated that a search had been conducted for documents responsive to Victorian's request, but that no records were found as a result of the search. Oakland specifically stated that information relating to Project Woodpecker had been destroyed.

Victorian filed this Appeal contending that Oakland failed to conduct an adequate search for the requested documents. Victorian specifically complained that a search was conducted only at LLNL and not at any other DOE facility. <2>

We have held that an FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we find that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g. Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1993); Marlene R. Flor, 23 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1993); Native Americans for a Clean Environment, 23 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1993). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted the principal person involved with Project Woodpecker at LLNL to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any documents responsive to Victorian's request might exist. He stated that Project Woodpecker was a classified project conducted on behalf of another federal agency, whose identity is also classified. At the direction of the other agency, LLNL destroyed or returned certain documents to that agency when Project Woodpecker ended in the summer of 1993. Although there are still some documents concerning Project Woodpecker at LLNL, none of these documents contains information responsive to Victorian's FOIA request. Moreover, the individual assured us that none of the requested records would be at any other DOE office. Victorian has given us no information which would lead us to question the veracity of the foregoing statements.

Based on the factors referred to above, we are convinced that the DOE followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the material sought by Victorian in his FOIA request and that no such documents are in the possession of DOE. Accordingly, Victorian's Appeal should be denied.

(1) The Appeal filed by A. Victorian on May 24, 1995, is hereby denied.

<1>/ Victorian does not define the term "OPR" in his FOIA request. DOE understands this term to refer to the "Office of Principal Responsibility".

<2>/ Victorian raised a number of additional matters which are not properly part of this Appeal:

First, Victorian contends that Oakland did not respond to the FOIA request in a timely manner. This Office has no jurisdiction over this issue. Section 1004.8(a) of the DOE Regulations grants OHA jurisdiction to consider FOIA appeals only in the following circumstances:

When the Authorizing Officer has denied a request for records in whole or in part or has responded that there are no documents responsive to the request . . . or when the Freedom of Information Officer has denied a request for waiver of fees. . .

10 C.F.R. § 1004.8(a).

Second, Victorian requested, for the first time in his Appeal, documents relating to the destruction of Project Woodpecker documents. This request was not included within the original FOIA request, and therefore is not properly part of the Appeal. The Appellant may file a new FOIA request if he seeks to obtain documents which are related to the destruction of the Project Woodpecker documents. It is important to note that Victorian has been informed by Oakland that documents relating to Project Woodpecker had been destroyed. By informing Victorian of the destruction of these documents, Oakland fulfilled its obligation under the FOIA. See 10 C.F.R. §1004.4(d).

Third, Victorian requested answers to questions (as opposed to requesting documents) concerning the Woodpecker Project. For example, Victorian asked a question about DOE's accountability to the General Accounting Office in the event the requested documents have been destroyed. The FOIA does not require an agency to respond to such questions. It simply requires that an agency produce documents which are in existence and not exempt from disclosure. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d)(1).

June 28, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Wilbert L. Townsend

Date of Filing:May 30, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0044

On May 30, 1995, Wilbert L. Townsend filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on May 23, 1995, by the Nevada Operations Office of the Department of Energy (DOE/NV). That determination denied in part a request for information filed by Townsend pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE at 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. DOE/NV identified documents responsive to Townsend's request, but withheld information under Exemption 6 of the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6) (Exemption 6). See also 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). This Appeal, if granted, would require DOE/NV to release the withheld information.

I. Background

On May 2, 1995, Wilbert L. Townsend filed a request for information with the DOE/NV. Townsend requested information pertaining to the top three candidates for a position as an industrial hygienist with DOE/NV, all of whom filed applications in response to vacancy announcement no. DEA-95-009. Specifically, Townsend requested copies of SF-171 forms submitted by the top three candidates, and their written responses to the "ranking criteria" used in the vacancy announcement. In response to this request, DOE/NV released the SF-171 and the written responses to the ranking criteria submitted by the successful candidate, Lori Jean Arent, but deleted her social security number and other information in which DOE/NV found a privacy interest. In addition, DOE/NV released the SF-171 forms of the two unsuccessful candidates, after redacting the names and all other information except past employment history and education. From each of the SF-171 forms, DOE/NV released the place of employment and duties performed but redacted the names of previous supervisors and dates of employment. DOE/NV also released the course listings and hours of study but deleted the names of the educational institutions attended by the job applicants. DOE/NV also withheld the written responses to the ranking criteria submitted by the unsuccessful candidates. DOE/NV withheld all of this information pursuant to Exemption 6 of the FOIA, finding that: "the interest in protecting against the invasion of privacy far outweighs the public interest in such disclosure." See Letter of Darwin J. Morgan, Acting Director, Office of External Affairs (Denying Official) to Wilbert Townsend, May 23, 1995 (Determination Letter).

In his Appeal, Townsend requests the names of the two unsuccessful candidates, the dates of employment for each candidate, and the written responses to the ranking criteria from the unsuccessful candidates. Townsend argues that "there was no legal reason to preclude DOE/NV from sending me this information in my initial request." He further maintains that, if there were privacy information in the responses to the ranking criteria, DOE/NV should have "sanitized" them and released the "sanitized" document.<1>

While the FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Only Exemption 6 is at issue here. Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post); see also Morrison & Foerster, 24 DOE ¶ 80,107 (1994).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (Ripskis). Second, the agency must determine whether release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 773 (1989) (Reporters Committee). See also Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 (1994). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

A. Privacy Interest

The Denying Official found a privacy interest in the names of the unsuccessful candidates and the social security numbers of all the candidates. See Determination Letter at 1. In the past, we have agreed that a strong privacy interest exists in one's name and social security number. See International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local Union 1579, 23 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1993); United Union of Roofers, Waterproofers & Allied Workers, 21 DOE ¶ 80,137 (1991). See also Core v. United States Postal Service, 730 F.2d 946 (4th Cir. 1984) (Core). Accordingly, we agree with the initial determination of the Denying Official that a privacy interest exists in the names of the unsuccessful candidates and the social security numbers of all the candidates.<2>

We also agree that a privacy interest exists in the dates of employment and the responses to the ranking factors from the unsuccessful candidates. As the courts have noted, this information could be used to identify unsuccessful job seekers. Core, 730 F.2d at 948.<3> The unsuccessful candidates have a privacy interest in the fact that they are seeking new employment. The revelation of this information to supervisors or co-workers, not only that they are seeking new employment, but were rejected, could potentially embarrass the unselected candidates. Id. at 949; Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 599 (Congress intended to exclude from disclosure files which "might harm the individual").<4>In his Appeal, Townsend clearly seeks the withheld information because it will enable him to identify the unsuccessful candidates. Appeal at 1. Such information is precisely the kind of information in which the unsuccessful candidates have a privacy interest.

For these reasons, we agree with the determination of the Denying Official that a privacy interest exists in the withheld information. We reject Townsend's blanket assertion that no such privacy interest exists. A privacy interest exists in the information to the extent that it identifies any unsuccessful candidate. Moreover, based on our review of the responsive documents, we have determined that the withheld information could not have been "sanitized" any further, as Townsend suggests.

B. Public Interest in Disclosure

Once a privacy interest is identified, we must balance that interest against the public interest in releasing the document. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 772-73. In Reporters Committee, the Supreme Court greatly narrowed the scope of public interest in the FOIA. The Court distinguished between the benefits to the public that may result from the release of information and those benefits that Congress sought to provide the public when it enacted the FOIA. The Court found that, in FOIA contexts, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the FOIA's core purpose. Id. The Court identified the core purpose of the FOIA as "public understanding of the operations and activities of the government." Id. at 775. Therefore, the Court held, only that information which contributes significantly to the public's understanding of the operations or activities of the government is within "the ambit of the public interest which the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id. The Court therefore found that unless the public would learn something directly about the workings of the government from the release of the document, its disclosure is not "affected with the public interest." Id. See also Morrison & Foerster, 24 DOE at 80,518.

In his Appeal, Townsend does not identify any public interest in the disclosure of the withheld information. Generally, we have recognized a public interest in disclosing certain information regarding government employees, since it sheds light on government hiring practices and operations. See, e.g., Kenneth P. Brooks, 18 DOE ¶ 80,110 at 80,531 (1988). This does not apply, however, to unsuccessful job applicants. Id. at 80,532. As the court noted in Core:

On the other side of the scale, the public interest in learning the qualifications of people who were not selected is slight. Disclosure of the qualifications of people who were not appointed is unnecessary for the public to evaluate the competence of people who were appointed. Indeed, comparison of all applications may be misleading because the appointments were made on the basis of both applications and interviews.

Core, 730 F.2d at 949. We note that Core was decided prior to Reporters Committee and its narrowing of the "public interest' standard. However, even under the broader pre-Reporters Committee standard, the court found only a minimal public interest in the release of this information. Accordingly, we find at best a slight public interest in the release of the withheld information.

C. The Balancing Test

In the Determination Letter, the Denying Official stated that he had balanced the public interest in releasing the information against the privacy interests of the applicants and had therefore decided to withhold the requested information. In response to notification of this Appeal, DOE/NV reported that the Denying Official had sought guidance from the Office of Personnel Management. The Denying Official also relied heavily on the Core opinion cited above. See Letter of Janet Fogg, FOIA and Privacy Act Officer, DOE/NV, to Harold Feld, OHA Staff Attorney, June 1, 1995. Townsend has raised no new issues of fact or law in his Appeal, beyond his assertion that he is entitled to the information and that he does not believe that the information requested raises any privacy concerns. We find that the Denying Official correctly balanced the public interest in disclosing the information against the privacy interests of the job applicants and properly withheld the information requested in this Appeal. Accordingly, Townsend's Appeal will be denied.

(1)The Appeal filed by Wilbert L. Townsend on May 30, 1995, Case No. VFA-0044, is hereby denied.

George Breznay

Director

Date: June 28, 1995

<1>Throughout his Appeal, Townsend confuses Exemption 6, the privacy exemption of the FOIA, with the Privacy Act. Exemption 6 of the FOIA concerns the privacy interest that individuals other than the requester have in the information sought. See Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 (1994). The Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, implemented by the DOE at 10 C.F.R. Part 1008, concerns the right of a requester to access to information regarding the requester himself. See Glenn T. Edwards, 21 DOE ¶ 80,124 (1991). We have interpreted Townsend's assertions in his Appeal concerning Privacy Act to mean that he believes that releasing the withheld information would not violate the privacy interests of the affected parties.

<2>There is no privacy interest in the name of the selected employee, however, since there is no privacy interest in the knowledge that the employee now works for the federal government.

<3>It does not matter that this information would identify the unsuccessful applicants only to those familiar with them or their circumstances. If the information is released to Townsend, it must be released to any other requester. Core, 730 F.2d at 949. See also Environmental Protection Agency v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 79 (1973).

<4>No such privacy interest exists for the successful candidate, since the fact that the candidate sought another job will become clear once the candidate accepts the position. Core, 730 F.2d at 948.

June 30, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Richard W. Miller

Date of Filings: June 2, 1995

June 19, 1995

VFA-0049

On June 2, 1995, Richard W. Miller, on behalf of his client Foley Company, filed an Appeal from three Determinations issued to him by the Freedom of Information Officer at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Strategic Petroleum Reserve Project Management Office (SPRO). In those Determinations, the Authorizing Official released numerous documents but withheld some documents pursuant to Exemption 5 of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Mr. Miller requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) order the release of all of the withheld documents.

I. Background

On November 1, 1994, Mr. Miller filed a FOIA request for all documents related to Solicitation No. DE-FB96-92P016055 dated October 10, 1991, Contract No. DE-AC96-92P016055 and the Sandia National Laboratories Contract No. DE-AC04-76 DP99189. In a series of three Determinations, SPRO identified and released hundreds of responsive documents but withheld a total of 211 specific documents listed in March 31st and June 1st Determinations and a series of diaries discussed in a May 5th Determination which were responsive to the above request.<1> In a March 31, 1995

Determination, SPRO withheld, in their entirety, 150 memoranda described as draft internal memoranda, government cost estimates, price negotiation memoranda, job diaries and drafts of specifications. SPRO stated that the subject documents were exempt under Exemption 5 because they were predecisional and recommendatory in nature and consisted of opinions which are part of the process by which governmental decisions and policies are formulated. Shortly thereafter, on May 5, 1995, SPRO issued a second Determination which withheld a series of diaries under Exemption 5 of the FOIA stating that the diaries contained opinions and thoughts which are part of the process by which governmental decisions and policies and formulated. On June 1, 1995, SPRO issued yet another Determination which withheld an additional 61 documents under Exemption 5 of the FOIA and restated the same general reasons that it had provided in the March 31st and May 5th determination letters. These 61 documents were described as internal memoranda, draft letters, and meeting and telephone notes. SPRO is reviewing an additional 66 documents for possible release which are not the subject of this Appeal.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b).

A. Exemption 5

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency memoranda or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). The three principal privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion are the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege, and the "deliberative process" privilege. See Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In the present case, the SPRO relied solely upon the "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5.

The "deliberative process" privilege shields from public disclosure records reflecting the predecisional, consultative process of an agency. Benedetto Enters., 19 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1989). Predecisional materials are not exempt merely because they are prepared prior to a final action, policy or interpretation. These materials must be a part of the agency's deliberative process by which decisions are made. Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F.2d 1136, 1144 (D.C. Cir. 1975). This privilege was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making government decisions. EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973); Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939 (Cl. Ct. 1958). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151. In order to be shielded by Exemption 5, a document must be both predecisional, i.e., generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e., reflecting the give and take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id.; Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 at 80,699 (1994).

Even if portions of the documents at issue in this Appeal meet the criteria cited above for applying Exemption 5, that does not mean that they may be withheld in their entirety. The FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." See 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10; Oak Ridger, 21 DOE ¶ 80,120 at 80,564-65 (1991); Boulder Scientific Co., 19 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,577 (1989). In the context of the "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5, this means that the non-deliberative material (generally factual information) contained in otherwise deliberative documents should be released to the requestor. The only exceptions to the requirement of segregation are where exempt and non-exempt material are so "inextricably intertwined" that release of the non-exempt material would compromise the exempt material, Lead Industries Ass'n v. OSHA, 610 F.2d 70, 85 (2d Cir. 1979), or where non-exempt material is so small and interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate it. Id.; Nuefeld v. IRS, 646 F.2d 661, 666 (D.C. Cir. 1981).

B. Adequacy of the Justification

In each of the Determinations at issue in this Appeal (March 31, 1995, May 5, 1995 and June 1, 1995), SPRO withheld documents under Exemption 5 of the FOIA and stated categorically that all of the documents contained opinions and thoughts which are part of the process by which governmental decisions and polices are formulated. We find this generic explanation as applied to all of the documents withheld by SPRO to be insufficiently informative and legally inadequate.

It is well established that a FOIA determination must contain a reasonably specific justification for withholding material pursuant to an FOIA request. See Deborah L. Abrahamson, 23 DOE ¶ 80,147 (1993).

A specific justification is necessary to allow this Office to perform an effective review of the initial agency determination and to permit the requesting party to prepare a reasoned appeal. Instead, SPRO has merely restated the language of Exemption 5, without explaining the reasons why SPRO concluded that the documents are predecisional and deliberative and therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 5. See Federal Sources, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,101 (1993). Furthermore, we note that DOE regulations require the agency to consider whether otherwise exempt documents should nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1; see also J. Reno, Attorney General, Memorandum to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993); Jane Affleck, 24 DOE ¶ 80,155 at 80,637 (1994). SPRO does not appear to have made such a determination in this case. We also find that there does not appear to have been any attempt to segregate and release possibly non-exempt information from exempt information in any of the withheld documents.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, we will remand to SPRO the three Determinations at issue in this Appeal. SPRO should either release to Mr. Miller all of the documents responsive to his request or issue a new Determination supporting the withholding of the documents. If a new determination is issued, SPRO should include a statement of the reason for denial, a brief explanation of how the exemption applies to the record withheld and a statement of why discretionary release is not appropriate. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7(b)(1). SPRO should further review each document for the possible segregation of non-exempt material. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7(b)(3). In making its determination, SPRO may group similar documents together, e.g., price negotiation memoranda, and provide one justification for that particular group of documents.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Richard L. Miller on June 2, 1995, Case No. VFA-0046, is hereby granted in part as set forth below in Paragraph (3) and denied in all other respects.

(2) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Richard L. Miller on June 19, 1995, Case No. VFA-0049, is hereby granted in part as set forth below in Paragraph (3) and denied in all other respects.

(3) The matter is hereby remanded to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve Project Management Office which shall either release the documents withheld in its March 31, 1995, May 5, 1995, and June 1, 1995 Determinations or issue a new determination in accordance with the guidance in the foregoing Decision.

<1>Mr. Miller's June 2, 1995 Appeal specifically challenged the withholding of certain diaries mentioned in a May 5, 1995 determination letter. His Appeal also challenged two other Determinations issued by SPRO on March 31, 1995, and June 1, 1995. However, Mr. Miller's filing with respect to these two Determinations was incomplete. We therefore bifurcated Mr. Miller's Appeal and assigned the Appeal of the diaries case number VFA-0146 and the Appeal of the two remaining Determinations case number VFA-0149. The filing of the Appeal for case number VFA-0149 was completed on June 19, 1995. See Letter from Richard W. Miller, Miller Law Firm to Ariane Cerlenko, OHA Staff Attorney (June 19, 1995). This Decision and Order addresses both Appeals.

June 30, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Sangre de Cristo Animal Protection, Inc.

Date of Filing:June 5, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0047

On June 5, 1995, Sangre de Cristo Animal Protection, Inc. (SDCAP), through Western Environmental Law Center, filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on April 27, 1995 by the Freedom of Information Officer at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Albuquerque Operations Office (hereinafter "Authorizing Official" or "Albuquerque"). In that determination, the Authorizing Official denied in part a request for information which SDCAP had filed pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, SDCAP requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) order the release of the withheld information. SDCAP also requests that OHA find that the search for responsive documents was inadequate.

I. Background

On December 15, 1994, SDCAP filed a FOIA request for the following records which are required by statute to be kept at the Inhalation Toxicology Research Institute (ITRI), a DOE facility located on Kirtland Air Force Base in Albuquerque and operated by the Lovelace Biomedical & Environmental Research Institute (Lovelace):

1. ITRI's Institutional Animal Care and Use Committee's (IACUC) most current report generated pursuant to 9 CFR § 2.31, chapter 1 of the Animal Welfare Act, and all previous reports for the last three years.
2. Copies of all ITRI IACUC records prepared pursuant to 9 CFR, § 2.35, chapter 1 of the Animal Welfare Act.
3. A copy of the 1992, 1993 and 1994 annual reports, which are prepared by ITRI for Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) to show compliance with 9 CFR, § 2.36, chapter 1 of the Animal Welfare Act.
4. Copies of all photographs of ITRI animal research that may be in ITRI's possession.

On January 6, 1995, Albuquerque sent SDCAP a letter acknowledging receipt of their FOIA request. In that letter, Albuquerque also informed SDCAP that their request would be processed in turn after a number of other pending FOIA requests. On April 27, 1995, Albuquerque issued a final determination letter. In that letter, the Authorizing Official determined that the request for item 1 should be denied under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e) because of the "critical self-evaluative privilege" claimed by Lovelace. With regard to items 2, 3 and 4, the Authorizing Official released redacted copies of the requested documents. The redactions were made in order to protect the identities of Lovelace employees pursuant to Exemption 6 of the FOIA. In its Appeal, SDCAP challenges the timeliness of Albuquerque's response, Lovelace's withholding of item 1 of the request under 10 CFR § 1004.3(e), Albuquerque's redaction of the names and faces of Lovelace employees under Exemption 6 and the adequacy of Albuquerque's search for items 2 and 4 of their request.

II. Analysis

A. Timeliness of Response

When an agency receives a proper FOIA request, it is required to inform the requester of its decision to grant or deny access to the requested records within ten working days. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6). However, the FOIA provides for extensions of initial time limits in certain situations. For example, the D.C. Circuit has approved the general practice of handling backlogged FOIA requests on a "first-in, first-out" basis. Open America v. Watergate Special Prosecution Force, 547 F.2d 605, 614-16 (D.C. Cir. 1976) (citing 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(C)).

SDCAP argues that Albuquerque's April 27, 1995 determination of their December 19, 1994 FOIA request violated FOIA regulations because Albuquerque failed to provide written notice of the "unusual circumstances" warranting extension of the response period beyond the statutory ten day period required under 5 U.S.C. § 552 (a)(6)(B). Appeal letter dated May 30, 1995 at 2.

SDCAP's initial FOIA request dated December 15, 1994 was received by Albuquerque on December 19, 1994. Albuquerque acknowledged receipt of that request in a letter dated January 6, 1995. In that same letter, Albuquerque explained that a number of pending requests were received before SDCAP's and theirs would be processed in turn. We find that Albuquerque's explanation for the delay appears reasonable and is sufficient under Open America and 5 U.S.C. § 552 (a)(6)(C) to warrant an extension of time beyond the statutory ten day period.

If a requester can show an "exceptional need or urgency," his or her request may be expedited and processed out of sequence. Expedited access has been granted in exceptional circumstances such as jeopardy to life or personal safety or a threatened loss of substantial due process rights. See, e.g., Exner v. FBI, 443 F. Supp. 1349, 1353 (S.D. Cal. 1978), aff'd, 612 F. 2d 1202 (9th Cir. 1980); Cleaver v. Kelley, 427 F. Supp. 80, 81 (D.D.C. 1976); Ferguson v. FBI, 722 F. Supp. 1137, 1141-43 (S.D.N.Y. 1989). On March 1, 1995, SDCAP wrote a letter to the Albuquerque Operations Office expressing concern for the delay in processing their request. However, SDCAP made no showing, in either the original request letter or in the March 1, 1995 letter, of exceptional need or urgency that would warrant an expedited response to their request. Therefore, we find, in the absence of such a showing, that Albuquerque responded in a manner consistent with applicable FOIA statutory and regulatory provisions.

B. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3 (e)

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

There are certain procedural requirements that must be met before documents are subject to the FOIA. Documents must first qualify as "agency records" under the criteria set out by the courts. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Documents that do not qualify as "agency records" may nevertheless be subject to the FOIA under a new DOE FOIA regulation that pertains specifically to contractor records. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e).<1> We must first determine whether the documents in item 1 of SDCAP's FOIA request qualify as agency records.

The OHA has applied a two-part test established by the courts to determine whether documents generated by nonfederal organizations are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., Cowles Publishing Co., 24 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1994); Concord Oil Co., 24 DOE ¶ 80,109 (1994); International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, 22 DOE ¶ 80,101 (1992); B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1987). That analysis involves a determination of 1) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA and if not, 2) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987).

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). A private organization will be considered a federal agency only where its organizational structure and daily operations are subject to substantial government control. See United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807, 815-816 (1976); Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977); See also Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169 (1980) (Forsham). For example, in Cowles, we held that DOE contractor, Battelle, was not an "agency" under the FOIA because DOE did not supervise its day-to-day operations. Cowles Publishing Co., 24 DOE at 80,505 (1994).

ITRI is a government-owned/contractor-operated (GOCO) facility located in Albuquerque and managed by Lovelace, a DOE contractor. The DOE does not supervise the day to day operations of Lovelace. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Ron O'Dowd, Albuquerque (June 16, 1995). Therefore, we conclude that Lovelace is not an agency for purposes of the FOIA. Id.

Since we have determined that Lovelace is not an agency for purposes of the FOIA, we must now turn to the second part of the test and determine whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987). The Supreme Court has held that "agency records" are documents which are (i) either created or obtained by an agency, and (ii) under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 142-45 (1989) (Tax Analysts). For purposes of analysis, the term "obtain" means that the agency must have had possession of the material at the time of the request in order for the material to qualify as an agency record. Id. Here, the documents requested in item 1 were not created by the DOE, but by ITRI employees. Moreover, the DOE had not obtained those documents prior to the time of SDCAP's FOIA request. Rather, the DOE sought access to the documents only for the purposes of responding to SDCAP's FOIA request. Therefore, because DOE did not create, obtain, control or possess the documents at the time SDCAP filed its request, the documents are not agency records under the test set forth in Tax Analysts.

However, if a contractor-generated document fails to qualify as an "agency record," it may still be subject to the FOIA under this Office's previous case law and under a new DOE FOIA regulation which pertains specifically to contractor records. See, e.g. John Lorenz, 23 DOE ¶ 80,116 (1993); Government Accountability Project, 22 DOE ¶ 80,103 (1992); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).<2> In general, if the contract between the DOE and the contractor provides that the contractor records are property of the agency, then the contractor records are subject to the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

Our first inquiry under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1), then, is whether the contractor records are "property of the Government." To answer this question, we must examine the contract between the DOE and Lovelace. Clause 42 of Contract No. DE-AC04-76EV01013/Mod M1 entitled, "Ownership of Records Relating to the Contract" reads in pertinent part, ". . . all records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this contract shall be the property of the Government . . ." This clause satisfies the requirement of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1). Therefore, we find that, according to the terms of the DOE/Lovelace contract , these records are "the property of the Government" within the meaning of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

However, our analysis does not end there. Subsection 1004.3(e)(2) sets forth an exception to the broad principle contained in 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1). Subsection 1004.3(e)(2) provides that if the contractor claims a privilege found to be recognized under federal or state law, then DOE-owned documents will be subject to mandatory disclosure only if already in the possession of the Government and not otherwise exempt under the FOIA. Therefore, we must analyze whether the documents contain "information for which the contractor claims a privilege recognized under Federal or State law." See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(2). Although the words of the new regulation refer to the contractor merely "claiming" a recognized privilege, we believe that the regulation must be interpreted to refer to situations in which the contractor claims a privilege and the DOE finds a reasonable basis for that claim. Otherwise, any privilege claim, no matter how frivolous, would remove a DOE-owned record from the reach of the FOIA. Cowles Publishing Co., 24 DOE at 80,663 (1995). Accordingly, we will consider the applicability of the "critical self-evaluative privilege" and whether that privilege is judicially recognized under state or federal law.

The D.C. Circuit has recognized the "critical self-evaluative privilege" in a civil discovery context. Bredice v. Doctors Hosp., Inc., 479 F.2d 920 (D.C. Cir. 1973) (Bredice); see also, Laws v. Georgetown University Hospital, 656 F.Supp. 824, 826 (D.D.C. 1987); Washington Post Co. v. United States Dep't of Justice, No. 84-3581, slip op. at 21 (D.D.C. Sept. 25, 1987) (magistrate's recommendation), adopted (D.D.C. Dec. 15, 1987), rev'd in part on other grounds & remanded, 863 F.2d 96, 99 (D.C. Cir. 1988). The "critical self-evaluative" privilege exists to promote critical self-analysis and improve practices and procedures. Bredice, 479 F.2d at 250-51. For example, in Bredice, the court held that medical staff documents were not subject to discovery and were entitled to a qualified privilege because there is an overwhelming public interest in promoting the self-evaluative process. To allow parties to obtain these types of reports would have an undue chilling effect on an organization's ability to evaluate its performance and the actions of its employees where such evaluation is in the public interest. Id. Although the privilege was applied under different factual circumstances in the Bredice and Washington Post cases, the same policy considerations that were present in those cases are present in this case. Therefore, we find that the "critical self-evaluative privilege" is a judicially recognized privilege that was properly invoked by Lovelace in this case.

We have determined that 1) the documents requested in item 1 are the property of the government and that 2) the contractor has reasonably claimed a judicially recognized privilege. We must finally determine whether the government is in possession of the requested documents. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(2) exempts privileged documents, which are not in the DOE's possession, from mandatory disclosure. We conclude that the term "possession" must refer to possession at the time of the request, in conformance with Tax Analysts. Otherwise, validly privileged documents which do not meet the test for "agency records" could be rendered subject to the FOIA under the new regulation simply by being identified and transmitted to the DOE for its FOIA review. Instead, the DOE specifically protected these types of documents from the regulation's reach. See 59 Fed. Reg. 63,883 (1994). In this case, the DOE obtained the requested documents only after the FOIA request was made. Therefore, we conclude that while the documents are property of the government, they are validly privileged and were not in possession of the DOE at the time of the FOIA request. Accordingly, we find that the documents requested in item 1 are not subject to the FOIA under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(2).

SDCAP argues that even if the documents requested in item 1 are privileged and therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure, redacted copies should be released under the FOIA which expressly provides that "any reasonably segregable portion of a report shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." 5 U.S.C. §552(b); U.S. Department of Justice v. Julian, 486 U.S. 1, 9 (1988). In other words, SDCAP argues, the "non-self-evaluative" material should be released. We need not address this argument. As we determined above, these documents are neither agency records as defined by case law nor subject to the FOIA by operation of the DOE's FOIA regulations. As a result, they are not subject to the disclosure provisions of the FOIA.

C. Exemption 6

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 CFR §

1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post). SDCAP challenges ITRI's redaction of the names of Lovelace employees from records responsive to items 2, 3 and 4.<3> SDCAP also challenges the redaction of the faces of Lovelace employees from photographs responsive to item 4. We find that faces are akin to other personal identifiers such as names, social security numbers and addresses that are exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 6 where such disclosure would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Accordingly, the following analysis with respect to the names of Lovelace employees applies to the faces of those employees as well.

To warrant protection under Exemption 6, information must first meet its threshold requirement. It must fall within the category of "personnel and medical files [or] similar files." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6). The term "similar files" has been interpreted broadly by the Supreme Court to include all information which "applies to a particular individual." Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 602. We find that the names of Lovelace employees contained in reports prepared under 9 C.F.R. §§ 2.31, 2.35 and 2.36 and the faces of Lovelace employees depicted in pictures qualify as similar files. Id.

Next, we must undertake a three-step analysis to determine whether the names and faces of Lovelace employees were properly withheld from the IACUC reports under Exemption 6. First, we must determine whether a substantial privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the names and faces. National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873, 874 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990) (Horner). Second, we must determine whether the release of the names and faces would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee). Finally, if we find both privacy and public interests in the requested information, we must weigh the privacy interest against the public interest in order to determine whether release of the names and faces would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Id. at 762-70.

1. Privacy Interest

It is widely held that federal employees have no expectation of privacy regarding their names, titles, grades, salaries and duty stations. See 5 C.F.R. § 293.311 (1994); National W. Life Ins. Co. v. United States, 512 F. Supp. at 461; Core v. United States Postal Serv., 730 F.2d 946, 948 (4th Cir. 1984). Therefore, the disclosure of such information about federal employees would involve little or no invasion of privacy. ITRI employees, however, are not federal employees. Rather, they are private individuals. The Supreme Court has long found a privacy interest in the names and addresses of private individuals significant enough to warrant protection from disclosure under Exemption 6. Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976). Moreover, at least seven Circuit Courts have found that an individual has a significant privacy interest in avoiding the unlimited disclosure of his or her name. See, e.g., Hopkins v. Department of Hous. & Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991); Painting & Drywall Work Preservation Fund v. Hous. & Urban Dev. 936 F.2d 1300 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Horner, 879 F.2d at 875; Halloran v. Veterans Admin., 874 F.2d 315, 323 (5th Cir. 1989); Department of Agric. v. FLRA, 836 F.2d 1139, 1143 (8th Cir. 1988); Minnis v. Department of Agric., 737 F.2d 784, 787 (9th Cir. 1984); Heights Community Congress v. Veterans Admin. 732 F.2d 526, 529 (6th Cir. 1984); American Fed'n of Gov't Employees v. United States, 712 F.2d 931, 932 (4th Cir. 1983).

For example, the Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has held that the release of names and addresses of contractor employees would constitute a substantial invasion of privacy which would not be outweighed by the public interest in disclosure. Painting & Drywall Work Preservation Fund, Inc. v. HUD, 936 F.2d 1300 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (Painting & Drywall). In Painting & Drywall, the Fund sought to compel HUD to divulge names and addresses of contractor employees which had been redacted pursuant to Exemption 6 of the FOIA. The court reasoned that the dissemination of this sort of information about private citizens is not what the framers of the FOIA had in mind. Id. at 1303 (citing Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 765). Similarly, in this case SDCAP challenges the redaction of the identities of Lovelace employees from records released to them in response to their FOIA request. We find a significant privacy interest in the names and faces of Lovelace employees working at ITRI.<4>

2. Public Interest

Next, we must determine whether release of the names and faces would further the public interest. SDCAP argues that, in making its determination, Albuquerque did not explain the public interests it considered in performing the balancing test under Exemption 6. Appeal letter dated May 30, 1995 at 12. However, the burden of establishing that disclosure would serve the public interest is on the requester. Carter v. United States Dep't of Commerce, 830 F.2d 388 (D.C. Cir. 1987). We note that SDCAP did not argue in its original request that there is a public interest in the disclosure of the requested information. Albuquerque is not required to consider a public interest argument that has not been advanced by the requester. Id. Since SDCAP has argued on appeal that there is a public interest in disclosure, we will determine whether that public interest would be served by disclosure. Hopkins v. HUD, 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991).

The Supreme Court has held that there is a public interest in disclosure of information that "sheds light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 773. SDCAP argues, on appeal, that there is a public interest in knowing whether the government is complying with federal law at animal research facilities. Appeal letter dated May 30, 1995 at 12. While this is a legitimate concern of the public, we find that disclosure of the names and faces of Lovelace employees does not in itself shed light on DOE's compliance or non-compliance with federal law. Painting & Drywall, 936 F.2d at 1303 (citing Reporter's Committee, 489 U.S. at 774-775).

Furthermore, SDCAP argues, a review of the names of Lovelace employees gives the public an opportunity to identify persons uniquely unqualified to receive federal funds for animal research, such as persons convicted of animal cruelty or disciplined for medical or scientific fraud or malpractice. Appeal letter dated May 30, 1995 at 12. We recognize that the names and faces could provide leads to someone seeking to determine whether persons convicted of animal cruelty, etc. are working at government owned animal research facilities. Such information is of interest to the public and could shed light on government activity. Painting & Drywall, 936 F.2d at 1303. However, this public interest, though tenuous, must be weighed against the significant privacy interest that we have identified.

3. Balancing

If an asserted public interest is found to qualify under the Reporters Committee standard, it must be accorded some measure of value so that it can be weighed against the threat to privacy. See, e.g., Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976); Ripskis v. HUD, 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1981). Since we have found that Lovelace employees have a significant privacy interest in their names and faces and since we have found that there is a recognizable public interest where disclosure of those names could lead to relevant information about the activities of the government, we must accord some weight to each and balance them. Id.

In Painting & Drywall, the requester sought the names of contractor employees listed on payroll records. The court recognized that disclosure of the names could lead to other relevant information about government activity, but held that this attenuated public interest in disclosure does not outweigh the employees' significant privacy interest in their names. Id. at 1303. We reach the same result in this case. We conclude that the public interest cited by SDCAP is so attenuated that it does not outweigh the significant privacy interest Lovelace employees have in their names and faces. Id. Therefore, in keeping with the D.C. Circuit's holding and in light of the overwhelming weight of authority, we find that disclosure of the names and faces of Lovelace employees would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Id.

D. Adequacy of Search

The Office of Hearings and Appeals has stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. In fact, the office has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g. James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991); Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1988). However, the FOIA requires only that the search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985) (Miller); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d at 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

SDCAP requested copies of all ITRI IACUC reports required under 9 C.F.R. § 2.35 (item 2) and copies of all photos of ITRI animal research (item 4). FOIA Request Letter dated December 15, 1995. In response to item 2, Albuquerque provided a list of all dogs at ITRI between January 1, 1992 and January 27, 1995 and a compilation of shipping documents for dogs entering or leaving the facility during that time. They explained that there were no such records for other species mentioned in the Animal Welfare Act (9 C.F.R. § 2.30 et. seq.); for example, such records are not required for rodents. In response to item 4 of the request, Albuquerque provided copies of file photographs, proof sheets and reprints of publications depicting dogs, ponies, mice and rats in research situations. Appeal letter dated May 30, 1995 at 11.

In its Appeal, SDCAP argues that Albuquerque did not conduct an adequate search for documents responsive to items 2 and 4 because 1) with respect to item 2, USDA regulations require the IACUC to maintain other forms of records besides lists of dogs<5> and 2) with respect to item 4, the ITRI annual reports for 1991-1993 reflect that other species besides dogs, ponies, mice and rats were used for research.<6> Therefore, SDCAP argues, because they were not given what was required to be included in the reports requested under item 2 and because they were not given photos of animals that ITRI indicated were used in research, the search was not reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents. We must determine whether Lovelace's search for items 2 and 4 of SDCAP's FOIA request was reasonable.

We contacted Albuquerque for an explanation of the steps taken to locate the requested information. We spoke with Dr. Joseph Mauderly, the Director of ITRI, because the search for responsive documents was conducted under his direction. With respect to item 2 of the request, we were informed that ITRI stores all of its reports required under 9 C.F.R. § 2.35 in file drawers that were thoroughly searched in an effort to respond to the request. Everything that was found was released. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Joseph Mauderly, D.V.M., ITRI (June 16, 1995). Based on this information, we find that the search for documents responsive to item 2 of the request was reasonable.

With respect to item 4 of the request, we were informed that ITRI sent all of the responsive pictures that they had. We have been informed that ITRI does not take a lot of pictures; pictures are only taken at ITRI for publications, to put on bulletin boards and for use at meetings. They are kept in two places: 1) in the Illustration Department/Technical Communications Office in a central file of photographs and 2) in the Pathology files.<7> Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Joseph Mauderly, D.V.M., ITRI (June 16, 1995). Dr. Mauderly explained that the first step in their search was to determine what was meant by "pictures of animals in research situations," because it was not clear from the original FOIA request letter. He explained, for example, that they may take pictures of a piece of lung tissue or a tumor from an animal and this could be considered responsive to the request. They determined that only photographs of whole animals were responsive. Dr. Mauderly then stated that he and a team of about 12 other people on his staff spent several days searching for responsive pictures in file drawers in the areas described above. As a result, over 100 pictures were released. Based on this information, we find that the search for documents responsive to item 4 of the request was reasonable.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, we find that Albuquerque responded to SDCAP's FOIA request in a manner consistent with applicable FOIA statutory and regulatory provisions. We also find that the reports requested in item 1 are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to the FOIA under the DOE contractor records regulation and were therefore properly withheld. We find that the names and faces of Lovelace employees were properly withheld from items 2, 3 and 4 pursuant to Exemption 6. Finally, we conclude that the search for documents responsive to items 2 and 4 of the request was reasonable.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Sangre de Cristo Animal Protection, Inc. on June 5, 1995 is hereby denied.

<1>This new regulation creates a change in the terminology previously used by this Office. We previously referred to a document contractually owned by the DOE as an "agency record" and therefore considered it subject to the FOIA. See Cowles Publishing Co., 24 DOE at 80,505 (citing John Lorenz, 23 DOE ¶ 80,116 (1993); Government Accountability Project, 22 DOE ¶ 80,103 (1992)). However, the Preamble to the new regulation clarifies that although documents falling within the new regulation are indeed subject to the FOIA, they are not "agency records" within the meaning of Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 142-45 (1989) (Tax Analysts). See 59 Fed. Reg. 492 63,883 (1994). Accordingly, this Office will hereinafter use the terminology of the new regulation in cases involving contractor records.

(1) When a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b).

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (e) (1) of this section, records owned by the Government under contract that contain . . . information for which the contractor claims a privilege recognized under Federal or State law shall be made available only when they are in the possession of the Government and not otherwise exempt under 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b).

<3>We note that while these are contractor records under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e), they are not being withheld. Lovelace has claimed no privilege with regard to these particular records as it has done with regard to item 1 of the request.

<4>We note, in addition, that the names and faces of Lovelace employees are not responsive to SDCAP's initial FOIA request. It is only on Appeal that this information has been requested.

<5>For example, § 2.35(a) requires that ITRI maintain the minutes of meetings, including records of attendance, activities and deliberations, records of proposed activities and proposed significant changes in activities involving animals, records of IACUC approval or disapproval of those activities or changes in activities, and semiannual reports.

9 C.F.R. § 2.35(a).

<6>For example, the annual reports indicated that guinea pigs, hamsters, rabbits, monkeys and sheep were used in research.

<7>Pictures kept in the Pathology files depict tumors or lesions and few of them show the whole animal. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Dr. Mauderly, ITRI (June 16, 1995).

July 11, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Murray, Jacobs & Abel

Case Number: VFA-0050

On June 15, 1995, Murray, Jacobs & Abel (hereinafter "MJA") filed an Appeal from a determination issued to them on May 18, 1995 by the Assistant Inspector General for Investigations at the Department of Energy's Office of Inspector General (hereinafter "OIG"). In that determination, the Authorizing Official denied a request for information which MJA had filed pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, MJA requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) order the release of the withheld information.

I. Background

On May 3, 1995, MJA filed a FOIA request for the following information from the Office of Inspector General:

1. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation which refer to allegations that Technology Management Services, Inc. (TMS) or any of its employees has charged back to the DOE inappropriate charges on any contract being performed for the DOE.
2. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation which refer to Roger Legassis or any other employee of TMS in connection with the TMS contract with DOE.
3. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation which refer to a DOE employee named Barbara McKee in connection with the items referred to in paragraphs one or two above.
4. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation which refer to SoBran, Inc. of 3138 Valentino Court, Oakton, VA 22124 or Amos Otis, President of TMS in connection with the items referred to in paragraphs one or two above.
5. Any and all internal guidelines or procedures promulgated by the Inspector General to verify that charges of impropriety are not brought for improper or self serving motives.
6. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation regarding the OIG verifi-cation of whether any alleged charges of impropriety were made in good faith.

Request letter dated May 3, 1995 at 1.

On May 18, 1995, the OIG denied MJA's request in its entirety pursuant to Exemption 7(A) of the FOIA. The Inspector General explained that the office has not reached a final resolution of this investigation. Therefore, release of the withheld material could prematurely reveal evidence and interfere with the ongoing enforcement proceeding. The Inspector General also determined that it is not in the public interest to release investigative information when, as in this case, release could tend to prematurely disclose investigative efforts, which might provide individuals involved in the investigation an opportunity to fabricate defenses, destroy evidence, intimidate witnesses, or otherwise impede an investigation. See determination letter at 1. The withheld documents include a case processing form and the complainant's letter to the Inspector General.

MJA maintains that its request was improperly denied. In its Appeal, MJA claims that the case processing form and the complainant's letter can be redacted so as not to reveal sensitive investigative material. MJA also argues on appeal that items 5 and 6 of their request have no relation to Exemption 7(A).

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

Exemption 7(A) of the FOIA allows agencies to withhold at their discretion "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information (A) could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(A); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(I). Clearly, the documents responsive to items 1 through 4 and 6 of the request satisfy the threshold test for application of Exemption 7. They have been compiled for a law enforcement purpose by the Inspector General who is charged with investigating and correcting waste, fraud or abuse in programs and operations administered or financed by the DOE. See Inspector General Act of 1978, codified as amended at 5 U.S.C. app. §§ 2(1) - (2), 4(a) (1), (3) - (4), (d), 6(a) (1) - (4), 7(a), 9(a) (1) (E).

Our cases state that the Authorizing Official must take one of two avenues to determine whether release could reasonably be expected to cause some articulable harm. See Albuquerque Journal, 22 DOE ¶ 80,148 (1992) (Albuquerque). Under the ordinary approach, a responding office must construct a list of relevant documents with a reason for applying each exemption, then segregate and release non-exempt material. Id. The second approach permits the Authorizing Official to categorize similar information according to function. There must be a rational link between the nature of the document and the alleged likely interference in the law enforcement proceedings. Id. If the agency chooses this approach, our cases state that it must define its categories functionally, conduct a document-by-document review in order to assign documents to the proper category and then explain how release of documents in each category would interfere with its enforcement proceedings. See Firearm Training Systems, Inc., 21 DOE ¶ 80,119 (1991); James E. Phelps, 20 DOE ¶ 80,169 (1990). It appears that OIG has chosen the latter approach. We find, however, that the determination letter's explanation of the reason for withholding the requested documents falls short of the necessary specificity.

In Albuquerque, we stressed the need for the agency to describe "with some specificity" the likely connection between the harm it anticipates and release of the requested documents. In this case, the OIG has cited several potential harms which may result from release of the case processing form, allegations, intra-agency memoranda, confidential source information and other documentary evidence sought by MJA. The Inspector General's chief concerns are that premature revelation could result in the destruction of evidence, fabrication of defenses, intimidation of witnesses or other interference with its investigation. We stated in Albuquerque that similar concerns were valid but, without more, they did not constitute a complete justification for the Inspector General's withholding under Exemption 7(A). These statements could be said about virtually every scrap of paper in virtually every ongoing Inspector General investigation file. Allowing this level of generality would transmute Exemption 7(A) into the type of blanket exemption the courts have consistently stated that it is not. NLRB v. Robbins Tire & Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214, 236; North v. Walsh, 881 F.2d 1088, 1097 (D.C. Cir. 1989); Curran v. Department of Justice, 813 F.2d 473, 475 (1st Cir. 1987); Campbell v. Department of Health & Human Servs., 682 F.2d 256, 262 (D.C. Cir. 1982). Rather, the agency should describe "with some specificity" how the harm it claims may connect with release of the requested documents. For example, in this case, the Inspector General could support his fear of evidence destruction by explaining that the target of the investigation has previously eradicated evidentiary or potential evidentiary documents in the target's control. Another explanation might be that the Inspector General has reason to believe that he does not have all relevant documents or that he has only asked for a sample of documents. In these situations, there may be reasons to believe that the target, aware of the direction of the agency investigation, might alter or destroy relevant documents which are not in the possession of the Inspector General.

Although we have found that the Inspector General's determination is insufficient, we will address the arguments that the requester has made on appeal. MJA argues that the withheld documents can be redacted so as not to reveal sensitive investigative material. We agree with MJA that the FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b) (1982). Mead Data Central, Inc. v. United States Dep't of the Air Force, 566 F.2d 242, 259-62 (D.C. Cir. 1977); Casson, Calligaro & Mutryn, 10 DOE ¶ 80,137 at 80,615 (1983). However, segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary where it is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material so that release of the non-exempt material would "compromise" the withheld material, or where the amount of the non-exempt material is small and so interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate it. The Inspector General must consider, in its determination, whether any of the documents in the investigatory file contain significant non-exempt material which can be released. There is no evidence in the determination letter that the Inspector General considered whether the file contained non-exempt material which could be released. We were informed, however, that the case processing form and the complainant's letter to the Inspector General were not reasonably segregable because any non-exempt material contained in the documents is so "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material that release of the non-exempt material would compromise the withheld material and could interfere with the investigation. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Jane Payne, OIG (July 3, 1995). If MJA appeals OIG's final determination, we will review the documents to determine whether the OIG determination that the documents cannot be redacted is reasonable.<1>

MJA also argues that items 5 and 6 of their request have no relation to Exemption 7(A). We agree with MJA and find that there is no basis for withholding item 5 under Exemption 7(A). Item 5 requests "[a]ny and all internal guidelines or procedures promulgated by the Inspector General to verify that charges of impropriety are factually based and not alleged for improper or self serving motives." As long as documents are created, collected or assembled for a law enforcement purpose, Exemption 7(A) may be properly invoked. John Doe Agency v. John Doe Corp., 493 U.S. 146, 153, 155 (1989). There is no evidence in the record to suggest that these internal guidelines were created in connection with the TMS investigation or that they are even a part of the investigatory file. Therefore, we do not believe that they were created, collected or assembled for a law enforcement purpose. Accordingly, we find that item 5 does not meet this threshold test and cannot be properly withheld under Exemption 7(A).<2> Item 6 requests "[a]ny and all statements, memoranda or other documentation regarding the OIG verification of whether any alleged charges of impropriety were made in good faith." We find that this is the type of investigatory information that could be withheld under Exemption 7(A). It is created for a law enforcement purpose and if released could interfere with an ongoing investigation. However, as discussed above, OIG has not stated with specificity how the harm it claims connects with the release of the requested documents.

III. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, we find that the Inspector General's determination needs to specify the relationship between the withheld documents and the asserted harm. In the absence of specific reasons, based on particular facts as to why the identified harms may occur, the Inspector General must release the requested information. Accordingly, we will remand this case to the Inspector General to either release the documents or issue a new determination in accordance with the guidance in this Decision and Order.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Murray, Jacobs & Abel on June 15, 1995, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Inspector General who shall issue a new determination consistent with this Decision and Order.

<1>Since we have found that the OIG's determination is insufficient with regard to its explanation for withholding documents under Exemption 7(A), we emphasize that we are addressing MJA's arguments solely to provide guidance for OIG's consideration on remand and for future determinations.

<2>In addition, OIG admitted that item 5 was inadvertently withheld under Exemption 7(A) and informed us that the request for that item would be reconsidered. They did not state which exemption or if any exemption would be invoked with regard to item 5. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Jane Payne, OIG (June 3, 1995).

March 21, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Esther Samra

Case Number: VFA-0051

On June 16, 1995, Esther Samra filed an Appeal from a determination issued on May 2, 1995 by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE/AL). The determination concerned a request submitted by Ms. Samra under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In her Appeal, Ms. Samra requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) order the release of the information withheld by DOE/AL.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). Department of Energy (DOE) regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In a November 9, 1994 FOIA request to DOE/AL, Ms. Samra requested a copy of a particular photograph, negative No. 2048, of the "Fat Man" atomic bomb. <1> In its May 2, 1995 determination letter, DOE/AL stated that it possessed a copy of the photograph but that the photograph was classified and was being withheld pursuant to Exemption 3 of the FOIA. DOE/AL stated that the photograph contained information regarding nuclear weapon design which was classified as restricted data pursuant to an Exemption 3 statute, the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2011 et seq. Thus, DOE/AL noted that release of the photograph could jeopardize the common defense and security of the United States or have a significant adverse effect on the health and safety of the public.

In her Appeal, Ms. Samra argues that the photograph was inappropriately classified. Ms. Samra has submitted copies of other publicly released photographs of the internal structure of different versions of the "Fat Man" atomic bomb and claims that these photographs are nearly identical to the withheld photograph. <2> Consequently, Ms. Samra asserts that the withheld photograph should be released to her. Additionally, Ms. Samra argues that DOE/AL's claim that release of the photograph would cause harm to the defense and security of the United States is belied by the fact that DOE has publicly released similar photographs, such as the ones submitted with her Appeal.

II. Analysis

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). We have previously determined that the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2011-2296, is a statute to which Exemption 3 is applicable. See, e.g., Barton J. Bernstein, 22 DOE 80,165 (1992); William R. Bolling, II, 20 DOE ¶ 80,134 (1990). The photograph was withheld under Exemption 3 on the grounds that it contains information classified as Confidential/Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act and is therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure.

The Director of Security Affairs (Director) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA Appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.1 (December 20, 1991). In his review of this Appeal, the Director instructed the Office of Declassification (OD) to reexamine the photograph at issue. OD reexamined the withheld photograph under the current classification guidelines including those guidelines released at the Secretary of Energy's June 27, 1995 news conference. After OD's reexamination of the withheld photograph, the Director determined that the photograph was properly classified as containing nuclear weapons design information and that it should be withheld.

With regard to Ms. Samra's arguments regarding the publication of photographs similar to the withheld photograph and the lack of harm to the national defense, the Director notes that the publicly available photographs submitted by Ms. Samra are superficially similar to the withheld photograph. However, the Director notes that the withheld photograph contains a clear and accurate view of currently classified nuclear weapons design features not revealed in the publicly available photographs. Consequently, Ms. Samra's arguments regarding the prior release of information contained in the withheld photograph or the lack of potential harm to the national defense are inapposite.

In conclusion, the Director, upon review by OD, found that DOE/AL properly classified and withheld the photograph pursuant to Exemption 3 of the FOIA. Consequently, Ms. Samra's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Esther Samra on June 16, 1995, Case Number VFA-0051, is hereby denied.

July 25, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Blumberg, Seng, Ikeda & Albers

Case Number:VFA-0052

On June 26, 1995, Michael J. Seng of the law firm of Blumberg, Seng, Ikeda & Albers (Seng) completed its filing of an Appeal from a determination issued on May 17, 1995 by the Office of the Inspector General of the Department of Energy (OIG). The OIG determination was issued in response to a request for documents submitted by Seng under the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In that determination, the OIG denied Seng's request in part. The OIG redacted the names of subjects, sources, witnesses and investigators, as well as personal identifiers and other indicia, pursuant to Exemptions 6 and 7(C) before releasing the information to Seng. In his Appeal, Seng asks that the DOE provide full disclosure of the names of these individuals.

The FOIA requires that agency records held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents which may be exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On April 18, 1995, Seng requested from the OIG "the entire file" of documents related to or generated in connection with the OIG's investigation of the death of a particular individual at the Naval Petroleum Reserves in Elk Hills, California. The OIG's investigation focused on the connection, if any, between the death and alleged violations of the Clean Water Act, 33 U.S.C. § 1251, the Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, 42 U.S.C. § 6901, and the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act, 42 U.S.C. § 9601. On May 17, 1995, the OIG released a redacted copy of the requested records from which the names of subjects, sources, witnesses and investigators, as well as personal identifiers and other indicia, were deleted pursuant to Exemptions 6 and 7(C) of the FOIA.

The OIG states that it invoked Exemptions 6 and 7(C) to protect the names of Federal employees, subjects, sources and witnesses. In addition to the names, gender-linked pronouns referring to individuals whose identities the OIG sought to protect and other information which could possibly be used to glean the identity of individuals in the above-named categories were withheld. The OIG justified withholding the names under the Exemptions cited on the grounds that release would violate the privacy of employees and tend to disclose the identity of the personnel who are entitled to be free from harassment, intimidation and other personal intrusions. See OIG May 17, 1995 Determination at 1. In addition, the OIG determined that there was no public interest served by release of this information.

In the present Appeal, Seng contends that the disclosure of the redacted identifying information "would be in the public interest, would not cause any additional intrusion into the individuals' privacy interests and could diminish otherwise necessary intrusions." Letter from Michael J. Seng, Esq. to William H. Garvie, Assistant Inspector General for Investigations at 1 (June 15, 1995).

II. Analysis

We have previously considered cases in which both Exemption 6 and 7(C) were invoked, and we stated that in such cases we would analyze the withholding only under Exemption 7(C), the broader of the two Exemptions. See, e.g., K.D. Moseley, 22 DOE ¶ 80,124 (1992); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1991); James E. Phelps, 20 DOE ¶ 80,169 (1990); Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,109 (1990); Jerry O. Campbell, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988). Exemption 6 allows an agency to withhold information if its release would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). By contrast, Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, if its release could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). It is only necessary to address the application of Exemption 7(C) to these documents since all of the documents were compiled for law enforcement purposes and any document which satisfies Exemption 7(C)'s "reasonableness" standard will be protected. Similarly, documents not protected by Exemption 7(C) will be unable to satisfy Exemption 6's more restrictive requirement that they constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy.

The threshold test under Exemption 7(C) is whether such information is compiled as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The Exemption 7 "law enforcement" exception to the requirement of mandatory release of information under the FOIA encompasses compliance with both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974). The OIG is charged with investigating and correcting waste, fraud, or abuse in programs and operations administered or financed by the DOE. See Inspector General Act of 1978, codified as amended at 5 U.S.C. app. §§ 2(1)-(2), 4(a)(1), (3)-(4), (d), 6(a)(1)-(4), 7(a), 9(a)(1)(E). In the present case, the OIG investigated alleged violations of environmental laws at the Naval Petroleum Reserves in Elk Hills, California. There is little doubt that the OIG documents generated in conjunction with the investigation were compiled for law enforcement purposes.

In determining whether the release of law enforcement records could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, the courts have used a balancing test which weighs the privacy interests that would be infringed against the public's interest in disclosure. Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989). We have previously determined that OIG investigators have a "significant interest in retaining the capability to perform their tasks effectively by avoiding untoward annoyance or harassment that might result from the release of their names." Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,109 (1990), quoting New England Apple Council v. Donovan, 725 F.2d 139, 143 (1st Cir. 1984). Because exposure of their identities would compromise their privacy interests while at the same time diminish their effectiveness as investigators, we have determined in those cases that investigators' names are exempt from disclosure pursuant to Exemption 7(C).

Similarly, we have found that subjects, sources and witnesses mentioned in OIG files have a strong privacy interest in remaining anonymous. James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1991). Exemption 7(C) affords broad privacy rights to suspects and witnesses. Moreover, the public interest in this context favors protection of identities rather than disclosure, in order to ensure that witnesses continue to provide information voluntarily for law enforcement investigations. Releasing the names and other personal identifiers of those who are interviewed by the OIG may chill future witnesses and thus hamper future investigations. K.D. Moseley, 22 DOE at 80,551. We therefore also find that the OIG properly withheld the names of subjects, sources and witnesses. Accordingly, we will deny Seng's Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Blumberg, Seng, Ikeda & Albers on June 15, 1995, Case Number VFA-0052, is denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Richard W. Miller

Date of Filing: July 7, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0055

On July 7, 1995, Richard W. Miller, on behalf of his client Foley Company, filed an Appeal from a Determination issued to him by the Freedom of Information Officer at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Strategic Petroleum Reserve Project Management Office (SPRO). In that Determination, the Authorizing Official released some documents but withheld 64 documents pursuant to Exemption 5 of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Mr. Miller requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) order the release of all of the withheld documents.

I. Background

On November 1, 1994, Mr. Miller filed a FOIA request for all documents related to Solicitation No. DE-FB96-92P016055 dated October 10, 1991, Contract No. DE-AC96-92P016055, and the Sandia National Laboratories Contract No. DE-AC04-76 DP99189. In a series of determinations, SPRO identified and released hundreds of responsive documents but withheld numerous other documents under Exemption 5. In considering two prior appeals filed by Mr. Miller regarding SPRO's responses to his request, we determined that SPRO had inadequately justified its withholding under Exemption 5 and failed to segregate possibly factual material from the withheld documents and remanded the matter to SPRO. See Richard W. Miller, 25 DOE ¶ ____ (1995) (Miller). However, on June 23, 1995, prior to the issuance of our Decision and Order SPRO issued yet another determination, which is the subject of this Appeal. In that Determination SPRO withheld 64 documents under Exemption 5 and provided the same type of justification as it had in its previous determinations. Mr. Miller challenges the withholding of those 64 documents.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b).

In the Determination at issue in this Appeal, SPRO withheld 64 documents under Exemption 5 of the FOIA and provided Mr. Miller with the same categoric explanations as it did in its prior determinations. We have contacted SPRO and inquired as to the status of the withheld documents. In light of our earlier Decision and Order, SPRO has agreed to review all documents at issue in this Appeal and issue a more detailed determination. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Tammy James, FOIA

Officer and Ariane Cerlenko, OHA Staff Attorney (July 21, 1995). We will therefore remand this Appeal to SPRO for a new determination consistent with our prior decision. See Miller. Specifically, SPRO should either release to Mr. Miller all of the documents responsive to his request or issue a new determination supporting the withholding of the documents. For each document withheld in full or in part, SPRO should include a statement of the reason for denial, a brief explanation of how the exemption applies to the record withheld, and a statement of why discretionary release is not appropriate. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7(b)(1). SPRO should further review each document for the possible segregation of non-exempt material. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7(b)(3). In making its determination, SPRO may group similar documents together, e.g., price negotiation memoranda, and provide one justification for that particular group of documents.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Richard L. Miller on July 7, 1995, Case No. VFA-0055, is hereby granted in part as set forth below in Paragraph (2) and denied in all other respects.

(2) The matter is hereby remanded to the Strategic Petroleum Reserve Project Management Office which shall either release the documents withheld in its Determination or issue a new determination in accordance with the guidance in the foregoing Decision.

Name of Petitioner: Esther Lyons

Case Number: VFA-0056

On July 11, 1995, Esther Lyons (Lyons) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on June 6, 1995 by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge) of the Department of Energy. In her Appeal, Lyons asserts that Oak Ridge failed to perform an adequate search for responsive documents in its possession regarding a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) Request she submitted on January 21, 1995.

I. Background

On January 21, 1995, Lyons filed a FOIA Request with the Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque) of the Department of Energy requesting copies of all documents containing information pertaining to her father, Michael D. Lyons. Albuquerque, as part of its search for responsive documents, subsequently forwarded her Request to Oak Ridge. Oak Ridge, in its June 6, 1995 Determination Letter, stated that it could not find any documents which were responsive to her Request.

In her Appeal, Lyons argues that Oak Ridge conducted an inadequate search for responsive documents. Lyons states that her father operated a mine which supplied beryllium ore to the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC), a DOE predecessor, and operated two companies, Beryl Ores Co. and Radio Communication Co., which did business with the AEC. Given this factual background, Lyons argues that responsive documents must exist regarding her father. <1>

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted officials at Oak Ridge to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. Oak Ridge informed us that Lyons' Request provided only her father's name and no other information. Consequently, Oak Ridge, looking for references to Lyons' father's name, made a search of its files at the facilities most likely to contain responsive records. Oak Ridge conducted searches of its files at the K-25 site, Y-12 site, Oak Ridge Associated Universities, Oak Ridge National Laboratories and a records holding center in Georgia. At none of these facilities were responsive documents found. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Amy Rothrock, FOIA Officer, Oak Ridge, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (July 24, 1995). Given the information available to Oak Ridge, we find that it conducted an adequate search in response to Lyons' FOIA Request. However, on receiving a copy of the Appeal and further information from Lyons regarding her father's business operations with the AEC, Oak Ridge has agreed to conduct another search using this additional information. Consequently, we will remand this matter to Oak Ridge so that it may conduct a further search for responsive documents.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Esther Lyons on July 11, 1995 is granted in part as set forth in the above Decision and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0058, 25 DOE ¶ 80,127

August 8, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Robert S. Foote

Date of Filing: July 10, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0058

On July 10, 1995, Robert S. Foote filed an Appeal from a Determination issued to him on June 8, 1995, by the Office of Health and Environmental Research (OHER) in the Office of Energy Research of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the OHER denied a request for information filed by Mr. Foote under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On July 26, 1994, Mr. Foote filed three separate FOIA requests in which he sought certain information relating to the review of research proposals he submitted to the DOE in 1989, 1990, and 1993. The present Appeal concerns his request for the names of panel members reviewing research proposals. On January 18, 1995, the OHER denied Mr. Foote's request for this information.<1> On March 16, 1995, after considering an Appeal filed by Mr. Foote from the January 18 Determination, we remanded the matter to the OHER for a new Determination that would explain in greater detail the reasons for withholding the panelists' names. See Robert S. Foote, 24 DOE ¶ 80,169 at 80,673 (1995).

On June 16, 1995, the OHER issued a new Determination which withheld the panelists' names under Exemption 6 of the FOIA. Mr. Foote then filed the present Appeal. Mr. Foote contends that (1) there is no cognizable privacy interest within the meaning of Exemption 6, and (2) there is a strong public interest in disclosure of the panelists' names in order to ensure that the government makes unbiased decisions. For these reasons, Mr. Foote requests that the OHA direct the OHER to release the withheld information.

II. Analysis

The only issue before us is whether OHER properly withheld the panelists' names requested by Mr. Foote under Exemption 6. Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information."

Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether a substantial privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d at 874 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990). If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Second, the agency must determine whether release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Hopkins v. Department of Housing and Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991) (Hopkins); FLRA v. Department of Treasury Fin. Management Serv., 884 F.2d 1446, 1451 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 864 (1990) (FLRA). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762-70. Determination of the third issue should include an evaluation of whether that public purpose may be accomplished by alternative and less intrusive means. Church of Scientology v. Department of the Army, 611 F.2d 738, 746 (9th Cir. 1979); Douglas L. Miller, 13 DOE ¶ 80,122 at 80,573 (1985).

A. Privacy Interest

OHER found a strong privacy interest in the panelists' names and stated that releasing the information could expose the individuals to "persecution."<2>

In the past we have considered this issue and determined that the names of DOE evaluators of contract proposals should be withheld under Exemption 6. ML&B, 20 DOE at 80,687. In that case we concluded that the DOE evaluators had significant privacy interests in avoiding the public disclosure of their names, disclosure of which would subject them to unwanted public inquiries. Id.; see Knolls Action Project, 19 DOE ¶ 80,103 (1989) (Knolls) (withholding the names of radiation inspectors who due to the nature of their work would likely be contacted by the public should they be identified); Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976). Thus, we find that the denying official correctly identified a significant privacy interest under Exemption 6.

B. Public Interest in Disclosure

Once a privacy interest is identified, we must balance that interest against the public interest in releasing the document. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 772-73. In Reporters Committee, the Supreme Court greatly narrowed the scope of public interest in the FOIA. The Court distinguished between the benefits to the public which may result from the release of information and those benefits that Congress sought to provide the public when it enacted the FOIA. The Court found that, in the FOIA context, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the FOIA's core purpose. Id. The Court identified the core purpose of the FOIA as "public understanding of the operations and activities of the government." Id. at 775. Therefore, the Court held, only that information which contributes significantly to the public's understanding of the operations or activities of the government is within "the ambit of the public interest which the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id. The Court therefore found that unless the public would learn something directly about the workings of the government from the release of the document, its disclosure is not "affected with the public interest." Id.

In his Appeal, Mr. Foote argues that there is a substantial public interest in the public confirming that the functions of government remain unbiased. Although there may be a public interest in determining whether panelists who review grant proposals possess conflicts of interest, the Appellant's assertion that release of their names would advance this interest is mere speculation. Before panelists review a grant proposal, they are required to complete conflict of interest statements. These statements, together with lists of affiliations or interests which might be construed as creating a conflict of interest, are reviewed by the DOE to confirm that no such conflict exists. Thus, we find that disclosure of the panelists' names is not necessary to serve this purpose.

The burden of establishing that disclosure would serve the public interest is on the requester . Carter v. United States Department of Commerce, 830 F.2d 388 (D.C. Cir. 1987). In the past we have found that the names of source evaluation board members and radiation inspectors would not shed light on the operations or activities of the government. See ML&B, 20 DOE at 80,687; Knolls, 19 DOE at 80,508. Without a public interest rising above a mere speculation, we find that there is no public interest in disclosure of the panelists' names.

III. Conclusion

The panelists' names were properly withheld under Exemption 6. The panelists have a significant privacy interest in their names and any public interest in their disclosure is minimal. Balancing the significant privacy interest against the minimal public interest, we conclude that the names should not be released. Therefore, this Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Robert S. Foote on July 10, 1995, Case Number VFA-0058, is hereby denied.

<1>OHER released some documents that were responsive to other portions of the Appellant's request.

<2>Further, OHER noted that the clear expectation of the panelists was that their names would not be released and that they would be reluctant to serve on panels if their identities were made public. Moreover, panelists would be less likely to provide their frank and candid technical opinions. OHER concluded that the release of the panelists' names would diminish the quality of the agency's decision-making process. For these reasons, we previously determined that the identities of similar panelists fall within the scope of Exemption 6. See Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, 20 DOE ¶80,165 (1991) (ML&B).

August 10, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Jay M. Baylon

Date of Filing: July 13, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0059

On July 13, 1995, Mr. Jay M. Baylon filed an Appeal from determinations issued to him by the Freedom of Information and Privacy Act Division of the Office of Administration Services (FOI Office) of the Department of Energy (DOE) and by the DOE's Office of Arms Control and Nonproliferation (Arms Control). Those determinations granted in part the request for information that Mr. Baylon submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require DOE to conduct an additional search for information responsive to the appellant's request.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been destroyed or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

I. Background

In his FOIA request dated March 20, 1995, Mr. Baylon sought all agency documents pertaining to Westinghouse Electric Corporation's (Westinghouse) transfer of nuclear-related technology to the People's Republic of China (China). Particularly, Mr. Baylon asked for copies of the following documents:

(1) Any application since 1980 filed by Westinghouse pursuant to 10 C.F.R. Part 810 for the transfer of nuclear-related technology to the China.

(2) Any authorizations for transfer of nuclear-related technology issued by the DOE since 1980 (not limited to Westinghouse).

(3) Any clarifications, interpretations, explanations or supporting information concerning the scope, legality, or effectiveness of the above listed items.

(4) Any correspondence from China in 1994 and 1995 relating to any of the above.

In its determination letter of May 24, 1995, Arms Control stated that certain documents responsive to items (1), (2) and (3) of Mr. Baylon's request were either enclosed or currently available in the Freedom of Information Reading Room at DOE headquarters. The office further explained that the remainder of materials pertaining to items (1) and (2) either had originated in another executive branch agency, which will issue a separate Determination on Mr. Baylon's FOIA request, or were classified and are now undergoing a declassification review, the results of which will be provided to Mr. Baylon at the review's completion.<1> Regarding Mr. Baylon's fourth request, the office indicated that it had no documents. In a letter dated June 28, 1995, the FOI Office reiterated the response made earlier by Arms Control and explained Mr. Baylon's right to appeal the adequacy of DOE's search.

In his Appeal, Mr. Baylon contests the adequacy of the DOE's search for responsive information. In support of his assertion that additional responsive documents exist, Mr. Baylon cites a newspaper article and a DOE report: "China Trip Ends with Signing of Energy Deals," New York Times (Feb. 25, 1995), and "Presidential Mission on Sustainable Energy and Trade to China Led by Secretary of Energy Hazel O'Leary," DOE Trip Report (Feb. 15-24, 1995). This Appeal, if granted, would require DOE to conduct a further search for responsive documents.<2>

The OHA has consistently stated that an FOIA request warrants a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W.R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., Cowles Publishing Co., 16 DOE ¶ 80,136 (1987); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80, 108 (1981). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In reviewing this Appeal, we contacted the FOI Office at DOE headquarters as well as Arms Control, the office to which the request was originally referred, to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed.<3> After receiving the request, Arms Control investigated its in-house and archived records for responsive documents. Zander Hollander of Arms Control, who conducted the search, remarked that in the past year a flood of interest in China and 10 C.F.R. Part 810 had prompted him to segregate materials relevant to that issue. In the process of compilation, he had examined all his folders and files and was confident that the resulting collection was comprehensive. This effort greatly facilitated his search for the items identified in Mr. Baylon's FOIA request.<4> From these conversations with Mr. Hollander as well as with Doug Downen of Arms Control who stressed Mr. Hollander's experience in directing FOIA-related searches, it appears that Arms Control conducted an adequate search of its records.

However, there is ample evidence to suggest that the FOI Office should have directed Mr. Baylon's FOIA request to other DOE Offices involved in nuclear-related transfers. Jennifer Houghton, the FOI officer responsible for processing the request, stated that subsequent to DOE's initial determinations at least two other DOE Offices, the Office of General Counsel (GC) and the Office of Nuclear Energy (NE), became aware of the FOIA request and have initiated searches for responsive documents. According to representatives of NE and GC, those offices have either already identified responsive documents or believe they may uncover relevant materials after further searches. See Memoranda of Telephone Conversations between Allison Varzally, OHA, and Chuck Dougherty, NE (July 24, 1995), between Allison Varzally and Jennifer Houghton, FOI Office (July 27, 1995) and between Allison Varzally, and Joe Mahaley, GC (July 25, 1995).

In the present case, discussions between Mr. Baylon and the DOE have identified possibly responsive documents which were not discovered in the original search.<5> Consequently, we will remand Mr. Baylon's request so that a thorough and conscientious search can be made for responsive documents.

Accordingly, the Appeal filed by Jay M. Baylon shall be granted. The matter will be remanded to the FOI Office for an additional search for responsive documents that shall include, but not necessarily be limited to, the Office of Nuclear Energy and the Office of General Counsel. The FOI Office shall identify all documents relevant to Mr. Baylon' request and either release them or provide adequate justification for withholding any portion of them.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Jay M. Baylon on July 13, 1995, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below.

(2) This matter is remanded to the FOI Office which shall, in accordance with the foregoing Decision, coordinate an additional search for responsive documents.

George B. Breznay

Director

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: August 10, 1995

<1>/ The review determines whether such documents should remain classified and be withheld under an FOIA exemption or should be released to the requestor. In light of this procedure, the FOI office has followed those provisions set forth in 10 C.F.R. § 1004.6(b)(c) and has referred records marked as classified to the Director of Classification (now Director of Declassification) who will "advise the office originating the records, or having responsibility for the records, and consult with such office or offices prior to making a determination under this section."

<2>/ Mr. Baylon raised several matters which are not central to his charge that DOE conducted an inadequate search. First, Mr. Baylon argues that DOE must cite the specific Executive Order under which it is undertaking its declassification review and should explain the general nature of the review. Second, for those documents referred to other agencies for a determination, Baylon claims DOE must indicate "(1) which Executive Branch agencies are conducting such reviews; (2) the appropriate individuals at such Executive Branch agencies responsible for such reviews and available for discussion; (3) whether the reviews are being conducted in accordance with either 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(f) or 1004.6(e); and (4) when the reviews will be completed." Third, Mr. Baylon claims that the DOE failed to render a complete determination regarding classified documents within the FOIA statutory deadlines. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.5(d)(1). These issues lie outside the scope of this Office's jurisdiction. Section 1004.8(a) of the DOE Regulations states that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) has jurisdiction to consider Freedom of Information Act Appeals in the following circumstances:

When the Authorizing Officer has denied a request for records in whole or in part or has responded that there are no documents responsive to the request

...or when the Freedom of Information Officer has denied a request for waiver of fees.

10 C.F.R. § 1004.8(a), 53 Fed. Reg. 14660 (May 3, 1988).

Moreover, we find nothing either in the FOIA or in DOE regulations to support the Appellant's claim that the DOE must explain the basis or nature of its declassification review. The Appellant is correct that DOE must identify the other agencies to which it has referred the FOIA request, if their identity is not classified, but it need not provide the other information claimed by the appellant. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(f). Although the circumstances for an administrative appeal do not exist with respect to those portions of his request to which the DOE has not yet responded, Mr. Baylon has the right to file a complaint with the appropriate federal district court on this issue. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B), (6)(C).

<3>/ See Memoranda of Telephone Conversations between Allison Varzally, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) Analyst, and Jennifer Houghton, FOI Office (July 24 and 27, 1995) between Allison Varzally and Doug Downen, Arms Control (July 24, 1995), and between Allison Varzally and Zander Hollander, Arms Control (July 24, 1995).

<4>/ John Kyte, a representative of Mr. Baylon's attorney, claims that he visited the FOI Reading Room on two separate occasions and was unable to locate responsive documents dated after 1992. Ms. Houghton explained that she provided all responsive documents supplied by Arms Control to a representative of Mr. Baylon's attorney, presumably Mr. Kyte. Responsive documents for years after 1992 were undergoing a declassification review or had not yet been discovered by the DOE and were therefore not provided to him.

<5>/ Some of the documents identified by the appellant may be among those undergoing declassification review. It would aid requesters in determining whether a search was adequate if the documents undergoing review were identified or described to the requester, provided that could be done without compromising the reasons for their being classified.

August 15, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Greg Long

Date of Filing:July 14, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0060

On July 14, 1995, Greg Long of Philomath, Oregon filed an Appeal from a determination issued on June 29, 1995 by the Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque Operations) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part Mr. Long's request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by federal agencies, and which have not been made public in an authorized fashion by a covered branch of the federal government, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 5552(b)(1)-(b)(9). See also 10 C.F.R. § 1004. 10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents which may be exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In a letter dated March 23, 1995, Mr. Long filed a FOIA request with Albuquerque Operations seeking two related categories of information. The first category concerns the investigation of a mysterious and unexplained "hum" reported by many people in and around Taos, New Mexico. In particular, Mr. Long noted that Sandia National Laboratory had been involved in exploring this phenomenon starting in 1991. The second category asks for documents in which Sandia personnel explored similar "hums" elsewhere in New Mexico.

Albuquerque Operations reported to Mr. Long on June 29, 1995 that Sandia National Laboratory had provided one responsive record for each category. The first, the "Electromagnetic Test Report, Electromagnetic Investigation of the Taos Hum, Test Report, dated September 27, 1994," was released in its entirety. The second document, a draft report on "other possible sources of the Taos 'Hum.'" was withheld in its entirety. Albuquerque Operations explained that the report was never finalized because funding for the project had been terminated. Accordingly, Albuquerque Operations withheld the document under the deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5 of the FOIA on the grounds that the document contained preliminary opinions and findings which were never finalized. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). Albuquerque Operations did provide Mr. Long with findings done by a team at the University of New Mexico who were working in conjunction with the Sandia National Laboratory team.

Mr. Long has appealed the withholding of the draft report.

II. Analysis

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents which are "[i]nter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this section exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." National Labor Relations Bd. v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975). Among these privileges is the "executive" or "deliberative process" privilege. This is the privilege that Albuquerque Operations relied upon in withholding information in this case under Exemption 5.

The "executive" privilege shields from mandatory disclosure documents, advisory in nature, which are created during agency consideration of proposed action, and which are part of the decision-making process. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 866 (D.C. Cir. 1980). Thus, application of the privilege "under (b)(5) depends not only on the intrinsic character of the document itself, but also on the role it played in the administrative process." Lead Industries Assoc., Inc. v. Occupational Safety and Health Admin., 610 F.2d 70, 80 (2d Cir. 1979) (Lead Industries).

As a result, to withhold an intra- or inter-agency document under the "executive" privilege of Exemption 5, it must be both predecisional, i.e., "antecedent to the adoption of agency policy," and deliberative, i.e., "it must actually be related to the process by which policies are formulated." Jordan v. Department of Justice, 591 F.2d 753, 773 (D.C. Cir. 1978). See also Assembly of California v. Department of Commerce, 968 F.2d 916, 920-21 (9th Cir. 1992); Formaldehyde Inst. v. Department of Health and Human Services, 889 F.2d 1118, 1122 (D.C. Cir. 1989). That is to say, a document must not only be prepared as part of agency consideration of some matter, it must also "bear on the formulation or exercise of policy-oriented judgment." Ethyl Corp. v. Environmental Protection Agency, 25 F.3d 1241, 1248 (4th Cir. 1994); Petroleum Info. Corp. v. Department of Interior, 976 F.2d 1429, 1435 (D.C. Cir. 1992); Playboy Enterprises v. Department of Justice, 677 F.2d 931, 935 (D.C. Cir. 1982). While the Albuquerque Operations determination in this case explains the first prong of this test, it does not address the second. Therefore, the determination does not adequately explain its basis for withholding and, we will remand this matter to Albuquerque Operations for a new, more detailed determination.

In making a further determination in this case, Albuquerque Operations should also consider the fact that even if a document meets the criteria set forth above, the document may not be simply withheld in its entirety. The FOIA, as implemented by 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10, requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). See The Oak Ridger, 21 DOE ¶ 80,120 at 80,564-65 (1991) (and cases cited therein); Boulder Scientific Co., 19 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,577 (1989) (and cases cited therein). In the context of the "executive" privilege of Exemption 5, this means that non-deliberative material ordinarily should be released to the requester. Environmental Protection Agency v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87-91 (1972). The only exceptions to the command of segregation are where exempt and non-exempt material are so "inextricably intertwined" that release of the non-exempt material would compromise the exempt material, Lead Industries, 610 F.2d at 85, or where non-exempt material is so small and interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate it. Id. <1>In this case, it appears that no attempt was made to segregate and release non-exempt material. In addition, we note that the withheld document contains factual statements and graphs that do not appear to be deliberative. This non-exempt material should be released to Mr. Long.

On remand, Albuquerque Operations should also consider whether Exemption 5 can be applied to this draft in a manner which is consistent with the guidance contained in the Memorandum from Janet Reno, Attorney General of the United States, to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993) (Reno Memorandum). See also Memorandum from William Jefferson Clinton, President of the United States, to Heads of Departments and Agencies, 29 Weekly Comp. Pres. Doc. (No. 40) 1999, 2000 (Oct. 11, 1993)

(noting the importance of FOIA and its centrality to the Reinventing Government initiative). That memorandum indicates that whether or not there is a legally correct application of an exemption, it is the policy of the Department of Justice to defend the assertion of a FOIA exemption only in those cases where the agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would be harmful to an interest protected by that exemption. See Reno Memorandum, at 1, 2 (Oct. 4, 1993). As the Attorney General stated, an agency should withhold information "only in those cases where the agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would be harmful to an interest protected by that exemption. Where an item of information might technically or arguably fall within an exemption, it ought not be withheld from a FOIA requester unless it need be." Id. See also Mapother v. Department of Justice, 3 F.3d 1533, 1537-38 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (before agency attempts to withhold factual material under deliberative process privilege, withholding must be examined in light of goals and policies of privilege); Wolfe v. Department of Health and Human Services, 839 F.2d 768, 774 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (en banc) (same). Thus, the Attorney General's standard applies a presumption in favor of disclosure unless an agency articulates a reasonably foreseeable specific harm to a specific interest protected by an exemption. Albuquerque Operations should take account of the Attorney General's memorandum on remand. See U.S. Solar Roof, 25 DOE ¶ 80,112 at 80,530 (1995); William D. Lawrence, 24 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,599 (1994).

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Greg Long of Philomath, Oregon, Case No. VFA-0060, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Director of the Office of Public Affairs of the Albuquerque Operations Office, who shall either release information or issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision.

August 22, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Case: Murray, Jacobs & Abel

Case Number: VFA-0061

This Decision and Order reconsiders a Decision and Order issued by the DOE's Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) to Murray, Jacobs & Abel (MJ&A) on July 11, 1995. Murray, Jacobs & Abel, 25 DOE ¶ _____, Case No. VFA-0050 (July 11, 1995). The July 11, 1995 Decision and Order concerned an appeal by MJ&A from a determination issued by the DOE's Assistant Inspector General for Investigations (Assistant IG) under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In the determination, the Assistant IG withheld responsive material pursuant to Exemption 7(A) of the FOIA, which protects "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes ... to the extent that [their] production ... (A) could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(A); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(I). The July 11, 1995 Decision and Order granted the appeal in part and remanded the matter to the Assistant IG for a further determination.

On July 17, 1995, the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) requested that the OHA reconsider the July 11, 1995 Decision and Order. In response to the request, the OHA contacted MJ&A to determine if it wished to submit comments on the OIG's requested reconsideration. MJ&A advised the OHA that it wished to submit comments and would do so by August 10, 1995. The OHA received MJ&A's comments on that date.

I. Background

A. The FOIA and Exemption 7(A)

The FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request. Congress has provided nine exemptions, pursuant to which information may be withheld. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

Exemption 7(A) of the FOIA allows agencies to withhold at their discretion "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information (A) could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(A); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(I).

B. MJ&A's FOIA Request

MJ&A's FOIA request stated that it concerned "an investigation being conducted by the ... OIG involving Technology & Management Services, Inc. (TMS) D.O.E. Contract No. DE-AC01-95FE63433 and Subcontract No. S-SB#-000-001." MJA requested the following six categories of documents:

1. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation which refer to allegations that TMS or any of its employees has charged back to the DOE inappropriate charges on any contract being performed for the D.O.E.
2. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation which refer to Roger Legassie or any other employee of TMS in connection with the above-referenced contract or subcontract.
3. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation which refer to a D.O.E. employee named Barbara McKee in connection with the allegations referred to in paragraph one or two above.
4. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation which refer to SoBran, Inc. of 3138 Valentino Court, Oakton, VA 22124 or Amos Otis, President of said company in connection with the allegations referred to in paragraphs one, two or three above.
5. Any and all internal guidelines or procedures promulgated by the Inspector General to verify that charges of impropriety are factually based and not alleged for improper or self serving motives.
6. Any and all statements, memoranda or other documentation regarding the OIG verification of whether any alleged charges of impropriety were made in good faith.

C. The Assistant IG's Determination

In his determination, the Assistant IG stated that documents responsive to the request were being withheld pursuant to Exemption

7(A). The Assistant IG stated that responsive documents included a case processing form and the complainant's letter to the OIG.

The Assistant IG stated that "release of the withheld material at this time could prematurely reveal evidence and interfere with the ongoing enforcement proceeding." More specifically, the Assistant IG stated that release of the withheld material was not in the public interest because it could prematurely disclose investigative efforts, provide individuals involved in the investigation an opportunity to fabricate defenses, destroy evidence, intimidate actual or potential witnesses, or otherwise impede an appropriate resolution of the investigation.

D. The MJ&A Appeal

MJ&A appealed the determination on two grounds. First, MJ&A argued that the IG was required to provide a redacted form of the case processing form and the complainant's letter. Second, MJ&A argued that Exemption 7(A) did not apply to Items 5 and 6 of the request.

E. The OHA July 11, 1995 Decision and Order

In the July 11, 1995 Decision and Order, the OHA held that the Assistant IG had not adequately supported his determination to withhold material pursuant to Exemption 7(A). The OHA held that the determination had not adequately described the documents or explained how their release would interfere with the instant investigation. July 11, 1995 Decision and Order, slip op. at 4, citing Albuquerque Journal, 22 DOE ¶ 80,148 (1992) (Albuquerque). The OHA also noted that the Assistant IG was in the process of making a new determination with respect to Item 5 of the request. Accordingly, the OHA determined that the request should be remanded to the Assistant IG for a new determination with respect to all six items of the request.

F. The OIG Reconsideration Request

The OIG requests that the OHA reconsider the July 11, 1995 Decision and Order based on the OIG objections to Albuquerque, which are set forth in a 1993 OIG letter from the OIG to the Albuquerque Journal.<1>The 1993 letter sets forth the OIG's opinion that federal court cases do not require the type of showing specified in Albuquerque. The OIG's position is that (i) under federal court cases, the OIG need only show that the release of specified categories of information could as a general matter interfere with enforcement proceedings and (ii) the OIG made that showing with respect to the information requested by MJ&A.

G. The MJ&A Comments

The MJ&A comments make three arguments in opposition to the OIG's reconsideration request. First, MJ&A notes that the OIG request for reconsideration refers to a telephone conversation between the OIG and the OHA, and MJ&A contends that the conversation constituted an impermissible ex parte contact. Second, MJ&A contends that the reconsideration request does not address specific documents. Third, MJ&A contends that the OIG has not justified its application of Exemption 7(A) to Items 5 and 6.

II. Analysis

A. MJ&A's Contention that an Impermissible Ex Parte Contact Occurred

As an initial matter, we address MJ&A's comment that an impermissible ex parte contact occurred. The OIG reconsideration request refers to a telephone conversation in which the OIG objected to Albuquerque and cited its July 1993 letter.

MJ&A's position that an impermissible ex parte contact occurred is without merit. Neither the FOIA nor the implementing DOE regulations prohibit ex parte contacts between an authorizing official and the reviewing authority. Thus, although OHA provided MJ&A with a copy of both the memorandum referring to the conversation and the 1993 letter, the OHA was not required to do so.

B. The Merits of the OIG's Reconsideration Request

As explained below, we have concluded that the OIG is correct in its assertion that Albuquerque is inconsistent with federal court decisions and should be reversed. In addition, we have concluded that the OIG has sufficiently justified the application of Exemption 7(A) to the sought material, except as to Item 5. As mentioned above, the Assistant IG is in the processing of issuing a new determination with respect to Item 5. Accordingly, we have concluded that the July 11, 1995 Decision and Order should be modified to limit the remand to Item 5.

1. The Standard for Assessing the Sufficiency of an Exemption 7(A) Justification for Withholding

In the July 11, 1995 Decision and Order, we found, in keeping with Albuquerque, that the OIG's determination was insufficient because it did not explain how the facts of this particular enforcement proceeding warranted a conclusion that the release of the material at issue was likely to interfere with the proceeding. The OIG stated that release of the withheld material could result in the destruction of evidence, fabrication of defenses, intimidation of witnesses or other interference with its investigation. We stated that these concerns were valid but did not constitute a complete justification for withholding the material. We stated that the OIG should describe, based on the particular facts of the case, how the harm it claimed would flow from the release of the requested documents. July 11, 1995 Decision and Order, slip op. at 4, citing Albuquerque. We suggested that the OIG might support its fear of evidence destruction by explaining, for example, that the target of the investigation had previously eradicated evidentiary documents in the target's control. Id.

Upon reconsideration, we find that the OIG is not required to make a particularized, case by case showing of interference with its investigation. Rather, a generic determination of likely interference is sufficient. NLRB v. Robbins Tire and Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214, 224 (1978); Crancer v. United States Dep't of Justice, 999 F.2d 1302, 1306 (8th Cir. 1993). The Supreme Court has held that Congress did not intend to prevent federal courts from determining that, with respect to particular kinds of enforcement proceedings, disclosure of particular kinds of investigatory records while a case is pending would generally "interfere with enforcement proceedings." NLRB v. Robbins, 437 U.S. at 236. In its discussion concerning the plain meaning of Exemption 7(A), the Supreme Court stated that although Congress could easily have required in so many words that the government in each case show a particularized risk to the enforcement proceeding at issue, Congress did not do so. NLRB v. Robbins, 437 U.S. at 234. By contrast, the Court explained, since 7(A) speaks in the plural voice about "enforcement proceedings," it appears to contemplate that certain generic determinations might be made. Id. at 224. As a result, the Court upheld a generic determination that the release of witness statements would interfere with enforcement proceedings within the meaning of Exemption 7(A).<2>

In Bevis v. Department of State, 801 F.2d 1386, 1389-90 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (Bevis), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia discussed how the government could make generic determinations pursuant to Exemption 7(A). Bevis provided for a three-step process. First, the government must define its categories functionally. Second, it must conduct a document by document review in order to assign documents to the proper category. Finally, it must explain how the release of each category would interfere with enforcement proceedings. Id. An explanation is sufficient if there is "a rational link" between the nature of the document and the alleged likely interference in enforcement proceedings. Id., quoting Crooker v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, 789 F.2d 64, 67 (D.C. Cir. 1986). As indicated above, in light of the Supreme Court's decision in NLRB v. Robbins, if the category of records is of the type that could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings generally, the government need not make any particularized, case specific showing. Again, to the extent that our decision in Albuquerque requires a higher standard, it is reversed.

In making the foregoing determination, we have considered the MJ&A comments concerning the OIG's burden. The MJ&A comments, however, do not discuss the Exemption 7 cases cited by the OIG. Instead, the MJ&A comments cite general language in cases involving the application of other exemptions to the FOIA, principally Exemption 5. As the above cases hold, Exemption 7(A) determinations do not require the same level of specificity. Because the MJ&A comments do not address the standards for Exemption 7(A) determinations, the comments were not helpful in our analysis.

Having made the foregoing determinations concerning the applicable standard for Exemption 7(A) justifications for withholding, we now turn to whether the OIG has met that standard.

2. Whether the Exemption 7(A) Justification for Withholding was Adequate

As an initial matter, we observe that the Assistant IG's determination was not entirely clear as to the categories of documents upon which he made his Exemption 7(A) determinations of interference. Thus, it was unclear whether the Assistant IG had made the type of category by category determination required by Bevis.

The arguments made in the OIG's reconsideration request indicate that the Assistant IG viewed the MJ&A's requested categories of documents as functional categories that warranted determinations of likely interference. Because the categories defined the scope of the FOIA request, documents outside the categories were not responsive to the request. Thus, it was unnecessary for the Assistant IG to review the entire investigatory file to determine if there were documents that fell within other categories.

We have concluded that the Assistant IG made a sufficient determination that documents falling within those categories were withholdable pursuant to Exemption 7(A). All of the five categories at issue, i.e., Items 1 through 4 and Item 6, request "statements, memoranda or other documentation" related to specified allegations of impropriety. Thus, all five categories of documents consist of evidence or analysis compiled by the OIG in connection with the allegations that are the subject of the investigation. The Assistant IG determined that the release of the material would prematurely reveal evidence, disclose investigative techniques and provide individuals with the opportunity to fabricate witnesses, destroy evidence, intimidate actual or potential witnesses, or otherwise impede appropriate resolution of the investigation. Thus, the categories are sufficient to "trace a rational link to the alleged likely interference." Bevis, 801 F.2d at 1390 (generic determinations of interference concerning "identities of possible witnesses and informants" and "reports on the location and viability of potential evidence").<3>

Having concluded that the Assistant IG made sufficient generic determinations of interference under Bevis, we turn to the issue of segregability. In its Appeal, MJ&A argued that the Assistant IG was required to release redacted versions of the two specifically identified documents, i.e., the case processing form and the complainant's letter. Our remand included a review of those documents for segregability.

Upon reconsideration, we have concluded that a remand on the issue of segregability is unwarranted. As an initial matter, we observe that the MJ&A argument concerning redaction is inconsistent with the category by category determination permitted by Bevis, because the MJ&A argument, if accepted, would require a line by line review of each document. Accordingly, in cases in which we uphold a determination that the release of a category of documents would interfere with an enforcement proceeding, no review of portions of individual documents for segregability is necessary. In any event, an OIG staff member has advised us that the two documents mentioned do not contain segregable material, and the nature of the documents themselves indicates that they would not contain segregable material. Accordingly, a formal remand to the Assistant IG on this issue is not warranted and, therefore, we will so modify our July 11, 1995 Decision and Order.

Having made the foregoing determinations, we emphasize that an authorizing official must clearly specify the categories of documents upon which he is making his determinations of interference. In instances such as this, where the request is limited to certain categories of documents and the authorizing official is making determinations with respect to those categories, the determination should so specify. On the other hand, if the authorizing official is making determinations with respect to a different categorization of the documents, he is required to identify the categories in his determination.

III. Conclusion

As the foregoing decision indicates, we have concluded that the OIG has provided a sufficient Exemption 7(A) determination with respect to Items 1 through 4 and Item 6 of the request. Accordingly, the remand provided for in our July 11, 1995 Decision and Order should be limited to Item 5 of the request.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The July 17, 1995 request by the DOE's Office of the Inspector General that the OHA reconsider its July 11, 1995 Decision and Order issued to Murray, Jacobs & Abel, Case No. VFA-0050, is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph 2 below.

(2) The remand provided for in Ordering Paragraph 2 of the July 11, 1995 Decision and Order is limited to Item 5 of the May 3, 1995 FOIA request submitted by Murray, Jacobs & Abel.

Case No. VFA-0063, 25 DOE ¶ 80,139

October 4, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Ikoi Kawata

Date of Filing:September 6, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0063

Ikoi Kawata filed an Appeal of a July 12, 1995 determination issued to her by the FOIA/Privacy Act Division, Office of the Executive Secretariat, of the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Director of the FOIA/Privacy Act Division denied a request for information that Ms. Kawata filed on May 1, 1995 pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. Section 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been disposed of or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

Background

Ikoi Kawata of Nagano, Japan requested access to documents containing:

1. The legal basis which makes it possible to deal or to trade the reactor's waste or the junk of radioactive contamination.
2. All cases of violation of the act.
3. All records of dealing and trading, including the data of the radioactivity of isotopes.

Letter from Ikoi Kawata to U.S. Commerce Department (May 19, 1995) ("Request Letter"). The Commerce Department routed the letter to DOE, since the request concerned an issue under DOE's purview. On July 12, 1995, the Director of the FOIA/Privacy Act Division issued a final response to Ms. Kawata's request, and informed her that no responsive documents were found. See Letter from Director, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, to Ikoi Kawata (July 12, 1995) ("Determination Letter").

Ms. Kawata then wrote to the Director of OHA, appealing the final determination. See Letter from Ikoi Kawata to Director, OHA (August 8, 1995). Along with this letter, she also submitted three pages from a Review Paper in Health Physics, but did not include the Determination Letter. Id. The Review Paper was entitled Radioactive Materials in Recycled Metals. Joel O. Lubenau & James G. Yusko, Radioactive Materials in Recycled Metals, Health Physics, Volume 68, Number 4, at 440 (April 1993) ("Lubenau Paper"). Ms. Kawata also included a one-page statement of the purpose of her search, written in Japanese.<1> We then requested that Ms. Kawata provide us with the Determination Letter, which she did on September 6, 1995. See Letter from Ikoi Kawata to Deputy Director, OHA (September 6, 1995) ("Appeal Letter").

Analysis

We have held that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we find that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g. , Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1993); David K. Hackett, 25 DOE ¶ 80,107. However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In reviewing the Appeal, we first contacted the FOIA/Privacy Act Division of the Office of the Executive Secretariat, the office which issued the final determination letter. We were informed that the FOIA/Privacy Act Division had distributed the request to the following offices within the DOE: General Counsel (OGC), Arms Control and Nonproliferation (NN), Environment, Safety and Health (EH), Nuclear Energy (NE), Civilian Radioactive Waste Management (RW), Environmental Management (EM), and Defense Programs (DP). None of the offices responded with any documents. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Jennifer Houghton, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (September 11, 1995).

The general consensus of the employees who conducted the searches was that the request was not specific and was difficult to understand-- the requester needed to describe more reasonably the type of information desired. Id. For example, in Request 1, Ms. Kawata refers to the "legal basis" for trading reactor waste and "junk of radioactive contamination." See Request Letter. Employees in Nuclear Energy were unable to determine where they should search for material concerning either of these items, and indeed, did not know what meaning to attach to "junk of radioactive contamination." See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between C. Dougherty and S. Ashbaum, NE, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (September 28, 1995). Ms. Kawata's letter mentioned an "act," but none of the employees were able to determine an act, law or statute that would be appropriate in this context. Id.; Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Harold Goldsmith, OGC, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (September 28, 1995). Although DOE manufactures isotopes and sells them to hospitals, it is not clear that this could be classified as dealing and trading in isotopes, nor could anyone determine what information she needed on the radioactivity of isotopes. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between C. Dougherty and S. Ashbaum, NE, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (September 28, 1995).

We considered the excerpt from Radioactive Materials in Recycled Metals in order to see if it could conceivably provide insight into the type of information that Ms. Kawata wants to receive.<2> The article discusses the occurrence of "inadvertent radioactive contamination," especially the occurrence of radioactive material in metal scrap. See Lubenau Paper at 440. The paper states that "[r]adioactive material appearing in metal scrap includes sources subject to licensing under the Atomic Energy Act and also naturally occurring radioactive material." Id. (emphasis added). In the event she wishes to pursue this matter, Ms. Kawata should describe what in the Lubenau Paper she finds relevant, and this may provide a starting point for any future search. However, many of the bibliographical references in the article are documents published by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC). It is possible that this agency may have documents which are responsive to a future inquiry.

Conclusion

After conversations with agency employees responsible for the search, we conclude that an adequate search was performed in light of the unclear and overly broad nature of the request. Accordingly, this Appeal should be denied.<3>

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1)The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Ikoi Kawata on September 6, 1995, Case No. VFA-0063, is hereby denied.

<1>We have not yet been able to secure a translator for this document within DOE. However, it is the request itself which is the focus of any Appeal under these regulations. We need not know the purpose of the request to properly process an Appeal.

<2>Due to the apparent difficulty at DOE in understanding the written request, we asked Ms. Kawata to provide this office with a telephone number in order to speak with her personally to determine the parameters of her request. See Letter from Deputy Director, OHA, to Ikoi Kawata (August 14, 1995). Unfortunately, she does not have access to a private telephone. See Appeal Letter.

<3>DOE employees have expressed their willingness to cooperate with Ms. Kawata and provide her more information if she can revise her request to be more specific. If the requester has difficulty expressing her request in English, which is understandable considering the technical subject matter, she should attempt to find someone to assist her in formulating a new request.

Case No. VFA-0064, 25 DOE ¶ 80,131

September 6, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: James Minter

Date of Filing: August 8, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0064

On August 8, 1995, James Minter (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on July 12, 1995 by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE/AL). In its determination, DOE/AL stated that it was unable to find any statements or reports responsive to a particular category listed by the Appellant in his April 13, 1995 request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). This Appeal, if granted, would require DOE/AL to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On April 13, 1995, the Appellant, an employee at the DOE's Oak Ridge Operations Office (DOE/OR), submitted a FOIA request to DOE/AL seeking various documents relating to an alleged assault and battery on January 26, 1994 by the Appellant upon Frank Oakes, another DOE/OR employee, which Mr. Oakes claims to have occurred while both employees were traveling on DOE business.<1>DOE/AL conducted a search for documents responsive to the Appellant's Request. On July 12, 1995, DOE/AL issued its determination, releasing responsive documents but further stating that the Transportation Safety Division (TSD) could not find any responsive statements or reports by Ray Parrett, Chief of the TSD at DOE/OR. On August 8, 1995, the Appellant filed the present Appeal in which he contends that DOE/AL's search for statements or reports by Mr. Parrett was inadequate.<2>In the course of this Appeal, the Appellant stated that he believes Mr. Parrett took handwritten notes during a meeting the Appellant had with Mr. Parrett soon after the incident. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren, OHA Staff Attorney, and the Appellant (August 29, 1995).<3>

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

We contacted DOE/AL to determine the extent of the search which had been performed. Eva Brownlow, Chief of Standards and Policy Application of the TSD at DOE/AL, coordinated the search. Ms. Brownlow informed us that as a result of the alleged assault and battery, DOE/AL took a disciplinary action against the Appellant. The entire contents of the file relating to the disciplinary action were turned over to the Appellant in the original determination. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren and Eva Brownlow (August 17, 1995). No handwritten notes by Mr. Parrett were found in the disciplinary file. In response to discussions DOE/AL had with the Appellant after this Appeal was filed, DOE/AL examined a trip report file which was compiled after the incident and located separately from the disciplinary action file, but similarly found no handwritten notes of Mr. Parrett. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren and Christina Lujan-Bonds, Standards and Policy Application, TSD, DOE/AL (August 29, 1995).

Although we find that, overall, DOE/AL had conducted a reasonable search calculated to find relevant documents, it appeared that DOE/AL had not yet attempted to ask Mr. Parrett if he remembered taking any such notes, and if so, where these notes would be located. Id. Ms. Lujan-Bonds then spoke with Mr. Parrett, and upon discovering that he had taken notes during the meeting in question, realized that the notes could be located in a certain, though as yet unsearched, place. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren and Christina Lujan-Bonds (August 31, 1995). Consequently, in light of the fact that DOE/AL is currently in the process of continuing to search for responsive documents, we shall remand this case to DOE/AL. On remand, DOE/AL shall identify all documents responsive to the Appellant's request for statements and reports of Mr. Parrett, and either release them or provide adequate justification for withholding any portion of them.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by James Minter on August 8, 1995, Case Number VFA-0064, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to Albuquerque Operations Office, which shall conduct a search for additional documents responsive to the Appellant's request as described in the above Decision and Order, and shall promptly issue a new determination regarding those documents.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>Mr. Oakes has now brought a personal injury suit against the Appellant in a Tennessee state court.

<2>Appellant notes in his Appeal that he needs this information to support his defense in Mr. Oakes' lawsuit. However, a FOIA requester's basic right of access is "neither increased nor decreased" by virtue of having a greater interest in the records than that of an average member of the general public. NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 143 n. 10 (1975). Thus, the Appellant's "need" for this document has no bearing under the FOIA on the primary issue in this case, whether DOE/AL conducted a reasonable search for the requested documents.

<3>In that conversation, the Appellant requested access to a joint statement of himself and Mr. Oakes that he believes should have been included with the trip report filed after the incident, as well as any handwritten notes taken by a Mr. Marshall Cross during a meeting between Mr. Cross and the Appellant. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren and the Appellant (August 29, 1995). We find that because each of these requests is outside of the scope of either the initial FOIA request or the present Appeal, the OHA will not consider them. Cox Newspapers, 22 DOE ¶ 80,106 at 80,512 (1992). The Appellant did not ask for Mr. Cross' notes in his original request and appealed only the adequacy of the search for Mr. Parrett's notes. If the Appellant now wishes to obtain information of a broader nature than that which he originally requested, he should file a new request for information.

September 8, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Klickitat Energy Partners

Date of filing: August 10, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0065

On August 10, 1995, Klickitat Energy Partners (KEP), through Richard Oehler, Esq. at Perkins Coie Law Firm, filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on July 10, 1995 by the Freedom of Information Act Officer at the DOE Bonneville Power Administration (BPA). In that determination, BPA partially denied a request for information which KEP had filed pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, KEP requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) order the release of the withheld information.

I. Background

On June 7, 1995, KEP filed a FOIA request for the following information:

1. Any and all documents within BPA's possession and control that concern, refer, mention or relate to Contract No. DE-MS79-93BP93940 between KEP and BPA.
2. Any and all documents within BPA's possession and control that concern, refer, mention or relate to BPA's execution of a consent for the lender on the Tenaska Contract No. DE-MS79-94BP94492 project and, in addition, a copy of the contract (including modifications) between BPA and Tenaska.

In its July 10, 1995 determination, BPA identified 22 responsive documents. Of these documents, 15 were withheld in their entirety and 7 were partially released pursuant to Exemption 5 of the FOIA. Exemption 5 protects from disclosure "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5). BPA also determined that, given the nature of the withheld material, disclosure would not be in the public interest. Determination letter at 5. In its Appeal, KEP argues that (1) BPA's search for responsive documents was inadequate, and (2) BPA has failed to adequately justify its use of Exemption 5.

II. Adequacy of the Search

The Office of Hearings and Appeals has stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. In fact, the office has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g. James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991); Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1988). However, the FOIA requires only that the search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985)

(Miller); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d at 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

KEP argues that BPA's search for responsive documents was inadequate because BPA neither produced nor identified large quantities of contracting documents that should exist. For example, KEP notes that there should be documents relating to the Request for Proposals which resulted in the award of the BPA contract to KEP as well as documents discussing the rationale for award of the contract to KEP. KEP argues that these documents have not been provided, nor have they been listed as withheld. Appeal letter at 5. We contacted BPA for an explanation of the steps taken to locate the requested information. We were informed that BPA retains its contracts in its files, but predecisional documents such as comments are not retained and are kept only by their authors. We were informed that KEP's request for "documents that concern or relate to the BPA/KEP contract" was taken literally. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Roxanne Freeman, BPA and Kimberly Parker, OHA (August 22, 1995). BPA indicated it conducted a search for documents related to the contract negotiation process by contacting the lead negotiator and others who worked on that contract. Id. Based on this information and the number of documents identified as relevant, we find that BPA's search for responsive documents was reasonable. Oglesby v. United States Dep't of the Army, 920 F. 2d at 67 n.13 (D.C. Cir. 1990).

III. Adequacy of the Determination

KEP argues that the descriptions of some of the items in the index are not sufficient to determine whether the claimed exemption applies. For example, KEP argues that items 5 and 11 which were withheld under the attorney-client privilege, do not identify the attorney or the client. We have consistently held that the FOIA requires the authorizing official to give reasonably informative descriptions of the documents or portions of documents being withheld that are sufficient to allow the requester to understand the determination and if appropriate to formulate a meaningful appeal. See, e.g. , Arnold & Porter, 12 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,527 (1984); Exxon Co., USA, 5 DOE ¶ 80,178 at 80,813 (1980); Cities Service Co., 5 DOE ¶ 80,101 at 80,502 (1980). Descriptions are generally adequate if each document is identified by a brief description of the subject matter it discusses and "if available, the date each document was produced [and] its authors and recipients. . . ." Petroleum Delivery Service, 5 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1980). We have indicated that the "brief description" requirement is generally satisfied if sufficiently informative titles of the withheld documents are provided and that the index need not contain factual information which would compromise the privileged nature of the documents. P.A. Barnes, 5 DOE ¶ 80,112 at 80,538 (1980); Akin Gump, Hauer & Feld, 3 DOE ¶ 80,155 at 90,765 (1979).<1>

BPA provided a list of 22 items that were determined to be responsive to KEP's request. The list was divided into two parts: 1) 15 items withheld in their entirety and 2) 7 items withheld in part. BPA gave a brief description of each item and stated the asserted Exemption 5 privilege in parentheses at the end of each description. At the end of the list, BPA gave a generalized explanation for withholding items 1-3, 9, 12-16 and 19-22 under either the attorney-client privilege or the attorney work-product privilege. The same was done for those items withheld under the deliberative process privilege. We find that in general this is an acceptable method for justifying the withholding of documents as long as the documents are adequately described.

After examining the description of each withheld document in the index, we find that BPA did not adequately describe the 22 documents. None of the 22 items contained a brief description of the referenced document or a sufficiently descriptive title of that document. For example, most of the 15 documents withheld in their entirety were electronic mail messages. The descriptions indicate their date and the fact that they are electronic mail messages, but do not indicate the subject matter discussed in the messages.<2> This prevents the requester from determining whether the claimed exemption reasonably applies. See, e.g. James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,164 (1992). Therefore, we shall remand this determination to BPA for more informative descriptions of the withheld documents. Colorado River Commission of Nevada, 23 DOE ¶ 80,138 at 80,592 (1993).

KEP also argues that BPA has provided inadequate justification for withholding the documents under the claimed exemptions. Appeal letter at 2. We find that given a new determination with more informative descriptions consistent with this Decision, BPA's rationale for withholding certain documents will become apparent under their current method of justification. We have held that a determination must adequately justify the withholding of documents. This justification must make clear why the authorizing official has determined that a particular exemption applies. Arnold & Porter, 12 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,529 (1984). For example, for the application of the deliberative process privilege, the determination must identify the deliberative process at issue and show that a particular withheld document is predecisional and deliberative. BPA should also explain how release of the material might interfere with the deliberative process. Similarly, for the application of the attorney work-product privilege, the determination must indicate that a document was prepared by an attorney in contemplation of litigation. For the application of the attorney client privilege, the determination must indicate that a particular withheld document reflects confidential communications between an attorney and a client relating to a legal matter for which the client sought professional advice.

IV. Segregability

Even if documents meet these criteria, however, that does not mean that they may be withheld in their entirety. The FOIA, as implemented by 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(c), requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). See The Oak Ridger, 21 DOE ¶ 80,120 at 80,564-65 (1991) (and cases cited therein); Boulder Scientific Co., 19 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,577 (1989) (and cases cited therein). In the context of the "predecisional" privilege of Exemption 5, this means that non-deliberative material ordinarily should be released to the requester. Environmental Protection Agency v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87-91 (1972). The only exceptions are where exempt and non-exempt material are so "inextricably intertwined" that release of the non-exempt material would compromise the exempt material, or where non-exempt material is so small and interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate it. Lead Industries Assoc., Inc. v. Occupational Safety and Health Admin., 610 F.2d 70, 85 (2d Cir. 1979). For example, documents that are solely factual or contain passages of factual material that are easily segregable from policy discussion or legal recommendations are generally not covered by Exemption 5. Bracewell & Patterson, 9 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1981). However, factual material contained in a predecisional, deliberative document may be withheld if its disclosure would expose the agency's deliberative process. Mead Data, 566 F. 2d at 256.

There is some indication in this case that BPA considered whether the withheld documents contained non-exempt, segregable material. BPA states in the Appendix to its determination that none of the withheld documents simply recite facts and items 1-15 do not contain any reasonably segregable, non-exempt material. Determination letter at 3. Our review of the documents reveals, however, that some withheld documents contain factual information that may in fact be segregable. For example, item 4, "generation supply gap analysis document entitled 'Termination Net Costs'" appears to be a chart that contains raw data or other, simply factual information. Unless BPA can explain why these numbers are deliberative and not merely factual, the factual portion of that document should be released. The electronic mail messages may also be segregable since they contain factual information such as the date and time of the message, the subject matter discussed and phrases such as, "Your buddy called today." This is factual information that does not appear to be deliberative or subject to any of the other Exemption 5 privileges. Therefore, we find that this information should be released unless BPA can explain how it may compromise any exempt material or pose an inordinate burden to separate it from the exempt material. Since this matter is being remanded for a new determination, BPA should review those documents again to insure that they do not contain any segregable, non-exempt information.

V. Conclusion

As discussed above, we have concluded that 1) BPA's search for responsive documents was reasonable, 2) BPA failed to provide an adequate description of the documents withheld, and 3) the justifications provided by BPA for withholding information pursuant to Exemption 5 are generally inadequate.

Accordingly, we shall remand the determination to BPA and order them to either release the withheld documents or issue a new determination that sufficiently describes each responsive document, correlates each portion of the material withheld with a specific exemption and adequately explains the reasons which justify withholding the material. See SHAD Alliance, 9 DOE ¶ 80,169 (1982).

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Klickitat Energy Partners, Inc. on August 10, 1995 is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration who shall review the 22 documents withheld either in their entirety or in part and either release all portions of the documents withheld under Exemption 5 of the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), or provide an adequate explanation of the reasons which justify withholding the material.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

<1>For example, if the title of a document withheld pursuant to Exemption 5 was "The Advisability of Suing Company XYZ for Breach of its Contract," and the agency believed that release of the fact that it was considering legal action could interfere with the deliberative process, the title could be withheld and the document described as "An evaluation of XYZ's default." Similarly, the name of a document's author might be withheld if release would constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy under Exemption 6.

<2>For example, the following items are not sufficiently descriptive because they do not refer to the deliberative process at issue or the subject matter of the message:

6. 9/13/94 E-mail to Judi Johansen from Paula Fowler and reply to Fowler from Johansen (deliberative).

7. 8/1/94 E-mail to Judi Johansen from Roxane Freeman and reply to Freeman from Johansen (deliberative).

Case No. VFA-0066, 25 DOE ¶ 80,135

September 15, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: State of Michigan

Date of Filing: August 17, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0066

On August 17, 1995, James F. Flug on behalf of his client the State of Michigan filed an Appeal from a Determination issued to the State of Michigan on July 10, 1995, by the FOIA and Privacy Act Division (FOIA Division) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that Determination the FOIA Division provided the State of Michigan with two documents responsive to its request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the FOIA Division to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On March 4, 1994, the State of Michigan filed a request for (1) the identities of those who worked on DOE matters in the course of the 1992-93 Presidential transition process (Transition), (2) documents relating to contacts between the Transition members and Cities Service Oil and Gas Corporation (Cities), and (3) documents concerning the Cities enforcement action that were either prepared for or provided to the Transition members. The FOIA Division coordinated a department-wide search for documents responsive to the Appellant's request. On July 10, 1995, the FOIA Division issued its Determination which released two documents responsive to the Appellant's search. On August 17, 1995, the Appellant filed the present Appeal in which it contends that the FOIA Division's search for responsive documents was inadequate.<1>

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require an absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985) (Miller). We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Barton Kaplan, 22 DOE ¶ 80,125 (1992); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). However, in previous cases we have held that challenges to the adequacy of the agency's search must be supported by the presentation of some reasoned argument that a requested document, unidentified by the agency in its search, does in fact exist. See Mark S. Boggs, 22 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1992) (Boggs); Sun Co. Inc., 11 DOE ¶ 80,114 (1983); Vinson & Elkins, 4 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1979).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted Joan Ogbazghi, FOIA Officer, FOIA Division, to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any more documents responsive to the Appellant's request might exist. Ms. Ogbazghi informed us that searches had been conducted of the files of the Offices of the Executive Secretariat, Personnel, Administrative Services, General Counsel (including the Economic Regulatory Administration), and the Chief Financial Officer and that all of the responsive information found had been released to the Appellant. In addition to coordinating the search of the offices named above, Ms. Ogbazghi contacted certain DOE employees, identified by the Appellant, who appeared to have worked with the Transition. None of these individuals could provide responsive information. Further, in response to our inquiries regarding the Determination, Ms. Ogbazghi contacted the Office of Security Affairs and the Office of Administrative Services to inquire whether any responsive information existed concerning the identity of any Transition members or the Cities enforcement action. Ms. Ogbazghi was unable to locate any responsive records in either of these offices.

Based on the information before us, we conclude that the FOIA Division's search for responsive documents was adequate and was reasonably calculated to uncover the documents sought by the Appellant. See Miller, 779 F.2d at 1384-1385; Richard J. Levernier, 25 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1995). As set forth above, that search encompassed seven offices. The Appellant's only argument that more documents exist is that the Transition members ought to have produced some written work product and that work product must exist within the DOE. As stated above, mere inference is insufficient to warrant our directing a new search. We need a reasoned argument that additional documents exist. See Boggs, 22 DOE at 80,504. We are thus unpersuaded by the Appellant's speculative argument. Accordingly this Appeal will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the State of Michigan on August 17, 1995, Case No. VFA-0066, is hereby denied.

George B. Breznay

Director

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: September 15, 1995

<1>In addition to appealing the adequacy of the search for responsive documents, the Appellant requests OHA to provide the Appellant with a copy of all communications concerning the FOIA Division's July 10 FOIA Determination and to provide the Appellant with information which would show that although responsive documents exist, they were either relinquished by DOE to some other entity or retained by some other entity in privity with the DOE. It is well established that OHA does not permit FOIA appellants to broaden their requests for information in an appeal. See Cox Newspapers, 22 DOE ¶ 80,106 at 80,512 (1992); Bernard Hanft, 21 DOE ¶ 80,134 at 80,610 (1991). Since the Appellant now seeks to obtain information of a broader nature than that which it initially requested, the Appellant should file a new request for that information.

September 18, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: James W. Simpkin

Date of Filing: August 18, 1995

Case Numbers: VFA-0067

On August 18, 1995, James W. Simpkin (Simpkin) filed a joint Appeal from two determinations issued to him on July 20, 1995, by the Albuquerque Operations Office (AL) of the Department of Energy (DOE). The determinations were issued in response to requests for information submitted by Simpkin under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In those determinations, AL indicated that it had released all documents in its possession that were responsive to the requests for information filed by Simpkin on February 4, 1995 and February 11, 1995. The Appeal, if granted, would require AL to conduct additional searches for responsive documents.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been destroyed or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

I. Background

On February 4, 1995, Simpkin filed a request in which he sought "any and all videotapes and audiotape recordings . . . of the January 27, 1995 meeting . . . on the subject of the Personnel Assurance Program." He also sought documents developed in preparation for that meeting. On July 20, 1995, AL issued a determination enclosing a videotape that was made of the January 27, 1995 meeting. However, with respect to the second portion of Simpkin's request, AL stated that no responsive documents exist.

On February 11, 1995, Simpkin filed a second request in which he sought the following documents: 1) documents developed by Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co., Inc., or the DOE and related to FOIA requests made by Simpkin and 2) "documents developed in preparation for . . . a meeting held to discuss the response to FOIA requests made by James W. Simpkin." On July 20, 1995, AL issued a second determination in which it stated that it was providing documents responsive to item

1. However, in response to item 2, AL stated that no documents exist that are responsive to Simpkin's request.

On August 18, 1995, Simpkin filed two separate Appeals with the Office of Hearings and Appeals. In his first Appeal, relating to his February 4 request, Simpkin states that the videotape provided to him was defective. He asks that he receive a clean copy of this videotape. In his second Appeal, relating to his February 11 request, Simpkin states that he received an anonymous letter transferring a copy of an E-mail message relating to Simpkin's request. In addition, he states that an anonymous person called him and reported that there were numerous E-mail messages dealing with his request. On that basis, Simpkin asks that the OHA direct AL to conduct a new search for responsive documents.

II. Analysis

The OHA has consistently stated that a FOIA request warrants a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W.R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have remanded cases where it is evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., Cowles Publishing Co., 16 DOE ¶ 80,136 (1987); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80, 108 (1981). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In reviewing this joint Appeal, we first contacted AL to ascertain the extent of the searches that had been performed in response to Simpkin's requests. With respect to Simpkin's February 4 request, that Office informed us that it contacted the Amarillo Area Office of the DOE which agreed to obtain a clean copy of the videotape requested by Simpkin. The Office further indicated that it would provide a new copy of the videotape directly to the requester. Because AL has agreed to send Simpkin a new copy, there is no need to consider this issue on Appeal.

With respect to Simpkin's Appeal of his February 11 request, we find that the search conducted at the direction of AL was inadequate. AL has informed us that it directed the Amarillo Area Office of the DOE to conduct a search for responsive documents. The Amarillo Area Office in turn directed the M&O contractor of the Pantex Plant, Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Company, to search its records for responsive documents. This search was performed by the legal department at Pantex, which coordinated a plant-wide search for responsive documents. However, the Pantex legal department did not locate the E-mail message discovered by Simpkin when the final response was prepared. As a result of this Appeal, the Pantex legal department has conducted a new search and has located the E-mail message Simpkin referred to in his appeal. Since Pantex's first search did not locate all documents responsive to Simpkin's request, we believe a new, more thorough search should be conducted at Pantex.

In addition, it is unclear whether a thorough search was conducted within DOE for documents responsive to item 1 of Simpkin's February 11 request. It is also possible that new searches at DOE and at Pantex may now locate documents responsive to item 2 of Simpkin's February 11 request. Accordingly, Simpkin's Appeal should be granted and this matter remanded to AL to coordinate a new search for documents responsive to both portions of Simpkin's February 11 request. Of course, this search should encompass E-mail files as well as paper files.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by James W. Simpkin on August 18, 1995, OHA Case No. VFA-0067, is hereby dismissed.

(2) The Appeal filed by James W. Simpkin on August 18, 1995, OHA Case No. VFA-0068, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (3) below.

(3) This matter is remanded to the Albuquerque Operations Office of the Department of Energy which shall coordinate a new search for responsive documents.

Case No. VFA-0069, 25 DOE ¶ 80,134

September 15, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Jeffrey R. Leist

Date of Filing:August 18, 1995

Case Number:VFA-0069

On August 18, 1995, Jeffrey R. Leist filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on July 27, 1995, by the Manager of the Ohio Field Office (OFO) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Manager partially denied a request for information filed by Mr. Leist on May 24, 1995, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA will nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his request for information, Mr. Leist sought copies of several documents concerning Fernald Environmental Restoration Management Company (FERMCO) employees who were granted or who applied for Voluntary Reduction in Force (VRIF) benefits in 1995. On July 11, 1995 the Manager of the OFO provided Mr. Leist copies of several documents as a partial response to Mr. Leist's request. In the July 27, 1995 determination letter, the Manager provided a complete response to Mr. Leist's May 24, 1995 request. Specifically, the Manager enclosed with his letter documents responsive to Mr. Leist's request, but he redacted all personal identifying information in accordance with Exemption 6 of the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6).

In his Appeal, Mr. Leist requests a copy of the employees' names that were redacted in the Manager's July 27, 1995 response. Mr. Leist argues that he has "the right to at least know the names of those involved" and "that this information should be considered public knowledge." Finally, Mr. Leist states that he has the "right" to see his name on a list to confirm that FERMCO has included him as one who was formally denied the VRIF.

II. Analysis

Initially, we note that a representative of the OFO has informed us that Mr. Leist's name was accidentally redacted from a document he received in the Manager's July 27, 1995 response.<1> Accordingly, we will direct the OFO to send to Mr. Leist a corrected copy without a redaction of his name in the April 6, 1995 document entitled "Employees Volunteering for VRIF." However, we must still consider the releasability of all of the remaining redacted names.

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post). Furthermore, the term "similar files" has been interpreted broadly by the Supreme Court to include all information that "applies to a particular individual." Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 602. Pursuant to the established legal precedent, there is no doubt that the names of individuals redacted in this case qualify as "similar files" under Exemption 6.

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C.Cir. 1984) (Ripskis). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 773 (1989) (Reporters Comm.). See also Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 (1994). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

A. Privacy Interest

The Supreme Court has long found a privacy interest in the names and addresses of individuals significant enough to warrant protection from disclosure pursuant to Exemption 6. Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 375 (1976). Moreover, at least seven Circuit Courts have found that an individual has a significant privacy interest in avoiding the unlimited disclosure of his or her name. See, e.g., Hopkins v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991); Painting and Drywall Work Preservation Fund v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 936 F.2d 1300, 1303 (D.C.Cir. 1991); Halloran v. Veterans Admin., 874 F.2d 315, 324 (5th Cir. 1989); Department of Agric. v. FLRA, 836 F.2d 1139, 1143 (8th Cir. 1988); Minnis v. Department of Agric. 737 F.2d 784, 787 (9th Cir. 1984); Heights Community Congress v. Veterans Admin., 732 F.2d 526, 529 (6th Cir. 1984); American Fed'n of Gov't Employees v. United States, 712 F.2d 931, 932 (4th Cir. 1983). In light of the overwhelming weight of authority, we find that disclosure of the names of the individuals who were granted or who applied for VRIF benefits in 1995 would result in a substantial invasion of personal privacy.

B. Public Interest in Disclosure

The Supreme Court has held that there is a public interest in disclosure of information that "sheds light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties." Reporters Comm., 489 U.S. at 773. The burden of establishing that disclosure would serve the public interest is on the requester. Carter v. Department of Commerce, 830 F.2d 388 (D.C. Cir. 1987). While Mr. Leist argues that he has "rights" which dictate that the DOE provide the names of others to him, we do not agree. Mr. Leist has simply not demonstrated and we do not find any public interest in the disclosure of the requested information. We fail to see how release of the names would aid the public in understanding anything about the workings of the government. In view of the fact that there is no apparent public interest to balance against the significant potential invasion of personal privacy, we find that the Manager properly withheld the names of employees other than Mr. Leist from disclosure. Accordingly, we must deny Mr. Leist's Appeal with respect to the other redacted names.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Jeffrey R. Leist on August 18, 1995, Case Number VFA-0069, is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) The Manager of the Ohio Field Office is directed to send to Mr. Jeffrey Leist a corrected copy, without a redaction of his name, of the April 6, 1995 document entitled "Employees Volunteering for VRIF".

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0071, 25 DOE ¶ 80,133

September 12, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Jeffrey R. Leist

Date of Filing: August 24, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0071

On August 24, 1995, Jeffrey R. Leist filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on August 9, 1995, by the Manager of the Ohio Field Office (OFO) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Manager partially denied a request for information filed by Mr. Leist on July 10, 1995, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA will nonetheless be released to the public, unless the DOE determines that disclosure is contrary to federal law or the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

In his request for information, Mr. Leist sought copies of several documents. In his determination, the Manager released copies of some of these documents, but could not locate various letters including a copy of a letter Mr. Leist alleges was sent to him during the first week of March 1995 from the Fernald Environmental Restoration Management Company (FERMCO) HR Department, which acknowledged FERMCO's receipt of Mr. Leist's Voluntary Reduction in Force application. In his Appeal, Mr. Leist requests a copy of this FERMCO letter.

We have confirmed the existence of the letter requested by Mr. Leist in his Appeal. Specifically, a representative of the OFO informed us that after a more thorough search of Mr. Leist's records, the OFO found the letter responsive to Mr. Leist's request. See memorandum of September 6, 1995 telephone conversation between Leonard M. Tao, Office of Hearings and Appeals, and Jane Greenwalt, OFO FOIA representative. We will therefore remand the case to OFO for a determination regarding the releasability of this letter.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Jeffrey R. Leist on August 24, 1995 is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Manager of the Ohio Field Office of the Department of Energy who will promptly either release a copy of the letter sent to Jeffrey R. Leist from the Fernald Environmental Restoration Management Company HR Department during the first week of March 1995 acknowledging Mr. Leist's Voluntary Reduction in Force application, or provide a detailed explanation as to why the information is exempt from public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Cohen & Cotton, P.C.

Date of Filing:September 1, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0073

Cohen & Cotton, P.C. ("C&C") filed an Appeal of a July 28, 1995 determination issued to it by the Western Area Power Administration ("WAPA") of the Department of Energy ("DOE"). In that determination, the Administrator of WAPA provided C&C a redacted copy of an internal memorandum which C&C had asked for in a request for information filed on October 21, 1994 pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA"), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. §1004.10(b).

Background

C&C represents Nevada Pacific Mining Company, Inc. ("Nevada Pacific") which owns a mining claim (the "P&LM claim") allegedly encroached upon by the Mead-Phoenix 500 kV Transmission Line ("Mead-Phoenix Line")<1> . See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney, and FOIA Information Officer, WAPA (September 20, 1995). However, the encroachment claim appears unfounded. The Bureau of Land Management ("BLM") of the U.S. Department of the Interior conducted its own survey<2> of the area in dispute and determined that the subject claim lies north of the Mead-Phoenix Line construction. See Letter from Area Manager, BLM, to WAPA (November 3, 1994). BLM thereupon gave WAPA permission to proceed with construction of the line. Id.

C&C requested access to ten categories of public records concerning the circumstances surrounding the creation and operation of the Mead-Phoenix Line. See Letter from C&C to FOIA Officer, WAPA (October 21, 1994). C&C also requested information on any responsive documents that had been destroyed, and the circumstances of their destruction. Id. WAPA advised C&C that, due to the large volume of records involved, substantial time was required to perform a thorough search. On January 13, 1995, WAPA released an index of records located in its Western Headquarters, and it was still reviewing an index of records located at its Phoenix office. See Letter from Assistant Administrator for Management, WAPA, to C&C (January 13, 1995).

On May 31, 1995, WAPA released several documents to C&C. It withheld, under Exemption 5 of the FOIA, a WAPA internal memorandum entitled "Mead-Phoenix 500-kV Project and Mining Claim Potential Conflicts" dated June 24, 1994. See Letter from Administrator, WAPA, to C&C (May 31, 1995).

C&C requested that WAPA provide additional information regarding its withholding of the memorandum, pursuant to 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7. See Letter from C&C to Freedom of Information Act Officer, WAPA (July 13, 1995). WAPA then explained that the memo "contains opinions of its author and was, and still is, being used in the agency evaluation process." See Letter from Administrator, WAPA, to C&C (July 28, 1995). According to WAPA, release of the redacted material would inhibit employees from making open and honest recommendations in the future. Id. However, information concerning the location of some claims was determined to be factual and was released. Id. On September 1, 1995, C&C filed this Appeal which requests release of the entire memo. See Letter from C&C to Director, OHA (September 1, 1995) ("Appeal Letter").

Analysis

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears) (footnote omitted). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States).

The "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5 permits the government to withhold documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government decisions and policies are formulated. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. This privilege of Exemption 5 was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making governmental decisions. See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939, 946 (Ct. Cl. 1958) (Mink). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 15.

In order to be shielded by Exemption 5, a document must be both predecisional, i.e., generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e., reflecting the give-and-take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id. Even then, however, the exemption only covers the subjective, deliberative portion of the document. Mink, 410 U.S. at 87-91. Factual information contained in the protected document must be disclosed unless the factual material is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material. Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1077 (D.C. Cir. 1971).

The Memorandum of June 24, 1994

In an internal memorandum entitled "Mead-Phoenix 500kV Project and Mining Claim Potential Conflicts," a WAPA employee in the Division of Land documented his activities during a "mining claim location"<3> in Arizona. The purpose of the "location" was to determine the status of the Nevada Pacific mining claims (the Lee claims and the P&LM claim) allegedly located in the area of the Mead-Phoenix Line. See Memorandum from Michael Thompson to Director, Division of Land, WAPA (June 24, 1994) ("WAPA Memorandum"). WAPA used mining claim notices to locate the mining claims, and noted that the P&LM claim notice was not as specific as the Lee notice in its location description. Id. The P&LM claim was located based on a lath<4> in the ground that BLM later declared inappropriately located. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Michael Thompson, WAPA, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (September 27, 1995); Letter from Area Manager, BLM, to C&C (September 14, 1995.) After the WAPA Memorandum was written, a map filed in 1979 by a previous P&LM claimant was discovered, and labelled "essentially correct" by BLM. See Letter from Area Manager, BLM, to C&C (November 3, 1994). Therefore, the location of the P&LM claim in the WAPA memorandum, determined without the assistance of the 1979 map, is inaccurate. In response to C&C's request, WAPA released much of this memorandum, including a description of the location of the Lee claims, but withheld from disclosure two portions of the memorandum--the description of the location of the P&LM claim and a section entitled "Options."

The Foreseeable Harm Standard Applied to the Deliberative Process Privilege

WAPA provided this office with an unredacted copy of the WAPA Memorandum, an intra-agency advisory document being used by WAPA to evaluate the potential conflicts between Nevada Pacific's mining claims and the Mead-Phoenix Line. After a review of the entire, unredacted document, we conclude that the "Options" portion of the memorandum contains opinions and recommendations of an agency employee which, if released to the public, would inhibit the frank and independent discussion which defines the deliberative process. See U.S. Solar Roof, 25 DOE ¶ 80,112 (1995). This deliberative information was properly withheld.

However, the portion of the memorandum concerning the P&LM claim location which was withheld consists of factual information which is not protected from disclosure by Exemption 5 of the FOIA. Even though WAPA considered the material deliberative and protected by Exemption 5, under the new foreseeable harm standard imposed by the Attorney General, in order to withhold the material a FOIA officer must determine that disclosure of the information in question would foreseeably harm the basic institutional interests that underlie the deliberative process privilege. See FOIA Update, U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Information and Privacy (Spring 1994); Memorandum from Janet Reno, Attorney General, to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993).

In reaching the conclusion that the material is not protected by Exemption 5, we have carefully considered WAPA's decision to disclose the Lee claim location information. That information was released because it is factual. The P&LM claim location material in the memorandum is similar to the Lee material--it is factual, albeit inaccurate, and it should also be released. The correct location of the P&LM claim, based on the best currently available information, is established by BLM in its September 1995 survey, and is available to the public. We find that inaccuracy of the P&LM information does not make it deliberative in nature or exempt it from disclosure under Exemption 5.<5> Accordingly, WAPA should release this information or issue a new determination that adequately supports withholding this information under a different rationale.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Cohen & Cotton, P.C. on September 1, 1995, Case No. VFA-0073, is granted in part as specified in Paragraph (2). The remainder of the Appeal is denied.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to WAPA, which shall either release the following portions of the WAPA Memorandum dated June 24, 1994: or issue a new determination adequately justifying continued non-disclosure of this information..

(a) Paragraph 1 of Page 2; and

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. Section 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

<1>The Mead-Phoenix 500kV Transmission Line is a transmission access line that connects the Southwest and Southern California. Hydropower is generated in the Southwest and marketed to entities with "preferred status" (e.g., utilities, electricity cooperatives) that purchase the electricity and sell it to the end user. The line enables power to be directed to the geographic location that needs it the most at any particular time. The Mead-Phoenix Line was scheduled to open on January 1, 1996, but is not yet completed. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Ron Klinefelter, WAPA, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (September 22, 1995).

<2>Inconsistencies in the maps submitted by Nevada Pacific to BLM in conjunction with a required mining plan of operations caused BLM to review existing claim location documents and conduct its own field investigation. See Letter from Area Manager, BLM, to C&C (December 1, 1994). Thus, BLM has advised that until Nevada Pacific files a mineral survey specifying a more precise location of the mining claim, the BLM survey completed in September 1995 is the most accurate representation of the location of the claim. See Letter from Area Manager, BLM, to C&C (September 14, 1995).

<3>A "mining claim location" is not as accurate or extensive as a mining claim survey. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Michael Thompson, WAPA, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (September 27, 1995).

<4>A lath is a small piece of wood placed in the ground to mark a specific location.

<5>In addition, we find that the sentence on page 2 of the WAPA Memorandum beginning with "Occupancy..." should also be released. This information is also factual.

October 24, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Kenneth H. Besecker

Date of Filing:September 7, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0075

On September 7, 1995, Kenneth H. Besecker of Martinez, Georgia filed an Appeal from a determination issued on August 4, 1995, by the Director of the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity (Director) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part Mr. Besecker's request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by federal agencies, and which have not been made public in an authorized fashion by a covered branch of the federal government, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9). See also 10 C.F.R. § 1004. 10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents which may be exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.<1>

I. Background

In his FOIA request, Mr. Besecker asked for "information concerning complaints of discrimination filed by Mr. Larry Brown, Sr., Ms. Rita Freeman, and Mr. Morris James." The Director responded on August 4, 1995. In her determination letter, she identified nine groups of documents responsive to Mr. Besecker's request. A considerable amount of material was released to Mr. Besecker. However, several documents were withheld in part pursuant to Exemptions 5 and 6 of the FOIA. Mr. Besecker appeals two items. First, he claims he has not received the groups of documents denominated Enclosures 7, 8, and 9. Second, he appeals the withholding of certain handwritten information from Document 53 of Enclosure 4. Enclosure 4 is the Complaint File in Case No. 92(18)SR. Document 53 is an Investigative Review Form consisting of three pages. The first page is a checklist of procedural and substantive matters. The last two pages contain handwritten evaluations of an investigator's report written by another investigator for use by his supervisor. Each of these pages contains one paragraph of investigator evaluation. This handwritten material was withheld under Exemption 5 and is the subject of this Decision and Order.<2>

II. Analysis

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents which are "[i]nter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this section exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." National Labor Relations Bd. v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975). Among these privileges is the "executive" or "deliberative process" privilege. This is the privilege that the Director relied upon in withholding information in this case under Exemption 5.

The "executive" privilege shields from mandatory disclosure documents, advisory in nature, which are created during agency consideration of proposed action, and which are part of the decision-making process. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 866 (D.C. Cir. 1980). Thus, application of the privilege "under (b)(5) depends not only on the intrinsic character of the document itself, but also on the role it played in the administrative process." Lead Industries Assoc., Inc. v. Occupational Safety and Health Admin., 610 F.2d 70, 80 (2d Cir. 1979) (Lead Industries).

As a result, to withhold an intra- or inter-agency document under the "executive" privilege of Exemption 5, it must be both predecisional, i.e., "antecedent to the adoption of agency policy," and deliberative, i.e., "it must actually be related to the process by which policies are formulated." Jordan v. Department of Justice, 591 F.2d 753, 773 (D.C. Cir. 1978). See also Assembly of California v. Department of Commerce, 968 F.2d 916, 920-21 (9th Cir. 1992); Formaldehyde Inst. v. Department of Health and Human Services, 889 F.2d 1118, 1122 (D.C. Cir. 1989). That is to say, a document must not only be prepared as part of agency consideration of some matter, it must also "bear on the formulation or exercise of policy-oriented judgment." Ethyl Corp. v. Environmental Protection Agency, 25 F.3d 1241, 1248 (4th Cir. 1994). See also Petroleum Info. Corp. v. Department of Interior, 976 F.2d 1429, 1435 (D.C. Cir. 1992); Playboy Enterprises v. Department of Justice, 677 F.2d 931, 935 (D.C. Cir. 1982).

In this case, the withheld portions of the document consist of two paragraphs of handwritten notes by a DOE investigator. The notes evaluate another investigator's report and assess the suitability of the report for further action. These opinions and recommendations were prepared for and transmitted to the reviewing investigator's supervisor for her use. Under these circumstances, it is clear that the handwritten material was properly withheld by the Director under Exemption 5.

We have previously held that material prepared by investigators evaluating processes and reports in EEO files may be properly withheld under the deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5. See William D. Lawrence, 24 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,599 n.3 (1994); Kenneth H. Besecker, 23 DOE ¶ 80,158 at 80,641 (1993). Such evaluations written by an investigator for the use of his supervisor in making a decision are clearly predecisional. Further, we find that this material is "deliberative" within the meaning of the "executive" privilege. The handwritten material only reflects the individual investigator's opinion and does not constitute the reason for any action that was or was not taken. Cf. Judicial Watch, Inc. v. Clinton, 880 F. Supp. 1, 12-14 (D.D.C. 1995) (appeal pend'g) (a decision whether to proceed with a course of action is a valid determination for the purposes of the "executive" privilege of Exemption 5). As the cases cited above indicate, information in EEO files can be properly withheld in this situation under Exemption 5.

We also find that release of this material could cause a reasonably foreseeable harm as set forth in Attorney General Janet Reno's Memorandum to All Department Heads on the application of the FOIA (October 4, 1993). The decision on the sufficiency of information and whether to proceed with an EEO or civil rights investigation can involve important policy and legal judgments. In addition, release of this type of information could have a chilling effect on future evaluations. If investigators believe that their recommendations would be subject to second-guessing they might become reticent to make the hard analysis so necessary in this sensitive area. Thus, withholding these types of evaluatory comments promotes the full, free and frank exchange of ideas, opinions and options which the "executive" privilege of Exemption 5 is designed to protect.

Even if a document meets the criteria set forth above, the document may not be simply withheld in its entirety. The FOIA, as implemented by 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10, requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). See The Oak Ridger, 21 DOE ¶ 80,120 at 80,564-65 (1991) (and cases cited therein); Boulder Scientific Co., 19 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,577 (1989) (and cases cited therein). In the context of the "executive" privilege of Exemption 5, this means that non-deliberative material ordinarily should be released to the requester. Environmental Protection Agency v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87-91 (1972). The only exceptions to the command of segregation are where exempt and non-exempt material are so "inextricably intertwined" that release of the non-exempt material would compromise the exempt material, Lead Industries, 610 F.2d at 85, or where non-exempt material is so small and interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate it. Id. In this case, we have reviewed the withheld material and find that both withheld paragraphs contain exempt material and that no portion of it is reasonably segregable. Accordingly, we find that the Director properly withheld the material under the deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Kenneth H. Besecker of Martinez, Georgia, Case No. VFA-0075, is hereby denied.

<1>This Decision and Order was originally scheduled to be issued by October 10, 1995. However, because of our difficulty in obtaining the withheld information as well as information regarding the background and context of the withheld information, it was not possible to resolve this Appeal by that date. On October 6, 1995, Mr. Besecker agreed to extend the time for the issuance of this Decision and Order.

<2>At our request, the Director has sent another copy of the material listed in Enclosures 7, 8, and 9 to Mr. Besecker.

Case No. VFA-0076, 25 DOE ¶ 80,140

October 10, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: William H. Payne

Date of Filing: September 12, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0076

On September 12, 1995,<1> William H. Payne filed an Appeal from a Determination issued to him on August 21, 1995, by the Department of Energy (DOE) Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE-AL). In that Determination DOE-AL stated that it was unable to locate any documents responsive to a request for information filed under the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require DOE-AL to conduct a further search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On July 29, 1995, Mr. Payne filed a request for copies of documents showing the employment dates and names of all retired military personnel who were hired by Sandia National Laboratories (SNL) between the dates of October 1, 1979 and July 28, 1995. See Determination Letter from Elva Barfield, FOIA Officer, Office of Public Affairs, DOE-AL (August 21, 1995) (Determination Letter). In response to the FOIA request, DOE-AL contacted the SNL which informed DOE-AL that there were no documents which identified retired military personnel working at SNL. In his Appeal, Mr. Payne argues that since SNL maintains records which list previous employment and in some instances that previous employment is military employment, some records must exist which indicate whether a person has retired from the military. See Appeal Letter from William H. Payne, to Hazel O'Leary, Secretary of Energy (September 6, 1995).

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Barton Kaplan, 22 DOE ¶ 80,125 (1992); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). However, in previous cases we have held that challenges to the adequacy of the agency's search must be supported by a reasoned argument that a requested document, unidentified by the agency in its search, does in fact exist. See Mark S. Boggs, 22 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1992); Sun Co. Inc., 11 DOE ¶ 80,114 (1983); Vinson & Elkins, 4 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1979).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted Elva Barfield, FOIA Officer, DOE-AL, to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any documents responsive to the Mr. Payne's request might exist. According to Ms. Barfield, SNL searched an employee database it maintains and was unable to locate any responsive documents. The SNL database identifies whether an employee has a military background but does not identify an employee's military status, i.e. whether an employee is retired from the military. From subsequent conversations with Ms. Barfield, we have learned that despite the fact that the database does not contain responsive documents, SNL does possess individual personnel files which identify whether a particular employee is retired from military service.

Under these circumstances, we find that this FOIA request may not have been subjected to a search sufficiently thorough and conscientious to meet the established standards of reasonableness. It appears that documentary information responsive to Mr. Payne's request does in fact exist.<2> See David Hackett, 24 DOE ¶ 80,166 (1995); Robert Heitman, 24 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995). Accordingly, this Appeal will be remanded to DOE-AL to perform a new search for responsive documents consistent with this Opinion.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by William H. Payne, Case No. VFA-0076, on September 12, 1995, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office which shall conduct a new search for responsive documents in accordance with the guidance in the foregoing Decision.

Director

Date: October 10, 1995

<1>Mr. Payne's correspondence to the Secretary of Energy was forwarded to this Office on September 6, 1995. In reviewing the correspondence we determined that Mr. Payne was appealing a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) Determination. However, the correspondence did not include a copy of the Determination required by this Office before it can begin processing a FOIA Appeal. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.8(b). We received a copy of the Determination on September 12, 1995. Thus the Appeal was considered to be filed as of that date.

<2>Even though responsive information may in fact exist, at this time we express no opinion whether the document(s) are in fact agency records under the FOIA. See Sangre de Cristo Animal Protection, 25 DOE ¶ 80,121 (1995).

October 2, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Quanterra Environmental Services

Date of Filing: September 8, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0078

On September 8, 1995, Quanterra Environmental Services (Quanterra) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on August 14, 1995, by the Richland Operations Office (Richland) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination concerned a request for information submitted by Quanterra pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If the present Appeal were granted, Richland would be required to conduct a further search for responsive material.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been discarded or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

I. Background

In its request, Quanterra sought documents concerning:

1. The total number of samples taken for the Environmental Program and Waste Management Program at the Hanford Site from January 1, 1994, to June 23, 1995, and
2. A list of all environmental laboratory service contracts or subcontracts awarded by [Richland] or its contractors for analysis of samples taken at the Hanford Site since August 1, 1993, including those awarded prior to August 1, 1995, where the period of performance continued after January 1, 1994.

In response, Richland issued a determination in which it provided a listing titled, "Pacific Northwest Laboratory (PNL) Analytical Service Contracts for Samples Taken on Hanford Reservation." Richland also included information designed to assist Quanterra in narrowing its request. In its Appeal, Quanterra states that Richland did not indicate that responsive documents in the possession and/or control of Westinghouse Hanford Company (WHC) were reviewed in response to the FOIA request.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. The request "would be sufficient if it enabled a professional employee of the agency who was familiar with the subject area of the request to locate the record with a reasonable amount of effort." H. Rep. No. 93-876, 93d Cong. 2d Sess. 6 (1974), as cited in Mills v. Department of Justice, 578 F.2d 261, 263 (9th Cir. 1978). We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988). However, the FOIA does not require an agency to create new documents in response to an FOIA request, but merely requires the agency provide documents already in its possession.

In reviewing the present Appeal, we contacted Dorothy Riehle, who handled the FOIA request at Richland, and Yvonne Sherman, the FOIA Officer at Richland, to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any additional documents responsive to Quanterra's request might exist. Ms Riehle informed us that she had contacted both WHC and PNL. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Janet R. H. Fishman, Staff Attorney, OHA, and Dorothy Riehle and Yvonne Sherman, Richland (September 11, 1995) (Memorandum of September 11, 1995 Telephone Conversation). According to the information we received, Richland provided all relevant documents which exist to Quanterra. For example, no "lists" of the type Quanterra seeks previously existed. Ms Riehle stated that PNL created the document provided to Quanterra in response to the appellant's request. PNL could easily create the document because of the small number of samples taken under PNL's direction. This was a customer-friendly action. In contrast, because WHC has thousands of contracts, with about 90 percent of them dealing with samples, it would be difficult to create a document such as PNL created.<1> Ms Riehle also checked with DOE personnel and Bechtel-Hanford, a prime contractor. She determined that WHC does all the sampling for DOE, and Bechtel-Hanford does not do any sampling.

Ms Riehle explained that she spoke with Mr. Whiting of Quanterra on numerous occasions while researching the FOIA request. In regard to the first part of Quanterra's request, for the total number of samples taken at Hanford between January 1, 1994, and June 23, 1995, Ms Riehle asked if Quanterra could indicate what types of samples it was interested in so that she might be better able to formulate a response. Mr. Whiting was unable to narrow the request further. With respect to the second part of the request, for a list of all environmental laboratory service contracts or subcontracts, she asked Mr. Whiting if a copy of the contracts or the cover page of the contracts would be satisfactory. He indicated that it would not, apparently desiring only a list of the contracts.

We are convinced that Richland followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the material sought by Quanterra. See Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). It is apparent that despite Quanterra's allegation, Ms Riehle did contact WHC to determine if it had any documents responsive to Quanterra's request, i.e., a document listing the total number of samples and a list of all environmental laboratory service contracts. It had none. Quanterra has not provided any evidence that any additional responsive listings exist in Richland's files. The fact that the search did not uncover the lists sought by Quanterra does not mean that the search was inadequate. While Richland has an abundance of information that might have satisfied Quanterra, the information is not in the list form desired by the firm. For example, had Quanterra been willing to accept copies of the contracts instead of a "list" of the contracts, it would have received additional material in response to its request. Federal agencies are not required to create new documents, such as the requested list, in response to FOIA requests. We also note that Richland initiated a dialogue with Mr. Whiting in order to attempt to narrow and clarify Quanterra's request, but this attempt was not successful. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(c)(2).

Under the circumstances of this case, we find that Richland's search for responsive documents was adequate and that no additional documents responsive to Quanterra's request exist in the possession of the DOE. Accordingly, Quanterra's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1)The Appeal filed on September 8, 1995, by Quanterra Environmental Services, Case No. VFA-0078, is hereby denied.

(2)This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0079, 25 DOE ¶ 80,141

October 11, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Henry, Lowerre, Johnson, Hess & Frederick

Date of Filing: September 12, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0079

On September 12, 1995, David Frederick of the law firm of Henry, Lowerre, Johnson, Hess & Frederick (Frederick) filed an Appeal from a Determination issued on August 14, 1995, by the Department of Energy (DOE) Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE-AL). The DOE-AL Determination was issued in response to a request for documents submitted by Frederick under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In that Determination DOE-AL released seven responsive documents and stated that no other responsive documents existed.

I. Background

On February 22, 1995, Frederick filed a request for copies of documents related to the Falls City, Texas, Uranium Mill Tailings Remedial Action (UMTRA) site. In response to the FOIA request, DOE-AL released seven responsive documents in their entirety, stated that DOE-AL could not locate certain other documents that had been requested by the Appellant, and referred Frederick to a publicly available document. DOE-AL stated that it was unable to locate as requested (1) either the results of legal research performed by the law firm of Davidson & Troilo or any documents reflecting the distribution of the results of the legal research; (2) a document entitled "UMTRA-Falls City-Proposed Scope Change-Engineering Support for Water Quality Issues-July and August 1993; (3) attachments A-F to a document entitled "UMTRA Project-Task Change Work Sheet for Changes in Scope-Falls City Scope Change #15-M.K. Ferguson Document No. 3885-FCT-R-01-01960-00 and (4) documents concerning soils to be excluded from the disposal cell site. Finally DOE-AL noted that since one of the documents requested, a Falls City Remedial Action Selection Report, was already publicly available, DOE-AL would not provide Frederick with a copy of the report under the FOIA. See Determination Letter from Elva Barfield, FOIA Officer, DOE-AL to David Frederick (August 10, 1995).

In its Appeal, Frederick challenges the adequacy of the search for the above-mentioned documents and the withholding of the publicly available document. To support its challenge to the adequacy of the search, Frederick notes that memoranda already in his possession refer to the existence of the requested documents and that since the documents have not been produced, the search was inadequate. With regard to the document that was publicly available, Frederick notes that under the Supreme Court's analysis in Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 153 (1988) (Tax Analysts), DOE-AL must release the document. See Appeal Letter from David Frederick to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (September 12, 1995).

II. Analysis

A. Adequacy of the Search

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Barton Kaplan, 22 DOE ¶ 80,125 (1992); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). However, in previous cases we have held that challenges to the adequacy of the agency's search must be supported by a reasoned argument that a requested document, unidentified by the agency in its search, does in fact exist. See Mark S. Boggs, 22 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1992); Sun Co. Inc., 11 DOE ¶ 80,114 (1983); Vinson & Elkins, 4 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1979).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted Terry Apodaca, FOIA Officer, DOE-AL, to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any other documents responsive to the request exist. According to Ms. Apodaca, there are two contractors who are responsible for the work at the UMTRA site and who might possess responsive documents: M.K. Ferguson Company (MK-F) and Jacobs Engineering Company (Jacobs Engineering). Although the UMTRA office appears to have searched the files of Jacobs Engineering, it did not search the files of MK-F for responsive information. Moreover, the search did not include the Office of Chief Counsel where one of the requested documents, the Davidson & Troilo research results, is most likely to be found.

Under these circumstances, we find that this FOIA request has not been subjected to a search sufficiently thorough and conscientious to meet the established standards of reasonableness. See David Hackett, 24 DOE ¶ 80,166 (1995); Robert Heitman, 24 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995). Since DOE-AL failed to search all of the offices likely to contain responsive documents, we cannot at this time find that the search has been adequate and that no additional responsive documents exist. Accordingly, this Appeal will be remanded to DOE-AL to perform a new search consistent with the guidance provided in this Decision.

B. Documents Already Made Publicly Available

In its Determination, DOE-AL informed Frederick that one responsive document was publicly available from the National Technical Information Service (NTIS). Frederick argues in his Appeal, that under the Tax Analysts decision, DOE/AL must provide him with the requested document, regardless of whether it is publicly available from NTIS.

It is generally true that an agency may not withhold documents in its possession solely because the requestor can obtain the document from a source outside that agency. However, an agency need not provide to a requestor documents that "have been previously published or made available by the agency itself." Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 152. Since the DOE has chosen to make the document in question publicly available through NTIS, DOE/AL is not required by the FOIA to provide this document to Frederick directly, and may instead refer him to the location where the document is available. See Daniel Grossman, 22 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,537 (1992). Accordingly, this portion of Frederick's Appeal will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Henry, Lowerre, Johnson, Hess & Frederick, Case No. VFA-0079, on September 12, 1995, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office which shall conduct a new search for responsive documents in accordance with the guidance in the foregoing Decision.

October 18, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Cohen & Cotton, P.C.

Date of Filing:September 21, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0082

Cohen & Cotton, P.C. ("C&C") filed an Appeal of an August 16, 1995 determination issued to it by the Western Area Power Administration ("WAPA") of the Department of Energy ("DOE"). In that determination, the Administrator of WAPA informed C&C that one of the documents that the firm had asked for in a request for information filed on October 21, 1994 pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act ("FOIA"), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004, did not exist. This Appeal, if granted, would require WAPA to conduct a further search for responsive documents.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. §1004.10(b).

Background

C&C, a law firm located in Phoenix, Arizona, represents Nevada Pacific Mining Co. ("Nevada Pacific"), a company which owns mining claims allegedly encroached upon by the Mead-Phoenix 500kV Transmission Line, a transmission access line connecting the Southwest and Southern California. See Cohen & Cotton, 25 DOE ¶ (October 1995). The line is owned and operated by WAPA. On August 3, 1995, C&C filed a request with WAPA for access to two categories of documents: (1) an executed Land Rights Agreement related to the Mead Phoenix Transmission Line; and (2) a Preliminary Real Estate Plan. See Letter from C&C to FOIA Officer, WAPA (August 3, 1995). Preliminary Real Estate Plans (PREP) are referenced in a DOE Real Property Management memorandum. See DOE Order 4300.1C, "Real Property Management," page I-3 (June 28, 1992) ("Order"). The Order states that a PREP is prepared whenever there is a requirement to acquire additional realty interest by: (1) fee purchase; (2) lease, exceeding $500,000 per year; (3) contract, where the estimated project cost exceeds $5 million; and (4) transfer of Government property from another agency to DOE, or withdrawal of land from the public domain. Id.

DOE released the Land Rights Agreement to C&C on August 16, 1995, but informed the requester that no PREP exists because a DOE memorandum exempts WAPA from preparing PREPs in accordance with Paragraph 2a of the Order. See Memorandum from Director of Administration, DOE, to Administrator, WAPA, "Real Estate Authority" (January 7, 1988). That memorandum, released to C&C along with WAPA's determination, authorizes the Administrator of WAPA to take three categories of real estate actions without the prior approval of the DOE Director of Administration. Id. The Administrator of WAPA stated that DOE and WAPA have "interpreted the memorandum to accomplish the goals of the PREP as [WAPA] conducts a planning process within the environmental process impact statement." See Letter from Administrator, WAPA, to C&C (August 16, 1995) ("Determination Letter"). C&C filed this Appeal on September 21, 1995. See Letter from C&C to Director, OHA (September 21, 1995).

Analysis

We have held that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we find that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g. David K. Hackett, 25 DOE ¶ 80,107 (1995); J. Eileen Price, 25 DOE ¶ 80,105 (1995); National Security Archive, 24 DOE ¶ 80,162 (1995). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord, Wiesberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted the WAPA FOIA Officer to discuss the statement in the Determination Letter that no PREP exists. The FOIA Officer informed us that upon receiving the request, she met with the Director of the Division of Lands. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between FOIA Officer, WAPA, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (October 2, 1995). In that meeting, the Director told her that because the real estate action in question fell within one of the three categories of delegated authority, i.e. , the acquisition of fee and permanent easements where the total cost does not exceed $500,000, no PREP was prepared. Id. This interpretation was confirmed by a Lands Attorney at WAPA. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Lands Attorney, WAPA, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA (October 4, 1995).

Although the Order was published four years later than the 1988 memorandum, there is no indication in the Order that the 1988 Memorandum was rescinded. In fact, in a section of the Order entitled "Cancellation," only the previous Order (DOE 4300.1B) is cancelled. See Order at 1.

Based on the information provided to us by WAPA, and after careful review of the DOE Order and the 1988 Memorandum, we conclude that no responsive document exists. It has been WAPA's consistent interpretation of the 1988 memorandum that a PREP is not required in the acquisition of easements where the cost is not estimated to exceed $500,000. Accordingly, C&C's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Cohen & Cotton, P.C. on September 21, 1995, Case No. VFA-0082, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. Section 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Portland General Electric Company

Date of Filing: September 22, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0084

On September 22, 1995, Portland General Electric Company (PGE) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on September 11, 1995, by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA). In that determination, BPA released one document in response to a request for information made by PGE pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, PGE requests that we direct BPA to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been discarded or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

In its request, PGE sought documents pertaining to proposed contracts between BPA and its direct service industrial customers (DSIs) regarding the sale of electrical power. Specifically, PGE sought:

1. Any and all drafts . . . of proposed power sales contracts between BPA and its direct service industrial customers.
2. Any documents reflecting, evidencing or relating to a decision of Bonneville to offer or enter into the contracts referenced in (1) above.

In its determination, BPA identified and released one document in response to item 1 of PGE's request. With respect to item (2), BPA stated:

Last year BPA conducted joint customer negotiations on its proposals to offer new power sales contracts to all customers, including the . . . DSIs. PGE participated in those negotiations and received all BPA papers regarding a proposed DSI contract offer and terms. Apart from that, BPA has not yet made any decisions to offer or enter into new contracts, therefore no records exist regarding a decision to offer or enter into the contracts.

Because it believed that PGE had already received all responsive documents, no additional documents were provided pursuant to Item 2 of the request.

PGE appeals the determination with respect to Item 2.<1> The firm states that it does not seek duplicate copies of documents that it already has, but it contends that responsive documents do exist which were not provided to it. In support of its position, PGE has identified several documents in BPA's possession that should have been provided to it pursuant to its request. It also states that it has not received copies of any correspondence between BPA and the DSIs.

We have stated on numerous occasions that an FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

In reviewing this Appeal, we contacted both the person at PGE who drafted the FOIA Request and one of the individuals at BPA who was involved in responding to the request. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between R. Lessner, PGE, and B. MacPherson, Office of Hearings and Appeals (October 17, 1995); Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between T. Miller, BPA, and B. MacPherson, Office of Hearings and Appeals (October 16, 1995). Based upon these conversations, it is apparent that BPA misconstrued the scope of PGE's request. Because no decision had yet been made on whether to enter into contracts with the DSIs, BPA concluded that it had no documents "reflecting, evidencing or relating to a decision . . . to offer or enter into" such contracts. However, PGE intended its request to include, inter alia, documents that would be relevant to BPA's future decision on such contracts.

While BPA's construction of PGE's request is not unreasonable, the request was ambiguous. BPA should therefore have sought clarification of what information PGE desired. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(c)(2). Accordingly, the present Appeal shall be granted, and the matter shall be remanded to BPA. BPA shall consult with PGE to clarify the scope of the request, and it shall conduct a new search and issue a new determination following the consultation.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Portland General Electric Company on September 22, 1995, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below.

(2) This matter is remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration which shall promptly issue a new determination after consulting with the requester to clarify the scope of its request.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review. Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>PGE originally also appealed the determination with respect to Item 1. The firm contended that the search must have been inadequate because only one draft contract was provided, while draft contracts with a number of firms appeared to exist. In the course of processing this Appeal, PGE was informed that although there were a number of draft contracts, the contracts were identical except for the name and other information identifying the customer. PGE indicated that if this had been explained in the determination, it would not have appealed Item 1, and it withdrew its Appeal with respect to this Item. Case No. VFA-0087, 27 DOE ¶ 80,199

April 16, 1999

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Stanley Goldberg

Date of Filing: September 27, 1995

Stanley Goldberg filed Appeals from determinations issued to him on August 28, 1995, by the National Archives and Records Administration (NARA). In those determinations, NARA denied in part a request for information that Dr. Goldberg filed on June 16, 1989 (Case No. VFA-0087), and denied in full a request for information that he filed on March 16, 1990 (Case No. VFA-0088), pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. The information deleted from the document released to Dr. Goldberg in the June 16 determination, as well as the entirety of the remaining requested documents, were withheld after a review of the document had been performed by the Department of Energy (DOE). This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the information that it instructed NARA to withhold in the August 28, 1995 determinations.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On June 16, 1989, Dr. Goldberg submitted a request under the FOIA to NARA for a number of documents authored by Samuel Goudsmit. In April 1993, NARA requested that the DOE review those documents for classification purposes. An August 1995 letter from NARA informed Dr. Goldberg that the DOE had determined that one document could be released in part and the remaining documents were classified and must be withheld in full.

On March 16, 1990, Dr. Goldberg submitted a similar request to NARA, for all materials in Box 3, Folder 12 of a collection of papers authored by Dr. Goudsmit. NARA requested classification review by the DOE and, in a second August 1995 letter, informed Dr. Goldberg that the DOE had determined that all the requested documents were classified and must be withheld in full. In both of the above instances, NARA stated that the material that was responsive to Dr. Goldberg's requests but not released to him was withheld under Exemption 1 of the FOIA. NARA provided no basis for its application of that exemption to withhold information from Dr. Goldberg.

The present Appeals seek the disclosure of all the material withheld from Dr. Goldberg in both determinations. In his Appeals, Dr. Goldberg stated that the denials were so general that he was unable to formulate specific arguments, but nonetheless contended that the materials should be released because they are at least 40 years old and therefore unlikely still to affect the national security. Moreover, Dr. Goldberg contended that some of the documents have already been made public.

II. Analysis

Exemption 1 of the FOIA provides that an agency may exempt from disclosure matters that are "(A) specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy and (B) are in fact properly classified pursuant to such Executive order." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1). Executive Order 12958 is the current Executive Order that provides for the classification, declassification and safeguarding of national security information. When properly classified under this Executive Order, national security information is exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 1. See National Security Archive, 26 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1996); Keith E. Loomis, 25 DOE ¶ 80,183 (1996); A. Victorian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,166 (1996). According to the Office of Declassification, the national security information withheld in this case relates to intelligence sources, methods, and activities, which is protected by Section 1.5(c) of the Executive Order and is therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 1 of the FOIA.

The Director of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of SA reviewed all materials for which the DOE had claimed an exemption from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA.

In performing his review the Director of SA considered the two issues that Dr. Goldberg raised on appeal. Despite Dr. Goldberg's assertions that the withheld materials are more than 40 years old and that some of them have been released to the public, the Director of SA has determined that no additional portions of requested documents may now be released under the FOIA, because all of the information initially withheld continues to be properly classified as national security information under Section 1.5(c) of Executive Order 12958.

Based on the review performed by the Director of SA, we have determined that Executive Order 12958 requires the continued withholding of the materials responsive to Dr. Goldberg's requests that were previously identified as classified information. Although a finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information, nevertheless such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemption 1, the disclosure is prohibited by Executive Order. Therefore, those portions of the responsive documents that the Director of SA has determined to be properly classified must continue to be withheld from disclosure. Accordingly, Dr. Goldberg's Appeals will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeals filed by Stanley Goldberg on September 27, 1995, Case Nos. VFA-0087 and VFA-0088, are hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: William M. Arkin

Date of Filing: September 29, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0089

On September 29, 1995, William M. Arkin (Arkin) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque). In that determination, Albuquerque denied a request for information filed by Arkin under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require Albuquerque to release the information requested by Arkin.

I. BACKGROUND

On April 11, 1995, Arkin filed a request for information seeking copies of:

Descriptions of Los Alamos laboratories current R&D activities regarding Blinding, Dazzling, or Stunning Laser-related counter electro-optics weapons on the battlefield or for special missions including, but not limited to Perseus. Records sought include briefings, histories, or fact sheets.

April 11, 1995 Request for Information. On August 16, 1995, Albuquerque issued a determination letter in response to Arkin's request stating that:

A search of administrative files at the Los Alamos National Laboratory (LANL) produced negative results. This office has also been advised that LANL is not aware of any current research or development activities at LANL regarding blinding, dazzling or stunning using laser technology.

August 16, 1995, Determination Letter. <1> On September 29, 1995, Arkin filed the present Appeal, contending that the search for responsive documents conducted by Albuquerque was inadequate and that Albuquerque's response was "evasive."

II. ANALYSIS

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by federal agencies be released to the public upon request. If a requester has reasonably described the information he or she is seeking and has complied with the DOE's FOIA regulations appearing at 10 C.F.R. Part 1004, the agency is obliged to conduct a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981).

Arkin's Appeal is based upon his contention that LANL's "search and reply was inadequate and evasive."

In support of his contentions, Arkin notes that LANL's involvement in the invention and development of "Battlefield Optical Munitions" (BOM) has been the subject of a number of articles in both the popular and technical press. As examples, Arkin specifically cites articles in the September 1994 edition of "Laser Focus World," the January 1995 edition of "Technology Review" and the March 1995 edition of "GQ" Magazine.

These articles contradict the determination letter's contention that LANL does not conduct BOM research and development. In order to investigate this apparent contradiction, we have contacted Albuquerque which reports that it has attempted unsuccessfully to obtain an explanation from LANL.

Since Albuquerque has neither challenged the accuracy of Arkin's assertion nor otherwise explained the apparent contradiction between its determination and the media reports referring to LANL's involvement in BOM research and development, it is reasonable to assume that LANL might possess documents which are responsive to Arkin's request that were not located by LANL's initial search. Therefore, we are instructing Albuquerque to conduct a new, more comprehensive search at LANL for documents responsive to Arkin's request.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by William M. Arkin, Case No. VFA-0089, on September 29, 1995, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Albuquerque Operations Office for further processing in accordance with the instructions set forth above.

Case No. VFA-0091, 25 DOE ¶ 80,147

November 8, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: William H. Payne

Date of Filing: October 17, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0091

On October 17, 1995, William H. Payne filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on September 29, 1995, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Field Office (DOE/AL), in response to a request for information under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the type of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is permitted by federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On September 12, 1995, Payne filed a request under the FOIA in which he sought the "[n]ames and dates of employment of all retired military personnel who were hired by Los Alamos National Laboratory [LANL] between the date of October 1, 1979 and September 12, 1995." Letter from William H. Payne to Hazel R. O'Leary, Secretary of Energy (October 6, 1995). LANL is a DOE site currently operated under a contract between the DOE and the University of California. DOE/AL issued a determination on September 29, 1995, in which it stated that the information sought by Payne is contained in "personnel files in the possession and control of [LANL.]" Letter from Elva Ann Barfield, Freedom of Information Officer, DOE/AL, to Bill Payne (September 29, 1995). According to DOE/AL, these files are "not 'agency records' subject to the provisions of the FOIA" and "are not subject to release under DOE policy as well." Id.

In his Appeal, Payne does not dispute that the information he is seeking is contained in LANL personnel files. He does state, without elaborating, that "others disagree with" DOE/AL's determination that these files are not subject to release under the FOIA. Letter from William H. Payne to Hazel R. O'Leary, Secretary of Energy (October 6, 1995). He further contends that the information he seeks is of national and international concern. Id.

II. Analysis

Our threshold inquiry in this case is whether personnel files generated by and in the possession of a DOE contractor are subject to the FOIA. First, we must determine whether such records are "agency records," and thus subject to the FOIA, under the criteria set out by the federal courts. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Second, records that do not meet these criteria can nonetheless be subject to release under the DOE regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e); see 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884 (December 12, 1994). We conclude that the records in question are not "agency records" and are not subject to the FOIA under DOE regulations.

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information required to be made available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-stage analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents created by non-federal organizations, such as the University of California, are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination (i) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA, and if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether an entity should be regarded as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case which involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with the DOE, the University of California is the prime contractor responsible for maintaining and operating LANL. While the DOE obtained the University's services and exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise the University's day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that University of California is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.

Although the University of California is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, its records relevant to the Payne request could become "agency records" if they were obtained by the DOE and were within the DOE's control at the time the FOIA request was made. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, the documents in question had not been obtained by the DOE and were not in the agency's control at the time of the appellant's request. Thus, the records do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86, Kissinger v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136, 150-51 (1980).

Even if contractor-acquired or contractor-generated records fail to qualify as "agency records," they may still be subject to release if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. The DOE FOIA regulations provide that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)." 10 C.F.R. 1004.3(e)(1).

We therefore next look to the contract between DOE and the University of California to determine the status of these records. That contract states:

Except for those records owned by the University pursuant to paragraph (b) below, all records acquired or generated by the University's employees at the Laboratory or at the University's Laboratory Administrative Management Oversight Unit in the performance of this Contract shall be property of the Government, and shall be delivered to the Government or otherwise disposed of by the University in accordance with the terms of this contract or as directed by the Contracting Officer during the term of this contract or upon its termination or expiration.

Contract W-7405-ENG-36, Modification No. M359, Article VI, Cl. 10(a) (emphasis added). Paragraph (b) of this clause states that the category of "University-owned Records" includes "Personnel and medical . . . records and files maintained on individual employees, applicants and former employees[.]" Id. at Cl. 10(b). Thus, because personnel records are not among the records which are "property of the Government" under the DOE's contract with the University of California, these records are not subject to release under the DOE regulations.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the records sought by the appellant are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to the FOIA under DOE regulations. Accordingly, we shall deny the present FOIA Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by William H. Payne on October 17, 1995, Case Number VFA-0091, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Dennis McQuade

Date of Filing: December 8, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0092

On December 8, 1995, Dennis McQuade (McQuade) completed the filing of an Appeal from a series of determinations that denied in part a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552 (FOIA), as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. McQuade appeals from (1) an August 25, 1995 determination issued by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge); (2) a May 2, 1995 determination issued by the FOIA/Privacy Act Division at DOE Headquarters (Headquarters' FOIA Office); (3) an October 31, 1995 determination issued by the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity at DOE Headquarters (Headquarters' Office of Economic Impact and Diversity); and (4) a December 1, 1995 determination by the Savannah River Operations Office (Savannah River).<1> This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to (1) release the information that was withheld; and (2) conduct a further search for documents responsive to McQuade's request.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I . Background

The Appellant in this case was an employee of the Personnel Clearance and Assurance Branch of the Personnel Division of Oak Ridge. This Branch is responsible for determining an individual's eligibility for a security clearance. The Appellant filed a FOIA request for documents relating to complaints of employment discrimination, Privacy Act violations, discrimination in the issuance and revocation of security clearances, and other problems in the workplace.<2>

In its determination, Oak Ridge found, inter alia, that there were no documents at Oak Ridge responsive to Request Items 1, 2, 3, 4, and 6. Oak Ridge further indicated that it had located documents which were responsive to Request Item 5. However, Oak Ridge withheld certain of these documents in their entirety under Exemptions 6 and 7 of the FOIA. Other documents were provided, with certain information redacted pursuant to Exemption 6 of the FOIA.

The Headquarters' FOIA Office indicated in its determination that a search for records responsive to McQuade's request had been conducted by the Office of Inspector General and the Office of Safeguards and Security and that no responsive records had been located. In their determinations, the Headquarters' Office of Economic Impact and Diversity and Savannah River stated that no responsive documents had been found.

McQuade appealed the adequacy of the search for documents and the withholding of information under Exemptions 6 and 7 of the FOIA.

II. Analysis

A. The Documents Withheld Under Exemptions 6 and 7

In its determination, Oak Ridge withheld six documents in their entirety based upon Exemptions 6 and 7 of the FOIA. Five of the six withheld documents were created as a result of a personnel inquiry designed to maximize performance at the Personnel Clearance and Assurance Branch. These documents include summaries of interviews, witness statements and memoranda. The sixth document is a memorandum to the file setting forth the author's perceptions of many of the relationships and problems (including allegations of discrimination) within the Personnel Clearance and Assurance Branch. These documents contain information on many subjects. For example, the statements and interviews contain candid comments about other employees and critical remarks concerning the manner in which security clearances are being processed and the management of the office. These documents also contain information about the duties of employees and a description of the workplace.

Oak Ridge also provided McQuade with four responsive documents in which small amounts of information were redacted pursuant to Exemption 6 of the FOIA. The redacted information in three of the documents consists of the name of an employee. In two instances in which the name was redacted, the documents contain negative information about the individual. In the third document in which a name was redacted, the document indicates that the employee had filed a complaint against management. In the fourth document, two sentences consisting of potentially negative information about a named employee were redacted.

B. Exemption 7

The investigatory information at issue here was withheld pursuant to Exemptions 7(C) and 7(D).<3> The threshold test for withholding information under Exemption 7 is whether such information is compiled as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The scope of Exemption 7 encompasses enforcement for both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974); Williams v. IRS, 479 F.2d 317, 318 (3d Cir. 1973), cert. denied sub nom. Donolon v. IRS, 414 U.S. 1024 (1973). An investigation of an agency's own employees is for "law enforcement purposes" only if it focuses on distinct acts of illegality by specific employees. Stern v. FBI, 737 F.2d 84 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In an effort to determine whether the records at issue were compiled for law enforcement purposes, we contacted James Ware, the former Chief, Inspections and Technical Assessments Branch, Safeguards and Security Division at Oak Ridge. Mr. Ware conducted the investigation that gave rise to five of the six documents withheld under Exemption 7. He informed us that the documents at issue were generated during an investigation commenced after an allegation that a person who worked as a contractor at Oak Ridge received threatening phone calls. The investigation began as a criminal investigation. However, the criminal investigation was subsequently discontinued and the investigation was transformed into an inquiry into personnel issues designed to obtain information to maximize performance at the Personnel Clearance and Assurance Branch. The documents at issue in this Appeal were generated after the criminal investigation was discontinued and were part of an attempt to investigate and rectify a personnel matter. Memorandum of Telephone Conversations between Linda Lazarus, Staff Attorney, Office of Hearings and Appeals, and James Ware, Deputy Assistant Manager for Defense Programs (January 2, 1996). As such, the documents at issue were not generated during a civil or criminal agency law enforcement proceeding. Accordingly, Exemption 7 was improperly applied to these documents. <4>

C. Exemption 6

1. In General

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982). In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of HUD, 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Second, the agency must determine whether release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Hopkins v. Department of HUD, 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991); FLRA v. Department of Treasury Fin. Management Serv., 884 F.2d 1446, 1451 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 864 (1990). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762-70.

The fact that a document contains material which is exempt from disclosure does not necessarily make the entire document exempt. The FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt. . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b) (1982). See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 89, 91 (1973); Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Air Force, 556 F.2d 242, 259-62 (D.C. Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 927 (1978); Casson, Calligaro & Mutryn, 10 DOE ¶ 80,137 at 80,615 (1983). However, segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary where it is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material so that release of the non-exempt material would "compromise" the withheld material, or where the amount of non-exempt material is small and so interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate. Lead Indus. Ass'n v. OSHA, 610 F.2d 70, 83-86 (2d Cir. 1979).

2. The Privacy Interest

The documents withheld in their entirety pursuant to Exemption 6 contain some information in which individuals have a significant privacy interest; however, they also contain some information in which there is little or no privacy interest. There is a privacy interest in the candid opinions of the witnesses concerning their co-workers and supervisors. Their release could harm working and personal relationships among co-workers and supervisors, and might prompt reprisals. Moreover, other employees may have privacy interests with respect to certain statements in the documents made about them. The degree of their privacy interest will depend upon the sensitivity of the subject matter of the comments. Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 (1994). However, there is no privacy interest in some portions of the documents. For example, the first two sentences of Document 1 ("Letter dated July 13, 1990, Subject: Personnel Issues, Personnel Clearance and Assurance Branch (PCAB), Oak Ridge Operations") simply indicate that a memorandum is being transmitted concerning work place problems. Moreover, the witness statements contain descriptions of an employee's duties or of the workplace which are common knowledge.

In contrast, the material redacted pursuant to Exemption 6 from the four documents that were released in part clearly constitutes information in which individuals have a privacy interest. The Supreme Court has long found a privacy interest in the names of individuals sufficient enough to warrant protection from disclosure under Exemption 6. Department of Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 375 (1976). Moreover, the individuals referred to here have an even greater interest in maintaining privacy. The individuals whose names are deleted are referred to in a negative context in two of the three documents. In the third document, there is an indication that the person whose name has been deleted has filed a complaint. In the fourth document, there is arguably negative information about a named individual. Thus, the withholding of each individual's name and possibly negative information about the employee is consistent with the core purpose of Exemption 6, i.e. to protect individuals from embarrassment resulting from disclosure of personal information. Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 599.

3. The Public Interest in Disclosure

The strength of the privacy interests at issue here must then be weighed against the public's interest in disclosure. In Reporters Committee, the Supreme Court held that neither the identity of the requester nor the purpose for which the request is being made is relevant to whether information is exempt from disclosure. 489 U.S. at 771. Thus, the determination "must turn on the nature of the requested document and its relationship to" the public interest, id. at 772, rather than upon the requester's proposed use for the information. The Court further found that with regard to the FOIA, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the core purpose of the Act, i.e., "public understanding of the operations and activities of the Government." Id. at 775. The Court indicated that only information which contributes significantly to this understanding is within "the ambit of the public interest which the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id. Accordingly, the measure of public interest in disclosure depends on the degree to which disclosure would further the public's understanding of the workings of government.

We find that there is a significant public interest in disclosure of at least portions of the material contained in the six documents withheld in their entirety. These documents concern not only internal management problems within the Personal Clearance and Assurance Branch but also involve material that is relevant to the issue of the fairness of the issuance of security clearances and the proper operation of government. The public's understanding of the Branch's operations and activities would likely be enhanced significantly by release of portions of these documents.

In contrast, there is very little public interest in disclosure of the information redacted from the four documents. In three instances, these redactions involve the names of individuals. In the fourth, the redaction involves potentially negative information about an employee. The Appellant has been given the remainder of the documents. We do not see how the public's understanding of the government's activities would be enhanced by the disclosure of this information. As we have found in prior cases where names have been withheld but the remainder of the document has been released to a requester, there is seldom a public interest in disclosing the identities of the individuals. See Morrison & Foerster, 24 DOE ¶ 80,107 (1994). The same is true for the potentially negative information concerning the named employee.

4. The Balancing Test

In order to determine whether release of the documents is appropriate, the agency must weigh the privacy interest it has identified against the public interest in the release of the documents. We find that the privacy interest in the redacted portions of the four documents withheld in part clearly outweighs the public interest in disclosure of the redactions . The redacted material therefore falls within the scope of Exemption 6.

Individuals also have a privacy interest with respect to some, but not all, of the information contained in the six documents withheld in their entirety. Moreover, there is a significant public interest in release of some of the material contained in these documents. The balancing test with respect to these six documents can best be performed by Oak Ridge. We shall therefore remand this portion of the determination to Oak Ridge. On remand, Oak Ridge must issue a new determination either releasing the material that the Appellant seeks or specifically justifying why the material is being withheld. Oak Ridge should segregate and release all material in which there is no privacy interest or the public interest in disclosure outweighs the privacy interest.

D. The Adequacy of the Search for Documents

The Appellant has claimed that DOE failed to search adequately for documentation responsive to Items 1, 2, 3, 4, and 6 of his FOIA request. Certain of the DOE offices performed an adequate search. However, as detailed below, the searches conducted by Oak Ridge and the Headquarters' FOIA Office were inadequate, and this matter should be remanded to those offices for a further search for responsive documents.

We have held that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we find that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g. Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1993); Marlene R. Flor, 23 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1993); Native Americans for a Clean Environment, 23 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1993). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to the agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

1. The Search Conducted by Oak Ridge

We contacted Amy Rothrock, Freedom of Information Act/Privacy Act Officer at Oak Ridge, to discuss that Office's search for documents responsive to Appellant's FOIA request.

Ms. Rothrock has requested that Request Items 1 and 4 be remanded for an additional search. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Amy Rothrock and Linda Lazarus (January 4, 1996). Accordingly, Request Item 1 will be remanded so that a further search for responsive documents may be conducted in the Office of the Manager of Oak Ridge. Request Item 4 will be remanded so that a further search for responsive documents may be conducted by the Hearings Coordinator in the Personnel Clearance and Assurance Branch.

Ms. Rothrock provided the following information concerning the search for documents at Oak Ridge with respect to the other items of the request : Request Item 2. Request Item 2 sought information concerning investigation reports issued by Donald Thress, Assistant Chief Counsel for Litigation and Programs, and other information regarding a possible violation of the Privacy Act by the Appellant. In an effort to obtain these documents, Ms. Rothrock contacted many people, including Mr. Thress. Mr. Thress indicated that he had no documents regarding this matter. Mr. Thress recalls that the subject came up briefly in the context of a legal question and no opinion was issued, no investigation launched and no written record created. No other individuals contacted knew of any responsive documents.

Request Item 3. Request Item 3 sought information concerning discrimination complaints filed by Patricia Howse-Smith or Rufus Smith from 1983 to the present. In an effort to locate documents responsive to this Item, Ms. Rothrock obtained information from many people, including Rufus Smith and Patricia Howse-Smith. Rufus Smith and Patricia Howse-Smith indicated that they had no copies of any complaints or related information in their files. No other office at Oak Ridge produced any documents relating to claims of discrimination filed by either Rufus Smith or Patricia Howse-Smith.

Request Item 6. Request Item 6 involved documents furnished by outside facilitators concerning workplace issues at the Personnel Clearance and Assurance Branch. In an effort to ascertain whether there were documents responsive to this request, Ms. Rothrock contacted Margo Weil, Organizational Development Specialist, who manages the Facilitator Program, and Susan Cange, Special Assistant to the Manager. Any facilitator activities would have been coordinated by these two people. Neither of these people had any documents which would be responsive to the Request.

Based on this information, we are convinced that Oak Ridge followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the materials sought by the Appellant in FOIA Items 2, 3, and 6. Moreover, it appears that Oak Ridge contacted the persons who would have knowledge of whether relevant documents exist. As such, the search for these Request Items was adequate. However, for the reasons set forth above, Request Items 1 and 4 will be remanded to Oak Ridge for an additional search for responsive documents.

2. The Search Conducted by Savannah River

On December 1, 1995, the Savannah River Operations Office issued a determination concerning Request Item 1, the request for all reports issued by Carlos Collazo, an Equal Employment Opportunity Counselor at Savannah River who investigated a complaint of discrimination at Oak Ridge. Savannah River indicated that no responsive documents were found. The determination also indicated that, before issuing this response, Savannah River consulted Mr. Collazo and the Equal Employment Opportunity Office. Mr. Collazo stated that, upon completion of the investigation, he provided a report to Joe La Grone, then the Oak Ridge manager. Mr. Collazo also provided a copy of the report to the Savannah River EEO Manager; however, that copy has been destroyed. Mr. Collazo did not retain a copy of the report. As noted above, this portion of the search will be remanded to Oak Ridge for fuller investigation.

Based on this information, we are convinced that Savannah River followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the materials sought by the Appellant in his FOIA request and that no such documents are in the possession of that Office.

3. The Headquarters Search

Appellant's FOIA request was processed by Edward McGinnis, a Freedom of Information Act/Privacy Analyst at the Headquarters' FOIA/Privacy Act Office. Mr. McGinnis contacted the Headquarters' Office of Economic Impact and Diversity, the Office of Inspector General and the Office of Safeguards and Security in an effort to obtain responsive documents. Memorandum from Edward McGinnis to Linda Lazarus (December 27, 1995).<5> As detailed below, the search conducted for Request Items 1, 2, and 3 by the various offices in Headquarters was reasonably calculated to uncover the materials sought by Appellant in his FOIA request. However, there is no indication that any office was searched for documents responsive to Request Item 4, which seeks Oak Ridge's response to Secretary O'Leary's request for a listing which identifies persons subject to security clearance hearings by race and sex. As such, Request Item 4 will be remanded to the Headquarters' FOIA office for an additional search.<6>

a. The Search for Documents in the Office of Inspector General

Jane A. Payne, a Freedom of Information Act Officer, processed Appellant's request on behalf of the Office of Inspector General. She informed us that Appellant's request pertained to various EEO complaints and investigations, discrimination complaints relating to the issuance of security clearances, and internal Oak Ridge Operations investigations. She further informed us that none of these matters was within the purview of the Office of Inspector General. She reported that there were no responsive documents in that Office. Memorandum from Jane Payne to Linda Lazarus (December 8, 1995).

b. The Search for Documents in the Office of Safeguards and Security

The search for responsive documents in the Office of Safeguards and Security was conducted by Victor Hawkins, a Personnel Security Specialist. Mr. Hawkins informed us that when he received Appellant's request, he checked the Personnel Security Clearance Index to determine whether or not Mr. McQuade had an active access authorization. This Index indicated that Mr. McQuade had an active access authorization at Oak Ridge, and that his security file was also located at Oak Ridge. According to Mr.

Hawkins, this indicated that the only responsive documents that the Headquarters' Office of Safeguards and Security would possess with respect to Mr. McQuade would be in the Information Management Center (IMC). IMC searched its records but found no responsive documents concerning Mr. McQuade. Memorandum from Victor Hawkins to Linda Lazarus (December 19, 1995).

c. The Search for Documents in the Headquarters' Office of Economic Impact and Diversity

We contacted John Thornton, the Freedom of Information Act Officer for the Headquarters' Office of Economic Impact and Diversity, to ascertain the adequacy of the search for responsive documents by that Office. Mr. Thornton indicated that he searched for documents concerning Civil Rights complaints (Requests Items 1 and 3) by asking Melvin Daniels of the Complaint Investigation Division whether any such documents existed. It is Mr. Daniels' responsibility to be familiar with complaints of discrimination filed at Headquarters. Mr. Daniels responded that there were no complaints responsive to these Requests other than the complaint mentioned in the FOIA request.<7>

Mr. Thornton further indicated that he searched for documents responsive to Request Item 2 by reading the case file of the complaint discussed in Appellant's FOIA request. He indicated that no documents were found that were responsive to Request Item 2 in this file. Mr. Thornton also indicated that the Headquarters' Office of Economic Impact and Diversity would not generally maintain any records which would be responsive to Request Item 2.

4. Summary Regarding the Adequacy of the Search

The offices in Headquarters conducted searches which were reasonably calculated to uncover the material sought by Request Items 1, 2, and 3. However, this is not the case for the Headquarters response to Request Item 4. Request Item 4 sought documents relating to Oak Ridge's response to Secretary O'Leary's request for a listing of all security clearance review hearings which identifies persons subject to clearance hearings by race and sex. It is reasonable to assume that such documents would be at Headquarters. However, there is no indication that a search was made for such documents before the determination was issued. As such, Request Item 4 shall be remanded to the Headquarters' FOIA Office so that an additional search may be conducted.

III. Conclusion

In view of the foregoing, we shall grant the present Appeal in part. This matter will be remanded to Oak Ridge with directions to issue a new determination. Before issuing this determination, Oak Ridge shall review the six documents withheld in their entirety and balance the private interest of individuals against the public interest in disclosure to ascertain the information that should be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Oak Ridge shall then release any segregable non-exempt information. Oak Ridge shall also search for additional documents that are responsive to Request Items 1 and 4. This matter will also be remanded to the Headquarters' FOIA Office to search for additional documents that are responsive to Request Item 4.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Dennis McQuade on December 8, 1995, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraphs (2) and (3) below, and is in all other respects denied.

(2) This matter is remanded to Oak Ridge, which shall promptly issue a revised determination concerning the six documents withheld in their entirety. In this revised determination, Oak Ridge shall release any segregable non-exempt information. Additionally, Oak Ridge shall search for documents responsive to the Request Items 1 and 4 and release segregable non-exempt information.

(3) This matter is remanded to Headquarters' FOIA Office to conduct a further search for documents responsive to Request Item 1 and release segregable, non-exempt information.

(4) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<2>In relevant part, the Appellant specifically requested the following:

1. Information concerning a complaint of discrimination filed in early 1992 and investigated by Carlos Collazo in which the Appellant was named in some capacity;

2. Investigation reports issued by Don Thress and other information regarding a possible violation of the Privacy Act by the Appellant;

3. Information concerning any discrimination complaints filed by Patricia Howse-Smith or Rufus Smith from 1983 to the present;

4. Oak Ridge's response to Secretary O'Leary's request for a listing of all security clearance administrative review hearings conducted, which identifies persons subjected to clearance hearings by race and sex, for the time period 1990-1994;

5. Information pertaining to Appellant in the personal possession of Patricia Howse-Smith, Rufus Smith, Daniel Wilken, or Joe La Grone, or in the minutes of any Senior Management Board meetings from 1987 to the present;

6. All written reports, recommendations, findings, and supporting documents furnished by certain outside facilitators concerning workplace issues at the Personnel Clearance and Assurance Branch.

<3>Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information . . . could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). <4>The above discussion does not necessarily apply to Document 5 (Memorandum for the File dated June 23, 1994, Subject: Patricia Howse-Smith). The reason this document was created is unclear. On remand, if Oak Ridge maintains that Document 5 is protected under Exemption 7, it should provide information on the circumstances under which this document was created.

<5>There is no reason to believe that any office in Headquarters would have information responsive to Request Items 5 and 6.

<6>At the present time, Mr, McGinnis has requested that the Office of the Secretary and the Office of Compliance and Audit Liaison search for documents which are responsive to this Request.

<7>Mr. McQuade is not seeking any documents relating to that complaint. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Linda Lazarus and Dennis McQuade (January 4, 1996).

Case No. VFA-0093, 25 DOE ¶ 80,148

November 13, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Knolls Action Project

Date of Filing: October 13, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0093

On October 13, 1995, the Knolls Action Project (KAP) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it by the Department of Energy's Office of Naval Reactors (NR) on September 14, 1995. In that determination, NR denied a request for a waiver of fees in connection with four FOIA requests filed by KAP under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, KAP asks that we reverse NR's determination, and grant it a fee waiver.

I. Background

In submissions dated July 11, 12, 13 and 14, 1995, KAP filed four Requests under the Freedom of Information Act requesting various documents from NR pertaining to the shipment and management of spent nuclear fuels from U.S. naval vessels. In its FOIA Requests, KAP requested a fee waiver for the costs associated with processing the FOIA Requests. KAP stated that it was going to use the information obtained by its four July FOIA Requests to help prepare a report under a contract with a non-profit educational organization. In its September 14, 1995 response, NR denied KAP's fee waiver request and advised it that the cost of processing its request would be approximately $250. NR stated that information KAP had provided to it in requesting a fee waiver was insufficient for NR to conclude that a fee waiver should be granted. Additionally, NR stated that the much of the releasable portions of the material requested would not contribute significantly to the public understanding of the operations and activities of the Department of Energy. However, NR suggested that if KAP could provide additional details regarding the nature of the report it is preparing, the identity of the group it was being prepared for and the intended use and distribution of the report, NR would reconsider whether a fee waiver should be granted.

In its present Appeal, KAP asks that we reverse that determination and grant it a waiver of fees in connection with its four July 1995 FOIA Requests. KAP argues that Congress established a liberal standard for public interest fee waivers under the FOIA and that this implies that requesters should not be required to provide detailed information, such as the identity of the group for which the report is being prepared or the nature of the report it seeks to create, in order to justify a fee waiver. Thus,

KAP asserts that NR inappropriately solicited detailed information in order to evaluate KAP's fee waiver request. Further, KAP argues that release of the requested information would significantly contribute to the understanding of U.S. government operations by shedding light on the U.S. Navy's and DOE's program for shipping and managing spent nuclear fuel. KAP states that it has a documented history of providing information obtained by its FOIA requests to the news media which have used the information in various published articles. In support of its assertion, KAP supplied a reference to one article. Additionally, KAP submitted a chart summarizing information regarding spent naval fuel shipments (Exhibit 4) which it claims it has widely distributed. Further, KAP states that the information sought by its current FOIA requests will be used in preparing a report for the Snake River Alliance in managing and shipping of spent nuclear fuel. It states that the Snake River Alliance plans to disseminate the report to the media and interested citizens. Additionally, KAP asserts that it intends to release any information obtained from its FOIA Requests through press releases and public fact sheets. Finally, KAP argues that it has met all the statutory requirements for a fee waiver under the FOIA.

In its reply to KAP's present FOIA Appeal, NR states that the release of the requested material would not significantly contribute to the public's understanding of the operations of the government because most of the material is already in the public domain. NR points out that DOE and the Navy have released a 5,200 page Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) of which some 1000 pages detail DOE and Navy spent fuel shipments and how they are conducted. Additionally, NR states that additional information on spent naval nuclear fuel is available in public records regarding litigation between the State of Idaho and the DOE as well as in the vast body of information provided by extensive media coverage of the issue of spent nuclear fuels. NR also states that responsive information not already in the public domain is either non-existent, otherwise withholdable under the FOIA, or has little significance in contributing to the public's understanding of a governmental activity. NR also argues that KAP has a commercial interest in the requested information and that it consequently should not be eligible for a fee waiver. Finally, NR contends that KAP lacks the ability to widely disseminate any information it obtains to the public.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that requesters pay fees for the processing of their requests.

5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(I); see also 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a). However, the Act provides:

Documents shall be furnished without any charge or at a charge reduced below the fees established under clause (ii) if disclosure of the information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government and is not primarily in the commercial interest of the requester.

5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii) (1988 ed.). The burden of satisfying this two prong test remains on the requester. Larson v. Central Intelligence Agency, 843 F.2d 1481, 1483 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (per curiam) (Larson). The DOE has implemented the statutory standard for fee waiver in its FOIA regulations. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8). Those regulations set forth the following four factors which must be considered by the agency in order to determine whether the first statutory fee waiver condition has been met, i.e., that disclosure of the requested information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of government operations or activities:

(A) The subject of the request: Whether the subject of the requested records concerns "the operations or activities of the government;"

(B) The informative value of the information to be disclosed: Whether the disclosure is "likely to contribute" to an understanding of government operations or activities;

(C) The contribution to an understanding by the general public of the subject likely to result from disclosure; and

(D) The significance of the contribution to public understanding: Whether the disclosure is likely to contribute "significantly" to public understanding of government operations or activities.

10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(I). If the DOE finds that a request satisfies these four factors, it must also consider the following two factors in order to determine whether disclosure of the information is primarily in the commercial interest of the requester:

(A) The existence and magnitude of a commercial interest: Whether the requester has a commercial interest that would be furthered by the requested disclosure; and, if so

(B) The primary interest in disclosure: Whether the magnitude of the identified commercial interest of the requester is sufficiently large, in comparison with the public interest in disclosure, that disclosure is "primarily in the commercial interest of the requester."

10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(ii).

As an initial matter, we need not decide whether the inquiries NR made of KAP to consider whether KAP should receive a fee waiver were overly broad or inappropriate. In its Appeal, KAP has provided us with enough information so that we may apply the regulatory standards for granting a fee waiver ourselves. We do note however that the burden is on the requester to establish that the fee waiver standard has been met. Larson, 842 F.2d at 1483. Further, in order for an agency to have sufficient information to make a determination, it may request information from a requester who seeks a fee waiver. See McClellan Ecological Seepage Situation v. Carlucci, 835 F.2d 1282 at 1286-87 (9th Cir. 1987) (23 questions found not burdensome).

We have performed a de novo review of the merits of KAP's fee waiver request. For the purposes of our analysis we have analyzed each of KAP's FOIA Requests separately. As discussed below, we find that KAP is eligible for a fee waiver for some materials which may be located pursuant to its July 11, 1995 FOIA Request. However, we find that the material requested in the remaining three FOIA Requests would not significantly contribute to the public's understanding of governmental activities and operations since the information is already in the public domain or is trivial in nature. Thus, for the material located pursuant to those three requests, NR properly denied a fee waiver.

A. July 11 FOIA Request

KAP's July 11 FOIA Request asks for documents regarding the railroad cars and casks used to transport spent nuclear fuels by the U.S. Navy's and the DOE's naval nuclear reactor program. Specifically, KAP requests that it be provided documents which list each railroad car's serial number, location of the railroad car as of the date of the request, the type of cask mounted on each car, configuration of each cask, loading status of cars and casks, maintenance and repair status information regarding the railroad cars and casks. Additionally, KAP requests information which indicates which cars are used for transporting spent nuclear fuels on the Pearl Harbor Naval Shipyard-Bremerton-Idaho National Engineering Laboratory (INEL) route.

Factor A

First, a fee waiver is only appropriate where the subject matter of the requested records specifically concerns identifiable "operations or activities of the government." See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 772-75 (1989). In the present case, the requested documents are agency records that pertain to the identity, nature and status of nuclear fuel transport casks used by the DOE and the U.S. Navy. It is clear that the requested information concerns identifiable "operations and activities of the government."

Factor B

Second, the DOE must determine whether disclosure of information is "likely to contribute" to the public's understanding of the government operations and activities. The focus of this factor is on whether the information is already in the public domain or otherwise common knowledge among the general population. If the information is already publicly available, release to the requester would not contribute to public understanding and a fee waiver would not be appropriate. NR states that the EIS has already disclosed the number of casks at each naval shipyard. NR further asserts that information regarding railroad car serial numbers, cask configuration, location and the current maintenance status of the railroad cars and casks is not of general interest to the public especially since information regarding the location, casks configuration and maintenance and repair conditions of each car changes very quickly and is constantly outdated.

We disagree with NR's assertion about the extent of the public interest in the current maintenance and repair status of the railroad cars and casks. While the maintenance conditions change for the railroad cars and casks, the requested information could contribute to the public's understanding of potential risks, if any, associated with mechanical problems with the railroad cars and casks used to transport spent nuclear fuels. Moreover, NR has not asserted that information regarding the maintenance and repair status of the railroad cars and casks is in the public domain. Consequently, those documents relating to the maintenance and repair status of the railroad cars and casks meet the requirements of Factor B. However, KAP has not provided us with any specific information on how the other information requested in its July 11 FOIA request would contribute to the public's understanding of governmental operations. Further, it is not apparent to us how such information would significantly contribute to the public's understanding of government operations. Finally, we note that any material found pursuant to KAP's July 11 request that is already in the public domain need not be considered for fee waiver.

Factor C

Third, the requested disclosure must contribute to the understanding of the general public. To meet this test, the requester must have the ability and intention to disseminate this information to the public. James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,133 at 80,569 (1992). We were unable to obtain a copy of the article KAP cited in its Appeal. Consequently, pursuant to our request KAP has supplied us with NEXIS copies of five recent published articles where a KAP spokesman has been quoted. In one article KAP provided factual information regarding spent naval fuel containers. In three other articles, KAP representatives provided opinions regarding spent naval nuclear fuels. The fifth article contains a reference to KAP activities in spotting a transhipment of spent naval nuclear reactor fuels by rail.

In support of its assertion that KAP does not have the ability to disseminate information to the public, NR states that KAP's contributions to the media usually consist of inaccurate, incomplete or outdated information regarding events which were previously covered by the news media and that KAP has not shown a history of uncovering useful information. NR also asserts that KAP operates by contacting a local reporter regarding an issue and that the reporter then contacts the program office directly for further information. Thus, NR asserts that KAP does not itself disclose information to the public.

While this is a close case, we find that KAP has shown it has the ability to disseminate information it may obtain through in its FOIA Request. With the additional information which was provided to us on appeal, but not to NR in response to its determination letter, KAP has demonstrated a history of success in having facts and opinions published by the press regarding the ongoing controversy regarding spent nuclear fuels and their transport. Additionally, KAP has stated it has a contract with an educational public interest group, the Snake River Alliance, to publish a report based in part on any materials it may gather. As discussed above, NR has acknowledged that KAP has a history of being able to interest the media about the issues involving spent nuclear fuels. Consequently, we find that KAP has shown an ability to disseminate information to the public.

Factor D

Fourth, the requested disclosure must contribute significantly to public understanding of government operations or activities. The Department of Justice has suggested the following test for this factor:

To warrant a waiver or reduction of fees, the public's understanding of the subject matter in question, as compared to the level of public understanding existing prior to the disclosure, must be likely to be enhanced by the disclosure to a significant extent.

1995 Justice Department Guide to the Freedom of Information Act 381 (1995).

In the present case, KAP submits that disclosure of the requested information will contribute significantly to the public's understanding of government operations and activities relating to spent naval nuclear fuels. The requested information relates, in part, to the disclosure of possible maintenance problems with railroad cars used in the transport of spent naval reactor fuels. There is no doubt that the public's understanding of this aspect of the DOE's and the U.S. Navy's nuclear reactor program would likely be enhanced to a significant extent by the disclosure of this information. See Natural Resources Defense Council, 14 DOE ¶ 80,118 at 80,547 (1986) (NRDC).

In view of the foregoing considerations, we find that with regard to the July 11 FOIA request, KAP has satisfied the four factors which must be weighed by the agency in order to determine whether the first statutory fee waiver condition has been met, i.e. that disclosure of the requested information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of government operations or activities. We must next determine whether KAP has a commercial interest that would be furthered by the requested disclosure.

Commercial Interest

A "commercial interest" has been defined as "one that furthers a commercial, trade or profit interest as those are commonly understood." See 1995 Justice Department Guide to the Freedom of Information Act 382 (1995). KAP has stated that it has no commercial interest in the requested material and it intends to distribute the information it discovers through the press and public fact sheets. However, in its Appeal, it has also stated that it has a contract to produce a report for the Snake River Alliance and that it is seeking to use the information requested in its FOIA Requests to prepare that report. NR argues that this fact indicates that KAP has a commercial interest in material requested in its four FOIA requests.

A requester does not become ineligible for a fee waiver merely because it intends to sell a publication rather than disseminating the information gained through a FOIA Request for free. See NRDC. Given the current factual situation, we believe KAP's commercial interest in preparing a report for the Snake River Alliance is minor and in any case is not sufficient to warrant a denial of its fee waiver request with regard to the July 11 FOIA request concerning maintenance and repair information about railroad cars and casks. KAP is a nonprofit, public policy organization which has stated that it intends to distribute the information it obtains to the press and via public fact sheets. We have no evidence before us that indicates that the contract KAP has with the Snake River Alliance is a significant commercial interest especially given the fact that KAP has a history of more than 15 years of public advocacy regarding spent nuclear fuel issues. Consequently, we find that the public interest with regard to the release of material concerning maintenance and repair status of railroad cars and casks is significantly greater in magnitude than KAP's commercial interest. KAP should therefore be granted a fee waiver with regard to material concerning the maintenance and repair status of the railroad cars and casks.

B. July 12 FOIA Request

KAP's July 12 FOIA Request asks for copies of Bills of Lading for all shipments of spent naval reactor fuel made by the U.S. Navy and DOE's naval nuclear reactor program between 1954 and 1995.

After examining KAP's July 12 FOIA Request and NR's response, we must conclude that NR is not eligible for a fee waiver because the requested information would not significantly contribute to the public's understanding of governmental activities or operations. Specifically, we find that the information contained in the Bills of Lading would not be likely to contribute to the public's understanding about the shipment of spent nuclear fuels. NR has informed us that information contained in the Bills of Lading, such as point of origin of the shipment, core and container type, date of shipment and ship from which the fuel has been removed, has already been disclosed to the public in the EIS and is in the public domain. <1> Consequently, NR need not consider for a fee waiver any document found pursuant to KAP's July 12 FOIA Request.

C. July 13 FOIA Request

KAP's July 13, 1995 FOIA Request seeks documents requesting various information relating to U.S. Navy nuclear powered ships commissioned after February 10, 1994 (the date of a prior KAP FOIA Request). Specifically, it requests information relating to the hull number, date and location of commissioning, location of refuelling servicing, start and finish dates of refueling overhauls, the date the nuclear fuel was removed from these ships, nuclear core type removed from and installed in each ship, date of shipment to Idaho for each spent fuel assembly and the number and type of rail transport casks required for each shipment. The Request also asks for similar information regarding all decommissioned nuclear powered vessels. NR has informed us that most of the information requested by KAP pursuant to this Request, such as the hull number and date of commissioning and decommissioning of the ships, number and type of rail transport casks, and date of shipment of spent nuclear fuel, has already been provided to the public in the EIS or other publicly available documents. With regard to ships commissioned after February 10, 1994, such ships have not yet been refueled and thus no information exists regarding refueling operations. <2> From the information provided to us by NR it appears that most of the information sought by this request is already in the public domain and thus would not contribute to the public's understanding regarding the DOE and U.S. Navy's handling of spent nuclear fuel. Regarding the information not identified as in the public domain by NR, namely, the dates of the removal of nuclear fuel for commissioned and decommissioned ships, KAP has not provided any specific information indicating how this type of data would significantly contribute to the public's understanding of government activities or operations. Further, this information does not appear to us to be type of information that would significantly contribute to the public's understanding regarding the handling of spent nuclear fuel. Consequently, NR need not consider for a fee waiver any document retrieved pursuant to KAP's July 13, 1995 FOIA Request.

D. July 14 FOIA Request

In its July 14, 1995 FOIA Request, KAP requested a copy of a July 7, 1995 memorandum written by D.I. Curtis of NR requesting the DOE's Bettis Atomic Power Laboratory to begin detailed planning to develop new facilities for spent nuclear fuel management and storage (Curtis Memorandum). KAP also stated in its request that the memorandum had been released by the public relations staff at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory and that the memorandum had requested an "initial scoping report" within one week of the date of the memorandum. KAP also requested a copy of the initial scoping report and any documentation relating to further review and analysis of any alternative site planning for the handling of spent nuclear fuel.

In its response, NR has informed us that the documents that would be responsive to KAP's July 14 FOIA Request consist of internal predecisional recommendations that were performed by NR with regard to other sites for the handling of spent nuclear fuels. NR has informed us that since it has resolved a dispute it had with the State of Idaho regarding the disposition of spent nuclear fuels, no decision was made regarding the recommendations contained in these documents. Because these documents were internal deliberative, predecisional documents, NR states that most of the information contained in these documents would be protected from disclosure by Exemption 5 of the FOIA. The releasable portions of these documents would, in its opinion, not significantly contribute to the public's understanding regarding the DOE and U.S. Navy's handling of spent nuclear fuel. Given the factual background presented to us, we agree with NR. The documents described by the July 14 FOIA Request would most likely be of a type consisting of mostly predecisional, deliberative material. Further, since the NR dispute with the State of resolved regarding the issue of spent nuclear fuels, it is apparent that no final decision was made regarding the proposals set forth in the documents. <3> With regard to the requested Curtis Memorandum, KAP has stated that the memorandum has been publicly released. Providing it to KAP thus would not significantly contribute to the public's understanding of government operations and activities. Consequently, we find that NR need not consider for a fee waiver any document it locates pursuant to the July 14, 1995 FOIA request for a fee waiver.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the Knolls Action Project on October 13, 1995, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and is denied in all other respects.

(2) The fees assessed for complying with the July 11, 1995 Knolls Action Project FOIA Request with regard to documents concerning the maintenance and repair status of railroad cars and casks shall be waived.

<1>In its response, NR states that the information requested in the July 12, 1995 FOIA request can be found in Exhibit 4 submitted with KAP's Appeal.

<2>NR states that the EIS it prepared and released to the public does contain information regarding the 575 container shipments of spent nuclear fuel which are expected to be made from 1995 through 2035.

<3>In making our conclusion about the likely application of Exemption 5 to documents which may be found under this exemption, we do not express an opinion regarding the correctness of any future application of Exemption 5 to any specific document which may be found pursuant to this request. We merely find that, after likely redactions, the releasable portions of the responsive documents would not be likely to contribute significantly to the public's understanding of government operations.

November 28, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Burlin McKinney

Date of Filing: October 27, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0094

On October 27, 1995, Burlin McKinney filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him by the Assistant Inspector General for Investigations, Office of the Inspector General (the OIG). This determination was issued on October 16, 1995 in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the OIG to release information that it deleted from a document that it provided to Mr. McKinney.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public upon request, unless the DOE determines that disclosure is contrary to federal law or the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On May 23, 1995, Mr. McKinney requested "any records, documents, etc. that are related to the Beryllium program at the Y-12 Plant." The DOE's Oak Ridge Operations Office conducted a search for such documents, and a memorandum from the OIG to the Manager of the Oak Ridge Operations Office was identified as responsive to Mr. McKinney's request. Because the memorandum was generated by the OIG, the memorandum was referred to that Office for review.

The memorandum describes an interview that the OIG conducted with an individual concerning alleged safety violations at the Y-12 weapons facility in Oak Ridge, Tennessee. According to the memorandum, the individual also discussed allegations of misconduct on the part of the DOE contractor that operates the Y-12 facility and the contractor's supervisory personnel. A copy of the memorandum, with any portions tending to identify the individual deleted, was released to Mr. McKinney. In its determination, the OIG cites Exemptions 6 and 7(C) of the FOIA as justification for withholding the identity of the individual. Exemption 6 protects from mandatory disclosure "personnel and medical and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy...." Exemption 7(C) provides that "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes" may be withheld from disclosure, but only to the extent that the production of such documents "could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy...." In reaching its determination, the OIG stated that individuals involved in Office of Inspector General investigations are entitled to privacy protections so that they will be free from harassment, intimidation and other personal intrusions. The OIG further determined that release of the individual's identity was not in the public interest.

In his Appeal, Mr. McKinney acknowledges the general validity of the OIG's policy of withholding the identity of individuals who take part in OIG investigations. However, Mr. McKinney does not believe that policy is applicable in this case. In support of his belief, he cites a statement made by the author of the memorandum that the individual "... has expressed no desire for confidentiality." Therefore, Mr. McKinney believes that the individual's identity should be released.

II. Analysis

We have previously considered cases in which both Exemption 6 and 7(C) were invoked and we stated that in such cases we would analyze the withholding only under Exemption 7(C), the broader of the two Exemptions. See, e.g., Valley Times, 23 DOE ¶ 80,154 (1993) (Valley Times). Exemption 6 allows an agency to withhold information if its release would constitute a "clearly" unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). By contrast, Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, if its release could constitute a "reasonably" unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). In such cases, it is only necessary to address the application of Exemption 7(C) to the withheld material since the memorandum was compiled for law enforcement purposes and any material which satisfies Exemption 7(C)'s "reasonableness" standard will be protected. Similarly, information not protected by Exemption 7(C) will be unable to satisfy Exemption 6's more restrictive requirement that the release of the information constitutes a "clearly" unwarranted invasion of personal privacy.

The threshold test under Exemption 7(C) is whether the withheld information is compiled as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The Exemption 7 "law enforcement" exception to mandatory release of information under the FOIA encompasses compliance with both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974). The OIG is charged with investigating and correcting waste, fraud or abuse in programs administered or financed by the DOE. See Inspector General Act of 1978, codified as amended at 5 U.S.C. app. §§ 2(1)-(2), 4(a)(1), (3)-(4), (d), 6(a)(1)-(4), 7(a), 9(a)(1)(E). The memorandum provided to Mr. McKinney in redacted form was generated in the course of an OIG investigation into allegations of safety violations and management misconduct at the Oak Ridge facility. The memorandum was therefore compiled for law enforcement purposes within the meaning of Exemption 7(C).

In determining whether the release of law enforcement records could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, the courts have used a balancing test which weighs the privacy interests that would be infringed against the public's interest in disclosure. Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989). In this case, Mr. McKinney contends that the individual's privacy interests are minimal, given the statement in the memorandum that the individual has expressed no desire for confidentiality.

We disagree. The statement referred to by Mr. McKinney was made not by the individual, but by the author of the memorandum. It is the author's interpretation of the results of an IG investigator's interview with the individual, an interview in which the author may or may not have taken part. There is no indication in the record before us that the individual has ever expressly stated that he does not desire confidentiality.

Furthermore, even if the statement relied upon by Mr. McKinney accurately reflects the individual's position, it does not appear to apply to all of the allegations set forth in the memorandum. We have reviewed the memorandum as a whole, including the withheld information, and we conclude that the statement that the individual "... has expressed no desire for confidentiality" refers only to the individual's allegations of safety violations at the Y-12 weapons facility. There is no indication in the memorandum that the individual would want his identity as a participant in an OIG investigation or a source of information concerning alleged management misconduct to be revealed to the public.

We therefore believe that the individual retains a substantial interest in remaining anonymous. Revealing the individual's identity could subject the individual to harassment, retaliation, or invasions of privacy. See, e.g., Valley Times, 23 DOE at 80,632; James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1991). The public's interest in disclosure, on the other hand, does not warrant disclosure of the individual's identity since it would not add to the public's understanding of government operations. Indeed, the public interest is best served by protecting the identity of OIG's sources, in order to ensure that witnesses continue to voluntarily provide information in OIG investigations. Accordingly, we conclude that the OIG properly withheld information concerning the individual's identity.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Burlin McKinney on October 27, 1995 is hereby denied.

Case No. VFA-0095, 25 DOE ¶ 80,151

November 30, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: The National Security Archive

Date of Filing: October 31, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0095

On October 31, 1995, the National Security Archive (NSA) filed an Appeal from a Determination issued to it by the Office of Resource Management, Office of Policy (Policy) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that Determination, Policy stated that it was unable to locate any documents responsive to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. NSA challenges the adequacy of the search conducted by Policy.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been destroyed or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

I. Background

On July 27, 1995, NSA filed a request for information in which it sought records relating to certain meetings surrounding U.S.-Mexico oil negotiations during 1977 and 1978. The request for information was forwarded by the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts Division (FOIA Division) to Policy for a reply. On October 18, 1995, Policy issued a Determination which stated that it conducted a search for responsive documents and that no responsive documents had been found. On October 31, 1995, NSA filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). NSA asks that a new search for responsive documents be conducted. In its Appeal, NSA attached an extract from a 1979 report produced by the Senate Committee on Energy and Natural Resources entitled,"Mexico: The Promise and Problems of Petroleum" (Mexico extract).

II. Analysis

The OHA has consistently stated that a FOIA request warrants a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W.R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have remanded cases where it is evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., Cowles Publishing Co., 16 DOE ¶ 80,136 (1987); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In considering the present Appeal, we contacted both the FOIA Division and Policy to ascertain whether their search was reasonably calculated to uncover the information sought by NSA. The FOIA Division informed us that in addition to the search performed by Policy, a search had been performed of the Office of the Executive Secretariat (Executive Secretariat) and that no responsive documents had been found in either office. Executive Secretariat informed us that it had searched the databases that it maintains using string searches (searches using key words of names, places and dates as listed in the FOIA request) and found no responsive documents. However, in response to our inquiry, Executive Secretariat, using additional information included in the FOIA request and the Mexico extract provided by NSA on appeal, again searched the databases that it maintains. Through this second search, Executive Secretariat's History Division discovered nine classified documents which may be responsive to NSA's request.

Policy informed us that utilizing the information provided by NSA, it had searched all of its files that might pertain to the subject of the request and determined that it did not possess responsive documents. However, in response to our inquiry concerning the scope of the request, Policy contacted another office within the DOE which it believed might possess responsive information: the Economic Regulatory Administration (ERA) of the Office of General Counsel. Policy informs us that ERA is currently searching its files for responsive documents.

While we believe that Policy conducted a reasonable search for responsive documents in its files, it does not appear that the scope of the search was broad enough. We now know that Executive Secretariat possesses potentially responsive documents and that another office within the DOE may possess responsive information. In addition, the file concerning the FOIA Request filed by Alan Riding in 1983 should also be examined, as that request included some of the information sought here. See Alan Riding, 11 DOE ¶ 80,126 (1983). Accordingly, NSA's Appeal should be granted, and this matter remanded to the FOIA Division to (1) coordinate a search of ERA files for responsive documents, and (2) issue a new determination with regard to the newly discovered Executive Secretariat documents and the search of ERA files.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the National Security Archive on October 31, 1995, Case No. VFA-0095, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is remanded to the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts Division which shall coordinate a new search for information and cause a new Determination to be issued in accordance with the guidelines set forth in this Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Paul W. Fox

Date of Filing: November 1, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0096

On November 1, 1995, Paul W. Fox filed an Appeal from two determinations issued to him on September 29, 1995, and October 17, 1995, by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA). The determinations denied in part a request for information filed by him under the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552 (FOIA), as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Mr. Fox requests that we order the BPA to release the documents that were withheld in the determinations.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public upon request whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

The documents requested in this case pertain to the 1961 Columbia River Treaty between the United States and Canada. Pursuant to that treaty, Canada built three storage reservoirs in British Columbia on the Columbia River. In return, Canada is entitled to 50 percent of the increased power generated at U.S. hydroelectric facilities on the Columbia River as a result of this increased storage capacity (the Canadian entitlement). Canada sold its power entitlement to a group of U.S. utilities for 30-year terms, which expire between 1998 and 2003. If Canada decides to take its share of the power, under the Treaty, BPA may have to construct power lines to deliver it to the Canadian border. A tentative agreement between the U.S. and Canada provided for the U.S. government to purchase part of the Canadian power entitlement for $180 million. When the market value of electric power declined significantly after reaching the tentative agreement, the U.S. elected not to finalize the agreement. The documents at issue in this case primarily concern the development within BPA of the negotiating position it should take with Canada regarding how the Canadian entitlement will be delivered.

In its determinations, the BPA released a substantial number of documents. However it withheld 278 documents in whole or in part pursuant to Exemption 5 of the FOIA, which protects from disclosure "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5).

In his Appeal, Mr. Fox challenges the BPA's determinations. The Appellant argues that (1) the description of the withheld documents is inadequate, (2) the documents would not be exempt from discovery in litigation, (3) some of the requested documents are not inter- or intra-agency documents because they were created by or for parties outside of the government, (4) to the extent that the documents would otherwise satisfy the requirements of Exemption 5, BPA has waived any Exemption 5 privileges by disclosing the documents to third parties, and (5) BPA incorrectly declined to exercise its discretionary authority to release the documents in the public interest.

II. Adequacy of the Determination

The Appellant argues that the determinations do not establish that the requested documents are exempt from disclosure. He contends that BPA did not include a Vaughn index that provides a particularized and specific justification sufficient to demonstrate that each document is exempt from disclosure. See Vaughn v. Rosen, 484 F.2d 820 (D.C. Cir 1973); Coastal States Gas Corp. v. DOE, 617 F.2d 854, 861 (D.C. Cir. 1980).

We do not necessarily agree that BPA's determinations fail to meet the criteria for a Vaughn index. Nonetheless, we need not reach this issue. Vaughn indexes are not required at the administrative review level. They are designed to aid a court in determining whether documents were properly withheld without the necessity of performing an in camera document-by-document review. At the administrative level, the DOE conducts document-by-document reviews whenever appropriate, and the degree of specificity of a Vaughn index is not required. See, e.g., Rockwell Int'l, 21 DOE ¶ 80,105 at 80,527 (1991).

We have also held that a requester should not be forced to hazard a guess as to the nature of the withheld material. Thus, a requester must be given a description of the withheld documents that is sufficient to allow the requester (1) to ascertain whether the claimed exemptions under which the documents were withheld reasonably apply to the documents, and (2) to formulate a meaningful appeal. See, e.g., James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,164 (1992); Harold Fine, 17 DOE ¶ 80,136 at 80,588 (1988); Arnold & Porter, 12 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,527 (1984). Generally, a description is adequate if each document is identified by a brief description of the subject matter it discusses and, if available, the date upon which the document was produced and its authors and recipients.<1> The index need not, however, contain information that would compromise the privileged nature of the documents. Id. at 80,527. A determination must also adequately justify the withholding of documents by explaining briefly how the claimed exemption applies to the document. Id.

BPA's determinations in this case reasonably described the documents and explained why BPA believes they are exempt from mandatory disclosure. The determinations make clear that BPA gave serious thought to the reasons why the documents should be withheld. BPA therefore adequately described the documents and its reasons for withholding them.

III. Exemption 5

Exemption 5 is generally recognized as encompassing certain distinct privileges, primarily the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege, and the governmental deliberative process privilege. See, e.g., Coastal States Gas Corp. v. DOE, 617 F.2d 854 (D.C. Cir. 1980). All of the documents withheld by the BPA in this case were withheld pursuant to the deliberative process privilege. With respect to 14 of the documents, BPA also relied upon the attorney-client or work-product privileges as additional grounds for withholding. In this section, we discuss the considerations guiding our application of Exemption 5.

A. Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege shields from disclosure documents which were created as part of the agency's decision-making process. Darci L. Rock, 13 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1985); Texaco Inc., 1 DOE ¶ 80,242 (1978). The courts have identified three main purposes for this privilege. One of these is the need to avoid misleading the public by the release of documents that are only the opinion of the author and do not reflect the actual rationale for the agency's action. Another is to protect against premature release of policies and decisions before formal adoption. The paramount rationale is to insure open, uninhibited, and robust debate of various options so that the final decisionmaker has the benefit of thoroughly evaluated options by eliminating the fear of disclosure of preliminary viewpoints. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866; Jordan v. United States Department of Justice, 591 F.2d 753, 772-73 (D.C. Cir. 1978). By shielding developing governmental deliberations from public scrutiny, the quality of final governmental decisions is enhanced. NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149-51 (1975).

The privilege protects from disclosure materials which contain opinions, analyses or recommendations concerning possible actions that reflect personal opinions of the writer rather than the policy of the agency. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The factors that should be weighed to determine whether a document deliberative in nature and therefore protected by the privilege include: (i) whether the document reflects the give-and-take of the consultative process; (ii) whether the document is "predecisional" (i.e., whether it was generated before the adoption of an agency policy); (iii) whether the document is so candid or personal in nature that public disclosure would stifle honest and frank communication in the future; and (iv) whether the document is recommendatory in nature. Id. See also Industrial Sprinkler Co., 12 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1984); Texaco, 1 DOE at 81,259. Accordingly, not all inter- or intra-agency memoranda come within the scope of the privilege. Rather, only documents that are part of the agency's deliberative process are protected by the privilege.<2>

B. Qualified Privilege for Commercial Information

Although not relied upon by BPA in its determinations, it is evident that many of the documents at issue here fall within the scope of the qualified privilege for commercial information. BPA is little different from any other business with respect to its dealings with Canada. Courts recognize a limited privilege with respect to commercial government information. The privilege is similar in scope to Exemption 4 which applies to commercial information submitted by parties outside the government. See Federal Open Mkt. Comm. v. Merrill, 443 U.S. 340 (1979); Morrison-Knudsen Co. v. Department of the Army, 595 F. Supp 352 (D.D.C. 984), aff'd, 762 F.2d 138 (D.C. Cir. 1985). In the present case, if Canadian negotiators had access to the studies, estimates, and position papers involved in this request, it could seriously undermine BPA's negotiating posture. Also, public access to this information might undermine BPA's position when negotiating with utilities and other purchasers of power. As one court explained, "Requiring the agency to tip its hand by compelling disclosure of its cost estimates could destroy all incentive a firm would have to propose a lower price." Hack v. Department of Energy, 538 F. Supp. 1098, 1104 (D.D.C. 1982). This privilege is limited. Once the reason for finding documents privileged is over (e.g., the negotiations are complete), the documents may no longer be withheld.

C. Segregation & Release of Non-Exempt Information

The presence in a document of some material which is exempt from disclosure does not necessarily make the entire document exempt. The FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b) (1982). See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 89, 91 (1973); Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Air Force, 556 F.2d 242, 259-62 (D.C. Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 927 (1978); Casson, Calligaro & Mutryn, 10 DOE ¶ 80,137 at 80,615 (1983). However, segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary where it is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material so that release of the non-exempt material would "compromise" the withheld material, or where the amount of non-exempt material is small and so interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate. Lead Indus. Ass'n v. OSHA, 610 F.2d 70, 83-86 (2d Cir. 1979).

IV. Application of the Exemption

The documents at issue here were created (1) as part of BPA's development of policy concerning how the United States should comply with its obligations under the Columbia River Treaty and (2) for use in developing BPA's negotiating strategy with Canada over these obligations. We have carefully examined these documents, and with certain exceptions set forth below, we find that BPA correctly found that these documents fall within the scope of Exemption 5. Release of the deliberative material in these documents could interfere with the frank exchange of written views within BPA in the future. This is precisely the type of information that the deliberative process privilege was intended to shield from public scrutiny. Release of material upon which BPA is basing its negotiating posture with Canada over the Columbia River Treaty could undermine its position.

A. Whether Certain Documents are Intra-Agency Memoranda

The threshold requirement for applying Exemption 5 is that the documents must be inter- or intra-agency documents. The Exemption does not ordinarily apply to documents prepared by or for persons outside of the government. However, government contractors, outside attorneys, consultants, and similar agents are considered part of the agency when applying Exemption 5. A number of documents at issue in this proceeding were created by the Mid-Columbia Participants or their attorneys or consultants (MCPs), or were given to the MCPs. The MCPs are a coalition of private power companies that have a contractual relationship with BPA and generate about 30 percent of the power resulting from the Columbia River Treaty. The MCPs are responsible to BPA for returning their share of the Canadian entitlement. Any agreement between BPA and Canada over return of the Canadian entitlement may require the cooperation and agreement of the MCPs. For example, if Canada agrees to sell part of its entitlement, it may be to the MCPs, who would be responsible for financing and paying the purchase price. BPA gave copies of certain documents pertaining its negotiations with Canada to the MCPs. This sharing of information occurred because BPA and the MCPs have some common interests with respect to the Canadian power entitlement. The Appellant argues in this case that the MCPs should not be considered part of the government and that documents prepared by them or for them cannot be inter- or intra-agency documents. He maintains that in other matters, the MCPs have interests adverse to BPA. He also contends that BPA waived any privilege it might have had with respect to otherwise internal memoranda if it provided copies of those memoranda to the MCPs.<3>

We reject the Appellant's contention that no document that was given to, or originated with, the MCPs can be an intra-agency document. While some documents produced by the MCPs qualify as agency records, based upon the record before us, we are unable to conclude that all such documents so qualify. It is clear that the MCPs have a vital interest in the negotiations over the Canadian entitlement. However, the existence of an interest in common with BPA does not necessarily make them always part of the agency for purposes of the FOIA. Conversely, the fact that the MCPs might have interests adverse to BPA with respect to other matters does not imply that they cannot be considered government consultants with respect to the Canadian entitlement negotiations. We shall therefore remand this matter to BPA for a new determination with respect to each withheld document that passed between BPA and the MCPs. That determination must explain, as a threshold matter, why the document should be treated as an intra-agency memorandum. One important factor that BPA should consider in determining whether a particular document is an intra-agency record is the purpose for which it was created. Documents prepared by the MCPs primarily at the request of BPA in order to assist it in developing its position may be deemed intra-agency since the MCPs under such circumstances would be acting as government consultants. Documents prepared by the MCPs' primarily for their own purposes are less likely to be intra-agency documents. For example, a number of documents are memoranda of meetings between the MCPs and Canadian authorities. Unless the MCPs were acting on behalf of BPA in these meetings, it is unlikely that these memoranda are intra-agency documents. We must emphasize, however, that a determination that a document submitted by the MCPs is not an intra-agency record does not necessarily mean that it must be released to the Appellant. BPA should also consider whether such records should be withheld pursuant to FOIA Exemption 4 which protects from disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). See generally Critical Mass Energy Proj. v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (en banc), cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1579 (1993).

We also find that BPA did not waive its privilege with respect to otherwise exempt documents by providing copies of them to the MCPs. Limited disclosure to parties outside of the government in furtherance of a legitimate governmental purpose does not waive an agency's right to withhold those documents from the general public. See generally, Cooper v. Department of the Navy, 558 F.2d 274, 278, (5th Cir. 1977), modified, 594 F.2d 484 (5th Cir. 1979); Badhwar v. Department of the Air Force, 629 F. Supp. 478, 481 (D.D.C. 1986), remanded on other grounds, 829 F.2d 182 (D.C. Cir. 1987). BPA has a legitimate interest in obtaining the views of the MCPs concerning the Canadian entitlement. In developing its negotiating stance, BPA must consider whether the MCPs are willing, and under what conditions and for what price, to purchase part of that entitlement. It would be difficult, if not impossible, for BPA to decide on its negotiating position without considering the views of the MCPs, and it would be difficult for the MCPs to develop their position if BPA did not share reports, estimates, and other confidential information.

B. Estimates of Costs & Capacity

Approximately one-third of the documents at issue in this proceeding include estimates of items such as the value of Canada's power entitlement and the cost, under various scenarios, of delivering that entitlement to Canada. The Appellant contends that the fact that BPA conducted studies or made estimates does not necessarily mean that they were deliberative, particularly if they are based upon publicly available figures, rates, or assumptions.

The Appellant's contention in this regard is not convincing. These estimates and projections are not routine computations over which the agency has little discretion and which would for that reason fall outside the scope of Exemption 5. These estimates were made to aid BPA in determining the best way to fulfill its obligations under the Columbia River Treaty. It is irrelevant whether the estimates are based upon publicly available figures. In the circumstances presented, release of either the assumptions upon which they are based or the scenarios under consideration by BPA would reveal, and could interfere with, the deliberative process. See Quarles v. Department of the Navy, 893 F.2d 390 (D.C. Cir. 1990). Moreover, if these estimates became available to Canadian authorities, it could undermine BPA's negotiating posture. This group of documents is protected by both the deliberative process privilege and the qualified privilege for commercial information and was therefore properly withheld under Exemption 5.

C. Summaries of Meetings & Telephone Conversations

The deliberative process privilege does not shield from disclosure purely factual information. As a rule, facts fall within the privilege only if the selection of certain facts vis-a-vis other facts would reveal the deliberative process or where the facts are inextricably intertwined with exempt material. The Appellant notes that 27 of the documents in this case are described as notes of meetings or telephone conversations. He contends that factual summaries of what transpired during these meetings and conversations are not withholdable under Exemption 5.

Several of these documents report meetings or conversations with solely governmental personnel, and record the opinions and views of those present.<4> These are clearly deliberative in character and fall within the scope of Exemption 5. The remainder of these documents, however, involve meetings and conversations with Canadian authorities. The input of outside parties cannot be part of the governmental deliberative process. To the extent, however, that these reports reflect a subjective selection of facts, they may be withheld. Nevertheless, we note in this regard that "A report does not become part of the deliberative process merely because it contains only those facts which the person making the report thinks material. If this were not so, every factual report would be protected . . . ." Playboy Enters. v. Department of Justice, 677 F.2d 931, 935 (D.C. Cir 1982). Consequently, purely factual descriptions of what transpired during these meetings and conversations which occurred cannot be withheld pursuant to the deliberative process privilege.<5> Many of the reports are peppered with subjective observations and evaluations about what occurred, and such subjective comments may properly fall within the Exemption. These documents will therefore be remanded to BPA for release of those non-deliberative portions unless BPA finds that they may be withheld pursuant to another Exemption.

D. Drafts

Document 11 cited in the September 29 determination was withheld solely because it was a draft. It appears that other documents may also have been withheld for this reason, but the determinations are unclear about this. We previously determined that drafts are by their very nature deliberative and could be withheld. James L. Schwab, 23 DOE ¶ 80,144 at 80,609 (1993). However, we recently reevaluated this position in view of the guidance contained in the Memorandum from Janet Reno, Attorney General of the United States, to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993) (Reno Memorandum). See also Memorandum from William Jefferson Clinton, President of the United States, to Heads of Departments and Agencies, 29 Weekly Comp. Pres. Doc. (No. 40) 1999, 2000 (Oct. 11, 1993) (noting the importance of FOIA and its centrality to the Reinventing Government initiative). That Memorandum indicates that whether or not there is a legally correct application of an exemption, it is the policy of the Department of Justice to defend the assertion of a FOIA exemption only in those cases where the agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would be harmful to an interest protected by that exemption. See Reno Memorandum, at 1, 2 (Oct. 4, 1993). As the Attorney General stated, an agency should withhold information "only in those cases where the agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would be harmful to an interest protected by that exemption. Where an item of information might technically or arguably fall within an exemption, it ought not be withheld from a FOIA requester unless it need be." Id. See also Mapother v. Department of Justice, 3 F.3d 1533, 1537-38 (D.C. Cir. 1993). Consequently, we have held that drafts should be released unless the agency can articulate a reasonably foreseeable specific harm to a specific interest protected by an exemption. William D. Lawrence, 24 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,599 (1994). Accordingly, we shall remand this matter to BPA to consider whether, in light of the Reno

Memorandum, Document 11 or any other documents or portions of documents withheld because they were drafts should continue to be withheld.

E. Non-Exempt Material & Release in the Public Interest

As noted above, the FOIA requires that any reasonably segregable non-exempt portion of a document be released. In addition, the fact that portions of the Report fall within a statutory exemption does not necessarily preclude release of the material. DOE regulations provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall be released, regardless of their exempt status, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1. In considering whether documents should be released in the public interest, due regard should be paid to the Reno Memorandum discussed above, which holds that an FOIA exemption should be asserted only where the agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would be harmful to an interest protected by that exemption.

Our review of the documents at issue in this proceeding reveals that some of them contain information primarily of a factual character that appears not to fall within an exemption, or if it is exempt, would harm no significant interest if released. For example, Documents 2, 18 and 20 contain portions that appear only to describe the Columbia River Treaty or the current status of the negotiations. Documents 127 and 128 were released except for handwritten comments in their margins. These comments appear to be minor editorial suggestions and it is doubtful that their release would harm the deliberative process. Similarly, Document 91 is an E-mail message that concerns the setting up of a technical team, which does not appear to contain anything of substance. Upon remand, BPA shall review the documents withheld to determine whether they contain additional non-exempt information or should be released in the public interest.

Accordingly, we shall grant the present Appeal in part. This matter will be remanded to BPA to issue a new determination in accordance with the foregoing Decision.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1)The Appeal filed by the Paul W. Fox on November 1, 1995 is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and is in all other respects denied.

(2)This matter is remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration which shall promptly issue a revised determination in accordance with the foregoing Decision.

(3)This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>The Appellant complains that the descriptions of some of the documents do not give a date or identify the authors. In these instances this information was not available because the documents are undated or their authors are unknown. An agency does not forfeit its ability to withhold exempt documents merely because some facts normally given in a description are unknown.

<2>The Appellant contends that BPA has not demonstrated that the documents at issue are deliberative in nature because BPA failed to specify, as allegedly required by law, what decisions were being considered when the documents were generated. This argument is both factually and legally incorrect. BPA clearly indicates in its determinations that the documents relate to the U.S. decision to terminate the "Memorandum of Negotiators Agreement," and to what position the U.S. should take with respect to disposition of the Canadian entitlement. Moreover, agencies need not point to a particular decision for which a document is prepared. As part of an agency's continuing process of examining its policies, deliberative documents may be generated concerning matters that will not necessarily ripen into agency decisions. City of Virginia Beach v. Department of Commerce, 995 F.2d 1247, 1253 (4th Cir. 1993) (quoting NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. at 151—52 nn. 18—19). The development of BPA's negotiating position is an ongoing process that will not be completed until the negotiations are complete.

<3>Document 256 was produced by the Northwest Power Planning Council, and the Appellant argues that it too cannot be an intra-agency document. The Council, however, was created by a federal statute that provides that the rules governing disclosure of documents applicable to BPA shall be applicable to the Council. 16 U.S.C. § 839b(a)(4). Under these circumstances, we find that the document is an intra-agency document to which Exemption 5 may be applied.

<4>From the present record, it is not possible for us to identify the affiliation of all the individuals present at these meetings. Consequently, we cannot determine in all cases which documents report on meetings of only government employees.

<5>Exemption 4, however, might apply to some of this material. Exemption 4 could protect any interest that the government of Canada might have in keeping the substance of the negotiations confidential. Moreover, Exemption 4 could also apply to the extent that the MCPs submitted information when not acting as part of the agency.

Case No. VFA-0097, 25 DOE ¶ 80,160

January 18, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: VECTRA Government Services, Inc.

Date of Filing: December 12, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0097

On December 12, 1995, VECTRA Government Services, Inc., completed its filing of an Appeal from a determination issued to the company by the Rocky Flats Field Office (Rocky Flats) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Authorizing Official partially denied a request for information filed by VECTRA on February 9, 1994, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to (1) release the information that was withheld in its determination; and (2) conduct a further search for documents responsive to VECTRA's request.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

This FOIA Appeal arises from a procurement action designed to award a contract for Technical and Management Support Services at Rocky Flats. The review process included an evaluation of the bidders' technical and cost proposals by a Source Evaluation Board (SEB). During the review process, bidders were invited to submit Best and Final Offers (BAFOs). Following the submission of the BAFOs, there was a reranking of the bidders. A contract was awarded to the Science Applications International Corporation (SAIC). The Appellant (formerly ABB-Government Services, Inc.) was among the unsuccessful bidders. The Appellant contends that the SEB determined that the contract should have been awarded to it, but that the decision was overridden.

On February 9, 1994, VECTRA submitted a FOIA request to Rocky Flats asking for information concerning the procurement process. In its October 16, 1995 determination, Rocky Flats granted certain portions of the request. However, it denied the request for certain documents generated by the SEB under Exemption 5 of the FOIA.<1>Rocky Flats further indicated that there were no documents responsive to the request for documents containing any "findings/decision to override SEB selection."

VECTRA's appeal claimed that the evaluative portions of the SEB Report were wrongfully withheld and that Rocky Flats failed to perform an adequate search for documents regarding what VECTRA claims was a decision to override the SEB selection.<2>As detailed below, we found that VECTRA's arguments are without merit.

II. Analysis

A. Exemption 5

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In the present case, only the "deliberative process" privilege is at issue.

The "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5 permits the government to withhold documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government decisions and policies are formulated. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. This privilege was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making government decisions. EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939 (Cl. Ct. 1958)) (Mink). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151. In order to properly withhold information under the deliberative process privilege, the information in question must be both predecisional and deliberative. Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F. 2d 1136, 1143-44 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

In the instant case, VECTRA is seeking only the evaluative portions of the SEB report including all findings and rankings. We have consistently found that the evaluative portions of SEB reports meet the Exemption 5 criteria and therefore may be withheld.<3>This information reflects the SEB opinions on the relative merits of the proposals. This information is deliberative and is exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 5. See, e.g., Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, 20 DOE ¶ 80,165 at 80,685-86 (1991); Metrix Int'l, Inc., 20 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,546-47 (1990); Holmes & Naver, Inc., 9 DOE ¶ 80,140 (1982); Exxon Nuclear Co., 5 DOE ¶ 80,151 (1980).

Nevertheless, the Appellant contends that if the names of the government deliberators were withheld, then the disclosure of the evaluative portions of the SEB report would not interfere with the deliberative process. Appellant's argument is without merit. The purpose of the deliberative process privilege is to protect the free flow of information within the government. This free flow of information can be inhibited not only by fear of personal revelations, but also by concerns such as publicizing preliminary ideas which are never adopted and misleading the public. These concerns would not be mitigated by merely withholding the names of the government employees involved in the decision-making process.

Moreover, the release of this information would not be in the public interest because the ability and willingness of the evaluators to make honest and open recommendations could be compromised if they knew that this information would be released. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1. If employees were to become inhibited in their recommendations, the agency would be deprived of the benefit of their open and candid opinions. Consequently, Rocky Flats properly withheld the evaluative portions of the SEB Report.

B. The Adequacy of the Search for Responsive Documents

The Appellant claims that Rocky Flats failed to search adequately for documentation to support its allegation that the SEB selection was overridden. As detailed below, we are not persuaded by the Appellant's contention.

We have held that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we find that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g., Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1993); Marlene R. Flor, 23 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1993); Native Americans for a Clean Environment, 23 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1993). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive: "[t]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to the agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted Mary Hammack, FOIA/Privacy Act Officer at Rocky Flats, to discuss the search for documents concerning whether the SEB selection was overridden. Ms. Hammack informed us that if such documents existed, they would be located in the Rocky Flats Contracts Division. She further stated that she and Ralph Riccio, contracts specialist and custodian of the records relating to the contract at issue, performed an extensive search of the administrative records of the Contracts Division and no records responsive to this portion of the request were found.<4>Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Linda Lazarus, Staff Attorney, Office of Hearings and Appeals, and Mary Hammack, FOIA and Privacy Act Officer, Rocky Flats (December 19, 1995).

Based on these statements, we are convinced that Rocky Flats followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the materials sought by the Appellant in this portion of its FOIA request and that no such documents are in the possession of DOE. Furthermore, as noted above, the evaluative portions of the SEB Report were properly withheld under Exemption 5 of the FOIA. Accordingly, VECTRA's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal completed by VECTRA on December 12, 1995, is hereby denied.

<1>/ Rocky Flats also denied this information based upon Exemption 3 of the FOIA. However, as the decision to withhold these documents can be fully justified based upon Exemption 5, we need not reach the issue of whether the documents were properly withheld under Exemption 3.

<2>/ The scope of VECTRA's appeal was clarified during three telephone conversations between Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney, and George Klein, Contracts Manager of VECTRA, (December 1, 11, and 12, 1995). During these conversations, Mr. Klein indicated that VECTRA wished to challenge only those portions of the October 16, 1995 determination which (1) withheld the evaluative material contained in the SEB report; or (2) indicated that no documents had been found regarding any findings or decision to override the SEB selection.

<3>/ Source evaluation board reports typically contain at least some information that is not properly withheld under the deliberative process privilege. For example, material such as the table of contents and the section descriptions which serve only to orient the reader are neither predecisional nor deliberative. Moreover, descriptive passages which merely set forth factual and historical information are not withholdable under Exemption 5. Additionally, the evaluation criteria themselves are not deliberative, since they are not recommendations. See Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, 20 DOE ¶ 80,165 at 80,685-86. However, in the instant case the Appellant does not seek this material. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney, and George Klein, Contracts Manager of VECTRA (December 12, 1995). Therefore, Rocky Flats is not required to segregate this material and provide it to the Appellant.

<4>VECTRA has not submitted any evidence that documents exist to support its claim that the SEB had initially determined that the contract should have been awarded to it, but that this decision was overridden. Nonetheless, we note that a firm's ranking might have been changed by the SEB during the evaluation process after receipt of the BAFOs. Information concerning such a reranking would be included in the deliberative portion of the SEB report that we have found falls within the scope of Exemption 5.

December 13, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C.

Date of Filing: November 14, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0098

On November 14, 1995, Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C., filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on November 2, 1995, by the FOIA Officer of the Oak Ridge Operations Office (FOIA Officer) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the FOIA Officer determined that no documents could be found responsive to the appellant's October 3, 1995 request for information under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

I. Background

In its request for information, Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C. sought a copy of any documents pertaining to Armstrong Contracting and Supply's (a.k.a. ACandS, Inc) sale of any asbestos-containing material for use at the Oak Ridge Reservation and documents pertaining to contracts governing performance by Armstrong Contracting and Supply at Oak Ridge from 1958 through 1975. In her determination, the FOIA Officer stated that a thorough search of the files at the Oak Ridge Operations Office was unsuccessful in locating any records responsive to the appellant's request. In its Appeal, the appellant contends that the DOE's search was inadequate. The Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to conduct a further search for documents responsive to the October 3, 1995 FOIA request.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that an FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). When an agency reports that no responsive documents can be found, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original). In addition, in previous cases we have held that challenges to the adequacy of the agency's search must be supported by the presentation of some evidence that a requested document, unidentified by the agency in its search, does in fact exist. See Sun Co., 11 DOE ¶ 80,114 (1983); Vinson & Elkins, 4 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1979).

In order to determine whether an agency's search was adequate, its actions are examined under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In its Appeal, the appellant contends that responsive documents must exist in the federal repository in Atlanta. Specifically, the appellant states that it has been told by contractors who worked at Oak Ridge that responsive records were delivered to the DOE and stored in Atlanta.

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted the FOIA Officer at the Oak Ridge Operations Office to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed.<1>From these conversations it is clear that an adequate search for responsive documents was performed at the Oak Ridge Operations Office. Nonetheless, the search was limited to the Oak Ridge Office. Since the FOIA Officer confirmed that there is a reasonable possibility that responsive documents may exist at the repository in Atlanta, we will remand the case to the Oak Ridge Operations Office for a search of the Atlanta repository.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C.. on November 14, 1995 is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Oak Ridge Operations Office of the Department of Energy for a search of the repository in Atlanta for any documents responsive to the Freedom of Information Act request filed by Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C. on October 3, 1995. Any documents found to be responsive to this request shall be released or a detailed explanation as to why the information is exempt from public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act shall be provided.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

December 13, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: U.S. Ecology, Inc.

Date of Filing: November 14, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0099

On November 14, 1995, U.S. Ecology, Inc. (USE) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on October 30, 1995, by the Office of External Affairs (OEA), a unit of the Richland Operations Office of the U. S. Department of Energy (DOE/RL). In that determination, the OEA denied partially USE's request for information filed pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the requested information.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by federal agencies be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On September 29, 1995, USE filed a request for information in which it sought "all documents and communications pertaining to the receipt, discussion or evaluation by DOE or Westinghouse Hanford personnel of the February 1994 and/or July 31, 1995 unsolicited proposals submitted by USE." See Letter from Barry Bede, Vice President, USE, to FOIA Officer and Unsolicited Proposal Coordinator, DOE (September 29, 1995). This request was forwarded to the OEA. On October 30, 1995, the OEA responded to USE's request by sending responsive documents it deemed releasable and information on obtaining one responsive document that is available to the public. See Letter from Director, OEA, DOE/RL to Barry C. Bede, USE (October 30, 1995) ("determination letter"). The determination letter also stated that some responsive documents which had originated at DOE headquarters in Washington, D.C. were sent to that office for review.<1> Finally, the determination letter stated that although OEA had located an issue paper regarding "a proposed contract at DOE/RL," this paper was being withheld pursuant to Exemption 3 of the FOIA and the Procurement Integrity Act ("PIA"), 41 U.S.C. § 423. See Determination Letter at 1. The OEA considered this document to be "source selection information"<2> which is required by the PIA to be withheld from the public during a federal procurement. Id. USE contends that this decision should be reconsidered, and filed this Appeal to request the release of the issue paper.

II. Analysis

Exemption 3 of the FOIA allows the withholding of information prohibited from disclosure by another federal statute only if that statute "(A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matters to be withheld." 5 U.S.C.A. § 552(b)(3); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). A statute falls within the exemption's coverage if it satisfies either of Exemption 3's tests. See Long v. IRS, 742 F.2d 1173, 1178 (9th Cir. 1984). The D.C. Circuit has stated that the Exemption 3 analysis under the FOIA is not dependent on the factual content of the documents at issue; instead "the sole issue for decision is the existence of a relevant statute and the inclusion of withheld material within the statute's coverage." Fitzgibbon v. CIA, 911 F.2d 755, 761 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (Fitzgibbon) (quoting Association of Retired Railroad Workers v. U.S. Railroad Retirement Board, 830 F.2d 331, 336 (D.C. Cir. 1987)).

The Supreme Court has established a two-prong standard of review for Exemption 3 cases. See CIA v. Sims, 471 U.S. 159, 167 (1985); Fitzgibbon, 911 F.2d at 761 (applying the Sims test). First, it must be determined whether the statute in question is a statute of exemption as contemplated by Exemption 3. Id. at 167. Second, the withheld material must satisfy the criteria of the exemption statute.

A. The Procurement Integrity Act

We have concluded in previous decisions that the PIA, 41 U.S.C.A. § 423(a)-(p), is a statute of exemption as contemplated by Exemption 3. See Energy Research Corporation, 21 DOE ¶ 80,130 at 80,600 (1991) (affirming the withholding of winning proposal and preliminary contract before conclusion of final contract negotiations and award of final contract) (Energy Research); Olin Pantex, Inc., 21 DOE ¶ 80,152 (affirming the withholding of information on winning proposal); John T. Allen, 23 DOE ¶ 80,131 (1993) (affirming the withholding of proposals submitted to DOE before contract award as proprietary information); Federal Sources, Inc., 24 DOE ¶ 80,141 (1994) (affirming the withholding of DOE documents containing procurement information prior to release of RFP and contract award).

The PIA is a federal statute that contains language specifically prohibiting the authorizing official from releasing protected information. The statute states, in pertinent part, that:

[d]uring the conduct of any Federal agency procurement of property or services, no person who is given authorized or unauthorized access to proprietary or source selection information regarding such procurement, shall knowingly dislose such information, directly or indirectly, to any person other than a person authorized by the head of such an agency or the contracting officer to receive such information.

41 U.S.C.A. § 423(d).

The PIA therefore meets the subpart (A) requirement of allowing contracting officials no discretion whatsoever in withholding certain information. Having satisfied the threshold inquiry by classifying the PIA as a statute of exemption, we must now determine if the information withheld from FSI satisfies the criteria of the statute.

B. The Withheld Material

To satisfy the exemption, the issue paper withheld from USE must meet the criteria laid out above in 41 U.S.C.A. § 423(d). We conclude that this information was properly withheld for the following reasons.

1. The Withheld Document Was Properly Considered Source Selection Material

The issue paper is a two-page document, written in August 1995, that discusses USE's unsolicited proposal. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dorothy Riehle, OEA, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (December 7, 1995). In its evaluation of the proposal, the document reveals information that was used to create the "scope of work" section of a draft RFP for the new DOE/RL management contract that was issued to the public in August 1995. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Ted Turpin, DOE/RL, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (December 7, 1995). Because the procurement is ongoing, the OEA contends that release of the issue paper to USE would jeopardize the procurement process and result in "substantial competitive harm" if released prior to contract award. E.g., Energy Research Corp. at 80,601; Olin Pantex , Inc., 21 DOE ¶ 80,152 at 80,653 (1991). We agree, and after reviewing the document find that the issue paper is source selection information as contemplated by the PIA, and thus required to be properly secured to prevent disclosure to a competing contractor. 41 U.S.C.A. § 423(p)(7).

2. The Document Was Withheld During The Conduct of an Agency Procurement

USE requested information from the OEA in September 1995. We have determined that a federal agency procurement was well underway by the request date. DOE/RL is changing its operations from management by a "management and operations" contractor to management by a "management and integration" contractor. In conjunction with this change, the agency initiated a new procurement for operation of the Hanford facility. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Ted Turpin, DOE/RL, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, Staff Attorney, OHA (December 7, 1995). Low level waste disposal is one of the services to be procured. In August 1995, DOE/RL issued a draft request for proposal ("RFP") for bids on the contract which was expected to be awarded in June 1996. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Yvonne Sherman, FOIA Officer, OEA, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, Staff Attorney, OHA (December 6, 1995).

The term "during the conduct of any Federal agency procurement of property or services" means the period beginning on the earliest specific date on which an authorized official orders or requests one of eight actions listed in the PIA, including "[t]he preparation or issuance of a procurement solicitation in that procurement." 41 U.S.C.A. § 423(p). See also Energy Research Corp. at 80,600. Because issuance of the draft RFP is a qualifying action, and the request was made after the draft RFP was issued, we find that this document was withheld during the conduct of an agency procurement. Federal Sources Inc., 24 DOE ¶ 80,141 (1994); John Allen, 23 DOE ¶ 80,131 (1993).

III. Conclusion

We find that the issue paper relating to unsolicited USE proposals was properly withheld by the OEA under Exemption 3 of the FOIA. The issue paper is source selection information which, if released, could jeopardize the integrity or successful completion of an ongoing procurement action. Accordingly, the Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by U. S. Ecology, Inc., on November 14, 1995, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0100, 25 DOE ¶ 80,161

January 22, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Terrence Willingham

Date of Filing: December 14, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0100

On December 14, 1995, Terrence Willingham filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on October 17, 1995 by the Freedom of Information and Privacy Act Division of the Office of the Executive Secretariat (ES) of the Department of Energy (DOE). <1> In his Appeal, Willingham asserts that ES failed to perform an adequate search for responsive documents regarding two Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) Requests he submitted on March 9, 1995 and June 2, 1995.

I. Background

On March 9, 1995, Willingham filed a FOIA Request with ES requesting documents regarding 21 categories of information pertaining to various job announcements concerning the Director and Deputy Director of the Department of Energy's (DOE) Office of Civil Rights (OCR) and various named DOE and OCR officials. Subsequently, on June 2, 1995, Willingham expanded his request to cover four additional categories of information. Willingham subsequently submitted a letter dated August 31, 1995 clarifying his March 9 and June 2 FOIA Requests. In its October 17, 1995 determination letter, ES provided Willingham with 42 documents responsive to his March 9 and June 2 FOIA Requests. The determination letter also stated that ES was in the process of reviewing a number of other potentially responsive documents.

In his Appeal, Willingham cites six occasions, discussed below, where he claims ES's search for responsive documents was inadequate regarding various categories of information sought in his FOIA Requests. Additionally, Willingham, while not giving specific reasons, challenges the adequacy of the search which was conducted for all categories of information mentioned in his FOIA Requests.

II. Discussion

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

After reviewing the search which was made for responsive documents regarding each of the categories of information specified in the FOIA Requests, we find that ES made, with two exceptions, an adequate search for responsive documents. As discussed below, we have been informed that additional information may exist regarding one category of information Willingham sought in his FOIA Requests and that ES has not completed its search for responsive documents regarding another category of information. Consequently, we are remanding this matter to ES to complete further searches for responsive documents regarding those two categories of information. Additionally, in our review, we have discovered that one of the documents provided to Willingham, regarding the minutes of a meeting, was not provided to him in its entirety and without an explanation why a portion of the document was withheld. On remand, ES should provide Willingham with a new determination regarding that document.

A. The Search for Senior Executive Service Documents

In his March 9 FOIA Request, Willingham requested all documents regarding the downgrading and elimination of the Senior Executive Service (SES) positions of Director and Deputy Director of OCR. ES provided Willingham with 12 documents regarding the two positions and the transfer of OCR to the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity (OEID). The determination letter also stated that ES had been informed by the DOE's Office of Personnel (OP) that these two SES positions had not been downgraded but were eliminated due to the realignment of OCR. Willingham asserts that he was not provided with documents specifically referring to the elimination of the two SES positions other than documents referring to the transfer of OCR to OEID. Willingham argues that documents specifically relating to the elimination of the SES positions must exist in the Office of Personnel and should be provided to him.

We contacted ES to ascertain the extent of the search which had been conducted for documents relating to the elimination of the SES positions at OCR. ES had determined that OP and OCR were the offices most likely to possess responsive documents and accordingly a search was undertaken in those offices. See Memorandum of meeting between Verlette Moore, FOIA Specialist, Office of the Executive Secretariat, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney, OHA (December 28, 1995). OCR informed us that it undertook a search for responsive documents in the files most likely to contain such information and provided ES with all the responsive documents it located. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Pablo Griego, Office of Civil Rights, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney (January 2, 1996). We also contacted OP to ascertain the extent of the search it made for responsive documents. We were informed that OP determined that the most likely place that documents relating to the elimination of the SES positions would exist was in the OP's Office of Executive Resources (OER) and consequently, OER conducted a search for responsive documents. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Bruce Murray, Office of Personnel, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney, OHA (January 11, 1996). OER informed us that it examined its files and provided ES with all documents in its possession relating to the transfer of OCR to OEID. With regard to the lack of specific documents regarding the elimination of the two SES positions, we were informed by OER that the elimination of SES positions which had not been filled would not usually require documentation. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Stephanie Diamond, Office of Executive Resources, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney, OHA (January 11, 1996).

Given the facts above, we find that ES conducted an adequate search for documents relating to the elimination of the two SES positions. However, we have discovered that one of the documents that OER provided to ES, entitled "Minutes of Meeting" and dated October 5, 1994 (Minutes Document), was not provided to ES in its entirety. OER only provided a portion of the Minutes Document to ES because it determined that the remainder of the Minutes Document was not responsive to Willingham's request. Id. However, the FOIA does not contain any provision authorizing the segregation of a record into responsive and non-responsive portions. Rather the FOIA requires that, where a record has been identified as responsive to a FOIA request, an agency must provide either the entire record to the requestor or a written statement explaining which specific exemption under the FOIA authorizes withholding information from the record and a statement why discretionary release is not appropriate. See 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7(b). The determination letter Willingham was issued does not state why material was withheld from the Minutes Document and further, fails even to state that material has in fact been withheld. Consequently, we will remand this matter to ES so that it may either release the entire Minutes Document to Willingham or provide him with an explanation as to which exemptions of the FOIA authorize the of withholding the deleted material from that document.

B. The Search for Documents Regarding Dolores Rozzi

Willingham also requested documents regarding the termination or reassignment of Dolores Rozzi (Rozzi) from the position of Director of Administration and Human Resources and the approval of her sabbatical to California University of Pennsylvania. ES provided Willingham with a number of documents including a copy of a January 28, 1993 settlement agreement (Settlement Agreement) between the DOE and Rozzi and documents pertaining to a bonus which was granted to Rozzi on October 6, 1992. Willingham asserts that one of the provisions of the Settlement Agreement states that Ms. Rozzi would use her best efforts to seek other employment. Willingham argues that ES failed to provide documents showing Rozzi's attempts to find other employment or other documents relating to Rozzi's compliance with the Settlement Agreement. Additionally, Willingham asserts that Rozzi was subsequently obligated to return the bonus and that he was not provided a copy of the SF-52 form documenting the reimbursement of the bonus. Lastly, Willingham asserts that Rozzi's sabbatical was eventually canceled and that ES failed to provide him with a copy of the SF-52 form canceling the sabbatical.

ES informed us that it determined that OP would be the office most likely to possess responsive documents regarding Rozzi and that OP conducted a search for responsive documents. We were further informed that a search was made of Rozzi's official personnel file along with other files where responsive material was most likely to exist and that OP provided ES with all the responsive documents which were discovered. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Bruce Murray, Office of Personnel, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney, OHA (January 3, 1996). We were also informed that, with regard to Willingham's assertion regarding the existence of a SF-52 for the cancellation of the sabbatical, OP would not create a SF-52 for the cancellation of a sabbatical. Id. Further, we were informed by OP that no other documents were discovered regarding Rozzi's compliance with the Settlement Agreement or documenting her attempts to find other work. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Bruce Murray, Office of Personnel, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney, OHA (January 11, 1996). OP informed us that it had no information that Rozzi was required to return her bonus and found no documents indicating that the bonus was returned. Id. Given this factual background we find that an adequate search was conducted for documents regarding Rozzi's bonus, termination, reassignment and sabbatical.

C. The Search for Baldwin-Claytor Settlement Documents

In his June 2, 1995 FOIA Request, Willingham requested documents containing information on the settlement of an Equal Employment Opportunity complaint and civil suit by Ms. Hattie Baldwin and Mr. Lewis Claytor. ES informed us that it determined that the Office of General Counsel (OGC) would be the office most likely to possess responsive documents and that OGC conducted a search for documents. OGC informed us that a search was made of its files regarding the Baldwin-Claytor settlement and a number of responsive documents were found. OGC further informed us that all of the documents relating to the Baldwin-Claytor settlement were provided to ES. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Ellen Quattrucci, OGC, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney, OHA (January 3, 1996). Willingham received all of the responsive documents which had been filed with the court. The remaining documents are still under review and a final determination on these documents will be issued to Willingham. Id. Given the facts described to us above, we believe that ES has made an adequate search for responsive documents. However, if after he receives a determination regarding the documents currently under review, Willingham wishes to appeal the adequacy of the search made for Baldwin-Claytor settlement documents, he should specify why he believes the search was inadequate.

D. The Search for O'Leary-Maupin-Moody Meeting Documents

In his March 9 FOIA Request, Willingham sought any documents regarding a meeting that took place between Secretary of Energy Hazel O'Leary, Ellis Maupin, President of Chapter 213 of the National Treasury Employees Union, and Corlis Moody, Director of the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity, that was referenced in a copy of an answer to a suit Willingham has filed against DOE. ES did not provide Willingham with any documents responsive to this request. Willingham challenges the search which was made for responsive documents to this specific request asserting that, since the O'Leary-Maupin-Moody meeting resulted in a "certain personnel action," it is highly unlikely that DOE has no documents such as an agenda or a calendar pertaining to that meeting. ES informed us that it is still searching for responsive documents regarding this meeting. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Verlette Moore and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney (January 16, 1996). Consequently, on remand, ES should complete its search for responsive documents regarding the O'Leary-Maupin-Moody meeting and provide Willingham with a determination regarding the result of its search.

E. The Search for Documents Regarding Jay Pagano's Alleged Failure to Accurately Describe His Previous Experience

In his June 2 FOIA Request, Willingham requested documents regarding Jay Pagano's (Pagano) alleged failure to note in his application for job announcement ERM-92-48 that a prior position he had occupied at the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission had been downgraded. ES did not provide any documents responsive to this request. Willingham argues that documents must exist regarding what he asserts is a "material omission of job experience" by Pagano which was disclosed in a deposition by Pagano. <2> In analyzing this request, ES determined that OGC would be the office most likely to possess responsive documents. OGC personnel contacted the DOE attorney present at the deposition when Pagano chronicled his experience. The DOE attorney informed OGC that she had not filed any ethics complaint against Pagano as a result of his deposition. Additionally, OGC was informed by the designated DOE ethics official that there was no record of any ethics complaint being filed against Pagano. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Ellen Quattrucci, OGC, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney, OHA (January 3, 1996). We find that, given the facts described above, the search that ES conducted for documents regarding Pagano's alleged misstatement of his employment experience was adequate.

F. The Search for Documents Regarding the Positions of Director and Deputy Director of the DOE's Office of Civil Rights

Willingham requested in his March 9 FOIA Request that he be provided documents pertaining to various actions taken regarding job announcements ERM-92-48 and ERM-92-47 which advertised the positions of Director and Deputy Director of OCR. In a letter dated August 31, 1995, Willingham clarified his request stating that he was seeking all documents referring to the elimination, downgrading, reclassification, conversion or any other personnel action taken regarding the positions of Director and Deputy Director of OCR from the date of the job announcements to the present. ES provided Willingham with several documents responsive to this request. However, Willingham contends that ES made an inadequate search for documents. As support for his argument, Willingham states that he received no documents regarding the temporary promotion of Rufus Smith to the position of Acting Deputy Director of OCR. We contacted OP which conducted the search for responsive documents. OP searched their files which are most likely to contain responsive documents and sent all responsive documents that they found to ES. However, OP has informed us that other branches of DOE may have in their possession responsive documents regarding the detailing of Mr. Smith to be Deputy Director of OCR. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Bruce Murray, Office of Personnel, and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney (January 11, 1996). Consequently, we will remand this matter to ES to make another search for responsive documents regarding personnel actions concerning the position of Deputy Director of OCR as described in Willingham's August 31, 1995 letter.

G. The Search for Documents Regarding All Categories of Requested Information

Finally, while giving no specific grounds, Willingham challenges the search that ES made regarding all 25 categories of information he requested. ES informed us that it analyzed Willingham's two FOIA Requests and determined that OCR, OP, OGC and ES itself would be the DOE offices most likely to contain responsive documents. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Verlette Moore, Office of the Executive Secretariat and Richard Cronin, Staff Attorney, OHA (December 28, 1995). After contacting these offices, we were informed that, with the exceptions noted above, each of these offices searched the files most likely to contain responsive documents and that all responsive documents were submitted to ES to provide to Willingham. Consequently, we find that ES conducted an adequate search for documents for all categories of information mentioned in Willingham's FOIA Requests other than the categories identified above as inadequate or incomplete.

In sum, we have determined that ES made an adequate search with regard to all categories of information sought in Willingham's FOIA Requests except for the categories identified above where we have determined that the search was inadequate or incomplete. On remand, ES should complete its searches for documents pertaining to personnel actions regarding the position of Deputy Director of OCR as described in Willingham's August 31, 1995 clarification letter and the O'Leary-Maupin-Moody meeting. With regard to the Minutes Document, on remand, ES should either release the entire Minutes Document to Willingham or provide him with a new determination supporting the withholding of the deleted material.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Terrence Willingham on December 14, 1995 is granted in part as set forth in the above Decision and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>We received Willingham's Appeal on November 17, 1995. However, Willingham's Appeal did not contain a copy of the determination letter from which he was appealing. Because DOE regulations require that a copy of the determination letter be submitted with the appeal, Willingham's Appeal was not considered filed until December 14, 1995, the date we received a copy of ES's determination letter. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.8(b).

December 13, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Linda P. Yeatts

Date of Filing: November 20, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0101

On November 20, 1995, Linda P. Yeatts filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on October 23, 1995 by the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) Officer at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Oak Ridge Operations Office (hereinafter "FOI Officer" or "Oak Ridge"). She had filed a request for information pursuant to the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If this Appeal were granted, Oak Ridge would be ordered to conduct a more thorough search for material responsive to Ms. Yeatts' request.

I. Background

On August 10, 1995, Ms. Yeatts filed a FOIA request for the personnel records of her father, Maurice Compton Pickral. According to Ms. Yeatts, her father was a contractor employee who died in July 1945 while employed by Carbide Chemicals Corporation in Oak Ridge. In its response, Oak Ridge explained that the personnel records for employees who worked for Carbide Chemicals Corporation during the 1940s were destroyed because the project was a temporary operation for the war effort. The only document found to be responsive to Ms. Yeatts' request was Maurice Pickral's "employment card." A copy of this card was included in the FOI Officer's response. In her Appeal, Ms. Yeatts challenges the adequacy of the search for responsive documents.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires federal agencies to release documents to the public upon request. The Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) has stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. In fact, the office has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991); Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1988). However, the FOIA requires only that the search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985) (Miller); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d at 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984). We must determine whether Oak Ridge's search for Mr. Pickral's personnel records was reasonable.

We contacted Oak Ridge for an explanation of the steps taken to locate the requested information. We were informed that there are three types of records kept at various Oak Ridge locations: personnel records of contractors, personnel medical records and personnel radiation experiment records. There are three plants at Oak Ridge which were searched: the K-25 Gaseous Diffusion Plant, the Y-12 Weapons facility and the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. In addition, the other two locations searched were the Oak Ridge Records Center and the Oak Ridge Associated Universities, the site that produced the historical "employment card." Memorandum of telephone conversation between Kimberly Parker, OHA and Amy L. Rothrock, FOI Officer, Oak Ridge Operations (November 27, 1995).

Based on this information, we conclude that the search for responsive material was reasonable. As set forth above, that search included three different record systems at five Oak Ridge facilities. We find that this constitutes a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents.

III. Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, we find that the search performed by Oak Ridge was reasonably calculated to uncover the materials sought by the Appellant. Accordingly, we will deny this Appeal.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Linda P. Yeatts on November 20, 1995 is hereby denied.

Case No. VFA-0102, 25 DOE ¶ 80,155

December 21, 1995

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Keith E. Loomis

Date of Filing: November 21, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0102

On November 21, 1995, Keith E. Loomis (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a final determination issued on October 17, 1995 by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Office of Naval Reactors (ONR). In that determination, the DOE released copies of several documents requested by the Appellant. However, portions of one document released to the Appellant were withheld under FOIA Exemption 6. This partial release occurred in response to a request for information filed by the Appellant, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552(b), as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information and to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. BACKGROUND

On April 10, 1995, the Appellant filed his original request seeking a wide range of information. As a result of ongoing negotiations between the Appellant and ONR, the Appellant's original request was modified on several occasions. On October 17, 1995, ONR issued a determination in response to the Appellant's modified request. The Determination Letter released several responsive documents to the Appellant, withheld some of the information requested by the Appellant under FOIA Exemptions 1, 3, and 6, and explained that the search for responsive documents did not locate some of the information requested by the Appellant. On November 21, 1995, the Appellant filed the present Appeal contending that the DOE's refusal to release the deleted information was improper, and that the agency's search for responsive documents was inadequate.

The original Appeal filed by Loomis on November 21, 1995, has been bifurcated into two separate Appeals. This decision will consider those portions of the original Appeal that do not concern information withheld by the DOE's Office of Naval Reactors (ONR) under FOIA Exemptions 1 and 3. Specifically, this decision will consider whether:

1) ONR's withholding of portions of the deposition of R. Simons under Exemption 6 was proper;

2) its search and response to the Appellant's request for "Copies of all out-of-pocket cash receipts submitted [by him] to MAO" was adequate;

3) its search for "a copy of the Audit Report prepared by D. Durnan, during August September 1988" was adequate; and,

4) its search for "copies of all Radiation Surveys conducted at the Windsor Site on March 8, 1988" was adequate.

The issues raised in the original appeal concerning ONR's withholding of information under Exemptions 1 and 3 will be considered in a second Appeal which has been assigned OHA Case Number VFA-0104.

II. ANALYSIS

A. Exemption 6

We turn first to the Appellant's contentions that the ONR improperly withheld information under Exemption 6. While the FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Only Exemption 6 is at issue in the present case. Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Dep't of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982).

In response to the Appellant's request for a transcript of an individual's deposition, the ONR released a copy of the transcript of that individual's deposition from which information had been redacted and withheld under Exemption 6. On Appeal, the Appellant seeks release of questions directed to the deponent which were withheld under Exemption 6. <1> The Appellant categorically claims that release of questions directed at deponents cannot reasonably be expected to intrude upon privacy interests. While we do not agree that the substance of questions asked of a deponent can never intrude upon privacy interests, we are also convinced that the release of the information contained in the particular questions at issue in the present case would not likely result in an invasion of privacy interests. After we conferred with ONR about this matter, ONR agreed to release the questions to the Appellant. We are therefore remanding this portion of the Appeal to ONR for release of the questions.

B. Adequacy of the Search

If a requester has reasonably described the information he or she is seeking and has complied with the DOE's FOIA regulations appearing at 10 C.F.R. Part 1004, the agency is obliged to conduct a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. United States Dep't of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1385 (8th Cir. 1985); accord, Weisberg v. United States Dep't of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Moreover, any successful challenge to the adequacy of a search must be supported by evidence showing that the search was not reasonably calculated to identify the requested information. See Mark S. Boggs, 22 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1992).

We turn first to the Appellant's contention that ONR's search for copies of all out-of-pocket cash receipts submitted by the Appellant to MAO was inadequate. The record shows that after conducting a preliminary search for documents responsive to this request ONR had contacted the Appellant in order to determine whether he wished to continue the search for the out-of-pocket cash receipts. Specifically, ONR informed the Appellant that:

Copies of two responsive documents which were readily available are provided. Search time was .5 hours. We understand from MAO that there may be additional responsive documents stored in archive files.

However, the search through these files would be very time consuming with no guarantee of success. If you wish this to be pursued further, please advise. The documents comprise 2 pages.

Attachment 1 to August 16, 1995 Letter from Jonathan Kiell, Office of Naval Reactors to Keith E. Loomis. Apparently, the Appellant never specifically advised ONR that he desired a more extended search for responsive documents to be conducted at his expense. Instead, the Appellant's September 11, 1995 letter to GayLa D. Sessoms, director of the FOIA/Privacy Act Division, indicted that he considered his request for the cash receipts to be "an open matter." While the Appellant's September 11, 1995 letter indicated that he considered this matter to be open, it did not indicate the Appellant's willingness to pay search fees for the extensive search that would most likely be required in order to locate the additional cash receipts. Unless the Appellant is willing to pay for the search time expended in attempting to locate the additional receipts, the ONR is under no obligation to conduct the more extensive search. See, 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(e) ("no request will be deemed to have been received until the DOE has received some valid assurance of willingness to bear fees . . . associated with the request.") Since the Appellant's response to ONR's inquiry was ambiguous, we are remanding this matter to ONR for clarification of the Appellant's intentions. On remand, ONR shall contact the Appellant and determine his willingness to pay for the additional search. If the Appellant is willing to pay the additional search fee, the ONR should conduct a more extensive search; otherwise ONR is under no obligation to do so.

The Appellant also claims that ONR's search for a copy of the "Audit Report prepared by D. Durnan during August or September of 1988" was inadequate. The Determination Letter states that ONR's search did not locate any documents responsive to this request. In support of his assertion that ONR's search was inadequate, the Appellant notes that a September 20, 1988 letter to him from D. Durnan specifically refers to an audit report. However, our investigation has revealed that although an audit report was prepared, it was not prepared by D. Durnan. Instead, the audit report relied upon by D. Durnan was prepared by E.D. Shollenberger, an employee of the DOE's Pittsburgh Naval Reactors Office. Accordingly, ONR correctly determined that it did not have any documents responsive to the Appellant's request for an audit report prepared by D. Durnan. This portion of the Appeal is therefore denied. However, ONR has now agreed to provide the Appellant with a copy of the Audit Report prepared by Shollenberger.

Finally, we turn to the Appellant's contention that ONR's search for copies of all radiation surveys conducted at the Windsor site on March 8, 1988 was inadequate. The Appellant contended that radiation surveys should have been conducted on a daily basis and that DOE should therefore have a copy of a radiation survey conducted on March 8, 1988 at the Windsor site. ONR disputes this contention, claiming that radiation surveys were not conducted on a daily basis and that no radiation survey was conducted at the Windsor site on March 8, 1988. In support of these contentions, ONR has submitted the statement of K.A. Berta, Manager of Windsor Site Office SO Radiological Controls, which indicates that no radiation survey was conducted at the Windsor Site on March 8, 1988. Instead, according to Berta: "There were three such surveys performed in period of early March, 1988, specifically, on March 6, March 11, and March 13." Since the Appellant's request specifically seeks copies of radiation surveys conducted on March 8, 1988 and the record indicates that no radiation surveys were conducted on that date, it is clear that ONR correctly determined that there were no documents responsive to this request.

During the pendency of this Appeal, the Appellant was informed that although a radiation survey was conducted on March 6, 1988, no radiation surveys were conducted on March 8, 1988. The Appellant then asserted that he should be provided with a copy of the March 6, 1988 radiation survey. We disagree. The Appellant's original request is clearly limited to those radiation surveys conducted on March 8, 1988. Any radiation survey conducted on March 6, 1988 would therefore be outside the scope of the original request. We have consistently held that FOIA appellants are not permitted to broaden their requests for information in their appeals. Alan J. White, 17 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,539 (1988); see also Arthur Scanla, 13 DOE ¶ 80,133 at 80,622 n.2 (1986). Since the Appellant now wishes to obtain information outside the scope of his original request, his broadened request is a new request for information, which must be filed with the ONR, in order to be processed under the FOIA.

III. CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, we are remanding portions of the present Appeal to the Office of Naval Reactors for further processing in accordance with the instructions given above, and are denying it in all other aspects.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Keith E. Loomis on November 21, 1995 (Case Number VFA-0102) is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) and denied in all other aspects.

(2) This matter is remanded to the Office of Naval Reactors for further processing in accordance with the instructions given above.

January 4, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Raytheon Company

Date of Filing: November 22, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0103

On November 22, 1995, Raytheon Company (Raytheon) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on October 12, 1995, by the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity of the Department of Energy (DOE/ED), in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, Raytheon asks that the DOE release materials withheld under FOIA Exemption 7(C), 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C), and/or identify the responsive documents in its possession.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On August 10, 1994, Raytheon requested from the DOE any and all records related to a DOE Office of Inspector General investigation of allegations of sexual harassment or other inappropriate conduct made against a particular DOE employee. Letter from Jeffrey H. May, Raytheon Company, to Denise Diggin, DOE (August 10, 1994). In its October 12, 1995 determination letter, DOE/ED stated that it had "conducted its own inquiry into the matter . . . , and a report of record was written, with attachments." Letter from Corlis S. Moody, Director, DOE/ED, to Jeffrey H. May, Raytheon Company (October 12, 1995). However, DOE/ED found that the documents in question were "exempt from disclosure pursuant to Exemption 7(C) of FOIA, 5 U.S.C. 552(b)(7)(C)." Id. DOE/ED stated that it had "balanced the public interest in disclosure and determined that it does not outweigh the significant privacy interests at stake. In addition, non-exempt information cannot be reasonably segregated and released." Id. The appellant's request was therefore denied. Id.

II. Analysis

Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information . . . (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). The threshold test for withholding information under Exemption 7(C) is whether such information is compiled as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The scope of Exemption 7 encompasses enforcement of both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974); Williams v. IRS, 479 F.2d 317, 318 (3d Cir. 1973), cert. denied Donolon v. IRS, 414 U.S. 1024 (1973). Amendments to the FOIA in 1986 extended the protection of Exemption 7 to all records compiled for "law enforcement purposes." See Attorney General's Memorandum on the 1986 Amendments to the Freedom of Information Act (Dec. 1987).

In determining whether the release of law enforcement records could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, the courts have used a balancing test, weighing the privacy interests which would be infringed against the public interest in disclosure. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762; Safecard Services, Inc. v. Securities and Exchange Commission, 926 F.2d 1197 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Lesar v. Department of Justice, 636 F.2d 472, 486 (D.C. Cir. 1980). Furthermore, in applying this test, we have held that the public interest in disclosure is measured not by the degree of the requester's interest in disclosure, but rather by "the right of the public to obtain the same information." The Die-Gem Co., Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,569 (1989) (quoting Nix v. United States, 572 F.2d 998, 1003 (4th Cir. 1978)). In Reporters Committee, the Supreme Court held that information that does not directly reveal government operations or activities "falls outside the ambit of the public interest that the FOIA was enacted to serve." 489 U.S. at 775.

In its Appeal, Raytheon states that "there is a strong public interest in discerning whether the Department of Energy effectively monitors its employees and assures that it enforces its policies and procedures with respect to prohibiting sexual harassment in the workplace." Appeal at 3. The appellant also contends that DOE/ED did not "support its assertion that the persons identified in the report would be subject to any harassment or intimidation." Id. at 4 (citing Fine v. Department of Energy, 823 F. Supp. 888, 908 (D.N.M. 1993)). Finally, the appellant argues that "in order to protect the identity of the ?witnesses and, sources and other personnel,' their names and any identifying data could be redacted from the report and other related documents. In this way no privacy interests of sources, witnesses or other personnel would be compromised." Id.

First, we disagree with the appellant that DOE/ED must necessarily make a particularized finding regarding the privacy interests of each individual that would be infringed by a release of information. As the Supreme Court has stated, "categorical decisions may be appropriate and individual circumstances disregarded when a case fits into a genus in which the balance characteristically tips in one direction." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 776. For example, since the issuance of the Reporters Committee decision, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit has concluded that names of private individuals appearing in an agency's law enforcement files are "categorically" exempt from disclosure under Exemption 7(C), unless access to that information "is necessary in order to confirm or refute compelling evidence that the agency is engaged in illegal activity . . . ." Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1205-06; see James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,556-57 (1991).

Similarly, in the present case, we believe that the names and identifying information of investigating officials named in the subject report may be withheld by DOE/ED. Withholding the names of law enforcement officials is justified where their release in connection with a particular investigation "conceivably could subject [agents] to annoyance or harassment in either their official or private lives." Baez v. Department of Justice, 647 F.2d 1328, 1339 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Lesar, 636 F.2d at 487; see Jon Berg, 22 DOE ¶ 80,140 (1992) (upholding the determination of the DOE Inspector General to withhold the names and identification numbers of its investigators). Absent a countervailing public interest in release of the names, such as exists when the conduct of an investigator is called into question, we find that the resulting invasion of privacy would be unwarranted in this case. See Baez, 647 F.2d at 1339.

With regard to names and other information which could reasonably be expected to identify these persons, we have also found that witnesses and sources have a strong privacy interest in remaining anonymous. Schwab, 21 DOE at 80,556; Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,109 at 80,524 (1990). Furthermore, the public interest favors protecting their identities, rather than disclosing them, in order to insure that witnesses continue to provide information voluntarily for law enforcement investigations, without fear of retribution. See generally King v. Department of Justice, 830 F.2d 210, 232-36 (D.C. Cir. 1987).

Finally, we find that DOE/ED may withhold information that could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy of the subject of the investigation. Moreover, it may not be sufficient to merely withhold the name and identifying information and the subject. Because the appellant has requested documents regarding the investigation of a particular individual, any information provided to the public in response to such a request could potentially invade the privacy interests of that individual. The D.C. Circuit has acknowledged that investigation subjects possess substantial privacy interests. "There is little question that disclosing the identity of targets of law-enforcement investigations can subject those identified to embarrassment and potentially more serious reputational harm. . . . Recognizing this danger, Exemption 7(C) affords broad privacy rights to suspects, witnesses, and investigators." Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1205.

Despite the fact that there is clearly information in the documents at issue that may be withheld under Exemption 7(C), we agree with the appellant that portions of the documents can be released. The fact that a document contains material which is exempt from disclosure does not necessarily make the entire document exempt. The FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 89, 91 (1973); Mead Data Central v. Department of Air Force, 566 F.2d 242, 259-62 (D.C. Cir. 1977); see also Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1206 (upholding release of documents by the Securities and Exchange Commission with names and addresses of individuals redacted and withheld under Exemption 7(C)). Of course, segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary where it is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material so that release of the non-exempt material would "compromise" the withheld material, or where the amount of non-exempt material is small and so interspersed with exempt material that segregation would impose "an inordinate burden" on the agency. Lead Indus. Ass'n v. OSHA, 610 F.2d 70, 83-86 (2d Cir. 1979)). In addition, DOE/ED may find that in certain documents "the redaction of exempt material is so great that the document degenerates into utter nonsense." WPC Companies, 22 DOE ¶ 80,163 at 80,640 (1992) (citing Local 3, Int'l Bhd. of Elec. Workers v. National Labor Relations Board, 845 F.2d 1177, 1180 (2d Cir. 1988)). In those instances, DOE/ED should not be required to segregate and release the non-exempt material. Id.

For example, there are certain entire sections of the investigative report, such as the section entitled "Legal Authority", that could be released without impacting any privacy interests. There are some sections, e.g., the title page, which could be released with the redaction of only one name. There are clearly other sections, however, such as those memorializing witness interviews, which contain numerous names and other information that could identify the complainant, witnesses, or other sources. Such information should be redacted from these sections, and any segregable non-exempt portions released.

We will therefore remand this case to DOE/ED, which should issue a new determination either releasing information other than that which we have found to be protected by FOIA Exemption 7(C), or explaining the reasons for withholding that information. DOE/ED is in the best position to make a determination as to whether the information in question should be protected under Exemption 7(C).

Raytheon also requests in its Appeal "that the Department of Energy provide it with an index of the responsive documents and a specific statement of the privacy interests which would be compromised if the documents were disclosed." On previous occasions, we have stated that, although such an index may be required of the agency when it is in litigation with a FOIA requester, this degree of specificity is not required at the administrative stages of a FOIA request. See, e.g., Rockwell International, 21 DOE ¶ 80,105 at 80,527 (1991); Natural Resources Defense Council, 20 DOE ¶ 80,145 at 80,627 (1990). At the administrative levels, determinations need only include a general description of the withheld material and a statement of the reason for the withholding. We anticipate that the new determination issued by DOE/ED, which may again be appealed to this office, will provide sufficient detail to comport with these requirements.<1>

For the reasons explained above, the present Appeal will be granted as specified above. In all other respects, the Appeal is denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Raytheon Company on November 22, 1995, Case Number VFA-0103, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity, which shall issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

March 25, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Keith E. Loomis

Date of Filing: November 21, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0104

Keith E. Loomis filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on October 17, 1995, by the Office of Naval Reactors of the Department of Energy. In that determination, Naval Reactors denied in part a request for information that Mr. Loomis initially filed on April 10, 1995, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. After assisting Mr. Loomis with subsequent modifications to his request, Naval Reactors ultimately responded by releasing some documents responsive to portions of his modified request, withholding some material under the exceptions to mandatory disclosure permitted under the FOIA, and stating that other documents requested either were not found or were known not to exist. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the information that was withheld for national security reasons in the October 17, 1995 determination.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his Appeal, Mr. Loomis contended that the DOE's search for responsive documents was inadequate and that its failure to disclose the material it withheld under Exemptions 1, 3, and 6 of the FOIA was improper. In order to handle this case as efficiently as possible, the Office of Hearings and Appeals bifurcated this Appeal, separating those issues on which it could rule without additional Departmental support from those issues requiring such support. As a result, this Office issued a final Decision and Order regarding the adequacy of Naval Reactors' search and its invocation of the FOIA's Exemption 6 on December 21, 1995 (Case No. VFA-0102). Keith E. Loomis, 25 DOE ¶ 80,155 (1995). The remaining issues, which concern Naval Reactors' withholding of certain information pursuant to Exemptions 1 and 3 of the FOIA, will be addressed in this Decision and Order.

In his request, Mr. Loomis sought, among other documents, "[c]opies of all Radiation Surveys conducted at the Windsor Site on March 8, 1988, and the containment layout plan," and "[c]opies of the Basic Reference Documents DOE provides to Prime Contractors as guidance for the propagation of Radiological Control requirements and procedures to protect the health and lives of Rad Con workers," further specified as two documents, NAVSEA 389-0153 and NAVSEA 389-0288. In its October 17, 1995 response, Naval Reactors withheld the containment layout plan, asserting that the plan "is classified CONFIDENTIAL since it reveals the arrangement of, and numbers of components in, a Naval nuclear propulsion plant," and withholding the plan under Exemption 1 of the FOIA. NAVSEA 389-0153 was also determined to be classified as confidential and withheld under Exemption 1. NAVSEA 389-0288 was determined to be Naval Nuclear Propulsion Information (NNPI), the disclosure of which is restricted by statute, and was therefore withheld under Exemption 3. According to the response, both of these documents "reveal extensive information about practices and procedures implemented in the Naval nuclear propulsion program regarding the management of radioactivity, which would be of value to foreign nations."

In his Appeal, Mr. Loomis contends that the type of map he is seeking, "a lowest level plant layout sketch or map . . . posted at or near the reactor compartment entry checkpoint," the purpose of which is "to protect radiation workers' health and safety," should not be classified because it "in no way relate[s] to the design and operation of U.S. warships and associated support facilities." With respect to the NAVSEA documents, Mr. Loomis contends that any portions of those documents that implement the DOE's policy of conducting radiological operations "in a manner that ensures the health and safety of" all workers and the public should be segregated and released.

II. Analysis

Exemption 1 of the FOIA provides that an agency may exempt from disclosure matters that are "(A) specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy and (B) are in fact properly classified pursuant to such Executive order." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1); see also 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1). Executive Order 12958 is the current Executive Order that provides for the classification of information concerning "programs for safeguarding nuclear materials or facilities." Executive Order 12958, § 1.5(f). The Executive Order also provides for the classification of compilations of unclassified items if the compilations meet established standards. Executive Order 12958, § 1.8(e). Information properly classified under this Executive Order is exempt from mandatory disclosure by Exemption 1. See A. Victorian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,166 (1996).

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). The controlling statutory provision in this case is 10 U.S.C. § 130, which permits the Secretary of Defense to withhold from public disclosure "any technical data with military or space application in the possession of, or under the control of, the Department of Defense, if such data may not be exported lawfully outside the United States without an approval, authorization, or license" granted under specified statutes. 10 U.S.C. § 130(a). The term "technical data with military or space application" is defined as "any blueprints, drawings, . . . or other technical information that can be used, or be adapted for use, to design, engineer, produce, manufacture, operate, repair, overhaul, or reproduce any military or space equipment or technology concerning such equipment." 10 U.S.C. § 130(c).

The "technical data" statute has been found to satisfy subpart (B) of the Exemption 3 criteria because it refers to sufficiently "particular types of matter to be withheld." Chenkin v. Department of the Army, No. 93-494, slip op. at 7 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 14, 1994), affirmed, 61 F.3d 894 (3d Cir. 1995); Colonial Trading Corp. V. Department of the Navy, 735 F. Supp. 429, 431 (D.D.C. 1990). It therefore qualifies as a statute upon which a claim of withholding under Exemption 3 may be based. The federal regulations treat NNPI as technical data with military application of the sort envisioned in 10 C.F.R. § 130. See, e.g., 15 C.F.R. §§ 778.1, 778.5. Consequently, information accurately identified as NNPI is exempt from mandatory disclosure to the public under Exemption 3 of the FOIA.

Consistent with Executive Order 12344, 3 C.F.R. 128 (1982), reprinted in 42 U.S.C. § 7158 (1995), and statutorily prescribed by the Department of Defense Authorization Act, P.L. 98-525, 98 Stat. 2492 (1984), the Director of the Office of Naval Reactors (Director of NR) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving classified Naval Reactors information and NNPI. Upon referral of this Appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of NR reviewed the containment layout plan and the two NAVSEA documents and concluded that they should continue to be withheld from Mr. Loomis in their entirety.

In his review of the containment layout plan initially identified and withheld by the DOE, the Director of NR verified that the identified document was in fact the plan used by the radiological controls personnel during the relevant period to indicate radiation levels in the reactor compartment at the Windsor site. The Director of NR then reviewed that responsive document to determine whether it contained classified information. Because the plan is a scale drawing that shows the number and arrangement of components and major structures in the reactor compartment and labels the components and structures, he concluded that the plan is properly classified under section 1.5 of Executive Order 12958 and accordingly exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 1 of the FOIA.

With respect to NAVSEA 389-0153, the Director of NR determined on review that release of the document would reveal programmatic and technical information about the design and operations of nuclear-powered warships. Although individual items of information contained in this document may arguably be unclassified, the Director of NR determined that the compilation of the information in this document "reveals an additional association or relationship that (1) meets the standards for classification under [Executive Order 12958] and (2) is not otherwise revealed in the individual items of information." Executive Order 12958, § 1.8. Consequently, the Director of NR concluded that NAVSEA 389-0153 is properly classified in its entirety under sections 1.5 and 1.8 of Executive Order 12958 and accordingly is exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 1 of the FOIA.

Finally, after reviewing NAVSEA 389-0288, the Director of NR determined that release of this document would reveal programmatic and technical information about the overhaul and maintenance of the United States Navy nuclear propulsion plants. Although not classified, this information is defined by the Navy as NNPI, the uncontrolled dissemination of which to foreign nationals is prohibited by 10 U.S.C. § 130 and the regulations cited above. The Director of NR maintains that because Naval Reactors would be unable to control the further dissemination of the NNPI contained in the requested document if it were released to the requester or any other member of the public, disclosure of this information would be tantamount to disclosure to foreign nationals. Such disclosure is therefore prohibited by the "technical data" statute and accordingly is exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 3 of the FOIA.

The Director of NR also reviewed the two NAVSEA documents to consider the possibility of release of portions of the documents that are responsive to Mr. Loomis's request yet are not classified or controlled. He concluded that those portions are not reasonably segregable from those responsive portions that must be withheld from disclosure under Exemptions 1 and 3. Accordingly, the Director of NR determined that the two NAVSEA documents should be withheld in their entireties.

III. Conclusion

Based on the review performed by the Director of the Office of Naval Reactors, we have determined that Executive Order 12958, which currently governs the protection of classified information, requires the continued withholding of the entire contents of the containment layout plan and NAVSEA 389-0153, two of the items requested in Mr. Loomis's request under the FOIA. Based on that same review, we have also determined that 10 C.F.R. § 130 requires the continued withholding of the entire NAVSEA 389-0288, due to the Naval Nuclear Propulsion Information contained in that document. Although a finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information nevertheless, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemptions 1 and 3, the non-disclosure is required by statute or Executive Order. Accordingly, Mr. Loomis's Appeal will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Keith E. Loomis on November 21, 1995, Case No. VFA-0104, is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: William Kuntz III

Date of Filing: December 11, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0105

On December 11, 1995, William Kuntz III (Kuntz) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on November 3, 1995, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Field Office (DOE/AL). That determination was issued in response to a request for information submitted by Kuntz under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require DOE/AL to release the requested information.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the type of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is permitted by federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On October 12, 1995, Kuntz filed a request under the FOIA in which he sought a copy of the contract between Sandia National Laboratories (SNL) and the Intel Corporation. SNL is a DOE site currently operated under a contract between the DOE and Sandia Corporation/Lockheed Martin Corporation. The Sandia Corporation is a subsidiary of Lockheed Martin Corporation. DOE/AL issued a determination on November 3, 1995, in which it stated that the information sought by Kuntz is contained in "procurement records in the possession and control of the Lockheed Martin Corporation [LMC] and not the DOE." Letter from Elva Ann Barfield, Freedom of Information Officer, DOE/AL, to William Kuntz III (November 3, 1995). According to DOE/AL, "the contract between the DOE and LMC clearly defines procurement records . . . as being the property of the contractor." Id.

In his Appeal, Kuntz encloses a copy of an article from The New York Times which states that the "DOE would finance the creation of the Intel Corporation's next stab at the world's fastest computer."

See Appeal Letter at 1. On this basis, Kuntz asks that the OHA direct DOE/AL to release the requested information.

II. Analysis

Our threshold inquiry in this case is whether procurement records generated by and in the possession of a

DOE contractor are subject to the FOIA. First, we must determine whether such records are "agency records," and thus subject to the FOIA, under the criteria set out by the federal courts. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Second, records that do not meet these criteria can nonetheless be subject to release under the DOE regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e); see 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884 (December 12, 1994). For the reasons set forth below, we conclude that the records in question are not "agency records" and are not subject to the FOIA under the DOE regulations.

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information required to be made available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-stage analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents created by non-federal organizations, such as Sandia National Laboratories, are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., BMF Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80, 127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination (i) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA, and if not (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at ¶ 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether an entity should be regarded as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case which involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F.Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974); cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with the DOE, the Lockheed Martin Corporation is the prime contractor responsible for maintaining and operating SNL. While the DOE obtained the Corporation's services and exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise the Corporation's day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that Lockheed Martin Corporation is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.

Although the Lockheed Martin Corporation is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, its records relevant to the Kuntz request could become "agency records" if they were obtained by the DOE and were within the DOE's control at the time the FOIA request was made. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, documents in questions had not been obtained by the DOE and were not in the agency's control at the time of the appellant's request. Thus, the procurement records do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86.

Even if contractor-acquired or contractor-generated records fail to qualify as "agency records," they may still be subject to voluntary release if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. The DOE regulations provide that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)." 10 C.F.R. 1004.3(e)(1).

We therefore next look to the contract between DOE and Lockheed Martin Corporation to determine the status of these records. That contract states:

Except as provided in paragraph (b) below, all records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this contract shall be the property of the Government and shall be delivered to the Government . . .

Contract DE-AC04-94AL85000, Modification No. M009, Clause 10(a) states that the category of Contractor's records excluded in paragraph (b) is modified to include "all records related to any procurement action by the Contractor." Id. at Cl. 14. Thus, because procurement records are not among the records which are property of the Government under the DOE's contract with Lockheed Martin Corporation, these records are not subject to release under the DOE regulations.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the records sought by the appellant are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to the FOIA under the DOE regulations. Accordingly, Kuntz's Appeal is should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by William Kuntz III on December 11, 1995 , Case Number VFA-0105 , is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Nathaniel Hendricks

Date of Filing: December 27, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0106

On December 27, 1995, Nathaniel Hendricks (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on November 22, 1995, by the Office of Human Radiation Experiments (OHRE) of the Department of Energy's Office of Environment, Safety & Health (DOE/EH). In its determination, OHRE stated that it was providing the sole document in its possession which was responsive to the Appellant's July 29, 1994 request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). This Appeal, if granted, would require an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On July 29, 1994, the Appellant submitted a FOIA request to the Advisory Committee on Human Radiation seeking information relating to accidental and/or planned releases of radiation between 1940 and 1946 from the University of Chicago's Stagg Field, or from any other location in Chicago.<1>This request was forwarded to the DOE. In a September 28, 1994 letter, DOE notified the Appellant that his request had been sent to the two offices where responsive documents might be stored, DOE/EH and the Chicago Operations Office (COO). On May 25, 1995, COO issued its determination, releasing one responsive document and stating that no other documents responsive to Appellant's request were found at that location. The Appellant later received OHRE's November 22, 1995 determination and subsequently filed the present Appeal in which he contends that the search for responsive documents was inadequate.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

In his Appeal, the Appellant states that he witnessed the release of weather balloons at Stagg Field during the period in question, and he also notes that the document released to him by OHRE refers to past measurements of radiation at Stagg Field and to the need for meteorological measurement instruments. He therefore asserts that additional responsive documents must exist. This is not necessarily so. Although documents may have been created fifty years ago, this does not mean that the DOE (or its predecessors) ever came into possession of these documents, that they were retained until the present time, or that the DOE's search was inadequate.<2>

We contacted both OHRE and COO to determine the extent of the search which had been performed.<3>For COO, the search was done by Dr. Robert Schlenker, Director of Environmental Health and Safety at Argonne. Dr. Schlenker stated that most pre-1946 documents were searched in an effort to find responsive material, and that a former scientist from the Manhattan Project was contacted as well. That scientist recalled the existence of a responsive scientific study which was in COO's possession and this study was supplied to the Appellant in its determination. However, the scientist had no personal knowledge of weather balloons being released at Stagg Field in the 1940s or any documents concerning that topic.<4>Dr. Schlenker further noted that, as the Appellant was earlier informed, it is possible that Stagg Field documents are included with documents sent by Argonne to the National Archives.<5> Dr. Schlenker also believed that because the Manhattan Project was carried out under the auspices of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, some documents could be currently held by the U.S. military. Further, in his previous contacts with the University of Chicago, Dr. Schlenker has been informed that the University possesses no Metallurgy Laboratory documents. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Robert Schlenker (January 2, 1996).

However, through our inquiries, we have discovered that there is one category of documents which COO did not search. COO possesses about 5,000 scientific notebooks compiled by Manhattan Project scientists in the early 1940s, which have been preliminarily determined to be radioactive. According to Dr. Schlenker, it would cost approximately $100,000 to determine precisely which books are radioactive, several thousand additional dollars to equip Argonne to read the material, 5,000 working days to then read and summarize the material, and perhaps the additional cost of a radiation protection technician's presence during document examination. For these reasons, COO has never read these notebooks. See Memoranda of Telephone Conversations between Dawn L. Koren and Robert Schlenker (January 17 and 18, 1996). Thus, although no one knows whether these notebooks contain responsive material, it is possible, given the broad nature of the Appellant's request, that they do. Nevertheless, we have determined that it would be unreasonable and unduly burdensome to perform a search of the 5,000 notebooks whose contents are almost completely unknown, in order to respond to the request at issue. See Government Accountability Project, 23 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,594 (1993). This would be so even if those notebooks were not believed to be radioactive. The additional cost of the radioactivity determination and related safeguards clearly confirms this judgment. Thus, we find that the search performed by COO was reasonable.

We were informed that the OHRE search was conducted by Robert Zielinski. Mr. Zielinski informed us that both the Human Radiation Experiments Information Management System (HREX) and the bibliography of the DOE Office of Science, Technology and Information were searched for responsive documents, by utilizing the search query "Stagg Field and radiation" as well as "Stagg Field" individually. See Memorandum of Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Robert Zielinski (January 2, 1996). However, it appears that OHRE did not search for documents using the search query, "Chicago and radiation" or for the term "weather balloon," although all of these terms were used in the Appellant's request. Consequently, in light of the fact that OHRE has stated its intention to continue to search for responsive documents using other search queries, see Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Robert Zielinski (January 11, 1996), we shall remand this case to OHRE. On remand, OHRE shall identify all documents responsive to the Appellant's request, and either release them or provide adequate justification for withholding any portion of them.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Nathaniel Hendricks on December 27, 1995, Case Number VFA-0106, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Office of Human Radiation Experiments, which shall conduct a search for documents responsive to the Appellant's request as described in the above Decision and Order, and shall promptly issue a new determination regarding the result of that search.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>Stagg Field was used by scientists of the Manhattan Project, which began in August 1942, as the site of the first nuclear reactor. The reactor began operating in December of that year. See Memorandum of Conversation between Dawn L. Koren, OHA Staff Attorney, and Robert Zielinski, OHRE (January 2, 1996). These scientists were part of the Metallurgy Laboratory of the University of Chicago. The Metallurgy Laboratory's successor, Argonne National Laboratory (Argonne), was created in 1946. Since that time, Argonne has been operated by the University of Chicago as a contractor for the DOE and the agency's predecessors. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Dr. Robert Schlenker, Director, Office of Environment, Health and Safety, Argonne (January 2, 1996).

<2>The Appellant also referred to medical studies conducted at the University of Chicago Laboratory School, and questioned whether University of Chicago or other records had been searched for documents relating to those studies. The subject matter of this inquiry is outside the Appellant's original request for documents concerning the release of radiation into the atmosphere. If the Appellant now wishes to obtain information of a different nature than that which he originally requested, he should file a new request for that information.

We note further that the document sent by OHRE to the Appellant is marked as being held by the University of Washington. It is possible that other documents relevant to the Appellant's request are held there as well.

<3>Although the Appellant did not appeal the COO determination (possibly because COO did not inform him of his right to appeal to this Office), in order to fully respond to the appeal at issue, we have chosen to investigate COO's search as well.

<4>That scientist speculated that weather balloons might have been used to discover wind direction prior to reactor operation, in an effort to prevent unsafe radiation distribution. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Koren and Robert Schlenker (January 17, 1996).

<5>In 1984, a number of Metallurgy Laboratory documents were sent to the National Archives. On April 5, 1995, a detailed list of those documents was provided to the Appellant.

January 18, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Jeffrey R. Leist

Date of Filing: December 12, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0107

On December 12, 1995, Jeffrey R. Leist filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on November 15, 1995, by the Manager of the Ohio Field Office (OFO) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Manager partially denied a request for information filed by Mr. Leist on September 21, 1995, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA will nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his request for information, Mr. Leist sought copies of documents showing: (i) Fernald Environmental Restoration Management Company (FERMCO) employees who he contends were placed on "at risk" lists for Voluntary Reduction in Force (VRIF) benefits in 1995; and (ii) FERMCO employees who he contends were placed on the "at risk" list for VRIF benefits and who were ultimately allowed to accept these benefits. On November 15, 1995 the Manager of the OFO provided Mr. Leist with a copy of an employee list responsive to the first part of Mr. Leist's request, but he redacted all names in accordance with Exemption 6 of the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6). Furthermore, the Manager of the OFO was unable to locate any documents responsive to the second part of Mr. Leist's request.

In his Appeal, Mr. Leist amended the second part of his request for information. In his amendment, Mr. Leist requests that the DOE indicate from the responsive employee list provided to him on November 15, 1995 "those individuals by Division (along with the total count of people) from this "at risk" list who did or will (scheduled to) [sic] get VRIF benefits as part of the 1995 reduction in force program."

II. Analysis

Initially, we note that the OFO is in the process of reviewing Mr. Leist's amended request for information.<1> Accordingly, we will direct the OFO to complete this process and send to Mr. Leist any responsive documents it may find or state the reasons why any responsive documents are exempt from mandatory disclosure.<2> However, we must still consider the releasability of all of the remaining redacted names from the employee list provided to Mr. Leist on November 15, 1995.

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post). Furthermore, the term "similar files" has been interpreted broadly by the Supreme Court to include all information that "applies to a particular individual." Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 602. Pursuant to the established legal precedent, there is no doubt that the names of individuals redacted in this case qualify as "similar files" under Exemption 6.

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (Ripskis). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 773 (1989) (Reporters Comm.). See also Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 (1994). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

A. Privacy Interest

The Supreme Court has long found a privacy interest in the names and addresses of individuals significant enough to warrant protection from disclosure pursuant to Exemption 6. Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 375 (1976). Moreover, at least seven Circuit Courts have found that an individual has a significant privacy interest in avoiding the unlimited disclosure of his or her name. See, e.g., Hopkins v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991); Painting and Drywall Work Preservation Fund v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 936 F.2d 1300, 1303 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Halloran v. Veterans Admin., 874 F.2d 315, 324 (5th Cir. 1989); Department of Agric. v. FLRA, 836 F.2d 1139, 1143 (8th Cir. 1988); Minnis v. Department of Agric. 737 F.2d 784, 787 (9th Cir. 1984); Heights Community Congress v. Veterans Admin., 732 F.2d 526, 529 (6th Cir. 1984); American Fed'n of Gov't Employees v. United States, 712 F.2d 931, 932 (4th Cir. 1983). In light of the overwhelming weight of authority, we find that disclosure of the names of the individuals who were considered for VRIF benefits in 1995 would result in a substantial invasion of personal privacy.

B. Public Interest in Disclosure

The Supreme Court has held that there is a public interest in disclosure of information that "sheds light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties." Reporters Comm., 489 U.S. at 773. The burden of establishing that disclosure would serve the public interest is on the requester. Carter v. Department of Commerce, 830 F.2d 388 (D.C. Cir. 1987). Mr. Leist has simply not demonstrated and we do not find any public interest in the disclosure of the requested information. We fail to see how release of the names would aid the public in understanding anything about the workings of the government. In view of the fact that there is no apparent public interest to balance against the significant potential invasion of personal privacy, we find that the Manager properly withheld the names of employees from disclosure. Accordingly, we must deny Mr. Leist's Appeal with respect to the redacted names.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Jeffrey R. Leist on December 12, 1995, Case Number VFA-0107, is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) The Manager of the Ohio Field Office is directed to complete his review of Mr. Leist's amended request and send to Mr. Leist any responsive documents he may find or state the reasons why any responsive documents are exempt from mandatory disclosure.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

January 25, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Williams & Trine, P.C.

Date of Filing: December 21, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0108

On December 21, 1995, Williams & Trine, P.C. (Williams) filed an Appeal from two determinations issued to the firm. The determinations were issued in response to a request for documents submitted by Williams under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. One determination was issued on November 20, 1995, by the Ohio Field Office (DOE/OH) of the DOE, and the second was issued on December 12, 1995, by the FOIA/Privacy Act Division of the Office of the Executive Secretariat (DOE/HQ). Both DOE/OH and DOE/HQ informed Williams that no documents responsive to its request exist. This Appeal, if granted, would require that we order DOE/OH and DOE/HQ to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On October 18, 1995, Williams filed a request for information pursuant to the FOIA with DOE/HQ. In its request, Williams sought information in any form in DOE's custody or control pertaining to the transportation or shipping of hazardous waste materials, including plutonium, from Mound Laboratory (Mound) of Miamisburg, Ohio, the "Manhattan Project," Oak Ridge National Laboratory, or any nuclear facility under the control or regulation of DOE or its predecessors for processing in the Canon City, Colorado area from 1970 to the present. See Letter from Williams & Trine, P.C., to FOIA Officer, DOE/HQ (October 18, 1995) (Request Letter). Williams alleged that processing or other disposition of the material would likely have taken place at a facility owned and/or operated by the Cotter Corporation (Cotter), a subsidiary of Commonwealth Edison. In addition, Williams claimed that any material from the "Manhattan Project" may be referred to as the "Congo raffinates," and could have been milled at the Mallinkrodt facility in the St. Louis, Missouri area. Id.

DOE/HQ notified DOE/OH of the request, and on November 20, 1995, DOE/OH informed Williams that it was unable to locate any responsive records. See Letter from Authorizing Official, DOE/OH, to Williams & Trine, P.C. (November 20, 1995) (Ohio Determination Letter). The following month, DOE/HQ also informed Williams that it was unable to locate records responsive to the request. See Letter from Director, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, DOE/HQ, to Williams & Trine, P.C. (December 12, 1995) (DOE/HQ Determination Letter). On December 21, 1995, Williams filed this Appeal, requesting that OHA direct DOE/HQ and DOE/OH to conduct an additional search for responsive material. See Letter from Williams & Trine, P.C. to Director, OHA (December 21, 1995) (Appeal Letter).

II. Analysis

We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W. R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In considering the present Appeal, we contacted DOE/HQ and DOE/OH to ascertain whether their search was reasonably calculated to uncover the information sought by Williams. DOE/HQ informed us that they had contacted several offices within the agency including DOE/OH, Oak Ridge, Defense Programs (DP), Environment, Safety and Health (EH) and Environmental Management (EM). Oak Ridge, DP and EH found no responsive material.

EM maintains the DOE Automated Transportation Management System (ATMS), and searched for shipments to Cotter and the Canon City, Colorado area. This system contains information about hazardous (including radioactive) shipments. See Memorandum from DOE/EM to DOE/HQ (December 7, 1995). Eleven shipments were tracked to Canon City, Colorado, but none contained hazardous or radioactive material. The shipments consisted of printed forms and express mail documents. Id. According to EM, it is possible that information exists that is not on the system, but this is not likely. The Hazardous Materials Transportation Authorization Act of 1994, which controls the retention of information regarding hazardous (including radioactive) material shipments, only requires that shipping papers be maintained for one year. See 49 U.S.C. § 5110(e) (1995). DOE actually exceeds the guidelines by retaining historical information in ATMS about radioactive DOE shipments dating back to 1983. Hazardous waste information is retained back to 1992.

DOE/OH is the DOE field office responsible for Mound Laboratory, one of the sites alleged to be the origin of the shipment of hazardous and/or radioactive material to the Cotter Corporation in Canon City, Colorado. DOE/OH conducted a search of its files and those of EG&G Mound Applied Technologies, Inc., the contractor responsible for the management and operation of the Mound facility. No responsive documents were found. See Letter from Authorizing Official, DOE/OH, to Williams & Trine (November 20, 1995). DOE/OH also interviewed several employees who worked in the Operations Division during the time period mentioned in the request and would be knowledgeable of the location of any responsive records that may exist. None of these employees were aware of any relevant material. Id.

According to DOE/OH, the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) had expressed interest in acquiring thorium and protactinium from Cotter. This material was needed for research to be conducted by the Mound Laboratory. In exchange, Cotter would receive uranium concentrate from the AEC stockpile. See Letter from Executive Vice President, Cotter Corporation, to Manager, Mound Laboratory at 2 (February 2, 1972). However, it is not apparent from the documents included in the Appeal Letter (and offered by Williams as the basis for its allegation that material was shipped to Cotter) that an agreement was ever confirmed. See Appeal Letter at 1. In fact, the most recent document submitted by Williams is a letter from E. J. McGrath, then counsel to Cotter. In the letter, Cotter's lawyer states that the AEC was then conducting an audit of his client, and that Cotter hoped to conclude the matter (i.e., the agreement) upon completion of the audit. See Letter from E. J. McGrath, Esq., to Manager, Mound Laboratory (June 29, 1972).

DOE/OH contends that no reprocessing was done, and no radioactive material was shipped to Cotter in Colorado. In the course of this investigation, personnel at DOE/OH located a nuclear physicist who had worked on the proposed reprocessing program during the relevant time period. He stated that the program was never implemented because Congress reduced funding for Mound, and this program was a casualty of those budget cuts. The radioactive material intended for use in the program was then shipped to Nevada, where it remains today.

III. Conclusion

We find that the DOE has conducted a search reasonably calculated to uncover the information sought by Williams in this Appeal. DOE/OH, the field office most likely to contain any responsive information due to its relationship with Mound, not only searched its files but also identified and interviewed employees who worked on the project in question during the relevant time period. From the information in this case, it appears that the contention of DOE/OH is credible-- no agreement was completed, no material was shipped to Cotter, and the proposed reprocessing program became a casualty of budget cuts.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Williams & Trine, P.C. on December 21, 1995, Case No. VFA-0108, is hereby denied.

January 25, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: David R. McMurdo

Date of Filing: December 26, 1995

Case Number: VFA-0109

On December 26, 1995, David R. McMurdo filed an Appeal from a determination issued on December 7, 1995, by the Department of Energy's Richland Operations Office (Richland) under the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1008. In that determination, Richland stated that the search it conducted for documents responsive to McMurdo's Privacy Act request had not located any responsive documents.

I. Background

In his Appeal, McMurdo states that he is a former employee of the Foothill Electric Corporation, a former sub-contractor at DOE's Hanford Nuclear Reservation. On September 28, 1995, McMurdo requested copies of any radiation exposure or medical records pertaining to him in Richland's possession. On December 7, 1995, Richland issued a determination in response to McMurdo's request stating in pertainent part: "We have conducted a thorough search by name, date of birth and Social Security Number and no records were found in the possession of the Department of Energy, Richland Operations Office." December 7, 1995 Determination Letter. In his Appeal, McMurdo claims that while working at the Hanford Site in 1954, he and a co-worker were involved in an incident requiring the rescue efforts of approximately 30 men and two cranes. According to the Appeal, after the rescue, the two men were taken to a first aid station "where [they] were both found to be ?HOT' . . ." McMurdo contends that this incident should have generated medical or radiation reports which should have been located by Richland's search. McMurdo then speculates that Richland used the wrong name or social security number when conducting its search.

II. Analysis

The Privacy Act requires, inter alia, that each federal agency permit an individual to gain access to information pertaining to him or her which is contained in any system of records maintained by the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d). DOE regulations define a system of records as "a group of any records under DOE control from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particulars assigned to the individual." 10 C.F.R. § 1008.2(m).

We have investigated the search undertaken by Richland in response to McMurdo's request, and have been advised that a thorough search of the applicable systems of records under Richland's control has been conducted. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Steven L. Fine, OHA Staff Attorney, and Angela Ward, FOI and Privacy Act Analyst, Richland Operations Office (January 17, 1996). The systems searched in response to McMurdo's request include: the REX Database (searched by name and Social Security Number); the Hanford Plant Index (searched by name and Social Security Number); Visitors' results records (searched by name); Construction Dose Results (searched by name and Social Security Number); Old General Electric Pay Number Issue books (searched by name and dates); Microfiche of Old Keypunch Cards (searched by Name); Medical Treatment Records (searched by name date of birth and Social Security Number) and the incident report files maintained at Richland's public reference room. Id. In response to McMurdo's concern that the wrong name or social security number was used in conduction the search, Richland verified that the original search had been conducted using the correct information by repeating portions of that search, but it was still unable to locate any responsive documents.

Based on the foregoing, we conclude that Richland has adequately searched all the systems of records under its control that might reasonably be expected to contain the material sought by McMurdo. Accordingly, the present Appeal will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Privacy Act Appeal filed by David R. McMurdo on December 26, 1995, Case Number VFA-0109, is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Williams & Trine, P.C.

Date of Filing: January 11, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0110

On January 11, 1996, Williams & Trine, P.C. (Williams) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to the firm in response to a request for documents submitted by Williams under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The determination was issued on December 12, 1995, by the FOIA/Privacy Act Division of the Office of the Executive Secretariat (DOE/HQ). DOE/HQ informed Williams that no documents responsive to its request exist. This Appeal, if granted, would require that we order DOE/HQ to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On October 18, 1995, Williams filed a request for information pursuant to the FOIA with DOE/HQ. In its request, Williams sought information in any form in DOE's custody or control pertaining to the transportation or shipping of hazardous waste materials, including plutonium, from Mound Laboratory (Mound) of Miamisburg, Ohio, the "Manhattan Project," Oak Ridge National Laboratory, or any nuclear facility under the control or regulation of DOE or its predecessors for processing in the Canon City, Colorado area from 1970 to the present. See Letter from Williams & Trine, P.C., to FOIA Officer, DOE/HQ (October 18, 1995) (Request Letter). Williams alleged that processing or other disposition of the material would likely have taken place at a facility owned and/or operated by the Cotter Corporation (Cotter), a subsidiary of Commonwealth Edison. In addition, Williams claimed that any material from the "Manhattan Project" may be referred to as the "Congo raffinates," and could have been milled at the Mallinkrodt facility in the St. Louis, Missouri area. Id.

DOE/HQ notified the Ohio Field Office (DOE/OH), Oak Ridge, Defense Programs (DP), Environment, Safety and Health (EH) and Environmental Management (EM) of the request. See Williams & Trine, 25 DOE ¶ , (January 25, 1996) (Williams). Oak Ridge, DP, and EH found no responsive records. DOE/OH submitted its own determination, and on November 20, 1995, DOE/OH informed Williams that it was unable to locate any responsive records. See Letter from Authorizing Official, DOE/OH, to Williams & Trine, P.C. (November 20, 1995) (Ohio Determination Letter). The following month, DOE/HQ also informed Williams that it was unable to locate records responsive to the request. See Letter from Director, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, DOE/HQ, to Williams & Trine, P.C. (December 12, 1995) (DOE/HQ Determination Letter). On December 21, 1995, Williams filed an Appeal of DOE's responses, attaching both the Ohio and DOE/HQ Determination Letters to its Appeal. Williams alleged that the DOE/OH search was inadequate, and that no search had been performed at Headquarters. That Appeal was denied. See Williams.

On January 11, 1996, Williams filed this Appeal, based on the same December 12th DOE/HQ Determination Letter. See Letter from Williams & Trine, P.C. to Director, OHA (January 11, 1996) (Appeal Letter). This Appeal requests (1) that OHA direct DOE/HQ to release additional material withheld as nonresponsive, (2) that OHA direct DOE to conduct another search of its files, and (3) that DOE provide information regarding the manner in which the files were searched. Id.

II. Analysis

We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W. R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

Release of Previously Withheld Material

The present Appeal was filed prior to the publication of Williams, which we believe provides the requester with the type of information about the agency searches that it is seeking. Williams does raise a new issue in this Appeal, however. It requests the release of information about eleven shipments of documents to the Canon City, Colorado area. DOE headquarters did not consider this material responsive because Williams had requested information about the shipment of radioactive or hazardous materials, not paper, to that area. Williams contends that its request is sufficiently broad to cover this material, and asks us to release the documentation. We do not agree. However, we have asked DOE/HQ to review the Appeal again and, subject to any applicable exemptions, determine if the material can be released to Williams.

Request for Additional Search

Williams has also requested that DOE perform an additional search, or in the alternative, provide information regarding the manner in which the files were searched. With respect to the DOE/OH search, Cotter alleges that it participated in an agreement with the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) whereby Cotter would receive uranium concentrate from the AEC stockpile in exchange for sending thorium and protactinium to Mound Laboratory in Ohio. See Williams. However, DOE/OH contends that the transaction was proposed as part of a program that was never implemented, and the radioactive material was shipped instead to Nevada. DOE/OH has agreed to search the archives of its contractor for information related to the proposed program, and will respond directly to the requester.

As to the manner in which the Headquarters search was conducted, we refer the requester to the previous Appeal in which we stated that the search of the shipment tracking system and the pertinent DOE offices was reasonably calculated to uncover the requested information. See Williams. In addition, this office contacted the Office of the Historian, and requested a search for any information relating to Cotter. A document dated July 22, 1971 was located, which discussed the burial of radioactive material owned by Cotter at a disposal site in Hazelwood, Missouri. This does not appear to be responsive to the request. Accordingly, DOE's search for material responsive to Williams' Request Letter was adequate.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Williams & Trine, P.C. on January 11, 1996, Case No. VFA-0110, is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: The News Tribune

Date of Filing: January 11, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0111

On January 11, 1996, The News Tribune of Tacoma, Washington, through its attorneys, filed an Appeal from a determination issued on December 4, 1995, by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part The News Tribune's request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by a covered branch of the federal government, and which have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

BACKGROUND

On November 28, 1995, a member of The News Tribune staff filed a FOIA request with BPA seeking correspondence between BPA and two named individuals. The requester believed that the correspondence would involve property owned by the two individuals in Tacoma, Washington on which BPA has an easement. BPA responded on December 4, 1995 and identified eight letters dating from late 1992 through late 1995 as responsive to the request. The letters, to the property owners, dealt with potential encroachments on transmission line easements on certain properties. These easements require the property owner to keep the transmission line right-of-way clear of, inter alia

"brush, timber, inflammable structures and fire hazards ... and to prevent any use of the area that would interfere in any manner with BPA's use of the area for transmission purposes." Over the course of the correspondence, BPA stated that its crews had variously spotted a semi-trailer, mobile homes, buses, trailers, boat hulls, wood, dirt piles, various other debris, and a gate impeding access to the lines. In the letters, BPA sought removal of these items and outlined steps it would take to insure compliance with its requests. BPA released the body of the letters including legal descriptions and plats of the properties involved. The only material withheld was the name, address and salutation from each letter. BPA withheld this information under Exemption 6 of the FOIA. BPA also informs this Office that the material was taken from DOE Record Group 24 (Land Records) and the withheld information is, therefore, not subject to discretionary release because of the restrictions of the Privacy Act. 5 U.S.C. § 552a. The News Tribune appeals the decision to withhold the names and addresses.

ANALYSIS

Exemption 6 permits an agency to make a discretionary withholding of information which must otherwise be released in response to a FOIA request if the materials are "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). After ensuring that the documents meet the threshold test for types of material covered, the application of Exemption 6 requires an agency to balance the public interest in disclosure with the privacy interest involved. Department of State v. Ray, 502 U.S. 164, 175 (1991) (Ray); Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976) (Rose); Harold H. Johnson, 21 DOE ¶ 80,148 at 80,640 (1991). In this case, we will examine the propriety of withholding the names and addresses separately.<1>

A. Personnel and Medical Files and Similar Files

The News Tribune asserts that the letters fail the threshold test for Exemption 6. It claims that the letters do not contain the type of private material found in personnel or medical records. Thus, it claims, they are not "similar files" that qualify for Exemption 6 treatment. The Supreme Court has rejected The News Tribune view and has taken an expansive view of what constitutes "similar files" for the purposes of Exemption 6. As the Court has explained, the exemption covers "'detailed Government records on an individual which can be identified as applying to that individual.'" Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 602 (1982) (Washington Post) (quoting H.R. Rep. No. 1497, 89th Cong., 2d Sess. 11 (1966), reprinted in 1966 U.S.C.C.A.N. 2418, 2428 (House Report)). See also Annotation, When Are Government Records "Similar Files" Exempt From Disclosure Under Freedom of Information Act Provision (5 USCS § 552(b)(6)) Exempting Certain Personnel, Medical and "Similar Files", 106 A.L.R. Fed. 94, 102 (1992). In this case, the letters are written to specific individuals and obviously can be connected with those persons. Thus, they fall within the Supreme Court's definition for "similar files" covered by Exemption 6.

B. The Names

1. The Privacy Interest

The first question we must address in applying the Exemption 6 balancing test is the quantum of privacy in the withheld names. That is, we must determine how release of this withheld information might reveal something personal about the people involved. To resolve this question, we must examine whether the information withheld falls within Exemption 6's primary purpose: "to protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 599 (emphasis added). Thus, it is only when the release of some personal information about an individual would cause a "clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy" that the information may be exempt from mandatory release under the FOIA.

There are four possible privacy interests present in this case which might be impacted by release of the names. First, there is the arguable privacy interest in the name itself. However, an invasion of privacy ordinarily becomes significant only when a name is linked with some other information that reveals something personal about an individual. Ray, 502 U.S. at 176 & n.12; Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762; Professional Programs Group v. Department of Commerce, 29 F.3d 1349, 1354 (9th Cir. 1994); Multnomah County Medical Soc'y v. Scott, 825 F.2d 1410, 1415 (9th Cir. 1987). Therefore, we must examine the withheld names in the context of the information to which it is associated; i.e. what release of the names, combined with other specific facts, would reveal about those particular persons. Paul A. Rubin, Note, Applying the Freedom of Information Act's Privacy Exemption for Lists of Names and Addresses, 58 Ford. L.Rev. 1033, 1048-50 (1990). See also National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873, 876 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied sub. nom., National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Newman, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990) (Horner) ("The extent of any invasion of privacy that release of the list might occasion thus depends upon the nature of the defining characteristics"). In this case, the context links particular persons with (1) ownership of specific parcels of property, (2) what is happening on those properties, and (3) agency contact. We address each of these in turn as well as any privacy interest in the name standing alone.

First, we can find no privacy interest in being named as the owner of a particular plot of land. In order to secure good title to real property in the State of Washington, the conveyance of the property must be recorded in the county where the property is located. Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 65.08.070 (West 1994). See also Wash. Rev. Code Ann. § 65.12.330 (West 1994) (Torrens). Once recorded, it is notice to all the world of ownership by that person. See Paganelli v. Swendsen, 50 Wash.2d 304, 305, 309-11, 311 P.2d 676, 677, 679-80 (1961); 11 Thompson on Real Property § 92.15(b)(1) at 169 (Thomas ed. 1994). Land records are among the most easily found, most accessible, and perhaps most heavily used government records in this country. This is not the type of publicly available information that is hidden in "practical obscurity." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762, 780. Given the long history of compulsory public registration of land ownership in this country, we believe that there is no privacy interest in title to real property once notice has been given to all the world.

Second, in this case, the allegations of encroachments upon BPA's easements do not raise a privacy concern. There is no evidence before us that indicates that the property owner created the conditions referred to, or even knew about them until the BPA letters were issued.<2>In addition, there is no evidence in the record that the subject properties are the residences of the individuals involved. Release of their names would not connect these persons with activities in or around their own homes. See, e.g., Wine Hobby USA, Inc. v. Internal Revenue Serv., 502 F.2d 133, 137 (3d Cir. 1974) (Wine Hobby). Thus, although release of the names in conjunction with the contents of the letters may reveal something about some parcels of property, it discloses nothing about those persons nor reveals personal or private information in any traditional sense of the meaning. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762; cf. Viacom Int'l, Inc. v. Environmental Protection Agency, No. 95-2243, 1995 WL 695098, at *4 (E.D. Pa. Nov. 17, 1995), reconsideration denied 1996 WL 46419 (E.D. Pa. Jan 29, 1996) (no privacy interest in condition of land tested by EPA for contaminants).

Third, we do not find a privacy interest in the simple fact that some branch of the United States Government contacted a person. This is not to say that there is no privacy interest involved in any exchange between the federal government and an individual. That privacy interest, however, depends on the subject and substance of the matter under discussion. Cf. Ray, 502 U.S. at 175-76. It is not, in general, created by the simple fact that an agency had some contact with a person. Any other rule would swallow the FOIA whole. Congress has provided specific protection for those rare instances where the mere matter of contact between an individual and a branch of the federal government is so sensitive that the very fact of the contact can be withheld. See, e.g., William A. Hewgley, 17 DOE ¶ 80,146 at 80,615 n.1 (1988) (discussing Exemption 3 and statute protecting privacy of those who have interaction with the Central Intelligence Agency). In the absence of some compelling governmental interest not apparent in this case, we believe that there is no valid privacy interest in the very fact of government contact.

The remaining issue is whether individuals' names, by themselves, hold an inherent privacy interest. We do not believe that there is a privacy interest in a name absent some other indicia of information about that individual. "A man's 'name' is simply the sound or sounds by which he is commonly designated by his fellows, and by which they distinguish him. It is a mere means of description." State v. Howard, 30 Mont. 518, 521, 77 P. 50, 51 (1904). This is not the type of item in which there is a privacy interest. The interest in individual privacy has traditionally protected "the right to one's personality.... [and] those [areas] which concern the private life, habits, acts, and relations of an individual...." Samuel D. Warren & Louis D. Brandeis, The Right to Privacy, 4 Harv. L. Rev. 193, 207, 216 (1890). This same sentiment forms the basis for the general FOIA principle that Exemption 6 was designed to guard the "confidentiality of personal matters," Rose, 425 U.S. at 375 n.14, where "the threat to privacy interests [are] more palpable than mere possibilities." Id. at 380 n.19. We do not believe that a simple appellation, standing alone, falls within any reasonable zone of personal privacy.<3>

2. The Privacy Interest/Public Interest Balance

In this case, we have been unable to discern any privacy interest in withholding the names of the individuals to whom these particular letters were sent. If there is no identifiable privacy interest, then information may not be withheld under Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. & Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984); J/R/A Associates, 24 DOE ¶ 80,165 at 80,655 (1995); William D. Lawrence, 24 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,600 (1994); Virginia Johnson, 23 DOE ¶ 80,168 at 80,664-65 (1993). Accordingly, we will remand this matter to BPA to either release the names or to issue a new determination identifying the properties as the residences of the addressees or some other privacy interest that justifies withholding these names.

C. The Addresses

In addition to the names, BPA withheld the addresses to which the letters were sent. BPA believes that some of the addresses may be the homes of the addressees, but it is not certain. Some may be business addresses. It is the practice of the DOE to release business addresses. Thus, we will remand this matter to the BPA to determine if any of the addresses are business locations, and if they are, to release the addresses. We will, however, determine whether BPA correctly withheld any home addresses.

1. The Privacy Interest

To the extent that the addresses are the residences of the individuals involved, we believe they have a substantial privacy interest. Department of Defense v. Federal Labor Relations Auth., 510 U.S. ___, ___, 127 L.Ed.2d 325, 337-38, 114 S.Ct. 1006, 1015-16 (1994) (FLRA). A home has always enjoyed a special status in the law as a refuge for a person from unsolicited intrusions, even if the location somehow can be determined from publicly available information. Id. Thus, home addresses have always been accorded considerable (albeit not inviolate) protection under Exemption 6. Id.; Painting Indus. of Hawaii Mkt. Recovery Fund v. Department of the Air Force, 26 F.3d 1479, 1483 (9th Cir. 1994); Horner, 879 F.2d at 875-78; Annotation, When Are Government Records "Personnel Files" Exempt From Disclosure Under Freedom of Information Act Provision (5 USCS § 552(b)(6)) Exempting Certain "Personnel," Medical, and Similar Files, 104 A.L.R. Fed. 757, 772-800 (1991) (collecting types of cases).

2. The Public Interest

As noted above, once a privacy interest is identified, we must then determine whether there is a FOIA-defined public interest in release of the withheld material. In its appeal letter, The News Tribune asserts that release of the addresses serves a valid public interest. We contacted The News Tribune's counsel to clarify its position. The News Tribune has asserted three public interests in the release of the withheld information.

First, The News Tribune claims that there is "a legitimate public interest in knowing who is endangering the health and safety of the public's property." In any ordinary sense of the meaning of public interest this may be true. However, in this case, we do not believe it falls within the meaning of "public interest" under the definition established by the Supreme Court. In Reporters Committee, the Court took an exceptionally narrow view of what is in the public interest for the purposes of the FOIA. The only relevant public interest, in the Court's view, is release of information that is likely to contribute "'significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government.'" Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 775

(quoting 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii)). See also FLRA, 510 U.S. at ___, 127 L.Ed.2d at 334-35, 114 S.Ct. at 1012-13.

In this case, it is not apparent that release of the addresses would in any way "shed light on the conduct of any Government agency or official," Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 773, or the public's understanding of what the government has done and is doing. That interest has already been served. BPA, in the best tradition of the FOIA, released the entire substance of the correspondence requested. This is precisely what Congress sought to accomplish in enacting the FOIA. See House Report at 11. Because BPA released the entire substance of the requested documents, we find that no further benefit would accrue to the public interest, under the Supreme Court's definition, by release of the addresses. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 766 n.18.

Second, The News Tribune asserts that it needs the addresses to judge the government's performance and position. It states that there is a public interest in knowing the other side of the story. Thus, the addresses are needed to contact the people involved and get their view of the controversy. So armed, The News Tribune contends, the public will be able to evaluate the BPA position. We do not believe that in this particular case this constitutes a sufficient public interest under the Supreme Court's constrained construct. See Robert S. Foote, 25 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,567 (1995) (discussing narrowness of Supreme Court standard); Morrison & Foerster, 24 DOE ¶ 80,107 at 80,518 (1994) (same).

The News Tribune does not contend that release of the names themselves shed light on the government's conduct. Rather, their argument is one of "derivative use;" that by learning the addresses, they could put together other information or gather more facts. The Supreme Court has expressly declined to rule on the "derivative use" doctrine. Ray, 502 U.S. at 178-79. Although the Circuit Courts have widely divided on the issue, Sheet Metal Workers Int'l Assoc., Local No. 9 v. United States Air Force, 63 F.3d 994, 998 n. 3 (10th Cir. 1995), the DOE has never addressed the question of "derivative use." We need not deal with the issue in this case and leave the matter open for another day. However, assuming the availability of the "derivative use" idea, we do not believe that the withheld information should be released in this case. The reason for this is clear. Even if we to take The News Tribune's "derivative use" at face value and assess the information already in its possession, the "derivative use" would not in itself in this case reveal anything about government operations. Cf. Minnis v. Department of Agric., 737 F.2d 784, 787 (9th Cir. 1984), cert. denied, 471 U.S. 1053 (1985). The information The News Tribune would garner is exactly what it claims, the story of the landowners and what they may or may not have known or done. In this case, it would not learn additional information on the position or actions of the government. The News Tribune has already been apprised of these matters through the information previously released. Cf. FLRA, 510 U.S. at ___, 127 L.Ed.2d at 336, 114 S.Ct. at 1013-14. Thus, The News Tribune would not, under these particular circumstances, amass any further "official information that sheds light on [BPA's] performance of its statutory duties [16 U.S.C. §§ 832-832k]," Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 773, as required by the Supreme Court public interest standard. Accordingly, we can give no weight to this public interest argument. See also Federal Labor Relations Auth. v. Department of the Treasury, 884 F.2d 1446, 1452 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 493 U.S. 1055 (1990) (possibility of providing leads for investigative reporter does not outweigh privacy interest of federal retirees in their names and addresses).

Finally, The News Tribune parades before us a collection of horribles that it says it will not be able to investigate without release of the withheld information. These range from racial discrimination to potential conflicts of interest. The News Tribune, however, not only fails to produce any evidence to support its claims, it does not even explain why it thinks these might be true. Simple speculation cannot form the basis of a valid public interest argument. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 774; Robert S. Foote, 25 DOE at 80,565; Casey O. Ruud, 24 DOE ¶ 80,170 at 80,675 (1995). Thus we must reject this asserted public interest as well.

3. The Privacy Interest/Public Interest Balance

Because agency practice indicates any business addresses should be released, we are left with balancing the "not insubstantial" privacy interest in home addresses, FLRA, 510 U.S. at ___, 127 L.Ed.2d at 337, 114 S.Ct. at 1015, against no discernible public interest as defined by the Supreme Court. The Exemption 6 balancing test presupposes that there is some public interest to balance. Thus, where there is no public interest to balance, as in this case, the privacy interest in non-disclosure, however small, must prevail. Id. at ___, 127 L.Ed.2d at 337, 114 S.Ct. at 1015; Maynard v. Central Intelligence Agency, 986 F.2d 547, 566 n.21 (1st Cir. 1993); Federal Labor Relations Auth. v. Department of Defense, 984 F.2d 370, 374 (10th Cir. 1993). Accordingly, we must find that the privacy interest in the home addresses in this case outweighs the lack of a FOIA-defined public interest, and that they were properly withheld from disclosure. As noted above, however, we remand this matter to BPA to release any business addresses.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal of The News Tribune of Tacoma, Washington, OHA Case No. VFA-0111 is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration, which shall issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

<1>/ Both this Office and the courts frequently examine the withholding of names and addresses under Exemption 6 as a unitary package. We believe this is the correct manner of proceeding where the privacy interests are the same for both the name and address. As we explain in detail below, this case presents us with the somewhat unusual instance where there are different privacy interests for the name and for the address.

<2>/ Two of the letters do contain sentences referring to "Your encroachments...." Read in context, we do not believe that the BPA is accusing these persons of creating or knowing about the encroachments.

<3>/ We emphasize, however, that in the ordinary case, where the name and address are linked together, that linking would create a privacy interest in the name. See, e.g., Wine Hobby, 502 F.2d at 136-37. This issue does not arise in this case because there are separate privacy issues for the name and the address.

February 14, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Knolls Action Project

Date of Filing: January 11, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0112

On January 11, 1996, the Knolls Action Project (KAP) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it by the Department of Energy's Office of Naval Reactors (NR) on November 29, 1995. In that determination, NR provided information to KAP under the terms of a fee waiver originally sought in a request for information filed by KAP under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require NR to release additional information pursuant to the terms of the fee waiver.

I. Background

In submissions dated July 11, 12, 13 and 14, 1995, KAP filed four requests under the FOIA requesting various documents from NR pertaining to the shipment and management of spent nuclear fuels from U.S. naval vessels. In these FOIA requests, KAP requested a fee waiver for the costs associated with processing the FOIA requests. NR denied KAP's fee waiver request and stated that much of the releasable portions of the material requested would not contribute significantly to the public understanding of the operations and activities of the Department.

On October 13, 1995, KAP filed an Appeal from the determination issued by NR. See Knolls Action Project, 25 DOE ¶ 80,148 (1995) (Knolls). In that Appeal, KAP asked that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) reverse NR's determination and grant KAP a waiver of fees in connection with its four July 1995 FOIA requests. OHA performed a de novo review of the merits of KAP's fee waiver request. It found that KAP was eligible for a fee waiver for some materials which may be located pursuant to its July 11, 1995 FOIA request, in which KAP asked for documents regarding the railroad cars and casks used to transport spent nuclear fuels by the U.S. Navy's and the DOE's naval reactor program. The OHA found that the material requested in the remaining three FOIA requests was properly denied a fee waiver by NR. Id.

On November 29, 1995, NR issued a new determination providing KAP with information it believed was within the scope of information for which the OHA granted a fee waiver. In its present Appeal, KAP asserts that NR did not provide two categories of information which it argues are encompassed by the scope of the fee waiver granted by OHA in its previous decision.

II. Analysis

Our sole inquiry in this case is whether NR properly interpreted the scope of the fee waiver granted on Appeal by the OHA with regard to KAP's July 11, 1995 FOIA request. In considering this Appeal, we reviewed our previous decision to ascertain the scope of the fee waiver granted to KAP. In that decision and, as stated above, we performed a de novo review of the merits of KAP's fee waiver request. Knolls, 25 DOE ¶ 80,148 (1995). With respect to KAP's four FOIA requests, we determined that KAP is eligible for a fee waiver for some materials which may be located pursuant to its July 11, 1995 FOIA request. However, we found that the material requested in the remaining portion of the July 11 request and in the remaining three FOIA requests filed by KAP would not significantly contribute to the public's understanding of governmental activities and operations since the information is already in the public domain or is trivial in nature. Id.

As stated above, KAP's July 11 request asked for documents regarding the railroad cars and casks used to transport spent nuclear fuels by the U.S. Navy's and the DOE's naval nuclear reactor program. In our previous decision, we specifically determined that a fee waiver should be granted only with regard to material concerning the maintenance and repair status of the railroad cars and casks, which included those railroad cars that were either under repair or out of service. We found that the information regarding railroad car serial numbers, cask configuration, and location of the railroad cars was properly denied a fee waiver by NR. To this end, in its November 29 response, NR provided the loading status, repair status and location for the shipping containers used to transport spent nuclear fuels as of November 27, 1995. See Determination Letter at 2. According to NR, only one railroad car was out of service on that date. NR further stated that the out of service car would no longer be used.

KAP argues that NR did not provide it with the "car number . . . of each car," nor "the current configuration of each car/cask by fuel core type," information which was also requested in its July 11 request. See Knolls Action Project Appeal Letter at 1. Further, KAP states that these two categories of information are relevant to the maintenance and repair status of the railroad cars and casks, "in that they would assist citizens in determining which cars and casks were used for discrete shipments of fuel in what condition." Id. We disagree. We believe, as stated in our previous decision, that the public's interest here lies in its understanding of potential risks, if any, associated with mechanical problems with the fleet of railroad cars and casks used to transport spent nuclear fuels. We do not believe that the specific car numbers or the configuration of each car/cask by fuel core type fall within the scope of the maintenance and repair status of the railroad cars and casks or would significantly assist the public's understanding of the risk associated with the transporting of spent nuclear fuels. Knolls, 25 DOE ¶ 80,148 at 80,616 (1995). The specific daily status of each individual car, cask and configuration changes so frequently that this additional information does not increase the public's understanding of this issue. Therefore, we find that NR properly provided relevant information within the scope of the fee waiver granted to KAP. Accordingly, the Knolls Action Project's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Knolls Action Project on January 11, 1996 , Case Number VFA-0112 , is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: ITech, Inc.

Date of Filing: January 16, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0113

On January 16, 1996, ITech, Inc., filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on December 15, 1995, by the Department of Energy's Western Area Power Administration (WAPA), in response to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the type of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide for fees to be assessed to cover the cost of responding to requests for information. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9.

I. Background

On November 8, 1995, ITech filed a request under the FOIA for a copy of a technical proposal that had been submitted to WAPA. WAPA issued a determination on December 15, 1995, in which it released the document requested by ITech, with certain information withheld under FOIA Exemption 4, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). Letter from J.M. Shafer, Administrator, WAPA, to Lisa Kristen Ola, ITech (December 15, 1995). WAPA further informed the requester that:

The total cost of the search, reproduction, and review fees associated with the requested document is as follows:

105 pages at .10 [sic] cents each $ 10.50

5 hours of search and review time 118.00

16 percent manual search fee 18.88

In accordance with 10 CFR 1004.9(1) [sic]

Total $147.38

Id.

In its Appeal, ITech acknowledges receiving the requested document, but states that [T]he entire document was blacked out, and as a result, is worthless. ITech agreed to pay any fair and reasonable costs associated with the reproduction of the requested document, but the $147.38 fee seems in excess.

The reproduction and paper costs of $10.50 and the manual search fee of $18.88 are reasonable, but the $118.00 fee for search and review time is not considered reasonable. It is implausible that it took five hours to black-out the entire document, and this does not justify the $118.00 fee.

ITech will pay the $29.38 fee for paper and manual search costs; however, it would like to dispute the $118.00 charge for search and review time.

Letter from Patrick Truex, Vice President, ITech, to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (December 21, 1995).

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that each agency issue regulations "specifying the schedule of fees applicable to the processing of requests . . . ." 5 U.S.C. 552(a)(4)(A)(I). The DOE FOIA regulations provide that the agency "will charge fees that recoup the full allowable direct costs incurred." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a). "Whenever feasible, the DOE will charge for manual searches at the salary rate(s) (i.e. basic pay plus 16 percent) of the employees making the search." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(1). In addition, "[t]he DOE will charge requesters who are seeking documents for commercial use for time spent reviewing records to determine whether they are exempt from mandatory disclosure." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(3).

Unless a requester qualifies for a fee waiver, the fees specified in the DOE regulations must be imposed. Although ITech characterizes the document released as "worthless," that is not relevant to whether appropriate fees were charged. There can never be any assurance that a FOIA request will yield any releasable documents or that the requester will find the documents released to be useful. Fees are not charged because the requester may derive a benefit from the documents, but because the government expends money to process the request. In fact, the regulations specifically provide that fees will be assessed even if no responsive documents are located. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(6).

We contacted WAPA to determine how the fees charged to the appellant were calculated in the present case. WAPA informed us that the $118.00 charged for "search and review time" was based on five hours spent by a WAPA employee in processing ITech's request (5 hours at the employee's basic pay of $23.60/hour). The five hours included the time required to search for the requested document, review the document for exempt material, and finally to redact the exempt material from the document to prepare it for release. The purpose of the additional charge of $18.88 (16 percent of $118.00) is to recoup additional overhead costs associated with the search. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(1).

We have no reason to believe that WAPA did not, in fact, spend 5 hours processing ITech's request. Under these circumstances, and given WAPA's explanation of how it calculated the fee in this case, we conclude that the fees imposed were reasonable and necessary to recoup the cost of the processing the request. Accordingly, the present Appeal will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by ITech, Inc., on January 16, 1995, Case Number VFA-0113, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: STAND of Amarillo, Inc.

Date of Filing: January 16, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0115

On January 16, 1996, STAND of Amarillo, Inc. (STAND) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on December 5, 1995, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Field Office (DOE/AL). The DOE/AL issued that determination in response to a request for information submitted by STAND under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE/AL to release the requested information.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the type of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that an agency shall nonetheless release a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA to the public if the DOE determines that federal law permits disclosure and if disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

On November 2, 1995, STAND filed a request under the FOIA in which it sought copies of 96 legal documents produced in connection with a hearing before the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission. The DOE/AL issued a determination on December 5, 1995, in which it stated that the legal files sought by STAND are "records in the possession and control of Mason & Hanger, Silas Mason Co., Inc., (M&H) and are therefore not 'agency records' subject to the provisions of the FOIA." Letter from Elva Ann Barfield, Freedom of Information Officer, DOE/AL, to STAND (December 5, 1995). Furthermore, Ms. Barfield wrote that "[t]he contract between the DOE and M&H, clearly defines legal files . . . as being the property of the contractor." Id.

In its Appeal, STAND contends: (1) that the requested documents are "agency records" pursuant to the FOIA because DOE officials created, possess, and control the records; and (2) that DOE regulations require it to "maximize public disclosure of [contractor] records that pertain to concerns about the environment, public health or safety" and that all of the requested records relate to environmental concerns regarding hazardous waste and water quality at the Pantex Plant. Based on these contentions, STAND requests that the OHA direct the DOE/AL to release the requested information.

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted the FOIA branch at the DOE/AL to inquire about the background behind the search it had conducted.<1> From these conversations it is clear that the FOIA Officer's December 5, 1995 determination was premature. Due to a communication problem, the DOE employees involved in the hearing did not make the FOIA Officer at the DOE/AL aware that they needed more time to conduct a thorough search and that the DOE might possess responsive documents.<2> We will therefore remand the case to the Freedom of Information Officer, Office of Public Affairs, DOE/AL, for a new search for responsive documents.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by STAND of Amarillo, Inc. on January 16, 1996 is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Freedom of Information Officer, Office of Public Affairs, Albuquerque Operations Office of the Department of Energy who will conduct a new search for documents responsive to the Freedom of Information Act request filed by STAND of Amarillo, Inc., on November 2, 1995. Any documents found to be responsive to this request shall be released or a detailed explanation as to why the information is exempt from public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act shall be provided.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

March 26, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Phoenix Rising Communications

Date of Filing: February 29, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0116

On February 29, 1996, Phoenix Rising Communications (Phoenix) filed an Appeal from a Determination issued to it by the Oakland Operations Office (DOE-Oakland) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that Determination, DOE-Oakland stated that it was unable to locate any documents responsive to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. Phoenix challenges the adequacy of the search conducted by DOE-Oakland.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Pursuant to an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requester must be told whether the requested record is known to have been destroyed or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

I. Background

On October 26, 1995, Phoenix filed a request for information in which it sought records relating to discussions conducted between Lawrence Radiation Laboratory (now known as Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory (LLNL)) and the Federal Aviation Administration's (FAA) San Francisco IFSS Transmitter Facility at Tracy, California. The dialogue concerned the effects of transmission of radio frequency energy by FAA near Site 300, a LLNL laboratory site. On December 28, 1995, DOE-Oakland issued a Determination which stated that it conducted a search, but that no responsive documents had been found. On February 29, 1996, Phoenix filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). Phoenix asks that a new search be conducted. In its Appeal, Phoenix attached an internal memoranda obtained from the FAA which discusses a meeting and a phone call concerning the FAA Transmitter and Site 300. (FAA memo).

II. Analysis

The OHA has consistently stated that a FOIA request warrants a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W.R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have remanded cases where it is evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., Cowles Publishing Co., 16 DOE ¶ 80,136 (1987); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In considering the present Appeal, we contacted RoseAnn Pelzner, Legal Assistant, DOE-Oakland who coordinated the search for responsive documents to determine the extent of the search that had been performed. She informed us that searches had been performed of the DOE's records in Oakland and LLNL's records at Site 300. Although no responsive records were located at either site, we were informed that the Site 300 Facility Representative remembers destroying a 1962 working file containing handwritten notes of a meeting held between two LLNL employees and the FAA. This file was destroyed in August 1995 prior to an office move. In an attempt to obtain information concerning the destroyed file and the FAA meeting, the LLNL Deputy Site Manager contacted the two retired employees mentioned in the FAA memo to ascertain if they recalled creating any documents which would be responsive to the request. Neither former employee recalled generating any memorandum or letters as a result of the 1962 meeting because they did not believe that the FAA Transmitter was a hazard to the work at LLNL.<1>

Based on the factors referred to above, we are convinced that the DOE followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the material sought by Phoenix in its FOIA request and that no such documents exist at either DOE-Oakland or LLNL. Accordingly, Phoenix's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Phoenix Rising Communications on February 29, 1996, Case No. VFA-0116, is hereby denied.

July 21, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Barton J. Bernstein

Date of Filing: January 22, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0117

Barton J. Bernstein filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on December 22, 1995, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque). In that determination, Albuquerque denied in part a request for information that Dr. Bernstein filed on June 27, 1994, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. The information deleted from the document released to Dr. Bernstein in that determination was withheld after a review of the document had been performed by the Office of Declassification of the Department of Energy's Office of Security Affairs. This Appeal, if granted, would require Albuquerque to release the information that it withheld in the December 22, 1995 determination.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On June 27, 1994 Dr. Bernstein submitted a request to Albuquerque under the FOIA for a copy of the Minutes of the February 24, 1944 meeting of the Los Alamos Governing Board (Minutes). After locating and reviewing the responsive document, Albuquerque forwarded it to the DOE's Office of Declassification for review. On December 22, 1995, after the Office of Declassification completed its review, Albuquerque released to Dr. Bernstein a copy of the Minutes from which it withheld information it claimed to be classified as Restricted Data pursuant to the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, and therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 3 of the FOIA.

The present Appeal seeks the disclosure of the withheld portions of the requested document. In his Appeal, Dr. Bernstein contends that under a more judicious, and less mechanical, application of Exemption 3, much, if not all, of those portions could be declassified and released.

II. Analysis

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). We have previously determined that the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2011-2296, is a statute to which Exemption 3 is applicable. See, e.g., Barton J. Bernstein, 22 DOE ¶ 80,165 (1992); William R. Bolling, II, 20 DOE ¶ 80,134 (1990). According to the Office of Declassification, the portions that the DOE deleted from the requested document under Exemption 3 were withheld on the grounds that they contain information about nuclear weapons design that has been classified as Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act and is therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure.

The Director of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of SA reviewed those portions of the requested document for which the DOE had claimed an exemption from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA.

In performing his review the Director of SA considered the concerns Dr. Bernstein specifically raised in his appeal, and performed as well a general review of the material under the current classification guidance. From the context of the surrounding passages, Dr. Bernstein presumed the substance of the three withheld sections of the Minutes, and on the basis of those presumptions, he contended that the material deleted could safely be declassified.

Based on the review performed by the Director of SA under current classification guidance, we have determined that the Atomic Energy Act requires the continued withholding of most of those portions of the Minutes that were previously identified as classified information. Although a finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information nevertheless, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemption 3, the disclosure is prohibited by statute. Therefore, those portions of the Minutes that the Director of SA has determined to be properly classified must continue to be withheld from disclosure. However, on review the Director of SA was able to perform more precise deletions of one of the three passages previously excised, and as a result we can now release some information that had previously been withheld. A newly redacted version of the Minutes will be provided to Dr. Bernstein under separate cover. Accordingly, Dr. Bernstein's Appeal will be granted in part and denied in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Barton J. Bernstein on January 22, 1996, Case No. VFA-0117, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) A newly redacted version of the Minutes of the February 24, 1944 Meeting of the Governing Board, Los Alamos, New Mexico, in which additional information is released, will be provided to Dr. Bernstein.

February 20, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Archie M. LeGrand, Jr.

Date of Filing: January 22, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0120

On January 22, 1996, Archie M. LeGrand, Jr., filed an Appeal from a determination issued by the FOIA/Privacy Act Division (FOIA Division) of the Department of Energy (DOE) on December 11, 1995. In its determination, the FOIA Division denied Mr. LeGrand's request submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Mr. LeGrand challenges the adequacy of the DOE's search for responsive documents.

I. Background

From 1953 to 1969, Mr. LeGrand worked at the DOE's Savannah River Site as an employee of DuPont Company, a government contractor, in a position requiring a security clearance. In a request dated October 11, 1995, Mr. LeGrand sought records of investigations conducted regarding his suitability for a clearance. The FOIA Division issued a determination on December 11, 1995, stating that "[a] search of the records in the [DOE's] Office of Safeguards and Security and the Savannah River Operations Office was conducted and no records were found responsive to your request." Letter from GayLa Sessoms, Director, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, DOE, to Archie LeGrand, Jr. (December 11, 1995).<1> In his Appeal, Mr. LeGrand states, "I find it hard to believe that no records of these investigations exist, when I know of my own knowledge that four investigations were made at the times I indicated in my original request." Letter from Archie M. LeGrand, Jr. to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) (January 6, 1996).

II. Analysis

A FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and the OHA has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991); Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1988). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

As it alluded to in its determination letter, the FOIA Division referred Mr. LeGrand's request to the Office of Safeguards and Security (OSS) at DOE Headquarters and to the DOE's Savannah River Operations Office (DOE/SR). In reviewing the present Appeal, we have obtained information from these two offices regarding their search for responsive documents. Both offices destroy personnel security clearance records ten years after the termination of employment or the death of the employee. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Darcy Goddard, OHA Staff Analyst, and Victor Hawkins, OSS (January 31, 1996); Memorandum of telephone conversation between Steven Goering, OHA Staff Attorney, and Tina Hardy, DOE/SR (February 16, 1996).<2> We also contacted Westinghouse Savannah River Company (Westinghouse), the current DOE contractor operating the Savannah River Site. The company stated that it maintains security clearance files on its employees which contain some, but not all, of the information kept in the files located at DOE/SR. Westinghouse destroys these records three years after employment is terminated. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Darcy Goddard, OHA Staff Analyst, and Deborah Smith, Westinghouse (February 8, 1996). Because Mr. LeGrand's employment at the Savannah River Site ended over 25 years ago, any security clearance records maintained by the DOE or DuPont regarding Mr. LeGrand would no longer exist.

The OSS nonetheless searched its microfiche index of all DOE and DOE contractor employees who have held security clearances in the past, and Mr. LeGrand is not listed in this index. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Darcy Goddard, OHA Staff Analyst, and Victor Hawkins, OSS (January 31, 1996). DOE/SR indexes its personnel security files in a computer database searchable by Social Security number. A search was performed on this database using Mr. LeGrand's Social Security number, and no records were located. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Steven Goering, OHA Staff Attorney, and Tina Hardy, DOE/SR (February 16, 1996). Finally, Westinghouse, which indexes its files by the last name of the employee, also searched for a file pertaining to Mr. LeGrand and found no records. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Steven Goering, OHA Staff Attorney, and Deborah Smith, Westinghouse (February 20, 1996).

We are persuaded that the searches conducted at DOE Headquarters, DOE/SR, and Westinghouse were reasonably calculated to uncover the documents sought by LeGrand. Moreover, LeGrand has provided no evidence that additional documents would be located in other offices at the DOE. Accordingly, the present Appeal will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Archie M. LeGrand, Jr. on January 22, 1996, Case Number VFA-0120, is hereby denied.

<1>In its determination, the FOIA division described Mr. LeGrand's request as a "Privacy Act request." The Privacy Act requires, inter alia, that each federal agency permit an individual to gain access to information pertaining to him or her which is contained in any system of records maintained by the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d). DOE regulations define a system of records as "a group of any records under DOE control from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particulars assigned to the individual." 10 C.F.R. § 1008.2(m). Under the above definition, the Appellant probably would have been entitled to any responsive documents, had any been found, under both the FOIA and the Privacy Act.

<2>U. S. Government records are retained for varying lengths of time before they are destroyed. The length of time that a DOE record must be retained is governed by the General Records Schedule (GRS), which is produced by the National Archives and Records Administration, and the Department of Energy Records Schedule (DOERS). The DOERS references records unique to the Department of Energy. It is used to schedule disposition of department records that are not addressed in the GRS.

Case No. VFA-0121, 25 DOE ¶ 80,192

May 14, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Martha Julian

Date of Filing: January 25, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0121

On January 25, 1996, Martha Julian of Newburgh, Indiana filed an Appeal from a determination issued on January 8, 1996 by the Albuquerque Operations Office of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part a request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would result in release of further requested information.

Background

On January 15, 1994, Lisa Doyle of Bowling Green, Kentucky filed a request for records dealing with radiation exposure received by her grandfather, Wendell Eskridge. Cf. 10 C.F.R. § 835.801(d). Mr. Eskridge had worked as a contractor employee at DOE's Sandia Laboratory site from March 8, 1951 until November 7, 1958. Mr. Eskridge died two days later. In January of 1996, the Albuquerque Operations Office responded that it had searched relevant DOE records in its possession and at the Kirtland Area Office (which is the DOE Office responsible for Sandia National Laboratory) as well as the records at Sandia Laboratory and that the only record it had uncovered was a radiation exposure record for calendar year 1957. This was released to Mrs. Doyle. Martha Julian, Mrs. Doyle's mother and the daughter of Mr. Eskridge, appealed to this Office.

Analysis

Under the FOIA, in response to an appropriate request that reasonably describes the information sought and conforms to agency regulations, an agency must search its records and release responsive, unpublished, non-exempt information which it has created or obtained at the time of the request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3), (b); Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 144-45 (1989); James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,127 at 80,558 (1992). A search that complies with the FOIA need not cover every corner of the agency. Oglesby v. Department of the Army, 920 F.2d 57, 68 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (and cases cited therein); Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1383 (8th Cir. 1985); Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 705 F.2d 1344, 1351 (D.C. Cir. 1983); Martha L. Powers, 24 DOE ¶ 80,147 at 80,618 (1994); Citizens' Action Committee of Pike County Citizens, 22 DOE ¶ 80,178 at 80,679 (1993). Rather, an adequate search under the FOIA need only be one reasonably calculated to uncover the documents requested. Safecard Services, Inc. v. Securities and Exchange

Comm'n, 926 F.2d 1197, 1201 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (and cases cited therein); Meeropol v. Meese, 790 F.2d 942, 950-51 (D.C. Cir. 1986); Weisberg

v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984); William H. Payne, 24 DOE ¶ 80,145 at 80,615 (1994); Energy Products, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,528 (1993). "An adequate search, however, must be 'a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents.'" Energy Research Foundation, 22 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,529 (1992) (quoting The Lowry Coalition, 21 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,535 (1991)). This Office will remand a case for more research if it is evident that an inadequate search was conducted, or if evidence reveals that other documents that were not identified during the initial search exist. Id. See also Linda J. Carlisle, 24 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,560 (1994); McGraw-Hill Nuclear Publications, 22 DOE ¶ 80,157 at 80,627 (1992); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,153 at 80,658 (1991).

We have had extensive discussions with the Albuquerque Operations Office about the search conducted in this case. At our request, it has provided us with a detailed search methodology employed in this case. For DOE records, the Albuquerque Operations Office searched the records which were identified during the human experimentation document search. No responsive documents were found in that collection. The Kirtland Area Office also searched its Occupational Safety and Health Division. It reported it had no responsive documents and noted that the DOE will not take custody of contractor radiation records until the facility in question is closed. Cf. 10 C.F.R. § 835.702(h). The Albuquerque Operations Office informs us that these are the only likely DOE locations for the records sought.

In addition to the DOE-held material, the records at the Sandia National Laboratory were searched. A computer data base search by Sandia's Radiation Protection Technical Services Department found no records. A hand search was performed of microfilm radiation records. These begin in the late 1940s and each reel of microfilm through 1958 was checked. The listings on each microfilm are supposed to show a cumulative dose for each person to whom a dosimetry badge was issued. Thus, a name should appear on the microfilm record whenever a person received a radiation badge even when there was no radiation exposure measured. According to Sandia, Mr. Eskridge's name appeared only in the 1957 microfilm. By using this technique Sandia located the original 1957 "Radex" card showing Mr. Eskridge's radiation readings for 1957 which was released to Mrs. Doyle.<1>Sandia surmises that this is the only year Mr. Eskridge received a radiation badge.

In addition to its searches of the radiation records, Sandia corporate personnel files were searched, although these records are neither agency records nor the property of or in the control of the DOE, and thus are not subject to the FOIA. See William Payne, 25 DOE ¶ 80,___ at__,___, OHA Case No. VFA-0128, slip op. at 8-9 (March 26, 1996). The microfilm of Mr. Eskridge's personnel record contained only a notice of his employment ending due to his death. Although the personnel at Sandia found this unusual, they had no explanation other than that the rest of his file had been inadvertently destroyed or misplaced at some point. In addition, Sandia searched the corporate medical database. This listed Mr. Eskridge as being an employee. However, no medical records were found on file. Sandia informs us that it likely would have medical records only if Mr. Eskridge came to the medical unit of his own volition. The Albuquerque Operations Office informs us that these are the only probable locations at Sandia National Laboratories for the type of documents sought.

In this case, we find that the Albuquerque Operations Office constructed a search reasonably calculated to uncover the requested records, and conscientiously carried out that search. Whether or not other records may have existed, we believe that a reasonable search was undertaken and that the results of that search have been transmitted to the requester. Thus, under these circumstances, we find that the search undertaken by the Albuquerque Operations Office was adequate.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Martha Julian, OHA Case No. VFA-0121, is hereby denied.

are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>Mrs. Julian informs us that she did not receive a copy of the 1957 microfilm cumulative dose material. At our request, the Albuquerque Operations Office is sending her a copy of that document with the listings of other employees removed. If Mrs. Julian believes that this document demonstrates that other records ought to exist, she may file a new FOIA request with the Albuquerque Operations Office or a motion for reconsideration with this Office.

Case No. VFA-0122, 25 DOE ¶ 80,172

February 23, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Eugene Maples

Date of Filing: January 25, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0122

On January 25, 1996, Eugene Maples (Maples) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on December 27, 1995, by the Department of Energy's Office of the Inspector General (OIG). That determination was issued in response to a request for information submitted by Maples under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the OIG to release the requested information.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the type of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is permitted by federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On November 29, 1995, Eugene Maples filed a request under the FOIA in which he sought a copy of a final report issued by the OIG which summarized an investigation into "the mis-use (sic) of oil overcharge funds by the State of South Carolina . . . conducted by Ms. Vera Sheppard and Lynn Moran of the Savannah River Site during 1993-94." See OIG Determination Letter at 1. On December 27, 1995, the OIG issued a determination denying Maples request in its entirety. The OIG stated that "the responsive document was being withheld pursuant to Exemption 7(A)." Id. In invoking Exemption 7(A), the OIG stated that it has not reached a final resolution of the investigation; therefore, release could prematurely disclose enforcement efforts and interfere with its ongoing investigation. The OIG also stated that the public interest would not be served by release because individuals involved in the investigation may gain an opportunity to fabricate defenses, destroy evidence, intimidate actual or potential witnesses or otherwise impede an appropriate resolution of its investigation. Id.

In his Appeal, Maples maintains that his request was improperly denied by the OIG. Further, Maples states that the release of the final report would be in the public interest because "the public stands to benefit in the recovery of up to $40 million doled out fraudently and politically." See Appeal Letter at 4. On this basis, Maples asks that the OHA direct the OIG to release the requested information.

II. Analysis

A. Exemption 7(A)

Exemption 7(A) of the FOIA allows agencies to withhold at their discretion "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information (A) could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings." 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b)(7)(A); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(i). Clearly, the documents at issue in this case satisfy the threshold test for application of Exemption 7. They have been compiled for a law enforcement purpose by the Inspector General who is charged with investigating and correcting waste, fraud, or abuse in programs and operations administered or financed by the DOE. See Inspector General Act of 1978, codified as amended at 5 U.S.C. app. §§ 2(1) - (2), 4 (a)(1), (3) - (4), (d), 6(a)(1) -(4), 7(a), 9(a)(1)(E). Because the statute's mandate clearly gives an Agency discretion to withhold records compiled for law enforcement proceedings whenever release "could reasonably be expected" to interfere with those proceedings, we need only find that release of the requested information could reasonably be expected to interfere with the OIG's investigation.

In applying this standard in the past, we have found that the OIG is not required to make a particularized, case-by-case showing of interference with its investigation. Rather, a generic determination of likely interference is sufficient. See Murray, Jacobs & Abel 25 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1995); NRLB v. Robbins Tire and Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214, 224 (1978); Crancer v. United States Dep't of Justice, 999 F.2d 1302, 1306 (8th Cir. 1993). The Supreme Court has held that Congress did not intend to prevent federal courts from determining that, with respect to particular kinds of enforcement proceedings, disclosure of particular kinds of investigatory records while a case is pending would generally "interfere with enforcement proceedings." NLRB v. Robbins, 437 U.S. at 236. In its discussion concerning the plain meaning of Exemption 7(A), the Supreme Court stated that although Congress could easily have required in so many words that the government in each case show a particularized risk to the enforcement proceeding at issue, Congress did not do so. NLRB v. Robbins, 437 U.S. at 234. By contrast, the Court explained, since 7(A) speaks in the plural voice about "enforcement proceedings," it appears to contemplate that certain generic determinations might be made. Id. at 224. As a result, the Court upheld a generic determination that the release of witness statements would interfere with enforcement proceedings within the meaning of Exemption 7(A).

In Bevis v. Department of State, 801 F.2d 1386, 1389-90 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (Bevis), the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia discussed how the government could make generic determinations pursuant to Exemption 7(A). Bevis provided for a three-step process. First, the government must define its categories functionally. Second, it must conduct a document-by- document review in order to assign documents to the proper category. Finally, it must explain how the release of each category would interfere with enforcement proceedings. Id. An explanation is sufficient if there is "a rational link" between the nature of the document and the alleged likely interference in enforcement proceedings. Id., quoting Crooker v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, 789 F.2d 64, 67 (D.C. Cir. 1986). As indicated above, in light of the Supreme Court's decision in NLRB v. Robbins, if the category of records is of the type that could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings generally, the government need not make any particularized, case-specific showing.

Applying the above standard here, we find that the OIG has given a reasonable, generic determination that the release of the final report could likely interfere with its investigation. As stated earlier, the OIG maintains that the release of the final report could prematurely disclose enforcement efforts or provide individuals involved in the investigation an opportunity to fabricate defenses, destroy evidence, intimidate actual or potential witnesses, or otherwise impede an appropriate resolution of the investigation. Further, in additional comments submitted to the OHA on February 14, 1996, the OIG has indicated that the requested "Final Report of Investigation" has not yet been issued. However, it states that a Report of Investigation has been presented to the Department of Justice for their prosecutorial determination. The OIG considered this report to be responsive to Maples's request and withheld it under Exemption 7(A). Based on the foregoing, we have concluded that the OIG has properly applied Exemption 7(A) to the responsive document at issue.

B. The Public Interest Analysis

This case involves competing interests which cannot be harmonized. It requires a balancing of Maples's desire to take action in an effort to recover fraudulently spent funds by the State of South Carolina against the public's desire for the proper resolution of an ongoing investigation into allegations of the misuse of oil overcharge funds by the State of South Carolina. See Appeal Letter at 3. The OIG's investigation into these kinds of allegations inherently endeavors to bring about precisely the type of government accountability that the Freedom of Information Act seeks to promote. We find therefore that release of the responsive information is not in the public interest so long as the investigation is underway and the risks from premature release remain unabated. We further find that the existence of these tangible risks satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard set forth by the Attorney General in 1993. This relatively new standard applies a presumption of disclosure which, in the absence of a reasonably foreseeable harm to an interest protected by an Exemption, should result in a determination by the agency that the public interest lies with disclosure. See J. Reno, Memorandum for Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993). On the basis of the foregoing determination, we find that this Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Eugene Maples on January 25, 1996 , Case Number VFA-0122 , is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: James H. Stebbings

Date of Filing: February 12, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0123

On February 12, 1996, James H. Stebbings (Appellant) filed an Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) from a determination issued on January 4, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Argonne Group of its Chicago Operations Office (COO). In its determination, the Argonne Group stated that a thorough search conducted by Argonne National Laboratory (Argonne) failed to locate any documents responsive to the Appellant's March 2, 1992 request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). This Appeal, if granted, would require an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On March 2, 1992, the Appellant submitted a FOIA request to the DOE seeking information relating to radiation level testing of human subjects who had been in Eastern Europe during the 1986 nuclear incident at Chernobyl. In an April 17, 1992 letter, the DOE notified the Appellant that his request had been forwarded to the office where responsive documents might be located, the Chicago Operations Office (COO). On October 6, 1993, the Appellant received a letter notifying him that his request had been sent to the Argonne Group for response. On January 4, 1996, the Argonne Group issued its determination, stating that no documents responsive to the Appellant's request were found at Argonne. The Appellant subsequently filed the present Appeal in which he contends that the search for responsive documents was inadequate.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991); Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1988).

In his Appeal, the Appellant lists three publications relating to the subject of his request that he had located in a commonly accessed internal Argonne bibliography. He also states that he is aware of a fourth publication devoted to the Chernobyl radiation studies. When questioned about the existence of these publications, Rory S. Simpson of the Argonne Group stated that he would contact the author of the three publications listed in the Appeal and request that the author search his records for documents responsive to the Appellant's request. Mr. Simpson also stated that Argonne would conduct another search for documents responsive to the Appellant's request. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amani L. Roland, OHA Staff Analyst, and Rory S. Simpson, Contract Specialist, Argonne Group (February 28, 1996). Consequently, since the Argonne Group has stated its intention to continue to search for responsive documents we shall remand this case to that office.

In the Appellant's original request, he named Brookhaven National Laboratory (Brookhaven) as another location which might contain responsive material. We contacted Linda Rohde of the COO to determine if the Appellant's request had been forwarded to Brookhaven. Ms. Rohde stated that it had not. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amani L. Roland, OHA Staff Analyst, and Linda Rohde, FOI Officer, COO (February 26, 1996). Therefore, we shall also remand this case to COO in order that it may forward this case to Brookhaven. On remand, Brookhaven and the Argonne Group shall identify all documents responsive to the Appellant's request, and either release them or provide adequate justification for withholding any portion of them.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by James H. Stebbings on February 12, 1996, Case Number VFA-0123, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Argonne Group and the Chicago Operations Office. Each shall conduct a search for documents responsive to the Appellant's request as described in the above Decision, and each shall promptly issue a new determination regarding the result of that search.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Kenneth H. Besecker

Date of Filing: February 2, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0124

On February 2, 1996, Kenneth H. Besecker filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him by the Director of the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity (hereinafter referred to as "the Director"). This determination was issued on January 22, 1996 in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Mr. Besecker contests the adequacy of the Director's search for responsive documents.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public unless the DOE determines that disclosure is contrary to federal law or the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his FOIA request, Mr. Besecker sought access to a copy of the contract under which the investigation of a specified Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) complaint was conducted at the DOE's Savannah River Operations Office. On January 22, 1996, the Director responded to this request by providing Mr. Besecker with a copy of this contract, after deleting information which tended to identify the complainant. The Director stated that this information was being withheld pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6) (Exemption 6). <1>

In his Appeal, Mr. Besecker does not contest the Director's withholding of information pursuant to Exemption 6. Instead, he contends that the Director failed to include a portion of the contract entitled "Statement of Work" in the document that was provided to him. <2> In support of his position, Mr. Besecker cites a portion of the contract which refers to "the attached statement of work." Although there was a document attached to this portion of the contract, Mr. Besecker claims that it is not the statement of work.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by federal agencies be released to the public upon request. Accordingly, upon receiving an appropriate FOIA request, an agency is required to search its records for responsive documents. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3); Energy Products, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,528 (1993). We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and that would we [have] not hesitate[d] to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., In Defense of Animals, 24 DOE ¶ 80,151 (1995); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981).

In order to evaluate the validity of Mr. Besecker's claim, we examined a copy of the contract that was provided to him. The next-to-last page of that copy is entitled "Request for Bid - Statement of Work," and states, in pertinent part, that "[t]he specific requirements for this request are detailed in the attached statement of work." Five specific requirements for the contract are then briefly listed, followed by a brief description of the complaint to be investigated.

We then examined statements of work submitted by Mr. Besecker that had been generated by the DOE in conjunction with other EEO related contracts. Because these statements differed significantly in form and in substance from the statement provided to Mr. Besecker, we contacted the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity. We were then informed that two statements of work had been generated in connection with the contract in question; the brief and case-specific statement that was provided to Mr. Besecker and a lengthier and more comprehensive generic statement of work. We have examined the generic statement and we find that it is responsive to Mr. Besecker's request and that it is not exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA. A copy of this document has been provided to us by the Office of Economic Impact and Diversity, and we will forward it to Mr. Besecker under separate cover.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Kenneth H. Besecker on February 2, 1996 is hereby granted.

Case No. VFA-0125, 25 DOE ¶ 80,174

February 29, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Keith E. Loomis

Date of Filing: February 5, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0125

On February 5, 1996, Keith E. Loomis (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on January 3, 1996 by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Office of Naval Reactors (ONR). This determination was issued in response to a request for information filed by the Appellant, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552(b), as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In that determination, the DOE released copies of several documents requested by the Appellant. However, portions of one document released to the Appellant were withheld under FOIA Exemption 6. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

I. BACKGROUND

On April 10, 1995, the Appellant filed a request seeking a wide range of information including a copy of a deposition of R. Simons. On October 17, 1995, ONR issued a determination releasing most of the Simons deposition transcript but withholding portions of it under FOIA Exemption 6. On November 21, 1995, the Appellant filed an Appeal with this office (Case Number VFA-0102). Among the issues raised in that Appeal were the Appellant's contention that ONR's withholding of portions of the R. Simons deposition under Exemption 6 was improper. After conferring with this office, ONR issued a determination in which it released most of the previously withheld portions of the Simons deposition but continued to withhold some information under Exemption 6. On February 5, 1996, the Appellant filed the present appeal, in which he claims that the remaining portions of the Simons deposition were not properly withheld under Exemption 6.

II. ANALYSIS

While the FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Only Exemption 6 is at issue in the present case. Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Dep't of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 109 S. Ct. 1468, 1481 (1989). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

According to the Appellant, the context of the released portions of the Simons deposition suggests that the portions still withheld under Exemption 6 involve the Appellant. The Appellant contends that since the privacy interests being asserted are that of the Appellant, the ONR has improperly applied the exemption. As an initial matter, it is important to note that two of the assumptions upon which the Appellant bases his appeal are not accurate. First, the Appellant assumes that the withheld remarks concern him. While the context of those portions of the Simons Deposition that have already been released to the Appellant suggest that the Appellant might be the subject of the withheld information, our inspection of the withheld information has revealed that it does not concern or involve the Appellant. The Appellant also contends that ONR is asserting the Appellant's own privacy interests in order to withhold information from him. This assumption is also incorrect. Our review of the withheld information reveals that ONR is protecting Mr. Simon's privacy interests rather than that of the Appellant. In fact, we find that the Appellant has no privacy interest in the withheld information. Our review of the withheld information reveals that Mr. Simon has a strong privacy interest in the withheld information. If the DOE were to release this information, it would reveal Mr. Simons' opinions and actions concerning a sensitive issue. Revealing Mr. Simon's opinions and actions could therefore be reasonably expected to subject him to retaliation, retribution or embarrassment. Accordingly, we find that Mr. Simon has a privacy interest in the withheld information to which we attach great weight.

Having concluded that a protectable privacy interest exists in the withheld information, we turn to the next step in our analysis; the determination of the public's interest in disclosure of the withheld information. In Reporters Committee, the Supreme Court greatly narrowed the scope of the public interest in the context of the FOIA. Justice Stevens, writing for the Court, distinguished between the general benefits to the public which may result from the release of information, and those benefits that Congress sought to provide the public when it enacted the FOIA. He found that in FOIA contexts, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the FOIA's core purpose. Id. The Court identified the core purpose of the FOIA as "public understanding of the operations or activities of the Government." Id. at 1483. Therefore, the Court held, only that information which contributes significantly to the public's understanding of the operations or activities of the Government is within "the ambit of the public interest that the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id.

Applying these holdings to the facts of the present case, we have determined that disclosure of the identifying information would not be strongly affected with the public interest. After personally inspecting the withheld information, we are of the opinion that its release could possibly advance the public's understanding of the operations and activities of the government. However, the weight of the public's interest in disclosure is diminished by the fact that it consists merely of one individual's vague and subjective opinion. Accordingly, we find that the public interest in disclosure to be of modest weight.

III. CONCLUSION

Weighing the significant privacy interests present in this case against the less substantial public interest we find that release of the withheld information would result in a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. For the reasons set forth above, we are hereby denying the present Appeal.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Keith E. Loomis on February 5, 1996 (Case Number VFA-0125) is denied.

On February 28, 1996,<1> William H. Payne filed an Appeal from three determinations, two letters and one Decision and Order. Mr. Payne requests that we release information that he requested from the Department of Energy (DOE) under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. If responsive documents cannot be located, the requestor must be informed whether the requested record is known to have been destroyed or never to have existed. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d).

I. Background

In a letter dated February 5, 1996, Mr. Payne seeks to appeal various FOIA requests and DOE FOIA determinations. Specifically Mr. Payne requests that we review the DOE's handling of three requests for information concerning: (i) the names, last known addresses, and phone numbers of what he claims are 60 to 100 whistleblowers with unsettled cases in the Office of Contractor Employee Protection (OCEP) (Request No. 9512210001), (ii) all DOE authored investigation reports examining allegations that the National Security Agency willfully and purposely attempted to sabotage Sandia National Laboratory (SNL) cryptographic projects (Request No. 9511200002) and (iii) reports on certain investigations of misconduct made by DOE's Office of Inspector General (IG) (Request No. 9512110004) (OHA Case No. VFA-0137). Additionally, Mr. Payne appeals a January 24, 1996 DOE-AL determination denying a requested fee waiver for law firm invoices he requested under the FOIA (OHA Case No. VFA-0128), and a November 6, 1995 DOE-AL determination stating that documents responsive to his request for current SNL employees who are retired from the military ("double dippers") are not agency records subject to the FOIA (OHA Case No. VFA-0139). Mr. Payne also seeks review of a January 5, 1996 DOE-AL determination stating that no responsive documents exist concerning husband-wife pairs employed at either SNL or DOE-AL (OHA Case No. VFA-0140); and a December 14, 1995 letter signed by a University of California<2> employee concerning husband-wife pairs employed at Los Alamos National Laboratory (LANL) (OHA Case No. VFA-0138). Finally Mr. Payne has also filed a Motion for Reconsideration (OHA Case No. VFA-0141) of a Decision and Order issued by this office concerning his request for LANL "double dippers." See William H. Payne, 25 DOE ¶ 80,147 (1995) (Payne).<3>

In support of his fee waiver request which DOE-AL denied on January 24, 1996, Mr. Payne stated that he has published three books (one book was published in both English and Spanish) and six magazine articles. <4> He also notes that he has supplied information to the Baltimore Sun for its whistleblowing series on the National Security Agency and "published" numerous letters on the Internet. Moreover, Mr. Payne indicates that he is writing a book about fraud, waste, mismanagement, corruption, violations of law, classification abuse, and the abuse of national security interests at the DOE. Finally, Mr. Payne references two articles that discuss his allegations with regard to his "whistleblower" activities.<5>

1. Pending FOIA requests at the FOIA Division

This portion of Mr. Payne's FOIA appeal relates to three requests for documents submitted to the FOIA Division for information concerning certain investigations performed by DOE's IG and OCEP (OHA Case No. VFA-0137). In the course of evaluating this matter, we learned that these requests are still pending with the FOIA Division. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Ariane Cerlenko, OHA Staff Attorney and Ed McGinnis, FOIA Division analyst (February 15, 1996). OHA can only assume jurisdiction over a FOIA matter after a DOE Authorizing Official has rendered an initial determination. See Suffolk County, L.I., 17 DOE ¶ 80,111 at 80,524 (1988). Because the FOIA Division has not yet issued determinations regarding these requests Mr. Payne's appeal is not ripe and we will dismiss this portion of Mr. Payne's FOIA appeal.

2. Fee Waiver Denial

This portion of Mr. Payne's FOIA appeal concerns a determination issued by DOE-AL in which Mr. Payne's request for a fee waiver was denied (OHA Case No. VFA-0128). Mr. Payne requested a fee waiver with respect to his FOIA request for law firm billing invoices stating that he intended to use the information in a book he was writing on waste, fraud and abuse. Mr. Payne argues that the billing invoices would show the amount of taxpayer money "wasted" by Sandia Corp. in contesting certain lawsuits. DOE-AL found that "any benefit associated with the release of the requested documents will flow primarily to [Mr. Payne] and not to a greater understanding or for a greater benefit to the public." See January 24 Determination Letter at 2.

The FOIA generally requires that requesters pay the cost of fees for the processing of their requests.

5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(ii); see also 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a). However, the Act provides:

Documents shall be furnished without any charge or at a charge reduced below the fees established under clause (ii) if disclosure of the information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government and is not primarily in the commercial interest of the requester.

5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii). The burden of satisfying this two prong test rests on the requester. Larson v. Central Intelligence Agency, 843 F.2d 1481, 1483 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (per curiam) (Larson). The DOE has implemented this statutory standard for fee waivers in its FOIA regulations. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8). Those regulations set forth the following four factors which must be considered by the agency in order to determine whether the first statutory fee waiver condition, public understanding of the government, has been met:

(A) The subject of the request: Whether the subject of the requested records concerns "the operations or activities of the government;"

(B) The informative value of the information to be disclosed: Whether the disclosure is "likely to contribute" to an understanding of government operations or activities;

(C) The contribution to an understanding by the general public of the subject likely to result from disclosure; and

(D) The significance of the contribution to public understanding: Whether the disclosure is likely to contribute "significantly" to public understanding of government operations or activities.

10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(i).<6>

A fee waiver is only appropriate where the subject matter of the requested records specifically concerns the operations or activities of the government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 772-75 (1989). Therefore, fees may be waived only when the records are sought for their informative value in relation to specifically identified government operations or activities. See William H. Payne, 24 DOE ¶ 80,134 (1994) (finding that telephone billing records of certain DOE-AL employees had no informative value in relation to government operations or activities). In the present case, the law firm invoices sought by Mr. Payne relate to the amount of taxpayer money spent by a contractor defending lawsuits at a national laboratory. It appears clear that this information concerns identifiable "operations or activities of the government." Cf. Indian Law Center v. Department of Interior, 477 F. Supp. 144 (D.D.C. 1979); The Rio Grande Sun, 15 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1987); H. Michael Clyde, 13 DOE ¶ 90,101 (1985).

Even if the particular records requested concern the operations or activities of the government, in order to be granted a fee waiver, the requester must demonstrate at least some capability to disseminate the information received from responsive documents to the public. See Larson, 843 F.2d at 1483. This ability to disseminate information includes an examination of the qualifications of the requester to determine if they have the ability to understand and process the requested records. See McClellan Ecological Seepage Situation v. Carlucci, 835 F.2d 1282, 1286 (9th Cir. 1987).

In the present case , Mr. Payne's representations that he is writing a book do not allow us to infer an ability to disseminate information regarding the requested law firm invoices. See Burriss v. CIA, 524 F. Supp. 448, 449 (M.D. Tenn. 1981) (denial of fee waiver request "based upon mere representation that [the requester] is a researcher who plans to write a book" is not an abuse of discretion). Similarly, Mr. Payne's claim that he has "published" numerous letters on the Internet concerning waste, fraud and abuse and that this "publication" establishes an ability to disseminate information regarding the law firm billing invoices, is unconvincing. <7> In addition, while Mr. Payne has shown some media interest in his "whistleblowing" activities, he has shown an interest on the part of neither the media in general nor a particular publisher on the subject matter of his request, i.e. law firm billing invoices as evidence of waste, fraud and abuse. See Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1993); James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,133 at 80,569 (1992).

Mr. Payne also asserts that his proven ability to publish material in the past is evidence of his ability to disseminate the requested material. While it is true that Mr. Payne has published in the past, the vast majority of his published material concerns computer programming and is not linked to government or other waste, fraud and abuse. The two articles that Mr. Payne wrote which arguably concern waste, fraud and abuse were written over 23 years ago while Mr. Payne was a visiting Research Associate and serving on a Graduate Studies committee. This does not establish the type of current, specialized knowledge necessary to extract, synthesize and then convey the information to the general public. See Pederson v. Resolution Trust Corp., 847 F. Supp. 851 (D. Colo. 1994).

As mentioned earlier, the burden of satisfying the fee waiver requirements rests on the requester. In the present case, Mr. Payne has not demonstrated that he can meaningfully disseminate information about the law firm invoices, even if they concern the operations or activities of government.<8> Accordingly, this portion of Mr. Payne's Appeal should be denied.

3. Agency Records

This portion of Mr. Payne's appeal concerns two determinations issued by DOE-AL. The first determination issued on November 6, 1995, found that responsive records, to the extent that they exist, and contain the names and dates of employment of retired military personnel employed at SNL ("double dippers"), are not agency records subject to the provisions of the FOIA (OHA Case No. VFA-0139). In this portion of the Decision we also address a second determination issued by DOE-AL for records containing the names and dates of employment of "double dippers" employed at LANL (OHA Case No. VFA-0141). Since the second determination was the subject of a Decision and Order already issued by this office, we have treated Mr. Payne's attempted "appeal" of that determination as a Motion for Reconsideration of this Office's Decision and Order.

a. Retired Military Personnel Employed at SNL

The threshold inquiry in addressing this portion of Mr. Payne's appeal is whether personnel files, which would possibly contain responsive information, generated by and in the possession of a DOE contractor are subject to the FOIA. In making this determination, we must first determine whether such records are "agency records," and thus subject to the FOIA, under the criteria set out by the federal courts. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Records that do not meet these criteria however can nonetheless still be subject to release under the DOE regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e); see 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884 (December 12, 1994). In the present case, we conclude that the records in question are not "agency records" and are not subject to the FOIA under DOE regulations.

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information required to be made available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-stage analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents created by non-federal organizations, such as the Sandia Corp., are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination (i) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA, and if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether an entity should be regarded as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case which involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with the DOE, Sandia Corp. manages and operates SNL. While the DOE obtained Sandia Corp.'s services and exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise Sandia Corp.'s day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that Sandia Corp. is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA. See William Kuntz, III, 25 DOE ¶ 80,157 (1996).

Although Sandia Corp. is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, its records relevant to Mr. Payne's request could become "agency records" if they were obtained by the DOE and were within the DOE's control at the time the FOIA request was made. See Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980) (Kissinger); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, the documents in question had not been obtained by the DOE and were not in the agency's control at the time of the appellant's request. Thus, the records do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86; Kissinger, 445 U.S. at 150-51.

Even if contractor-acquired or contractor-generated records fail to qualify as "agency records," they may still be subject to release if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. The DOE FOIA regulations provide that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

We therefore next look to the contract between the DOE and Sandia Corp. to determine the status of these records. That contract states:

Except as is provided in paragraph (b) of this provision and as may be otherwise agreed upon by the Government and the Contractor, all records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this contract shall be the property of the Government and shall be delivered to the Government or otherwise disposed of by the Contractor either as the Contracting Officer may from time to time direct during the progress of the work, or in any event, as the Contracting Officer shall direct upon settlement of this contract.

Contract DE-AC04-94AL85000, Cl. H-18 (a). Paragraph (b) of this clause states that the category of records that remain the property of the Contractor includes "Personnel records, medical records and files (excluding personnel radiation exposure records) maintained on individual employees, applicants and former employees[.]" Id. at H-18 (b)(1). Thus, because personnel records are not among the records which are "property of the Government" under the DOE's contract with Sandia Corp., these records are not subject to release under the DOE regulations.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the records sought by the appellant are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to the FOIA under DOE regulations. Accordingly, we shall deny this portion of Mr. Payne's Appeal.

b. Retired Military Personnel Employed at LANL

Mr. Payne's Motion for Reconsideration concerns a request for information concerning "double dippers" working at LANL. See Payne, 25 DOE at 80,611. In circumstances similar to those detailed above with respect to Sandia Corp. records, we found in the Payne case that the requested documents were contained in personnel files in the possession and control of the University of California, the prime contractor responsible for maintaining and operating LANL and were therefore not agency records subject to the provisions of the FOIA. Id. Accordingly, we denied Mr. Payne's appeal.

We have thoroughly reviewed this Motion for Reconsideration, and have found no new material or circumstances that would lead us to alter our prior Decision.<9>In his Motion, Mr. Payne merely states that he wishes to appeal the denial of the information. Since he has provided no new additional information or shown changed circumstances, we will deny this Motion for Reconsideration. See E.O. Smelser, 24 DOE ¶ 80,161 (1994).

4. Adequacy of the Search

This portion of Mr. Payne's appeal concerns a January 5, 1996 DOE-AL determination in which DOE-AL states that it did not find material responsive to Mr. Payne's request for documents containing the "names, date of employment, current salaries of all husband-wife pairs employed at [SNL or DOE-AL]" (OHA Case No. VFA-0140).

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Barton Kaplan, 22 DOE ¶ 80,125 (1992); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

In order to determine whether an agency's search was adequate, its actions are examined under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985) (Miller). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted Elva Barfield, FOIA Officer, DOE-AL, to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any documents responsive to the Mr. Payne's request might exist. According to Ms. Barfield, searches were conducted by the Kirtland Area Office (KAO) and the Human Resources Division (HRD) of DOE-AL. In addition, searches were conducted by Sandia Corp. to determine if it possessed responsive documents which are the property of the DOE. No responsive records were located in any of the offices searched. While it is theoretically possible that the information that Mr. Payne requested could be retrieved by comparing each and every personnel file, the FOIA neither requires the creation of a responsive record where none exists, nor an exhaustive search. See Miller, 779 F.2d at 1384-85; Linda P. Yeatts, 25 DOE ¶ 80,154 (1995); Lloyd Makey, 24 DOE ¶ 80,163 (1994); Dr. Robert Sanchez, 24 DOE ¶ 80,136 (1994).

Under these circumstances, we are convinced that DOE-AL followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the information sought by Mr. Payne. DOE-AL has performed a rationally based search for responsive agency records. Moreover, despite the fact that the FOIA does not apply to records of nongovernmental entities, including government contractors, those facilities were searched as well. Furthermore, Mr. Payne has not presented any evidence that DOE possesses responsive documents. See Mark S. Boggs, 22 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1992). Accordingly, this portion of Mr. Payne's appeal will also be denied.

5. Contractor Response to a Request for Information

Lastly, Mr. Payne appeals a December 14, 1995 letter sent to Mr. Payne by a University of California employee in response to his request for information concerning husband and wide pairs employed at LANL (OHA Case No. VFA-0138). The OHA can assume jurisdiction over a FOIA matter only after an Authorizing Official has rendered an initial determination on the matter. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.8(a). An Authorizing Official is a DOE officer having custody of or responsibility for records requested under the FOIA. See 10 C.F.R § 1004.2. The December 14 letter is not an agency determination under the FOIA.

Accordingly, this portion of Mr. Payne's Appeal will also be dismissed.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1)The Appeal filed by William H. Payne, Case No. VFA-0137, on February 28, 1996, is hereby dismissed.

(2)The Appeal filed by William H. Payne, Case No. VFA-0128, on February 28, 1996, is hereby denied.

(3)The Appeal filed by William H. Payne, Case No. VFA-0139, on February 28, 1996, is hereby denied.

(4)The Motion for Reconsideration filed by William H. Payne, Case No. VFA-0141, on February 28, 1996, is hereby denied.

(5)The Appeal filed by William H. Payne, Case No. VFA-0140, on February 28, 1996, is hereby denied.

(6)The Appeal filed by William H. Payne, Case No. VFA-0138, on February 28, 1996, is hereby dismissed.

Date: March 26, 1996

<1>Mr. Payne's correspondence with the Secretary of Energy was forwarded to this Office on February 21, 1995 (Feb. 5 Payne correspondence). In reviewing the correspondence we determined that Mr. Payne was appealing several different Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) matters. However, the correspondence did not include copies of the determinations so that this Office could begin processing the FOIA Appeal. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.8(b). After contacting Mr. Payne and speaking with FOIA officials at the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE-AL) and its Headquarters Freedom of Information and Privacy Act Division (FOIA Division), we believe that we now possess the Decision and Order, letters and determinations which were the subject of Mr. Payne's correspondence. His Appeal was considered to be filed as of February 28, 1996.

<2>The University of California is the prime contractor responsible for maintaining and operating LANL.

<3>In addition to those items mentioned above, it appears that Mr. Payne also desired to appeal a denial under the FOIA of copies of Sandia Corporation (Sandia Corp.) computer chip purchase orders at SNL. However, we have been unable to locate any FOIA request filed by Mr. Payne or a determination letter issued by the DOE concerning this matter. DOE-AL informs us that its database, which tracks all incoming FOIA requests, shows no record of a request for computer chip purchase orders, and DOE-AL would be the appropriate operations office to process such a request if it was filed pursuant to the FOIA. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Elva Barfield, DOE-AL FOIA Officer and Ariane Cerlenko, OHA Staff Attorney (February 14, 1996). FOIA appellants may not file new requests for information in their appeals. See Alan J. White, 17 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,539 (1988); Arthur Scanla, 13 DOE ¶ 80,133 at 80,622 n.2 (1986). Mr. Payne should therefore file a request for this information with DOE-AL if he seeks to determine whether there is any responsive information on this matter.

<4>It appears that Mr. Payne has published the following materials:

(1) William H. Payne, Machine, Assembly and System Programming for the IBM 360 (1969) (in English and 1971 in Spanish);

(2) William H. Payne, Implementing BASICs: How BASICs Work (1982);

(3) William H. Payne, Embedded Controller Forth for the 8051 Family (1990);

(4) William H. Payne, Graduate Education: The Ph.D. Glut, 16 Communications of the ACM (1973);

(5) P. Freeman, M.A. Malcolm, William H. Payne, Graduate Education: The Ph.D. Glut, Response and Rebuttal, 17 Communications of the ACM 206-07 (1973);

(9) William H. Payne, Combine FORTH with other Tools for Rapid Software Development, Electronic Design 103-06 (1988).

<5>The two articles, which appeared in the Albuquerque Journal, discuss the lawsuit that Mr. Payne filed against Sandia Corp. and efforts by the DOE to scrutinize old "whistleblower" cases. See Stieber, Tamar, Fired Worker Files Lawsuit Against Sandia, Albuquerque Journal (April 25, 1993); Spohn, Lawrence, DOE to Scrutinize Fairness in Old Whistleblower Cases, Albuquerque Journal (November 7, 1995). Mr. Payne was interviewed for the article written by Mr. Spohn.

<6>If the DOE finds that a request satisfies these four factors, it must also consider whether disclosure of the information is primarily in the commercial interest of the requester. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(ii).

<7>In investigating Mr. Payne's claim to have "published" letters via posting on the Internet, we performed four comprehensive searches of the various resources available on the Internet (World Wide Web, Gopher, Telnet and Usenet Newsgroups) using Yahoo, AltaVista, Webcrawler and Lycos search engines. We searched for any documents containing his name. The only responsive material we discovered consisted of a Decision and Order issued by this office containing Mr. Payne's name and the book published by Mr. Payne entitled Embedded controller Forth for the 8051 family. We note that the posting of an article or articles on the Internet is not necessarily the type of broad circulation envisioned by courts evaluating fee waiver requests. See e.g. National Treasury Employees Union v. Griffin, 811 F.2d 644, 648 (D.C. Cir. 1987); Crooker v. Department of the Army, 577 F. Supp. 1220, 1223 (D.D.C. 1984). Further, our inability to locate this "published" information supports the finding that the "publication" claimed by Mr. Payne is insufficiently broad to show dissemination ability.

<8>Even if we had found that Mr. Payne had the ability to disseminate the requested information, we would still have upheld DOE-AL's denial of his fee waiver request. In evaluating a fee waiver request, the agency must also determine whether disclosure of the information is "likely to contribute" to the public's understanding of the government operations and activities. In this regard, we note that the Office of Chief Counsel, DOE-AL, has released to Mr. Payne the aggregate invoice amount related to both the "Morales" litigation and the work performed by the law firm of Simons, Cuddy and Friedman at SNL. See Letter from Charles S. Przybylek, Chief Counsel, DOE-AL to William H. Payne (February 21, 1996). Since Mr. Payne already possesses the total amount of money spent on these matters at SNL, the itemization of amounts claimed on any particular invoice is not likely to contribute anything new to the public's understanding. See e.g. Knolls Action Project, 25 DOE ¶ 80,148 (1995); U.A. Plumbers and Pipefitters

Local 36, 24 DOE ¶ 80,148 (1994).

<9>We will modify a prior Decision and Order in an FOIA proceeding where an applicant persuasively demonstrates that (1) the prior determination was incorrect because we did not consider all material facts or we misapplied the law, or (2) the prior determination, though correct when issued, is no longer correct because of a change in the applicable law or the circumstances of the case. See Ron Vader, 23 DOE ¶ 80,183 (1994); Power City Electric, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,126 (1993).

Case No. VFA-0129, 25 DOE ¶ 80,173

February 29, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Nathaniel Hendricks

Date of Filing: February 8, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0129

On February 8, 1996, Nathaniel Hendricks (Appellant) filed a Motion for Reconsideration (Motion) of a Decision and Order issued to him by the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) of the Department of Energy (DOE). Nathaniel Hendricks, Case No. VFA-0106 (January 26, 1996). In that Decision, we remanded the Appellant's Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request to the DOE's Office of Environment, Safety and Health (DOE/EH). In his current Motion, the Appellant requests that his case also be remanded to the DOE's Chicago Operations Office (COO).

Background

On July 29, 1994, the Appellant submitted a FOIA request to the President's Advisory Committee on Human Radiation Experiments (Committee) seeking information relating to accidental and/or planned releases of radiation between 1940 and 1946 from the University of Chicago's Manhattan Project site, Stagg Field, or from any other location in Chicago. The Committee forwarded the request to the DOE which in turn sent his request to DOE/EH and COO. After COO and DOE/EH issued their determinations, the Appellant filed an Appeal in which he contended that the search for responsive documents had been inadequate. In the OHA's January 26 Decision, we upheld the reasonableness of the COO search, which had been conducted by its contractor, Argonne National Laboratory (Argonne). Specifically, the OHA found that Argonne's refusal to search some 6,500 scientific notebooks which were likely to be radioactive was reasonable.<1>However, the OHA concluded that DOE/EH's search of available, relevant databases had been inadequate and accordingly, remanded the matter to DOE/EH for further action. On February 8, 1996, the present Motion challenging the COO portion of the Decision was filed with the OHA.

Analysis

The DOE FOIA regulations do not explicitly provide for reconsideration of a final Decision and Order of an appeal. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.8. However, in prior cases, we have used our discretion to consider Motions for Reconsideration where circumstances warrant. Cf. Chuck Hansen, 18 DOE ¶ 80,116 (1988). In the present case, we have decided, as a discretionary matter, to consider only some of the points raised by the Appellant in his Motion for Reconsideration.

In the Motion, the Appellant raises numerous arguments, labeled as A through P. In Items A through C, the Appellant argues that the DOE improperly failed to search the files of the National Archives, the U.S.

Army Corps, other military agencies, and "federal health records." Under the FOIA, each agency is responsible for conducting its own FOIA searches and therefore, our January 26 Decision correctly advised the Appellant to direct his request to those other agencies. In Item J, the Appellant argues that the DOE should have searched City of Chicago and State of Illinois records. Neither of those bodies are federal agencies, and therefore their records are not agency records subject to the requirements of the FOIA. In Item E, the Appellant argues that the University of Chicago's records should have been searched by DOE. Some DOE contractor records may be subject to the FOIA under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e). See 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884 (December 12, 1994). However, as stated in our January 26, 1996 Decision, COO had previously determined that the University of Chicago has no documents from the University's Manhattan Project research location, the Metallurgy Laboratory. Thus, because none of the information the Appellant gave in his initial FOIA request indicated there were responsive agency records at the University, the DOE was not required to ask the University to conduct a search. But see Footnote 2.

Furthermore, in Item A, the Appellant states that COO did not notify him of his right to appeal to this Office in its original determination. The OHA cured this defect in its January 26 Decision when it considered the adequacy of the COO search. In Items F, G, I, and P, the Appellant repeats many of the same arguments raised in his original Appeal. The OHA dealt with each of these arguments in the January 26 Decision and thus need not consider them here. Also, in Item D, the Appellant argues that this Office should have required that the thousands of radioactive scientific notebooks be searched regardless of the time and expense of such a laborious process. However, as we stated in the January 26 Decision, it would be unreasonable to require the expenditure of perhaps more than $100,000 and many thousands of hours to conduct this "needle in a haystack" search. The Appellant has presented no substantive argument that would convince us otherwise. Accordingly, we uphold our original decision regarding the notebooks and the other issues raised in the Motion and discussed above.

However, Items K through O do present facts which the Appellant has not previously brought to the DOE's attention, and we will exercise our discretion to consider them. In the course of reviewing the Appellant's Motion, Dr. Schlenker of Argonne stated that since the Appellant had not included these facts in his request, the earlier search may not have revealed documents which would have been responsive. See Memorandum of Telephone Message from Dr. Robert Schlenker to Dawn Koren (February 20, 1996). Consequently, we shall remand this portion of the case to COO.<2>On remand, COO shall identify any additional documents found to be responsive in light of the new facts presented, and either release them or provide adequate justification for withholding any portion of them. <3>Since this Office already remanded this case to DOE/EH to continue its portion of the search, the DOE/EH search is not at issue in this Motion for Reconsideration. However, in the course of our most recent telephone conversation with Bob Zielinski of DOE/EH, he asked whether the DOE is required by the FOIA to search two relevant Internet databases which the DOE has created. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren, OHA Staff Attorney, and Bob Zielinksi, Office of Human Radiation Experiments (February 13, 1996). In Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136 (1989)(Tax Analysts), the Supreme Court decided that under the FOIA, an agency may direct requesters to locations where that agency has previously made responsive documents publicly available. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S at 152-153. Therefore, we have directed the Appellant in a separate letter to a publicly-available source of the two relevant DOE Internet databases. But because there is a remaining non-computerized database which includes more documents than are available on the Internet, that database still must be searched by DOE/EH, taking into account new information provided by the Appellant. Therefore, the Motion was forwarded by this Office to DOE/EH for use in its continuing search. <4>

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Motion for Reconsideration filed by Nathaniel Hendricks on February 8, 1996, Case Number VFA-0129, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Chicago Operations Office, which shall conduct a search for documents responsive to the Appellant's request as described in the above Decision and Order, and shall promptly issue a new determination regarding the result of that search.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: February 29, 1996

<1>The number of these documents was described as 5,000 in the January 26 Decision. It appears that COO actually holds approximately 6,500 radioactive notebooks. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren, OHA Staff Attorney, and Dr. Robert Schlenker, Director, Environment, Safety and Health, Argonne (January 17, 1996)(located in Case No. VFA-0106).

<2>These new facts include that the Appellant witnessed colored smoke and men marching at Stagg Field during the Manhattan Project. When the Appellant questioned men who appeared to be taking measurements of the field, he was told that "sub-chasers" were being built at Gary, Indiana. Also, the Appellant specified that he was interested in radiation releases and measurements involving the air, water and soil of Stagg Field and surrounding areas. See Letter from Nathaniel Hendricks, Appellant, to Director, OHA (February 8, 1996)(Appeal Letter). Further, we note that the Appellant has now informed us that while he attended the University of Chicago Laboratory School during the early 1940's, the school physically examined him, took urine samples and tested him with an electronic monitoring device. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren and Nathaniel Hendricks (February 9, 1996) and Appeal Letter. While the University does not possess documents of the Metallurgy Laboratory itself, on remand, COO should determine whether either Argonne or the University possess responsive Laboratory School records.

<3>Since this Office previously remanded this case to DOE/EH to continue its portion of the search in our earlier Decision, the DOE/EH search is not at issue in this Motion for Reconsideration. However, in the course of our most recent telephone conversation with Bob Zielinski of DOE/EH, he suggested directing the Appellant to the two relevant Internet databases which the DOE has created. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren and Bob Zielinski, Office of Human Radiation Experiments (February 13, 1996). We have determined that the DOE may direct the requester to a publicly-available Internet source, because under United States Dep't of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136 (1989)(Tax Analysts), an agency can direct requesters to locations where that agency has made responsive documents publicly available. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 152-153. Therefore, we have informed the Appellant in the cover letter to this Decision of the locations of these Internet sources. But because there is a remaining non-computerized source

<4>(the DOE Office of Science, Technology and Information (OSTI) bibliography) which includes more documents than are available in the Internet databases, the OSTI bibliography still must be searched by DOE/EH, taking into account the new facts provided by the Appellant in Items K through O of his Motion. Accordingly, this Office forwarded the Motion to DOE/EH for use in its continuing search of the OSTI bibliography.

March 11, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Hellen Ruth Sutton-Pank

Date of Filing: February 9, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0130

On February 9, 1996, Hellen Ruth Sutton-Pank filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on January 2, 1996 by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE/AL). That determination was issued in response to a request for information under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

I. Background

On September 12, 1995, Ms. Sutton-Pank sent letters to the President of the United States and the Secretary of Energy in which she sought records pertaining to possible radiation exposure of her father, Audrey Phillip Sutton, during his employment at the Sandia National Laboratory (SNL) in Albuquerque, New Mexico. SNL is a DOE facility currently operated by Lockheed/Martin Corporation (Lockheed/Martin). <1> DOE Headquarters forwarded Ms. Sutton-Pank's request to DOE/AL which processed her request under the Freedom of Information Act. In its January 2, 1996 determination letter, DOE/AL provided Ms. Sutton-Pank with a redacted copy of DOE dosimetry records pertaining to Mr. Sutton. Additionally, DOE/AL informed Ms. Sutton-Pank that Lockheed/Martin had located employee and medical records pertaining to Mr. Sutton in its files. Because the records in the Lockheed/Martin files were not DOE property, DOE/AL informed Ms. Sutton-Pank that the employee records could be obtained by writing directly to Lockheed/Martin at SNL. With regard to the medical records, DOE/AL provided Ms. Sutton-Pank with a Lockheed/Martin "Authorization for Release of Medical Information Form" (Authorization Form) and stated that she should have her mother complete the form and mail it to SNL.

Ms. Sutton-Pank sent a letter to Lockheed/Martin requesting Mr. Sutton's employee records and submitted the Authorization Form. Ms. Sutton-Pank subsequently received Mr. Sutton's employee records from Lockheed/Martin but has not received a response from Lockheed/Martin regarding Mr. Sutton's medical records. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Helen Ruth Sutton-Pank and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (February 20, 1996). In her Appeal, Ms. Sutton-Pank argues that DOE/AL should have provided the medical records possessed by Lockheed/Martin. In support of her argument she notes that the records were generated pursuant to projects at a DOE facility and paid for by DOE's predecessor agencies.

II. Analysis

Our threshold inquiry in this case is whether the Lockheed/Martin medical records are "agency records," and thus subject to the FOIA, under the criteria set out by the federal courts. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). We note however that records that do not meet these criteria can nonetheless be subject to release under the DOE regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e); see 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884 (December 12, 1994). After reviewing the facts regarding this Appeal, we conclude that the records in question are not "agency records" and are not subject to the FOIA under DOE regulations. As discussed below, the fact that the Lockheed/Martin medical records may have been created at a DOE facility or pursuant to a DOE funded project is not determinative on the issue of whether the medical records should be considered subject to the FOIA.

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information required to be made available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-stage analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents created or acquired by non-federal organizations, such as Lockheed/Martin, are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination (i) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA, and if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether an entity should be regarded as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case which involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with the DOE, Lockheed/Martin, through its wholly owned subsidiary Sandia, is the prime contractor responsible for maintaining and operating SNL. While the DOE obtained Lockheed/Martin's (including Sandia's) services and exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise its day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that Lockheed/Martin (including Sandia) is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.

Although Lockheed/Martin is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, its records responsive to Ms. Sutton-Pank's request could have become "agency records" if they were obtained by the DOE and were within the DOE's control at the time the FOIA request was made. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In the present case, the medical records in question had not been obtained by the DOE and were not in DOE/AL's control at the time of the appellant's request. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Elva Barfield, FOIA Officer, DOE/AL and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (February 26, 1996). Thus, the medical records do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86, Kissinger v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136, 150-51 (1980).

Even if contractor-acquired or contractor-generated records fail to qualify as "agency records," they may still be subject to release if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. The DOE FOIA regulations provide that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

We therefore next look to the contract between DOE and Lockheed/Martin's subsidiary, Sandia, to determine the status of these records. Subsection H-18 (a) of that contract states:

Government's Records. Except as is provided in paragraph (b) of this provision and as may be otherwise agreed upon by the Government and the Contractor, all records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this Contract shall be property of the Government and shall be delivered to the Government or otherwise disposed of by the Contractor either as the Contracting Officer may from time to time direct during the progress of the work or, in any event, as the Contracting Officer shall direct upon settlement of this contract.

Contract No. DE-AC04-94AL85000, Subsection H-18 (a) (emphasis added). Paragraph (b) of this subsection states:

Contractor's Records. The following records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this contract (to the extent not listed and maintained as a Privacy Act record pursuant to the Section H provision entitled "Privacy Act System of Records") are the property of the Contractor and not within the scope of paragraph (a), above:

(1) Personnel records, medical records and files (excluding personnel radiation exposure records) maintained on individual employees, applicants, and former employees of the Contractor ....

Thus, because the medical records (other than the dosimetry records already provided to Ms. Sutton-Pank) are not among the records which are "property of the Government" under the DOE's contract with Lockheed/Martin's subsidiary, Sandia, these records are not subject to release under the DOE regulations.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the records sought by the appellant are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to the FOIA under DOE regulations. Accordingly, we shall deny the present FOIA Appeal. <2>

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Hellen Ruth Sutton-Pank on February 9, 1996, Case Number VFA-0130, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>

<2>

While we find in this Decision that the Lockheed/Martin medical records are not agency records subject to the FOIA, we have no reason to believe that Lockheed/Martin will not ultimately provide Ms. Sutton-Park with the requested medical records.

Case No. VFA-0131, 25 DOE ¶ 80,176

March 11, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Janis C. Garrett

Date of Filing: February 12, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0131

On February 12, 1996, Janis C. Garrett (the appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Western Area Power Authority (WAPA). In that determination, WAPA denied a request for information filed by her under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require WAPA to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. BACKGROUND

On December 14, 1995, the appellant filed a twelve-part request for information with WAPA concerning the selection process for employment vacancy No. SAO-1-95. On January 11, 1996, WAPA issued a determination releasing documents responsive to six parts of the appellant's request, and finding that no documents that were responsive to the other six parts existed. Portions of the responsive documents released to the appellant were withheld pursuant to FOIA Exemption 6. <1> On February 12, 1996, the present Appeal was filed with this office.

II. ANALYSIS

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by federal agencies be released to the public upon request. If a requester has reasonably described the information he or she is seeking and has complied with the DOE's FOIA regulations appearing at 10 C.F.R. Part 1004, the agency is obliged to conduct a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981).

The present Appeal seeks copies of any waivers requested from the Office of Personnel Management's Hiring Moratorium by WAPA. In addition, the Appeal contains an additional set of questions concerning the selection process. Finally, the appellant seeks an explanation of why no documents showing the ranking of individuals for SAO-1-95 were identified and released to her. We need not consider the appellant's request for copies of any waivers sought by WAPA from the Office of Personnel Management's hiring moratorium. Since this request was not included in the appellant's original request it is in fact a new request for information. We do not permit FOIA appellants to broaden their requests for information in their appeals. Alan J. White, 17 DOE ¶ 80,117, 80,539 (1988); see also Arthur Scanla, 13 DOE ¶ 80,133 at 80,622 n.2 (1986). The appellant should therefore file a new request for this information with WAPA in order to obtain the information she is seeking.

The FOIA does not require agencies to respond to questions directed to them by requesters. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(d). Instead, the FOIA is limited to requiring the "disclosure of certain documents which the law requires the agency to prepare or which the agency has decided for its own reasons to create." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 162 (1975); see also Renegotiation Bd. v. Grumman Aircraft Eng'g Corp., 421 U.S. 168, 192 (1975). Therefore, we will not consider those portions of the Appeal constituting questions. Moreover, most of the questions contained in the Appeal are raised for the first time on Appeal and therefore constitute a broadening of the appellant's original request. For these reasons, we are dismissing those portions of the Appeal which consist of questions.

The remainder of the appeal challenges the adequacy of WAPA's search for documents containing the ranking of qualified candidates for SAO-1-95. We contacted WAPA and were informed that no documentation of the ranking of qualified individuals for the SAO-1-95 position exists because the selection process for that position was terminated before a list of qualified candidates was produced. Memorandum of February 29, 1996 telephone conversation between Matthew Lavender, WAPA Staff Attorney and Steven Fine, OHA Staff Attorney. Accordingly, we find that WAPA's conclusion that no responsive documents for this request exist is reasonable. WAPA's search for responsive documents is therefore adequate. Accordingly, we are denying this portion of the Appeal.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, we find that the Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Janis C. Garrett, Case No. VFA-0131, shall be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Janis C. Garrett, Case No. VFA-0131, on February 12, 1996, is hereby denied.

Case No. VFA-0132, 25 DOE ¶ 80,179

March 12, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: James E. Minter

Date of Filing: February 12, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0132

On February 12, 1996, James E. Minter filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on January 9, 1996, by the Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination concerned a request for information submitted by Mr. Minter pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If the present Appeal were granted, Albuquerque would be required to conduct a further search for responsive material.

I. Background

In his April 13, 1995 request, Mr. Minter, an employee at the DOE's Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge), sought all information concerning an alleged assault and battery that occurred at Albuquerque on January 26, 1994. Mr. Minter was accused of assaulting Frank Oakes, another Oak Ridge employee, while both employees were traveling on DOE business. Albuquerque conducted a search for documents responsive to Mr. Minter's request. On July 2, 1995, Albuquerque issued its determination, releasing responsive documents but further stating that the Transportation Safety Division (TSD) could not find any responsive statements or reports by Ray Parrett, Chief of the TSD at Oak Ridge at the time of the incident.

On August 8, 1995, Mr. Minter filed an Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals of the DOE, contending that Albuquerque's search for statements or reports by Mr. Parrett was inadequate. During that Appeal, Mr. Minter stated that he believed Mr. Parrett took handwritten notes during a meeting Mr. Minter had with Mr. Parrett soon after the incident. As a result of this information, Albuquerque contacted Mr. Parrett, who had retired since the incident, and determined that the notes could be located in a place that had not yet been searched. Therefore, the Appeal was remanded to Albuquerque to search for additional documents. On January 9, 1996, Albuquerque sent Mr. Minter a letter explaining that, although Mr. Parrett recalled having taken notes about the incident, an additional search located no documents. In response, Mr. Minter filed this Appeal. Appeal Letter dated February 1, 1996, from James E. Minter to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA), DOE.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988).

In reviewing the present Appeal, we contacted Terry Apodaca at Albuquerque to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any documents responsive to Mr. Minter's request might exist. We were informed by Mrs. Apodaca that Mr. Parrett had been contacted at his home and a search had been conducted of his old office and the files where he thought he may have left the notes. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Janet R. H. Fishman, Staff Attorney, OHA, and Terry Apodaca, Albuquerque, February 22, 1996. Mrs. Apodaca stated that no handwritten notes were located. She indicated that it is possible Mr. Parrett's handwritten notes were discarded by his successor.

As we stated in our September 6, 1995 Decision, we are convinced that Albuquerque followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the material sought by Mr. Minter in his request. See Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). The fact that neither search uncovered documents Mr. Minter believed may be in the possession of DOE does not mean that the search was inadequate. In addition, Mr. Minter has not provided any evidence, beyond his personal belief, that any additional documents exist in the Albuquerque's files. Therefore, under the circumstances of this case, we find that Albuquerque's search for responsive documents was adequate and that no further documents responsive to Mr. Minter's request exist at Albuquerque. Accordingly, Mr. Minter's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed on February 12, 1996, by James E. Minter, Case No. VFA-0132, is hereby denied.

April 3, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: David K. Hackett

Date of Filing: February 28, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0135

On February 28, 1996, the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) received an Appeal filed by David K. Hackett from a determination issued to him by the Manager of the Department of Energy's (DOE) Oak Ridge Operations Office (hereinafter referred to as "the Manager"). This determination was issued in response to requests for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the Manager to release portions of a document that was provided to Mr. Hackett in redacted form, and to conduct a further search for responsive documents.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public unless the DOE determines that disclosure is contrary to federal law or the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On November 6 and November 23, 1994, Mr. Hackett submitted FOIA requests to DOE Headquarters (DOE/HQ). In his November 6 submission, Mr. Hackett requested access to all documents relating to his complaints against Lockheed Martin Energy Systems, Inc. (LMES), a DOE contractor, including all such documents located in the following DOE Offices: Oak Ridge, Contractor Employee Protection, Inspector General, Declassification and the Executive Secretariat. In his November 23 filing, Mr. Hackett requested a list of all of LMES's subcontractors to its contract with the DOE.

DOE/HQ coordinated a department-wide search for documents responsive to Mr. Hackett's requests. In so doing, DOE/HQ identified four Offices in which responsive documents might be found: Oak Ridge, Inspector General, Field Management and Economic Impact and Diversity. Mr. Hackett's requests were forwarded to these Offices. On February 22, 1995, the Manager issued his determination on behalf of the Oak Ridge Office concerning Mr. Hackett's November 6 request, releasing 64 pages of responsive documents.

On March 8, 1995, Mr. Hackett filed an Appeal with the OHA (Case No. VFA-0032) contesting the adequacy of Oak Ridge's search for responsive documents. In a Decision and Order issued on March 31, 1995, we determined that there may have been responsive documents that were not identified in the initial search. See David Hackett, 25 DOE ¶ 80,107 (1995). This conclusion was based on discussions with Mr. Hackett and with the Oak Ridge Office, during which it became evident that responsive documents might be located in the files of William Stephens, a former employee of the Office of Chief Counsel. Id. at 80,514 n.4. Consequently, we remanded the matter to the Manager for an additional search. In addition, we requested that upon remand, the Oak Ridge Office investigate Mr. Hackett's claim that Rufus Smith of the Oak Ridge EEO Office was maintaining a file concerning Mr. Hackett, and that such a file should contain responsive documents.

In response to the OHA's March 31, 1995 Decision and Order, the Manager conducted a further search for responsive documents, and issued another determination to Mr. Hackett on June 30, 1995. All responsive documents that were located as a result of this search were released to Mr. Hackett in their entirety, except for Document 11, which was released in redacted form. In his determination, the Manager cited Exemption 4 of the FOIA (5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4)) in support of his decision to withhold portions of Document 11. Exemption 4 protects from public disclosure any "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and [which is] privileged or confidential."

On February 28, 1996, the OHA received Mr. Hackett's Appeal of the Manager's June 30, 1995 determination. <1> In his Appeal, Mr.Hackett contests the Manager's decision to withhold portions of Document 11 pursuant to Exemption 4. He again claims that the search for responsive documents was inadequate, and he also contends that contracts between LMES and its subcontractors are agency records that are subject to mandatory disclosure pursuant to the FOIA, and that a list of those subcontractors should therefore have been provided to him.

II. Analysis

A. Document 11

Document 11 is an invoice for legal fees that were incurred by LMES in connection with its contract with the DOE. The invoice was forwarded by LMES to the DOE for payment in accordance with the provisions of the DOE's contract with LMES. The withheld portions of the document consist of a description of the services rendered, the amount of hours billed for each service, and the cost for each service.

Exemption 4 permits an agency to withhold from public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 4, a document supplied to the DOE on a non-voluntary basis must meet the following criteria: the document must contain either (A) "trade secrets" or (B) information which is (1) "commercial or financial," (2) "obtained from a person," and (3) "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Association v. Morton, 498 F 2d. 765 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). Cf. Critical Mass Energy Project v. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, 975 F 2d. 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (information voluntarily provided to the Government is confidential under Exemption 4 if it is the kind of information that the provider would not customarily make available to the public).

We will analyze the withholding of portions of Document 11 under the National Parks test described above because LMES submitted the invoice to the DOE on a non-voluntary basis. Applying this test, we conclude that the Manager properly applied Exemption 4 in withholding portions of Document 11. Clearly, a request for payment for services rendered is "commercial" within the meaning of Exemption 4. In addition, the information was obtained from a "person," as required by Exemption 4, since corporations are deemed "persons" for purposes of that Exemption. See Ronson Management Corp., 19 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1989). Finally, the withheld portions of the document consist of information that is subject to the attorney work product privilege. Specifically, those portions include descriptions of the legal services provided, the cost of each service and the amount of time spent by the attorneys in performing each service. The descriptions of the services provided reflect the legal theories and strategies of the attorneys. The time and cost figures reveal the relative importance attached to each task by the attorneys. For these reasons, we have previously determined that this type of information is subject to the attorney work product privilege. C.D. Varnadore & Betty Freels, 24 DOE ¶ 80,123 (1994). We therefore reject Mr. Hackett's contention that the Manager improperly withheld portions of Document 11.

B. Adequacy of the Search for Responsive Documents

In his Appeal, Mr. Hackett also contests the adequacy of the Manager's search for responsive documents. Specifically, he states that because his original complaint was made to Mr. Smith's office, that office should possess responsive documents. In addition, Mr. Hackett contends that a reasonably thorough search should have produced documents from LMES' EEO Office relating to his complaints, and a list of LMES' subcontractors.

In responding to a request for information under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (Truitt). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. The fact that the results of a search may not meet with the requester's expectations does not necessarily mean that the search was inadequate. Robert Hale, 25 DOE ¶ 80,101 at 80,501 (1995). Instead, in evaluating the adequacy of a search, our inquiry generally focuses on the scope of the search that was performed. See, e.g., Richard J. Levernier, 25 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1995).

In connection with Mr. Hackett's March 8, 1995 Appeal, we contacted the Oak Ridge Office to ascertain the nature of the search that was conducted. At that time, we were informed that the EEO Office, the Safety and Health Division and the Office of Chief Counsel were searched for responsive documents. Each of these Offices certified to Oak Ridge's FOIA Officer that the search was performed in a reasonable manner. See David Hackett, 25 DOE ¶ 80,107 at 80,514 (1995). However, as we stated previously, during discussions with Mr. Hackett and with the Oak Ridge Office, it became evident that additional responsive documents might be located in Mr. Stephens' files. We therefore remanded the matter to the Manager so that a search of those files could be performed, and so that Mr. Hackett's claim that Rufus Smith maintained a file concerning Mr. Hackett could be investigated. Id. at 80,514 n.4.

Subsequent to our remand, an additional search was performed. Specifically, Mr. Stephens' files were searched for documents responsive to Mr. Hackett's November 6 and November 23, 1994 requests, and such documents were provided to him. In addition, we have been informed by the Oak Ridge Office that Mr. Smith has been contacted on numerous occasions concerning the matter of EEO files relating in any way to Mr. Hackett, and that he has repeatedly affirmed that he has no responsive documents in his possession. Also, the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and the Oak Ridge Associated Universities were searched.

Nevertheless, Mr. Hackett claims that a reasonable search should have produced documents generated by LMES's EEO Office concerning his complaints and a listing of LMES's subcontractors. In this regard, he argues that these documents are agency records of the Department of Energy because they were "produced as official papers in the operation of the federal facility, [and] should therefore be available under the" FOIA. November 23, 1994 FOIA Request of David Hackett. <2>

The appropriate test of whether a document is an agency record for purposes of the FOIA was set forth by the U.S. Supreme Court in United States Department of Justice vs. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-45 (1989). In that decision, the Court stated that documents are "agency records" for FOIA purposes if they (1) were created or obtained by an agency; and, (2) are under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch..., or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). In addition, where the provisions of an agreement between the DOE and a prime contractor provide that documents relating to work under the contract shall be the property of the government, such records shall be subject to disclosure under the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

LMES, which is a privately owned and operated corporation, is clearly not an "agency" as that term is defined in the FOIA. Moreover, after conducting a thorough search of its facilities, the Oak Ridge Office has informed us that it does not possess copies of documents generated by LMES' EEO Office concerning Mr. Hackett's complaints, nor does it possess copies of LMES' contracts with its subcontractors or a list of those subcontractors. Furthermore, the agreement between the DOE and LMES provides that these records, if they exist, are the property of LMES. Therefore, these documents are neither agency documents under the Tax Analysts test, nor otherwise subject to the FOIA by operation of regulation.

III. Conclusion

We have thoroughly considered each of the issues raised in Mr. Hackett's Appeal, and we conclude that the deleted portions of Document 11 were properly withheld, that the Oak Ridge Office's search for responsive documents was adequate, and that LMES' contacts with its subcontractors and any existing list of those subcontractors are not agency documents and are not subject to the FOIA. Mr. Hackett's Appeal will therefore be denied.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by David K. Hackett on February 28, 1996 is hereby denied.

Office of Hearings and Appeals

<2>Mr. Hackett also contends that LMES' contracts with its subcontractors are federal contracts pursuant to the McNamara- O'Hara Services Contract Act of 1965, 41 U.S.C. §§ 351 et seq.,and should therefore be considered agency records. Therefore, Mr. Hackett claims, a listing of such contractors would consist of "public information required to be released under the FOIA," and should therefore be released to him.

As an initial matter, the FOIA does not require an agency to create a document that did not previously exist in order to satisfy a FOIA request. See Yeager v. Drug Enforcement Administration, 678 F.2d 315, 321 (D.C. Cir. 1982). Therefore, even if agency records exist from which such a list could be compiled, the FOIA does not compel the DOE to create it.

Furthermore, the McNamara-O'Hara Services Contract Act does not support Mr. Hackett's contention that contracts entered into by LMES and its subcontractors are agency records. That Act establishes minimum standards for compensation and health and safety protection of employees performing work on service contracts entered into with the federal government. Nowhere does it state that contact documents executed by a federal contractor and a subcontractor are the property of the federal government, or that such documents are agency records within the meaning of the FOIA.

March 21, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Gilberte R. Brashear

Date of Filing: March 7, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0136

On March 7, 1996, Mrs. Gilberte R. Brashear filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on January 31, 1996, by the FOIA Officer of the Oak Ridge Operations Office (FOIA Officer) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the FOIA Officer stated that she did not find any documents responsive to the appellant's information request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) at the Oak Ridge Operations Office, but forwarded the request to the DOE Albuquerque Operations Office for an additional search and separate determination.

I. Background

In a September 10, 1995 letter, the appellant requested from the United States Army Medical Command at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, copies of any information regarding her husband, Junior R. Brashear (a.k.a. John R. Brashear), especially information regarding his dosimeter readings while stationed in Los Alamos, New Mexico in the 1940s during the Manhattan Project. The United States Army Medical Command forwarded Mrs. Brashear's request for information to the DOE Oak Ridge Operations Office on January 5, 1996. In her determination, the FOIA Officer stated that she conducted a search of the records at the Oak Ridge Operations Office using both names provided by Mrs. Brashear, but did not find any responsive documents. In her Appeal, the appellant contends that the DOE's search was inadequate. The Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to conduct a further search for documents responsive to her FOIA request.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires that agencies search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that an FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). When an agency reports that no responsive documents can be found, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

In order to determine whether an agency's search was adequate, we must examine the agency's actions using a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In considering the Appeal, we contacted Mrs. Brashear to determine if she had any evidence indicating that the Oak Ridge Operations Office might have responsive documents. Mrs. Brashear stated that she had no reason to believe that the Oak Ridge Operations Office had any responsive documents because the United States Army never stationed her husband there. See Record of March 7, 1996 Telephone Conversation between Leonard M. Tao, OHA Staff Attorney, and Mrs. Gilberte R. Brashear. In reviewing the Appeal, we also contacted the FOIA Officer at the Oak Ridge Operations Office to ascertain the extent of the search she had performed. See Record of March 18, 1996 Telephone Conversation between Leonard M. Tao, OHA Staff Attorney, and Amy Rothrock, Oak Ridge Operations Office FOIA Officer. The FOIA Officer stated that she searched: (1) the DOE Radiation Study Registry; (2) the DOE Radiation Exposure Records; (3) the DOE Personnel Security Clearance Index; (4) the DOE Radiation Accident Registry; and (5) the US Diethylenetriaminepentaacetic Acid Registry. The FOIA Officer stated that these indexes list the individuals exposed to radiation and/or involved in accidents. These indexes include people involved in the Manhattan Project, the Atomic Energy Commission, or the Energy Research and Development Administration. The FOIA Officer also stated that the DOE does not have any records from the United States Army.

Since Mr. Brashear's name did not appear in any of the indexes searched, the FOIA Officer concluded that no records exist at the Oak Ridge Operations Office pertaining to Mrs. Brashear's request. However, since the United States Army stationed Mr. Brashear in Los Alamos, New Mexico, the FOIA Officer believed there is a possibility that documents might exist at the DOE's Albuquerque Operations Office, also in New Mexico. For this reason, the FOIA Officer properly forwarded the request to the DOE Albuquerque Operations Office for a search of that facility and a separate determination. Given these facts, we have no reason to believe that any responsive documents exist at the Oak Ridge Operations Office and conclude that the FOIA Officer followed procedures reasonably calculated to uncover all material at the Oak Ridge Operations Office within the scope of the appellant's September 10, 1995 information request. Accordingly, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Gilberte R. Brashear on March 7, 1996 is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

April 11, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:A. Victorian

Date of Filing: March 13, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0142

Dr. A. Victorian filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on February 8, 1996, by the Office of Defense Programs (Defense Programs) of the Department of Energy. In that determination, Defense Programs responded in part to the request by neither confirming nor denying the existence of the records being sought in two portions of a request for information that Dr. Victorian filed on November 18, 1991, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The appropriateness of the type of response employed by Defense Programs has been addressed by the Federal courts. In this Decision we review the nature of the response and reach a determination that the response was proper.

I. Background

In his request, Dr. Victorian sought a number of documents, which he identified as "items." In its February 8, 1996 response, Defense Programs stated, "With respect to items 1 and 2 of your request, we can neither confirm nor deny the existence of the records you requested."

In his Appeal, Dr. Victorian contends that the projects that comprise the subject matter of items 1 and 2 exist. He bases this premise on information bearing the names of the projects that, according to Dr. Victorian, the Department of Energy had previously released to him. He then goes on to argue that, given the existence of the projects that are the subjects of items 1 and 2 of his request, information about those projects should be released to him.

II. Analysis

Although the Department rarely responds to requests for information in this manner, Defense Programs' statement that it will neither confirm nor deny the existence of records is not without precedent. This type of response is commonly called a Glomar response, which refers to the first instance in which the adequacy of such a response was upheld by a Federal court. In Phillippi v. CIA, the agency responded to a request for documents pertaining to a submarine-retrieval ship named the Hughes Glomar Explorer by neither confirming nor denying the existence of any such documents. Phillippi v. CIA, 546 F.2d 1009 (D.C. Cir. 1976). Agencies have typically used this response where the existence or non-existence of requested documents is itself a classified fact exempt from disclosure under Exemptions 1 and 3 of the Freedom of Information Act, see, e.g., id. at 1012, or where admission that documents exist would indicate that the agency was involved in a certain issue, Gardels v. CIA, 689 F.2d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 1982), or that an individual is the target of investigation or surveillance, Marrera v. Department of Justice, 622 F. Supp. 51 (D.D.C. 1985).

We have reviewed the circumstances surrounding Dr. Victorian's request for items 1 and 2. We have spoken with representatives of the Office of Declassification who were directly involved in formulating the response. On the basis of that review and those conversations, we have acquired a thorough understanding of the rationale for providing Dr. Victorian with a Glomar response to portions of his request. We are furthermore convinced that, under the circumstances, such a response is the necessary and appropriate determination of Dr. Victorian's request.

In his Appeal, Dr. Victorian raises various arguments in support of the declassification and release of responsive documents that he maintains must exist. By affirming Defense Programs' Glomar response, we need not address these arguments, since we are not acknowledging the existence of any such documents.

Accordingly, Dr. Victorian's Appeal will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by A. Victorian on March 13, 1996, Case No. VFA-0142, is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C.

Date of Filing: March 14, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0143

On March 14, 1996, Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C. (Petrucelly) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to the firm in response to a request for documents submitted by Petrucelly under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The determination was issued on February 8, 1996, by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (DOE/OR). DOE/OR informed Petrucelly that no documents responsive to its request exist. This Appeal, if granted, would require that we order DOE/OR to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On December 22, 1995, Petrucelly filed a request for information pursuant to the FOIA with DOE/OR. In its request, Petrucelly sought:

The names and last known addresses of any and all persons involved in the calcium and/or iron scientific experiments performed on students at the Fernald State School, Waltham, Massachusetts, in the 1940's and 1950's. This request includes, but is not limited to, information on all Department employees involved in the approval or procurement of radioactive isotopes used in the experiments. This request also includes, but is not limited to: S. Allan Lough and Paul Abersold.

Letter from Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C. to FOIA Officer, DOE/OR (December 22, 1995) (Request Letter).

DOE/OR performed a search of its offices, but did not forward the request to Headquarters (DOE/HQ) or any other DOE location. DOE/OR handled the matter itself because the Request Letter was very similar (although expanded in scope) to a request that Petrucelly filed with DOE/HQ earlier in the year. See Letter from Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C. to DOE/HQ (March 15, 1995) (March Request). The March Request was forwarded to DOE/OR and the DOE's Office of Human Radiation Experiments<1>, and some responsive documents were released.

Upon receipt of the Request Letter, DOE/OR searched its offices and informed Petrucelly that it was unable to locate the names and addresses of any persons associated with the experiments performed at Fernald State School. See Letter from FOIA Officer, DOE/OR, to Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C. (February 8, 1996) (Determination Letter). The Determination Letter went on to say that information from the OHRE database on the Internet suggests that Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) files can be found either at the DOE Archives in Washington, D.C., or at the National Archives. Id. DOE/OR released to Petrucelly journal articles about the experiment, AEC correspondence involving isotope distribution, and a set of records released in response to the previous request. Id. On March 14, 1996, Petrucelly filed an Appeal of DOE's response, alleging that the DOE/OR search was inadequate. This Appeal requests that OHA direct DOE to conduct another search of its files. See Request Letter at 2.

II. Analysis

We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W. R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In conversations with DOE/OR, this office learned that the request remained at Oak Ridge and was never transmitted to any other DOE office for review. However, DOE/OR had contacted OHRE for the name of a person in Massachusetts who is allegedly researching this particular experiment.<2> DOE/OR intends to work with this person to determine where the records from Fernald State School were sent, and then either provide that name to Petrucelly or obtain the records for DOE and release the responsive information to the requester, subject to any applicable exemptions. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between FOIA Officer, DOE/OR and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 20, 1996). DOE/OR also referred us to DOE/HR's Records Management Team for information on archive searches. That organization then referred us to OHRE for any human radiation experiment records. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Records Management Team Leader, DOE/HR, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (March 27, 1996).

III. Conclusion

In view of the available information, OHRE is the likely repository of the names and addresses of anyone involved with the Fernald State School experiments. The office was created not only to accumulate all DOE information relevant to the human radiation experiments, but also to provide the public with access to this data. It is not surprising that DOE/OR could not find any responsive material since its search was confined to Oak Ridge. This request should be reviewed by the FOIA/Privacy Act Division of DOE/HQ, which should then transmit the request to relevant DOE offices (e.g., OHRE and Records Management). If there is a possibility that responsive material is in the DOE Archives (as stated in the Determination Letter), then the Archives should be searched and the requester advised of the results of that search. Accordingly, the Appeal filed by Petrucelly & Nadler should be granted.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C. on March 14, 1996, Case No. VFA-0143, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2).

(2) This matter is hereby forwarded to the FOIA/Privacy Act Division for processing in accordance with the instructions provided in this Decision.

situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0144, 25 DOE ¶ 80,196

May 23, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Industrial Constructors Corporation

Date of Filing: April 2, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0144

On April 2, 1996, the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) received an Appeal filed by Industrial Constructors Corporation (ICC) from a determination issued to it by the Department of Energy's (DOE's) Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE-AL). That determination was issued in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require DOE-AL to release portions of documents which were provided to ICC in redacted form.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On September 12, 1995, ICC submitted a FOIA request for documents pertaining to Request for Proposal (RFP) 1348, Monticello Remedial Action Project, Operable Unit-1, Millsite Remediation (RFP 1348). In its March 15, 1996 determination, DOE-AL released several responsive documents pertaining to the company which was awarded the contract, OHM Remediation Services Corporation (OHM), but concluded that portions of these documents were exempt from mandatory disclosure pursuant to Exemption 4 of the FOIA. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). The portions withheld were categorized by DOE-AL as (1) technical and management strategies or methodologies, (2) conflict of interest statements (including a standstill and non-competition agreement), (3) cost and financial information and (4) names and resumes of key personnel. DOE-AL found that these four categories of information were vital to OHM's competitive position and revealed how OHM conducts its business. According to DOE-AL, a release of documents containing these types of information would place OHM at a competitive disadvantage in pursuing subsequent contracts. See Letter from David L. Geary, Director, Office of Public Affairs, to William T. Murphy, Esq. (March 15, 1996).

In performing a de novo review of the withheld information, we note that DOE-AL also withheld evaluations of proposals submitted by several companies competing for RFP 1348 (evaluation reports). This included not only the evaluations of OHM but those of ICC and one other company.

In its Appeal, ICC argues that (1) DOE-AL's application of Exemption 4 was overbroad; (2) DOE-AL took the word of OHM without substantiation that all of the requested documents were confidential and

(3) DOE-AL did not adequately state the reasons behind its failure to release responsive information, but merely stated that the information was confidential. See Appeal Letter from William T. Murphy, Esq., to Director, OHA (March 17, 1996).

II. Analysis

Exemption 4 exempts from mandatory public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to qualify under Exemption 4, a document must contain either (a) trade secrets or (b) information which is "commercial" or "financial," "obtained from a person," and "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). In National Parks, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit found that commercial or financial information submitted to the federal government involuntarily is "confidential" for purposes of Exemption 4 if disclosure of the information is likely either: (I) to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (ii) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. Id. at 770; Critical Mass Energy Project v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1579 (1993) (Critical Mass). By contrast, information that is provided to an agency voluntarily is considered "confidential" if "it is of a kind that the provider would not customarily make available to the public." Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879. In choosing between these two tests, we have held consistently that information submitted in response to a request for proposal is submitted involuntarily and therefore is "confidential" if it meets the test set out in National Parks. See Hanford Education Action League, 23 DOE ¶ 80,143 (1993).

DOE regulations further outline the criteria for determining the applicability of Exemption 4. Such criteria include whether (1) "the information has been held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains," (2) the information is "customarily [and reasonably] held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains", (3) "the information was transmitted to and received by the DOE in confidence," (4) "the information is available from public sources," (5) "the disclosure of the information is likely to impair the [g]overnment's ability to obtain similar information," and (6) "the disclosure of the information is likely to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(f)(1)-(6). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE must solicit the submitter's views regarding the impact of release of the information if the DOE is considering release. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(c). The submitter's view on the impact of the release of the information is only one factor to be evaluated and weighed in the analysis, which must involve a balancing of the objective standards set forth in 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(f). DOE-AL obtained comments from OHM in this case. OHM claims that all of the redacted information was proprietary and that its release would competitively harm OHM.

We note that both the FOIA and DOE regulations require reasonably specific justifications for the withholding of documents or portions of documents. See Deborah L. Abrahamson, 23 DOE ¶ 80,147 (1993). A specific justification is necessary to allow this Office to perform an effective review of the initial agency determination and to permit the requesting party to prepare a reasoned appeal.

The withheld materials at issue in this Appeal are clearly "commercial" within the meaning of Exemption 4 since the material was developed and submitted specifically for the purpose of acquiring a contract. See Tri-City Herald, 16 DOE ¶ 80,114 (1987) (Tri-City). In addition, the information was obtained from a "person" as required by Exemption 4, since corporate entities are deemed "persons" for purposes of Exemption 4. See John T. O'Rourke & Associates, 12 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1985) (O'Rourke). It is not clear, however, whether all of the material withheld by DOE-AL is "privileged or confidential." In the context of this case, a claim of privilege is highly unlikely; however, portions of this proposal may possibly be "confidential" as defined in National Parks.

As stated above, for information to be found to be "confidential," it must meet one of two tests: its release would either impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the submitter. National Parks, 498 F.2d at 770. It is unlikely that the government's ability in the future to obtain necessary information of the type withheld in this case would be impaired because those companies which want to compete for government contracts want to provide the government with as much information as possible to win the award for the contract. Therefore, the first alternative condition cannot be met. Consequently, the sole test for establishing confidentiality of the submitted information in this case is whether its release would substantially harm OHM's competitive position.

DOE-AL's decision to withhold the majority of the proposal documents is essentially based upon the blanket assertion by OHM that it would be placed at a competitive disadvantage in pursuing subsequent contracts if proprietary data, which reveals how OHM conducts its business, is released. We performed a de novo review of the withheld documents and now address each category of withheld information or documents separately.

1. Technical and Management Strategies Information

Within the category of technical and management strategies information, DOE-AL withheld the vast majority of two documents, the OHM Technical and Business Proposal and the OHM Best and Final Offer-Technical and Business Proposals. In the past OHA has found that this type of material can be withheld under Exemption 4 of the FOIA. However, in reviewing this type of material we have noted that the mere fact that the contents of a proposal may be useful to competitors in future competitions is not sufficient ground to withhold the material unless the material is unique. See Morgan, Lewis & Bockius, 20 DOE ¶ 80,165 (1990) (Morgan, Lewis). After reviewing these documents, we find that as a whole they do not meet the proper standard for withholding this information.

It is apparent from the record that DOE-AL made an attempt to segregate non-exempt material from the above-mentioned documents as required by the FOIA. For example, DOE-AL released title pages, the table of contents, introductions and some substantive content of the proposal. However, upon reviewing the withheld documents, we believe that DOE-AL could segregate and release more material than it did. For example, we note that although DOE-AL released a list of resources used by OHM to prepare its RFP, DOE-AL withheld the citations to various laws applicable to any work performed at the site. Moreover, DOE-AL released specific portions of the Best and Final Offer-Technical and Business Proposal while withholding the entire corresponding sections of the Technical Proposal. Further, DOE-AL withheld one specific award presented to OHM for work performed in the past but released other similar awards. Finally, with regard to the vast majority of the Technical and Business Proposals, DOE-AL has not sufficiently explained why release of the withheld portions would likely cause competitive harm to the submitter or how the material can be considered unique. See Tri-City, 16 DOE at 80,534. Any determination that a firm would suffer substantial competitive harm from disclosure must be supported by well-founded reasons. Id. An adequate explanation would, for example, indicate the type of competitive injury which would result from disclosure, e.g., revealing specific strategies used to complete work and how resources are allocated could enable a competitor to learn the strengths and weaknesses of a particular company and then underbid that competitor in future procurements. See, e.g., Stock Equipment Co., 18 DOE ¶ 80,104 (1988). We therefore should remand this category of withheld material to DOE-AL for a new determination complying with this analysis.

2. Conflict of Interest Statements

DOE-AL withheld in its entirety the Conflict of Interest Statements and the Standstill and Non-Competition Agreement submitted by OHM. Some of these documents appear to contain non-exempt segregable material. For example, portions of the information contained in these documents are publicly available in publications such as Moody's Industrial Manual. See 2 Moody's Industrial Manual, 6125, 6347, J-Z (1995). Since no attempt was made to segregate and release non-exempt material to the requester, we will remand this category of responsive documents to DOE-AL either to release these documents or to formulate a complete and reasoned determination regarding the withholding of this information. As we stated above, any determination to withhold information must be supported by well-founded reasons.

3. Cost and Financial Information

With respect to the cost and financial information contained in the withheld material, we agree with DOE-AL that release of this information would result in competitive harm to OHM. This material could be used by a competitor to undercut OHM's bids in future procurements and eliminate it from effective competition. See International Technology Corporation, 22 DOE 80,107 (1992); U.S. Rentals, 21 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1991); Omega World Travel, Inc, 18 DOE ¶ 80,134 (1989). However, DOE-AL also withheld the total price of the contract awarded to OHM. In the past OHA has found that since the total price of a contract, when requested after the contract has been awarded, does not reveal the submitter's bidding strategy, it could not be withheld under Exemption 4. See Covington & Burling, 20 DOE ¶ 80,124 (1990). Therefore we will remand this matter to DOE-AL either to release the total price of the awarded contract or to explain how release of the total price would competitively harm OHM.

Further, DOE-AL withheld from the Technical Proposal the prevailing wage rates set by the Davis-Bacon Act. 40 U.S.C. § 276a. While release of the actual wage rates that OHM pays to employees might cause competitive harm to OHM, DOE-AL has not adequately explained how release of the prevailing wage which federal law requires contractors to pay workers on federal projects would competitively harm OHM. Therefore, we will remand this portion of the financial and cost information to DOE-AL either to release the withheld information or to explain how the information contained in the withheld documents would competitively harm OHM.

4. Names and Resumes of Key Personnel

We agree with DOE-AL that release of the names, qualifications, and experience of OHM's key personnel would cause competitive harm to OHM. Release of this information would reveal to OHM's competitors the approach used by OHM to perform the work of the project. See Wayne T. Long, 22 DOE ¶ 80,154 (1992); Morgan, Lewis, 20 DOE at 80,688-91. Moreover, since the resumes of the companies' employees are written from OHM's viewpoint and contain only that information that OHM believes is relevant to the project, release of the resumes would also reveal OHM's view regarding the personnel skills necessary for a successful job. See, e.g., Electronic Data Systems Corp., 20 DOE ¶ 80,135 at 80,601 (1990); O'Rourke, 12 DOE at 80,706.

5. Evaluation Reports

DOE-AL withheld all of the evaluation reports related to RFP 1348. While some of the withheld documents contain information that falls into the categories outlined by DOE-AL (technical/management strategies, cost and financial information, or names and resumes of key personnel), the vast majority of the documents were neither categorized nor addressed by DOE-AL in its March 15 determination. We will therefore remand these documents to DOE-AL to describe the documents withheld and then, adequately explain the reason for withholding them.

The DOE regulations provide that material exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is permitted by federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1. However, in cases involving material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 4, we do not make the usual inquiry into whether release of the material would be in the public interest. Disclosure of confidential information that can be withheld pursuant to Exemption 4 would constitute a violation of the Trade Secrets Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1905, and is therefore prohibited. See, e.g., Painters District Council No. 55, 24 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1994). Accordingly, we may not consider whether the public interest warrants discretionary release of the cost and financial information and other information properly withheld under Exemption 4.

III. Conclusion

We have determined to remand in full to DOE-AL the following categories of information and documents: technical and management strategies, conflict of interest statements and evaluation reports. With regard to these categories, DOE-AL shall either release the information or documents or provide ICC with newly segregated copies of the documents along with a new determination justifying the withheld information. With respect to the cost and financial information, DOE-AL shall either release the total price of the contract and the Davis-Bacon Act prevailing wage rates or issue a new determination justifying the withholding of the information. We find that DOE-AL properly withheld under Exemption 4 the remaining cost and financial information. We also find that DOE-AL properly withheld under Exemption 4 the names and resumes of key personnel.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Industrial Constructors Corporation on April 2, 1996, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) and denied in all other respects.

(2) The matter is remanded to the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office for further consideration in accordance with the instructions contained in the foregoing decision.

Case No. VFA-0145, 25 DOE ¶ 80,189

April 29, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Stoel Rives, LLP

Date of Filing: April 2, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0145

On April 2, 1996, Stoel Rives, LLP (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a final determination issued on March 8, 1996, by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Office of Inspector General (IG). In that determination, the IG released copies of the majority of documents requested by the Appellant. However, the IG withheld one document in its entirety and deleted additional information from a number of the remaining responsive documents. This partial release occurred in response to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552(b), as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

I. BACKGROUND

The Appellant is a law firm representing Tenaska Washington Partners II, L.P. (TWP), a Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) Energy Resource Program contractor. On October 6, 1995, the Appellant submitted a request for information to the DOE seeking the following documents:

1) All documents and records reviewed or relied upon by the IG's office in preparing its Report of Audit of BPA's Energy Resource Programs, DOE/IG-0379 (the "Report").

2) All communications between any IG's office representative and any BPA Representative on the subject of the Report, including but not limited to all BPA comments on or relating to the Report.

3) Any other IG's office report commenting upon or evaluating BPA energy resource or energy acquisition programs or practices.

Appeal at 2. On March 8, 1996, the IG issued a determination in response to TWP's request releasing most of the requested records. However, the IG withheld one document in its entirety and portions of several other documents under Exemption 5. In addition, the IG deleted and withheld information under Exemptions 6 and 7(C) from several documents. On April 2, 1996, the present Appeal was filed contending that the DOE's withholding of the deleted information was improper.

II. ANALYSIS

While the FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Only Exemptions 5, 6 and 7(C) are at issue in the present case.

A. Exemption 5

The IG withheld one document in its entirety and portions of several other documents under Exemption 5 claiming that they contain "preliminary discussions of the audit that were subject to further review and change" and therefore were subject to the deliberative process privilege. Determination Letter at 1. However, after consultation with this office, the IG has agreed to conduct a further review of its withholdings under Exemption 5. We are therefore remanding this portion of the Appeal to the IG, which will issue a new determination after completing its review. Accordingly, we need not consider any of the Appellant's contentions concerning the IG's application of Exemption 5.

B. Exemptions 6 and 7

The IG has withheld the identities of audit information sources under both Exemptions 6 and 7(C). The IG has expressed a concern that release of these individual's identities might subject them to harassment, intimidation or other personal intrusions. The Appellant contends that these exemptions were improperly applied by the IG.

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982).

Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, if release of such law enforcement records or information . . . could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under either Exemption 6 or 7, an agency must undertake a three step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to either of the exemptions. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press v. Department of Justice, 109 S. Ct. 1468, 1481 (1989). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether release of the record would either: (1) constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy (the Exemption 6 standard), or (2) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy (the Exemption 7 standard). See generally Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

The threshold test for withholding information under Exemption 7(C) is whether such information is compiled as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The Appellant contends that the documents from which the identities of the sources were withheld are not law enforcement documents. That contention is without merit. The scope of Exemption 7 encompasses enforcement of both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974); Williams v. IRS, 479 F.2d 317, 318 (3d Cir. 1973), cert. denied sub nom. Donolon v. IRS, 414 U.S. 1024 (1973). By law, the IG is charged with investigating waste, fraud, and abuse in programs and operations administered or financed by the DOE. 5 U.S.C. Appendix 3 § 4. It is therefore a classic example of an organization with a clear law enforcement mandate. In the present case, where the IG investigated allegations of improprieties concerning the BPA's Energy Resource Program, its investigatory actions were clearly within this statutory mandate.

The Appellant next contends that the identities of the sources cannot be withheld under Exemption 6, claiming that the:

identity of DOE interview subjects is not the sort of "highly personal" information or "intimate details" that are protected by the exception protecting "personnel and medical and similar files" where disclosure would be an "invasion of personal privacy."

Appeal at 5. However, it is well settled that information need not be of an intimate or highly personal nature to be protected from disclosure by Exemption 6. Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 102 S. Ct. 1957 (1982) (specifically rejecting argument that phrase "similar files" is limited to files containing intimate details and highly personal information); National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Emp. v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (Horner). Rather, as the Supreme Court has held, any information which applies to a particular individual falls within the category of "Personnel and Medical and Similar Files." Id. Since an individual's identity clearly applies to a particular person, it may properly be withheld under Exemption 6 if the public interest in its disclosure is outweighed by the resulting invasion of personal privacy.

(1) Privacy Interest

The courts, recognizing the possibility of harassment or intimidation of these sources, have consistently recognized that privacy interests in the identities of individuals providing information to government investigators are greatly amplified. Safecard Services, Inc. v. S.E.C., 926 F.2d 1197 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (Safecard); KTVY-TV v. United States, 919 F.2d 1465, 1469 (10th Cir. 1990) (KTVY-TV) (finding withholding necessary to avoid harassment of individual); Cucarro v. Secretary of Labor, 770 F.2d 355, 359 (3d Cir. 1985) (Cucarro); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,556 (1991); Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,524 (1990).

(2) Public Interest in Disclosure

In Reporters Committee, the Supreme Court greatly narrowed the scope of the public interest in the context of the FOIA. Justice Stevens, writing for the Court, distinguished between the general benefits to the public which may result from the release of information, and those benefits that Congress sought to provide the public when it enacted the FOIA. He found that in FOIA contexts, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the FOIA's core purpose. Reporters Committee, 109 S. Ct. at 1481-84. The Court identified the core purpose of the FOIA as "public understanding of the operations or activities of the Government." Id. at 1483. Therefore, the Court held, only that information which contributes significantly to the public's understanding of the operations or activities of the Government is within "the ambit of the public interest which the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id. The Court therefore found that unless the public would learn something directly about the workings of government from the release of a document, its disclosure is not "affected with the public interest." Id.; see also Horner, 879 F.2d at 879.

It is well settled that disclosure of the identity of individuals that have provided information to government investigators is not affected with the public interest. See e.g., Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1205; KTVY-TV, 919 F.2d at 1469. In the absence of a compelling reason for deviating from this body of precedent we find that disclosure of the identifying information in the present case would not be "affected with the public interest."

(3) The Balancing Test

Because release of the names could reasonably be expected to subject the individuals to harassment or intimidation or other personal intrusions, we have found a significant privacy interest . After weighing the significant privacy interest present in this case against an insubstantial or non-existent public interest, we have found that release of information revealing the individuals' identities (1) would result in a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy (the standard for Exemption 6), and (2) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy (the standard for Exemption 7). Our findings are consistent with those reached by several appellate courts, that when presented with a similar set of facts, have found that the privacy interests of individuals supplying information to government investigators clearly out weigh the negligible public interest in disclosure of these individuals. See, e.g., Safecard; KTVY-TV, 919 F.2d at 1469 (finding withholding necessary to avoid harassment of individual); Cucarro, 770 F.2d at 359.

While we are strongly committed to keeping the public fully informed about the BPA's Energy Resource Programs, we are also concerned about preserving the privacy rights of individuals providing information to the IG's investigators. The agency, by releasing the responsive documents with only those redactions necessary to prevent identification of specific individuals, has provided important information that will significantly contribute to the public's understanding of the Government's operations while safeguarding individual privacy rights.

C. Vaughn Index

The Appellant requests that it be provided with a Vaughn index, i.e. an index identifying each responsive document, the exemption under which it is being withheld and an explanation of why that exemption is applicable. On previous occasions, we have stated that, although such an index may be required of the agency when it is in litigation with a FOIA requester, this degree of specificity is not required at the administrative stages of a FOIA request. See, e.g., Rockwell International, 21 DOE ¶ 80,105 at 80,527 (1991); Natural Resources Defense Council, 20 DOE ¶ 80,145 at 80,627 (1990). At the administrative levels, determinations need only include a general description of the withheld material and a statement of the reason for the withholding. Therefore, we reject the Appellant's request for a Vaughn index.

III. CONCLUSION

On the basis of the facts presented and federal case law, we have found significant privacy interests in the individuals' names. We have also determined that disclosure would not significantly increase the public's understanding of the operations and activities of the government. Accordingly, we find that this information was properly withheld under Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Since the Office of Inspector General has indicated its intention to reconsider its withholdings under Exemption 5, we are remanding that portion of the Appeal.

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Stoel Rives, LLP on April 2, 1996 (Case Number VFA-0145) is hereby remanded in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) and denied in all other aspects.

(2) Those portions of this Appeal concerning withholdings under Exemption 5 are hereby remanded to the Office of Inspector General for prompt further review. That office will then issue a new determination concerning its withholdings under Exemption 5.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Glen M. Jameson

Date of Filing: April 15, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0147

On April 15, 1996, Glen M. Jameson filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on March 5, 1996, by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, Oak Ridge partially denied Mr. Jameson's request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require Oak Ridge to release the information it withheld.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). DOE Regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On October 21, 1995, Mr. Jameson requested a "copy of invoices for pension plan costs submitted by PAI Corporation [(PAI)] to the US DOE for payment during the twelve month period ending with their most recent invoice submittal." Request Letter dated October 21, 1995 from Glen M. Jameson to Joan Ogbazghi, DOE, Headquarters (Request Letter). PAI is a DOE contractor. Mr. Jameson has alleged that its 401(k) and 401(a) Profit Sharing Pension Plan contributions are billed to the DOE. Request Letter. Mr. Jameson's request was forwarded to the Oak Ridge and the Nevada Operations Offices because portions of the information that he is seeking are located there.<1> By letter dated December 20, 1995, Oak Ridge informed Mr. Jameson that the information he was requesting was voluminous. For example, one month's invoice was several inches thick. Mr. Jameson, therefore, amended his request and sought one month's invoice, so that he could determine what portion of each invoice would be responsive to his request. In addition, Mr. Jameson requested the relevant portions of Contract No. AC08-87ER80517 that define PAI's allowable overhead charges, particularly allowable pension and profit sharing costs. Letter dated January 4, 1996, from Glen M. Jameson to Amy L. Rothrock, FOIA Officer, Oak Ridge. In response, on March 5, 1996, Oak Ridge sent Mr. Jameson a redacted copy of one invoice and the relevant portion of the PAI Contract. In its determination, Oak Ridge withheld portions of the documents pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4) (FOIA Exemption 4). Determination Letter dated March 5, 1996, from James C. Hall, Manager, Oak Ridge, to Glen M. Jameson. In response, Mr. Jameson filed this Appeal.

In his Appeal, Mr. Jameson argues that the public interest will be served in releasing the information and that the requested documents are not privileged or confidential. He contends, therefore, that OHA should grant his Appeal and release the requested documents in full. Appeal Letter dated March 28, 1996, from Glen M. Jameson to Director, OHA (Appeal Letter). Mr. Jameson supports his claim by contending that (1) PAI Corporation should not have been permitted to have any input in the response to his request; (2) the contract is not a prospective procurement; (3) DOE procurement has been greatly curtailed; therefore, PAI is winding down and does not have a competitive advantage to be protected; (4) he does not work in or with anybody in the federal contracting arena, and is no position to divulge the information to any of PAI's competitors; and (5) the information that has been withheld is not privileged or confidential.<2> Appeal Letter at 1, 3.

II. Analysis

Exemption 4 exempts from mandatory public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to qualify under Exemption 4, a document must contain either (a) trade secrets or (b) information which is (1) "commercial" or "financial," (2) "obtained from a person," and (3) "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). In National Parks, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit found that commercial or financial information submitted to the federal government under non-voluntary conditions is "confidential" for purposes of Exemption 4 if disclosure of the information is likely either: (I) to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (ii) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. Id. at 770; Critical Mass Energy Project v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1579 (1993) (Critical Mass). By contrast, information that is provided to an agency voluntarily is considered "confidential" if "it is of a kind that the provider would not customarily make available to the public." Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879. We consistently have held that information submitted in response to a request for proposal is not considered to have been submitted voluntarily and is therefore to be considered "confidential" if it meets the test set out in National Parks.

Pursuant to FOIA Exemption 4, Oak Ridge withheld portions of the monthly invoice submitted by PAI for overhead charges. In response, Mr. Jameson first argues that PAI should not have been permitted to comment on his FOIA request and what information it deemed confidential. He maintains that such a procedure is a conflict of interest. Appeal Letter at 1. In fact, the submitter's response to a relevant FOIA request is not only allowed, it is required by Executive Order. Exec. Order No. 12,600, 3 C.F.R. § 235 (1988), reprinted in 5 U.S.C. § 552 note (1994). This Executive Order recognizes that submitters of proprietary information have procedural rights. Id. at § 1. Therefore, it mandates that notice be given to submitters and a reasonable time be allowed for the submitter to object to disclosure of information. Id. at § 4. Even though DOE asks for comments from the submitter of the information, the DOE makes the final decision whether the information can be withheld under Exemption 4. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(a). Therefore, the request for PAI comment was not improper.

Secondly, Mr. Jameson argues that because the contract is not a prospective procurement, the information he is requesting should be released. It is true that more information is subject to mandatory release after a contract has been awarded. Nevertheless, the DOE still must consider the application of Exemption 4 to the information in such a contract. When looking at whether Exemption 4 applies to information that is being requested, we must consider whether the submitter of the information may be competitively disadvantaged if it is released. Oak Ridge believed that release of this information could cause competitive disadvantage. We agree. The information that was withheld includes names and labor hours for particular PAI employees and financial information consisting of hours, rates, and costs. If this financial information were released, it would allow competitors to calculate other information that is confidential and not generally made available to the public. Disclosure of the names of the employees could allow competitors to offer employment to the PAI personnel. The hours each employee or category of employee worked would allow competitors to discern PAI's management approach and the way the contract was being performed.<3>

Thirdly, Mr. Jameson argues that because DOE procurement has been greatly curtailed, PAI does not have a competitive advantage to protect. Although such an argument as this may have merit if, for example, PAI were going out of business, there is no indication that PAI will not be bidding for future DOE or other government contracts. The fact that DOE's procurement may have been curtailed<4> does not mean that PAI's competitive position is no longer important. PAI may have contracts with other government agencies or may be bidding on contracts with other government agencies.

Fourthly, Mr. Jameson argues that because he does not work in the contracting arena, he is in no position to divulge the information to any of PAI's competitors. Appeal Letter at 3. We are not persuaded by this argument. The Supreme Court has stated that a FOIA requester's basic rights to access are neither increased nor decreased by virtue of having a greater interest in the records than that of an average member of the general public. NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 143 n. 10 (1975). Therefore, if a person's greater interest in the information does not increase his basic right to access, a person's lesser interest in the information does not decrease the duty of the agency to exempt the information under Exemption 4. Further, if the information were released to Mr. Jameson, it could not be withheld from one of PAI's competitors because it would have been deemed to be released to the public.

Finally, Mr. Jameson argues that the information is not privileged or confidential because "a narrow FOIA exemption standard . . . applies to any information that a submitter ?is required to supply,' while a broader Exemption 4 standard . . . applies only to information that is submitted to an agency ?on a voluntary basis.'" Appeal Letter at 2. Mr. Jameson argues that the submission of the cost invoices and contract was a requirement, not a voluntary act on PAI's part. Id. at 2. We agree that the narrower standard applies in this case. As we stated earlier, we have consistently held that information submitted in response to a request for a proposal is not considered to have been submitted voluntarily and is therefore to be considered "confidential" if it meets the test set out in National Parks. We believe that the information Oak Ridge withheld does meet the National Parks test. It is commercial or financial information that has been obtained from a person. Further, this information can be considered confidential, because its release would cause substantial harm to the PAI's competitive position.

After reviewing the documents in question and the arguments presented by Mr. Jameson, we agree with Oak Ridge that portions of these documents should be withheld under Exemption 4. Information is confidential if it is not the type usually released to the public and, if released to the public, would cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. National Parks, 498 F.2d at 770. In order to show the likelihood of substantial competitive harm it is not necessary to show actual competitive harm; actual competition and the likelihood of substantial injury is all that is necessary. Gulf and Western Indus., Inc. v. United States, 615 F.2d 527, 530 (D.C. Cir. 1979). The withheld information would cause substantial harm to the competitive position of PAI if it were released because it shows the manner in which PAI conducts its business under the contract and would not normally be shared with competitors. Clearly, PAI could be injured if one of its competitors could learn this information. Professional Review Org. of Fla., Inc., v. HHS, 607 F. Supp. 423 (D.D.C. 1985). Therefore, the information withheld falls within Exemption 4. We conclude that Oak Ridge properly withheld the information under Exemption 4 and the Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Glen M. Jameson, on April 15, 1996, Case No. VFA-0147, is hereby denied.

Office of Hearings and Appeals

<1>The Nevada Operations Office response is not at issue in this Appeal.

<2>Mr Jameson also claims that President Clinton signed a law curtailing the section 8(a) set aside program, further curtailing PAI 's procurement prospects. The Small Business Administration's section 8(a) program is a congressionally authorized business development program for companies owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals. 15 U.S.C. § 637. A reduction of the section 8(a) program would have an impact on an Exemption 4 evaluation only if such a reduction would force PAI to close. We are unable to ascertain that PAI would be affected by the end of this program. PAI may be able to win contracts with the DOE or other government agencies without the help of the section 8(a) program. Therefore, its competitive position still needs to be protected.

<3>In his Appeal Letter and also his April 15, 1996 letter, Mr. Jameson reiterates that he is only interested in the hours worked and that he would be willing to have titles and names redacted instead of the hours and names redacted. Although it could be possible to redact the documents to reflect only the number of hours worked, the information already released to Mr. Jameson contains the job titles of employees. If additional information is released, in the form of job hours, Mr. Jameson would be able to determine the number of hours worked by individuals in each job category.

<4>Mr. Jameson has made this statement with no support. However, since the veracity of the statement is irrelevant, we will not address it.

Case No. VFA-0148, 25 DOE ¶ 80,190

May 6, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: William H. Payne

Date of Filing: April 11, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0148

On April 11, 1996, William H. Payne (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on March 21, 1996, by the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Office of Contractor Employee Protection (OCEP) denied in part a request for information which the Appellant filed on August 24, 1994 under the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1008, and under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. See Letter from GayLa D. Sessoms, Director, FOIA/Privacy Act Division, to Appellant (March 21, 1996) (Determination Letter). In his request, the Appellant sought from OCEP all documents containing his name which were generated after January 1993.<1>In response to that request, OCEP released over ninety documents to the Appellant under the FOIA, but under Exemption 6 of that Act, redacted a portion of one document, 35c, and withheld another document, 92b, entirely.<2>This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

ANALYSIS

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post). Furthermore, the term "similar files" has been interpreted broadly by the Supreme Court to include all information that "applies to a particular individual." Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 602. Thus, there is no doubt that the documents at issue in this case qualify as "similar files" under Exemption 6. See Jeffrey R. Leist, 25 DOE ¶ 80,159 at 80,651 (1996).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a substantial privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest or if only a de minimis privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (Ripskis). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 772-73 (1989) (Reporters Committee). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

In this case, OCEP redacted a handwritten name from Document 35c and withheld Document 92b in its entirety, including its author's name. Document 92b is a memorandum which briefly discusses the Appellant's dealings with OCEP. According to the Determination Letter, disclosure of the withheld information could subject both individuals to "unwanted communications and other personal intrusions." See Determination Letter at 2. Further, because Ms. Schneider felt that the text of Document 92b would identify its author, she withheld the text as well. Id.

1. The Privacy Interest

Before we address the Exemption 6 balancing test, we note that the text of Document 92b can only be withheld under Exemption 6 if release would be tantamount to identification of its author. After carefully examining the document, it is unclear whether the memorandum's text clearly reveals its author. Assuming, however, that the text of the withheld document could be reasonably linked with its author, the text may only be potentially withheld if its author has a significant privacy interest in the withheld information. As discussed below, we find that the author does not have this type of interest.

In order to determine whether there is a privacy interest in the withheld information, we must determine whether release of this information might reveal something personal about the people involved. See News Tribune, 25 DOE ¶ 80,180 (1996). Thus, it is only when the release of some personal information about an individual would cause a "clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy" that the information may be exempt from mandatory release under the FOIA.

There are three possible privacy interests present in this case which might be impacted by release of the withheld information. First, there is the privacy interest in the names of these individuals. However, as we held in News Tribune, there is no privacy interest in a name itself, absent some other indicia about the individual. 25 DOE at 80,700. An invasion of privacy can become recognizable when a name is linked with some other information that reveals something personal about an individual. Department of State v. Ray, 502 U.S. 164, 176 & n.12 (1991) (Ray); Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762; Professional Programs Group v. Department of Commerce, 29 F.3d 1349, 1354 (9th Cir. 1994); Multnomah County Medical Soc'y v. Scott, 825 F.2d 1410, 1415 (9th Cir. 1987). Therefore, we must examine the withheld information in the context with which it is associated; i.e. what release of the information would specifically reveal about those particular persons. See News Tribune, 25 DOE at 80,699; see also National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873, 876 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied sub nom. National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Newman, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990)(Horner).

In this case, both persons whose alleged privacy interests are at issue are linked with OCEP's mediation efforts between DOE and the Appellant. The second potential privacy interest at stake is that the author of Document 92b is linked with a discussion of the Appellant's communications with OCEP. These two potential privacy interests may be analyzed together. After carefully examining the withheld information, we conclude that neither of these interests is the type of "personal information" referred to in Rose. See 425 U.S. at 375 n.14. The aim of Exemption 6 is to guard against unnecessary disclosure of files "which would contain ?intimate details' of a ?highly personal' nature." New York Times Co. v. National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 782 F. Supp. 628, 631 (D.D.C. 1991) (citations omitted). Further, some material which is not strictly personal, but is nonetheless identifying, is protected if release could cause interference with personal privacy. See Southwest Resource Development, 24 DOE ¶ 80,164 (1995) (individuals involved in Inspector General's investigations protected under Exemptions 6 and 7(c)).

In applying these tests to the facts of the present case, we find first that the nature of the material withheld in the present case is not the type of strictly personal information usually protected by Exemption 6. See Department of Defense v. Federal Labor Relations Auth., 114 S. Ct. 1006 (1994) (home addresses); Ray (marital and familial status); Sangre de Cristo Animal Protection, Inc., 25 DOE ¶ 80,121 (1995) (Social Security numbers); A. Victorian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1995) (autopsy pictures); Foundation for Fair Contracting, 21 DOE ¶ 80,169 (1991) (names and addresses redacted from payroll records); Robert E. Caddell, 20 DOE ¶ 80,164 (1990) (some SF-171 information). Second, we are unable to find OCEP's fears of unwanted workplace intrusions to be a sufficient basis for withholding the material and names under Exemption 6. Generally, we do not consider workplace contacts concerning work-related matters to be unwarranted or substantial invasions. Further, we note that federal employees have a much smaller expectation of privacy than do private employees. See 5 C.F.R. § 293.311 (names, titles, grades, salaries and duty stations of civilian federal employees must be released); Stern v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 737 F.2d 84 92 (D.C. Cir. 1984) ("[T]he status of the individuals in this case as federal employees diminishes their privacy interests . . . because of the corresponding public interest in knowing how public employees are performing their jobs").

Moreover, we do not find the text of Document 92b to be of such an inflammatory nature that a "substantial probability" of true intrusion is created. See Horner, 879 F.2d at 878. Rather, we find the wording of this document to be trivial and innocuous. Unless there is a substantial likelihood that the work-place communications will rise to the level of actual harassment, i.e., through the use of obscenities, threats, or other seriously abusive conduct or language, we simply cannot protect federal employees from communications from the public that they serve. Thus, we are unable to find that a privacy interest exists in this case.

2. The Privacy Interest/Public Interest Balance

In this case, we have been unable to discern any privacy interest in withholding any of the material redacted by OCEP. If there is no identifiable privacy interest, then information may not be withheld under Exemption 6. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3; J/R/A Associates, 24 DOE ¶ 80,165 at 80,655 (1995); William D. Lawrence, 24 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,600 (1994); Virginia Johnson, 23 DOE ¶ 80,168 at 80,664-65 (1993). Accordingly, we will remand this matter to OCEP to either release the withheld information or issue a new determination identifying some other privacy interest that justifies the continued withholding of this information.<3>

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by William H. Payne on April 11, 1996 (Case Number VFA-0148) is granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This case is hereby remanded to the Office of Contractor Employee Protection, which shall release the information withheld pursuant to Exemption 6 described above or issue a new determination justifying any withholding of this information in accordance with the above Decision.

<1>The Appellant had asked OCEP to mediate a settlement to resolve ongoing litigation between himself and DOE. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren, OHA Staff Attorney, and Sandra Schneider, Assistant Inspector General for Contractor Employee Protection, OCEP (April 16, 1996).

<2>Although the Appellant made his request under both the Privacy Act and the FOIA, OCEP correctly responded to this request exclusively under the FOIA. The Privacy Act requires, inter alia, that each federal agency permit an individual to gain access to information pertaining to him or her which is contained in any system of records maintained by the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d). DOE regulations define a system of records as "a group of any records under DOE control from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particulars assigned to the individual." 10 C.F.R. § 1008.2(m). In this case, because the two documents at issue were not a part of the Appellant's file at OCEP, they were never in a "system of records" subject to the Privacy Act. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren and Sandra Schneider (April 16, 1996). Therefore, OCEP analyzed this request solely according to the provisions of the FOIA. See Greentree v. United States Customs Service, 674 F.2d 74 (D.C. Cir 1982); Jeffrey L. Turek, 11 DOE ¶ 80,149 at 80,678 (1983).

<3>We note that, in the event OCEP attempts to justify the withholding of these names, it should consider whether there are different privacy interests at stake with respect to each of the withheld names.

Case No. VFA-0153, 25 DOE ¶ 80,193

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: James Minter

Date of Filing: April 19, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0153

On April 19, 1996, James Minter filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on April 3, 1996, by the Director of the Office of Public Affairs (Director) of the Albuquerque Operations Office of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Director partially denied a request for information filed by Mr. Minter on February 17, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his request for information, Mr. Minter sought retirement information concerning a Mr. Frank Oakes and what, if any, retirement compensation plan Mr. Oakes received. On April 3, 1996, the Director provided Mr. Minter with copies of two standard forms (SF 52 and SF 50-B) regarding Mr. Oakes's retirement, but he redacted personal information, including a social security number, date of birth, and home address, in accordance with Exemption 6 of the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6). In his written Appeal, Mr. Minter requested that the DOE disclose to him "the records that were withheld" and that it provide him with any additional information. Since the Albuquerque Operations Office did not have any specific "records that were withheld," we contacted Mr. Minter to clarify his Appeal. See Record of May 4, 1996 Telephone Conversation between Leonard M. Tao, OHA Staff Attorney, and James Minter. In that conversation, Mr. Minter stated that he is not interested in receiving any of the information redacted pursuant to Exemption 6, including Mr. Oakes's social security number, date of birth or home address, but wants to know what type of retirement compensation, if any, Mr. Oakes received upon retirement. Specifically, Mr. Minter suggested that Mr. Oakes may have filed forms CA 1, 16 and 17 with the Transportation Safeguards Division at the Albuquerque Operations Office and that these forms may contain responsive information.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that an FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was adequate, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In his Appeal, Mr. Minter asks for any additional information to show what compensation, if any, Mr. Oakes received upon retirement. Mr. Minter did not provide any evidence showing that additional information exists, but requested that we search for responsive information in CA Forms 1, 16 and 17, if Mr. Oakes filed them. Accordingly, we contacted the Albuquerque Operations Office to ascertain the extent of the search it performed.<1> From these conversations it is clear that the Albuquerque Operations Office searched all of the areas that might reasonably contain retirement compensation information concerning Mr. Oakes. Specifically, the Albuquerque Operations Office searched its Transportation Safeguards Division, the division that employed Mr. Oakes, and its Human Resources Division, the division responsible for handling Mr. Oakes's retirement from the DOE. The Albuquerque Operations Office determined that Mr. Oakes filed CA forms, but that these forms do not disclose any information regarding his retirement compensation. However, a representative from the Albuquerque Operations Office informed us that the Transportation Safeguards Division has in its files a responsive document that originated at the Department of Labor. In accordance with 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4 (f)(1), the representative from the Albuquerque Operations Office informed us that it had already referred Mr. Minter's request for a copy of this document to the Department of Labor. Since we find that the Albuquerque Operations Office followed procedures reasonably calculated to uncover all material within the scope of the appellant's February 17, 1996 information request, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by James Minter on April 19, 1996, Case Number VFA-0153, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0154, 25 DOE ¶ 80,194

May 20, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

NAME OF PETITIONER: Chey A. Temple

DATE OF FILING: April 22, 1996

CASE NUMBER: VFA-0154

On April 22, 1996, Chey A. Temple filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on April 3, 1996, by the Privacy Act Officer of the Richland Operations Office (DOE/RL) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, DOE/RL denied in part Mr. Temple's requests for information filed on September 10, 1995, and December 15, 1995, under the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1008. This Appeal, if granted, would require the Privacy Act Officer to release certain documents which were withheld in part pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552a(k)(5).

The Privacy Act requires, in part, that each federal agency permit an individual to gain access to information pertaining to him or her which is contained in any "system of records" maintained by the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.6(a)(2). The DOE regulations also permit an individual to request that information about him or her which is contained in a DOE system of records be amended or corrected. See 10 C.F.R. § 1008.6(a)(3). A "system of records" is defined as a "group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or some identifying number, symbol or other identifying particular assigned to the individual." 5 U.S.C. § 552a(a)(5); 10 C.F.R. §1008.2(m). The Act also includes a number of general and specific exemptions which allow federal agencies to withhold certain information. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(j), (k).

I. Background

On September 10, 1995, Mr. Temple filed a Privacy Act request with DOE/RL for a copy of his Westinghouse Hanford Company (WHC) employment records. At the same time, he filed a request pursuant to the FOIA for a copy of all documents associated with disciplinary actions taken against him while employed at WHC. On December 8, 1995, the Privacy Act Officer of DOE/RL responded to Mr. Temple's request by sending him a copy of his WHC employment records. She also informed him that the FOIA search was still in progress.

On December 15, 1995, Mr. Temple filed another Privacy Act request with DOE/RL, this time for a copy of his DOE Personnel Security File. For administrative efficiency, both requests were combined. On January 24, 1996, the Director of the Office of External Affairs sent Mr. Temple a determination letter along with redacted copies of the responsive agency documents. The letter also stated that "[i]n order to protect the privacy interests of individuals listed within [Temple's] security record, names and other personal identifiers have been deleted." See Letter from Director, Office of External Affairs, DOE/RL, to Chey A. Temple (January 24, 1996) ("Determination Letter"). The Determination Letter did not, however, include a citation to the appropriate regulation containing the reason for withholding information.

On March 7, 1996, Mr. Temple filed an Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) requesting an unredacted copy of his security records, pursuant to 10 C.F.R. § 1008.11. See OHA Case No. VFA-0133. However, because the Determination Letter was deficient, Case No. VFA-0133 was dismissed. See Letter from Deputy Director, OHA, to Chey Temple (April 4, 1996). DOE/RL promptly reissued a corrected determination letter on April 3, 1996, which Mr. Temple then appealed in a letter to OHA filed on April 22, 1996. In this Appeal, Mr. Temple requests unredacted copies of his DOE Personnel Security File, stating that the records of all interviews were "heavily deleted." See Letter from Chey Temple to Director, OHA (April 22, 1996). Mr. Temple questions the veracity of "several disturbing references" in his files and alleges that the investigation is based on faulty information. Id.

II. Analysis

The purpose of the Privacy Act of 1974 is to prevent the unnecessary dissemination of erroneous personal information compiled on individuals by federal agencies. Privacy Act of 1974, Pub. L. No. 93-579, § 2, 88 Stat. 1896 (1974). To effectuate this purpose, the Privacy Act contains several provisions which grant the individual access to agency information retained on him or her in certain "systems of records" in order to determine whether the agency is disseminating misinformation. See e.g., 5 U.S.C. § 552a(c)(3), (d), (e)(4)(G), (H), (I), and (f). The Act also permits the head of an agency to promulgate rules to exempt certain systems of records within the agency from the Act's disclosure provisions. Id. § 552a(j), (k). Section 552a(k) lists specific exemptions for systems of records containing certain types of information. An exemption may be applied only if the DOE has promulgated rules applying that exemption to a system of records. The DOE has promulgated regulations applying Exemption k(5) to Personnel Security Clearance Files, the system of records involved in this proceeding. 10 C.F.R. § 1008.12 (b)(3). See Dale R. Callaghan, 20 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1990) (Callaghan).

Exemption k(5) allows an agency to promulgate rules exempting any system of records from the Privacy Act's disclosure provisions if the system of records contains:

investigatory material compiled solely for the purpose of determining suitability, eligibility, or qualifications for Federal civilian employment, military service, Federal contracts, or access to classified information, but only to the extent that the disclosure of such material would reveal the identity of a source who furnished information to the Government under an express promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence, or, [prior to September 27, 1975] under an implied promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence[.]

5 U.S.C. § 552a(k)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.12(b)(3). In creating Exemption (k)(5), Congress recognized a need to protect the sources of information to whom promises of confidentiality had been made. See Londrigan v. FBI, 670 F.2d 1164, 1172 (D.C. Cir. 1981). Accordingly, Congress created a limited exemption from the Privacy Act's disclosure provisions. However, "[t]o fall within the protection of Section 552a(k)(5), the government must demonstrate that the information was furnished under a promise that the identity of the source would be held in confidence." Nemetz v. Dept. of Treasury, 446 F. Supp. 102, 105 (N.D. Ill. 1978). See also Jeffery L. Turek, 11 DOE ¶ 80,142 (1983) (Turek).

We have determined that the documents at issue in this Appeal are contained within a system of records as defined by the Privacy Act and are therefore subject to the provisions of that Act. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(a)(4), (5). DOE/RL retrieved the documents using the name of the requester, a method of retrieval that follows the standard described in the Privacy Act. According to DOE/RL, an investigator promised confidentiality to each interviewee to enable him or her to speak freely. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Angela Ward, DOE/RL, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (May 3, 1996). Because this system of records is exempted from the access provisions by Exemption (k)(5), any properly redacted material is subject to neither disclosure nor amendment by a requesting party. Accord Callaghan; Turek.

We concur with DOE/RL's deletions of "names and other personal identifiers" from the requested material. However, our review of the unredacted documents finds that some non-identifying (and therefore releasable) information was also withheld from the requester. We refer to Attachments 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, and 7 to the Investigative Summary.<1> Also, the redacted Privacy Act request number in an internal memo dated December 12, 1995 may be releasable. DOE/RL should review this material and consider whether it can release any portion of the material without identifying the source, subject to any other applicable exemptions. Accordingly, we will remand this matter to DOE/RL.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Privacy Act Appeal filed by Chey A. Temple on April 22, 1996, OHA Case No. VFA-0154, is granted in part as set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Privacy Act Officer of the Richland Operation Office of the Department of Energy who shall release all non-identifying portions of the requested material or issue a new determination adequately justifying continued non-disclosure of this information.

Case No. VFA-0155, 25 DOE ¶ 80,204

June 18, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Larson Associated, Inc.

Date of Filing: April 30, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0155

On April 30, 1996, Robert D. Larson, President of Larson Associated, Inc., filed an Appeal from a determination issued on April 16, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Oak Ridge Operations Office (DOE/OR). The determination responded to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On August 8, 1995, Larson filed a request under the FOIA for a copy of a Community Involvement Proposal submitted to DOE/OR by Martin Marietta Corporation (Martin) in 1983 before it took over management of DOE's Oak Ridge facilities. The Community Involvement Proposal was Volume 4 of an overall proposal submitted by Martin in response to a DOE request for proposals (RFP). DOE/OR issued a determination on April 16, 1996, in which it stated that it was withholding the requested document in its entirety under FOIA Exemption 4, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). Letter from James C. Hall, Manager, DOE/OR, to Robert D. Larson, President, Larson Associates (April 16, 1996). The present Appeal was filed on April 30, 1996. In his Appeal, Larson states:

My appeal is based on several reasons. The first is that the reply from the U.S. Department of Energy is not timely. The second is that the letter from Oak Ridge is not signed by the Freedom of Information Officer. The third and most important is that the information requested is obtained from public funds spent on a federally funded contract in which the information has been provided to special interest groups and should be available for review and a determination if the benefits of economic development plans applied at Oak Ridge couldn't be applied to other government sites such as at Hanford, Richland, Washington.

Appeal at 1.

II. Analysis

A. Timeliness of Response

When an agency receives a proper FOIA request, it is required to inform the requester of its decision to grant or deny access to the requested records within ten working days. 5 U.S.C.§ 552(a)(6). However, the federal courts have held that agencies may exceed the initial time limits in certain situations. For example, the D.C. Circuit has approved the general practice of handling backlogged FOIA requests on a "first-in, first-out" basis, and it is the standard practice of DOE/OR to process FOIA requests in this manner. Open America v. Watergate Special Prosecution Force, 547 F.2d 605, 614-16 (D.C. Cir. 1976) (citing 5 U.S.C.§ 552(a)(6)(C)). Thus, while DOE/OR clearly exceeded the ten day statutory limit, we find that, under the standards set forth by the federal courts, there was no legal error in processing Larson's request.

B. Signatory of Determination Letter

Larson notes that DOE/OR's determination letter was not signed by the DOE/OR Freedom of Information Officer. The letter was signed by Steven D. Richardson for James C. Hall, the Manager of DOE/OR. Larson contends that the DOE/OR was not the proper signatory. However, the DOE FOIA regulations specifically provide that a "reply denying a request for a record . . . will be signed by the Denying Official." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7(b). The regulations explain that, "In the Field Offices, the term [Denying Official] refers to the head of a field location," i.e. in the case of DOE/OR, the Manager. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.2(b). Therefore, the proper official at DOE/OR signed the determination issued to Larson.

C. Withholding of Information Under FOIA Exemption 4

Exemption 4 exempts from mandatory public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to qualify under Exemption 4, a document must contain either (a) trade secrets or (b) information which is (1) "commercial" or "financial," (2) "obtained from a person," and (3) "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has found that commercial or financial information submitted to the federal government under non-voluntary conditions is "confidential" for purposes of Exemption 4 if disclosure of the information is likely either: (i) to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (ii) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. Id. at 770; Critical Mass Energy Project v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1579 (1993) (Critical Mass). By contrast, information that is provided to an agency voluntarily is considered "confidential" if "it is of a kind that the provider would not customarily make available to the public." Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879.

Clearly, a proposal submitted by a prospective contractor to the DOE is "commercial" within the meaning of Exemption 4 because of the bidder's commercial interest in the proposal. Public Citizen Health Research Group v. FDA, 704 F.2d 1280, 1290 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (citing Washington Post. Co. v. HHS, 690 F.2d 252, 266 (D.C. Cir. 1982)) (records are commercial so long as the submitter has a "commercial interest" in them). In addition, the information was obtained from a "person," as required by Exemption 4, since corporations are deemed "persons" for purposes of that Exemption. See Allnet Communications Servs. v. FCC, 800 F. Supp. 984, 988 (D.D.C. 1992) ("person" under Exemption 4 "refers to a wide range of entities including corporations"), aff'd, No 92-5351 (D.C. Cir. May 27, 1994); see also Ronson Management Corp., 19 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1989).

Regarding whether the document at issue is "confidential," we consistently have held that information submitted in response to a RFP is not submitted voluntarily and is therefore to be considered confidential only if it meets the test set out in National Parks. E.g., Glen M. Jameson, 25 DOE ¶ , Case No. VFA-0147

(May 13, 1996). However, Martin argues that its Community Involvement Proposal was provided to the DOE voluntarily. "[I]t was not a required part of the response to RFP #DE-RP05-84OR21400, as the submission of a fourth volume was considered ?optional.'" Attachment to Memorandum from G. Wilson Horde, Martin, to Gary Draper, Martin (March 20, 1996) at 2. Martin cites no language in the RFP to support its contention that the submission of Volume IV was "considered ?optional,'" and we find none. Indeed, the RFP specifically states that proposers were "required to describe the manner in which they would promote and assist the industrial development of the Oak Ridge community . . . ." Request for Proposal DE-RP05-84OR21400 (April 15, 1983) at 164 (emphasis added); see also id. at 70 (setting forth requirements for proposal format). Therefore, Martin has failed to show that its proposal was submitted to DOE/OR voluntarily. Accordingly, we will find this document to be "confidential" only to the extent that its disclosure is likely either to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of Martin. For the reasons set forth below, we find that DOE/OR has not set forth an adequate basis for withholding the requested document from the Appellant under FOIA Exemption 4, and we will therefore remand this matter to DOE/OR for a new determination.

Both the FOIA and the DOE regulations require reasonably specific justifications for the withholding of documents or portions of documents. Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Department of the Air Force, 566 F.2d 242 (D.C. Cir. 1977); National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Kleppe, 547 F.2d 673 (D.C. Cir. 1976); Data Technology Industries, 4 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1979). Thus, a FOIA determination that material should be withheld under Exemption 4 because its disclosure is likely to cause substantial harm must include the reasons for believing such harm will result to the competitive position of the person from whom the information is obtained. Federal Information Tools, 3 DOE ¶ 80,163 at 80,807 (1979).

In its determination letter, DOE/OR states that the information in Martin's Community Involvement Proposal is "being used today" by the company to bid on DOE and other government contracts, and that the information, if released, "would give competitors an unfair advantage on future procurements." Letter from James C. Hall, Manager, DOE/OR, to Robert D. Larson, President, Larson Associates (April 16, 1996) at 1, 2. However, no examples are given, and there is no explanation why release of the various elements of the proposal would likely cause substantial harm to the competitive position of Martin.

DOE/OR mentions that release of the proposal would reveal the "style and research used in preparation of such document which can be easily a winning point in the award of a contract." Id. at 2. But we have previously held that the "style" of a proposal is not withholdable under Exemption 4. See, e.g., Government Sales Consultants, Inc., 13 DOE ¶ 80,115 at 80,556 (1985). And while the disclosure of specific innovative research techniques may be likely to cause competitive harm to Martin, this possibility does not justify withholding the entire document, as we discuss below.

The submitter points to several specific types of information in its proposal that it argues should be withheld, among them the names of universities and colleges sharing joint programs with the corporation; license agreements, "many of which are still in existence;" and "financial commitments" of Martin which "can be extrapolated to the present day by merely adding inflation and other factors known by the public." Attachment to Memorandum from G. Wilson Horde, Martin, to Gary Draper, Martin (March 20, 1996) at 2. We agree that information regarding current licensees of Martin can be withheld, for the same reasons we have held that the names of subcontractors may be withheld under Exemption 4. See, e.g., Consultec, Inc., 24 DOE ¶ 80,140 at 80,603-04 (1994). Similarly, financial commitments of a corporation, such as cost and pricing data, may also be withheld if they are sufficiently indicative of future pricing conduct to cause competitive injury if released. See, e.g., U.S. News and World Report, 23 DOE ¶ 80,118 at 80,540 (1993). We note that the passage of time does not necessarily lessen the competitive harm that may result from the disclosure. See, e.g., Burke Energy Corp. v. Department of Energy for the United States, 583 F. Supp. 507, 514 (D. Kan. 1984) (nine-year-old data protected). In contrast, regarding the universities and colleges listed and Martin's past licensees, the corporation makes no allegation of the specific nature of the competitive harm that would result if this information were released. That harm must be specified if the information is going to be withheld.

On the other hand, damage to the public image of a corporation is not one of the harms cognizable under Exemption 4. See CNA Fin. Corp. v. Donovan, 830 F.2d 1132, 1154 (D.C. Cir. 1987)

("unfavorable publicity" insufficient for showing of competitive harm). Also, information already publicly available generally may not be withheld. Id.<1>

Thus, provided that there is an identifiable competitive harm that is likely to result from its release, and this has been adequately explained to the requester, some of the information in Martin's proposal may be withheld. However, the FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b) (1982). See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 89, 91 (1973); Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Air Force, 556 F.2d 242, 259-62 (D.C. Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 927 (1978); Casson, Calligaro & Mutryn, 10 DOE ¶ 80,137 at 80,615 (1983). Segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary where it is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material so that release of the non-exempt material would "compromise" the withheld material, or where the amount of non-exempt material is small and so interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate, Lead Indus. Ass'n v. OSHA, 610 F.2d 70, 83-86 (2d Cir. 1979), and this is the justification offered by DOE/OR for withholding the proposal in its entirety. However, in light of the findings above, there is no basis for withholding the entire document from the requester. For example, if the style of the proposal were in fact withholdable, the non-exempt portions of the proposal's substance probably might not be easily segregated and released. Because style is not withholdable, only those portions the release of which would be likely to cause competitive harm to Martin may be withheld under Exemption 4.

Accordingly, we will remand this case to DOE/OR, which should promptly issue a new determination releasing the non-exempt information to the appellant. Though we are not upholding DOE/OR's initial determination, we still believe DOE/OR is in the best position to make an initial determination as to whether the release of specific information within the proposal would impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or cause substantial harm to the competitive position of Martin. In making its determination, DOE/OR should keep in mind that conclusory allegations of harm do not suffice to protect information from disclosure under Exemption 4. Lykes Bros. S.S. Co. v. Pena, No. 92-2780, slip op. at 13 (D.D.C. Sept. 2, 1993) (Westlaw, DCT database) (submitters "required to make assertions with some level of detail as to the likelihood and the specific nature of the competitive harm they predict").

For the reasons explained above, the present Appeal will be granted as specified above. In all other respects, the Appeal shall be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Larson Associated, Inc., Case No. VFA-0155, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the DOE's Oak Ridge Operations Office, which shall promptly issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

Case No. VFA-0156, 25 DOE ¶ 80,195

May 23, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Arline Jolles Lotman

Date of Filing: April 30, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0156

On April 30, 1996, Arline Jolles Lotman filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) on April 1, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (AO). In her Appeal, Ms. Lotman asserts that AO failed to provide her with all of the responsive documents in its possession regarding a Request for Information she made on February 15, 1996.

I. Background

On February 15, 1996, Ms. Lotman contacted the Department of Energy's telephone information line to request information regarding the possible exposure to radiation of her late husband, Maurice Lotman, while he was in the U.S. Army at Los Alamos. The Department of Energy forwarded Ms. Lotman's Request to AO so that it could conduct a search for any radiation exposure records regarding Mr. Lotman. <1> In its April 1, 1996 Determination Letter, AO stated that it had conducted a search of its records at AO's Occupational Safety and Health Division (OSHD) and at the Los Alamos National Laboratory (LANL). Along with the Determination Letter, AO provided Ms. Lotman with a copy of the radiation dosimetry records it discovered at LANL.

In her Appeal, Ms. Lotman implicitly argues that AO conducted an inadequate search for records relating to her husband. Ms. Lotman, however, does not state any specific reasons why she considers the search made by AO to be inadequate.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was reasonable, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095,1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted officials at AO to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. Upon receiving Ms. Lotman's Request for Information, AO instituted searches at the only two facilities it expected would possess radiation exposure records, OSHD and LANL. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Terry Apodaca, AO, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (May 6, 1996). With regard to the search conducted at LANL, we were informed that a LANL official manually searched through the binders containing LANL's radiation exposure records using Mr. Lotman's name. Id. All of the radiation exposure records LANL discovered pertaining to Mr. Lotman were provided to Ms. Lotman. Id. With regard to OSHD, we were informed that it does not normally possess radiation exposure records of U.S. Army personnel, as it only possesses radiation exposure records for civilian federal employees. Id. Nonetheless, AO requested that a search of the radiation exposure records at OSHD be conducted. Id. OSHD officials conducted a search of their computer database of radiation exposure records and found no responsive records. Id. Given the facts presented to us, we find that AO conducted an adequate search which was reasonably calculated to discover documents responsive to Ms. Lotman's Request. Consequently, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Arline Jolles Lotman on April 30, 1996, is denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0157, 26 DOE ¶ 80,105

August 9, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:STAND of Amarillo, Inc.

Date of Filing:April 30, 1996

Case Number:VFA-0157

On April 30, 1996, STAND of Amarillo, Inc. (STAND) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on March 22, 1996 by the Albuquerque Operations Office of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part STAND's request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

BACKGROUND

On November 2, 1995, STAND, Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping, filed a FOIA request with the Albuquerque Operations Office. In its request it sought ninety-six specific items. Most of these appear to be scientific, technical, or similar documents. These ninety-six records were part of a larger group of fifty-seven boxes of material produced in a proceeding before the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC). That Commission was considering applications for hazardous waste and water quality permits at the DOE's Pantex Plant. The applications were jointly submitted by the DOE and Mason & Hanger-Silas Mason Co., Inc. (Mason & Hanger), the management and operating contractor at the Pantex Plant. STAND was permitted to review copies of these documents in its position as a party before the TNRCC protesting the issuance of the permits, but was not able to keep copies of the documents. This led to its FOIA request. The Albuquerque Operations Office responded to STAND on December 5, 1995. That Office claimed that the requested documents were not "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA because the items were part of Mason & Hanger's legal files and, by the terms of the management and operating contract, were the property of Mason & Hanger. STAND appealed that determination. In a Decision and Order dated February 12, 1996, we found that the December 5, 1995 determination was premature and remanded the matter to the Albuquerque Operations Office to complete a search of the records. STAND of Amarillo, Inc., 25 DOE ¶ 80,167 (1996).

The Albuquerque Operations Office completed its search and issued its second determination to STAND on March 22, 1996. In that letter, the Albuquerque Operations Office stated that it had contacted the appropriate DOE facility, the Amarillo Area Office, which identified five responsive documents out of the ninety-six STAND requested. These were released to STAND in their entirety. One of the documents apparently came from one of the offices under the Assistant Area Manager for Projects and Environmental Management at the Amarillo Area Office. The other four responsive items were located in the Mason & Hanger files and were documents that either originated with or were received by DOE officials. The Albuquerque Operations Office again concluded that the remaining ninety-one items were documents contained only in Mason & Hanger's legal files and by contract were not "agency records" subject to the FOIA. STAND appeals this determination.

ANALYSIS

In its request, STAND seeks documents related to two environmental permits whose issuance was being considered by the TNRCC. The Amarillo Area Office informs us that after the determination letter was issued in this case and while this Appeal was pending, the TNRCC granted both permits. In addition, the Amarillo Area Office provided us with a copy of a February 2, 1996 letter Mason & Hanger sent to STAND. That letter states, inter alia, that once the permits have been issued, both DOE and Mason & Hanger would review STAND's request "in terms of what documents would have been available under FOIA absent the contested [TNRCC] case proceeding." Letter from Chief Counsel, Mason & Hanger to President, STAND (February 2, 1996).

As a result of the new post-permit FOIA review which DOE and Mason & Hanger have agreed to perform for all of the requested records, STAND conceivably could receive all the information it desires. As a result, the circumstances surrounding this Appeal have significantly changed. The proper course of action is, therefore to remand this matter to the Albuquerque Operations Office for further action and to issue a new determination. See, e.g., Franc Pajek Co., 20 DOE ¶ 80,112 at 80,534 (1990). We believe this course furthers the best interests of all parties concerned. It gives the agency and the contractor, who are the closest to and the most familiar with the requested material, the opportunity to respond directly to the requester on those matters. Further, a remand in this situation is proper because it does not require us to make premature legal and contractual determinations. In addition, because we are remanding this matter without ruling on the merits of its arguments, this determination is without prejudice, and STAND may seek a ruling on any issue that arises directly from the new Albuquerque Operations Office determination. Finally, because this request has already been appealed twice to this Office, the Albuquerque Operations Office should act expeditiously in this matter and issue a new determination to STAND as soon as possible and in any event no later than ninety days of its receipt of this Decision and Order.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal of STAND of Amarillo, Inc., OHA Case No, VFA-0157 is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Albuquerque Operations Office for further action in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the alleged agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0159, 25 DOE ¶ 80,197

May 29, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Ball, Janik and Novack

Date of Filing: April 30, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0159

On April 30, 1996, Ball, Janik and Novack (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a final determination issued to it on April 17, 1996, by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Bonneville Power Administration (BPA). In that determination, BPA denied in part a request for information filed by the Appellant on April 2, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require BPA to release the information requested by the Appellant.

I. BACKGROUND

The BPA has begun a process of re-engineering itself to resemble more closely a private sector utility. As part of this process, BPA has engaged in an ongoing process of analyzing the markets in which it now competes, its potential customer base and its pricing strategy. The present Appeal concerns a request for a document prepared by BPA's Office of Marketing Support (OMS) as part of that effort.

On April 2, 1996, the Appellant filed a Request for Information with BPA seeking:

Copies of any analyses, memoranda, lists or other documents prepared by BPA . . . relating to, referring to, or identifying electric power consumers presently served by other suppliers which could, as a technical matter, be served by BPA without necessity for the construction of electric transmission or distribution facilities that would make such a transaction uneconomic [sic].

Appellant's April 2, 1996 Request for Information. On April 17, 1996, BPA issued a determination in which it identified several responsive documents: (1) a proprietary database obtained from the Petroleum Information Corporation (PIC); (2) a list of potential customers prepared by BPA's Office of Marketing Support (the customer list), and (3) a set of accompanying maps. BPA withheld each of these documents under Exemption 4 of the FOIA. On April 30, 1996, the Appellant filed the present Appeal contending that BPA's withholding of the customer lists and accompanying maps was improper. The Appellant does not challenge BPA's withholding of the PIC database.

II. ANALYSIS

The FOIA generally requires that federal agencies release documents to the public upon request. However, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). BPA withheld the customer lists and accompanying maps under Exemption 4, citing potential competitive harm to PIC. BPA used PIC's proprietary database to prepare some of the withheld documents. Exemption 4 permits an agency to withhold from public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). After reviewing these documents, however, we are of the opinion that while these documents might be properly withheld under Exemption 4, they are more appropriately withheld under Exemption 5.

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149; 95 S. Ct. 1504, 1515 (1975) (Sears). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall within this exemption: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). However, the Supreme Court has recognized that Exemption 5 also incorporates those "privileges which the Government enjoys under the relevant statutory and case law in the pre-trial discovery context." Renegotiation Board v. Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corp., 421 U.S. 168, 184; 95 S.Ct. 1491, 1500 (1975). Accordingly, "[t]he test under Exemption 5 is whether the documents would be ?routinely' or ?normally' disclosed upon a showing of relevance." F.T.C. v. Grolier, 462 U.S. 19, 26; 103 S. Ct. 2209, 2214 (1983) (citing Sears, 421 U.S. at 148-49; 95 S. Ct. at 1515 (1975)). Therefore, if a privilege is well recognized by statute or in the case law, it may properly be invoked under Exemption 5. See United States v. Weber Aircraft Corp., 465 U.S. 797, 799-801; 104 S. Ct. 1488, 1492-93 (1984).

Among the privileges incorporated by the courts under Exemption 5 is the "confidential commercial information privilege." See, e.g., Federal Open Market Comm. v. Merrill, 443 U.S. 340; 99 S. Ct. 2800 (1979) (Merrill) (holding that since disclosure of Domestic Policy Directives would significantly harm the Government's monetary functions or commercial interests, they could properly be withheld under Exemption 5); Government Land Bank v. General Services Administration, 671 F.2d 663 (1st Cir. 1982) (Land Bank) (withholding a government generated real estate appraisal).

"The Federal courts have long recognized a qualified evidentiary privilege for trade secrets and other confidential commercial information." Merrill, 443 U.S. at 356; 99 S. Ct. at 2810. The courts have applied this privilege in the FOIA context to prevent the Government from being placed at a competitive disadvantage and to facilitate the consummation of contracts. Id., 443 U.S. at 360; 99 S. Ct. at 2812. Exemption 5 therefore "protects the government when it enters the marketplace as an ordinary commercial buyer or seller." Land Bank, 671 F.2d at 665 (footnote omitted).

However, the protection afforded by this privilege is limited in scope and lasts only as long as necessary to protect the government's commercial interests. Id. Moreover, the application of this privilege is not automatic. Merrill, 443 U.S. at 362; 99 S. Ct. at 2813. The burden is upon the agency to show that the records it seeks to withhold under the privilege are confidential and that their disclosure might be harmful. American Standard v. Pfizer, Inc., 828 F.2d 734, 746 (Fed. Cir. 1987) (applying the privilege in the civil discovery context). In the civil discovery context, once these burdens are met, the burden shifts to the party seeking disclosure to prove that disclosure should occur by establishing a substantial need for those documents. R&D Business Systems v. Xerox Corp., 152 F.R.D. 195, 196-197 (D. Colo. 1993) (Xerox). In the FOIA context however, the individual FOIA applicant's need for information is not to be taken into account in determining whether materials are exempt under Exemption 5. See Merrill, 443 U.S. at 362-63; 99 S. Ct. at 2813, and cases cited therein. Accordingly, courts have found that documents which are immune from discovery absent a showing of substantial need are not "routinely" or "normally" available to parties in litigation and therefore are exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 5. F.T.C. v. Grolier, Inc., 462 U.S. 19, 27; 103 S. Ct. 2209, 2214 (1983).

Accordingly, if the agency has shown that it has maintained the confidentiality of the withheld records and that their release might result in harm to the government's commercial interests, the agency could properly withhold the records under Exemption 5. In the present case, there is no indication in the record that BPA has not maintained the confidentiality of the documents in question. We therefore turn to the next issue before us: whether release of the customer lists and accompanying maps would likely result in harm to BPA's commercial interests or ability to consummate contracts.

Release of the withheld information would provide BPA's competitors with otherwise unavailable insight into BPA's potential future marketing strategies. The lists and accompanying maps identify which of BPA's existing customers are vulnerable to switching to BPA's competitors and also identify a number of industrial end-users not presently served by BPA that are in close proximity to BPA's existing transmission grid. BPA developed this information for the purpose of enabling it to formulate a marketing strategy for securing its existing customer base and possibly broadening it as well. If BPA's competitors obtained this marketing research, it would provide them with valuable insights into BPA's future marketing strategy, hindering BPA's ability to compete in the manner of a private sector actor. See Xerox, 152 F.R.D. at 197 (disclosure of marketing strategy and research would cause competitive harm); In Re Adobe Systems, Inc. Securities Litigation, 141 F.R.D. 155, 162 (disclosure of documents containing marketing information would educate competitors and would adversely affect negotiating leverage with customers); Weed Associates, 24 DOE ¶ 80,159 at 80,645 (1994) (disclosure of future marketing plans would likely cause substantial harm to competitive position). If BPA's present and potential customers obtained this information, it would provide them with undue leverage in future contract negotiations for the purchase of electrical services from BPA. Accordingly, BPA has established a likelihood of significant competitive harm that would result from release of the customer lists and accompanying maps. We therefore find that they are properly withheld under Exemption 5.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Ball, Janik and Novack, Case No. VFA-0159, on April 30, 1996, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0160, 25 DOE ¶ 80,199

May 31, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Appellant: Howard T. Uhal

Case Number: VFA-0160

Date of Filing: May 6, 1996

Howard T. Uhal (Uhal) files this appeal from a determination letter issued by the Freedom of Information Officer (FOI Officer) of the Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque). The determination letter answered Uhal's request, dated July 18, 1995, for information under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. In the determination letter, the FOI Officer said that no documents responsive to Uhal's request had been found. Uhal's appeal, if granted, would require the Albuquerque Operations Office to conduct a further search for responsive documents.

Background

Uhal directed his request to two laboratories administered by Albuquerque, Sandia National Laboratories (Sandia) and Los Alamos National Laboratory (Los Alamos). He divided the request into four categories of information, each asking for documents dealing with equipment for detecting chemical and biological warfare (CBW) agents. Because the wording of Uhal's request, and the wording of the determination letter, are critical for this appeal, we will quote the relevant portions in full.

The first three categories concern various aspects of the light detection and ranging (LIDAR) system. Under the fourth category, however, Uhal asked for:

Any and all documents which pertain to the detection (or lack of detection) of CBW agents or similar substances in the Southwest Asia region during the Persian Gulf conflict by any other equipment under the purview of the Department of Energy.<1>

The FOI Officer says in the determination letter that she is responding to Uhal's "request for documents pertaining to the LIDAR system."<2> She informed Uhal that personnel at Sandia searched their files and found no responsive documents. In addition, she stated that personnel at Los Alamos searched their files and reported that LIDAR was a project of the Department of the Army. She notified Uhal that she would forward a copy of his request to the Department of the Army. She does not mention a search for documents about non-LIDAR systems.

Subsequently, the Department of Defense, on behalf of the Department of the Army, sent Uhal a letter acknowledging the receipt of his request from the FOI Officer. In this letter, Uhal's request is described as "information on a … LIDAR system …[and] the detection (or lack of detection) of … CBW agents … by this system in Southwest Asia."<3> Uhal is concerned that the letter mentions only the LIDAR system. He suggests this means that the FOI Officer forwarded only a paraphrase to the Department of the Army. He asks in his appeal that we send the full text and attachments of his original request to the Department of the Army.

Analysis

The question raised by Uhal's appeal is whether Sandia and Los Alamos searched only for documents concerning LIDAR or included other CBW detection devices in their search. Uhal contends that the scope of the search was inadequate because the determination letter mentions only the LIDAR system. Consequently, he asks in his appeal that we remand for a search to include non-LIDAR detection devices.

The FOIA generally requires federal agencies to release agency records to the public upon request. If a requester has reasonably described the information he is seeking and has complied with the DOE's FOIA regulations, 10 C.F.R. Part 1004, the Department must conduct a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). Accordingly, the Office of Hearings and Appeals will remand a case where a search was inadequate. E.g., Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,187 (1996); Dennis McQuade, 25 DOE ¶ 80,158 (1996).

To evaluate the adequacy of the search, we telephoned staff members of Albuquerque and Los Alamos. We learned that both Sandia and Los Alamos did indeed conduct a search for documents responsive to all four categories of Uhal's request.<4> Staff members at Albuquerque reported that Sandia found no documents responsive to any of the four categories of Uhal's request.

At Los Alamos, staff members also found no documents that were responsive to any of the four categories of the request. They said further that some work on the LIDAR system had been done at Los Alamos. The work was done under contract with the Department of the Army, however, and not under contract with the Department of Energy. Under these circumstances, the regulations provide that the Department of Energy is to refer the request to the originating agency, the Department of the Army. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(f)(1); see Department of Justice vs. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-45 (1989); Mid-Missouri Nuclear Weapons Freeze, 25 DOE ¶ 80,104 (1995); Physicians for Social Responsibility, 25 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1995). Albuquerque therefore forwarded a photocopy of Uhal's request to the appropriate office of the Department of the Army.

Conclusion

The determination letter issued in this case did not accurately state the scope of the search that Sandia and Los Alamos actually conducted. Although the determination letter explicitly mentioned only materials concerning the LIDAR system, Sandia and Los Alamos conducted a search for all items covered by the request, including material on non-LIDAR detection systems. We find no reason, therefore, to remand this request for a further search.

Furthermore, we find Uhal's concern about the transmission of his request to the Department of the Army to be misplaced. The FOI Officer forwarded a photocopy, and not a paraphrase, of Uhal's request to the Department of the Army. If Uhal has further questions about the scope of his request, then the appropriate action for him is to discuss the matter with the Department of the Army.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The appeal filed by Howard T. Uhal, Case No. VFA-0160, is hereby denied.

situated; or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0161, 25 DOE ¶ 80,198

May 30, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Gilberte R. Brashear

Date of Filing: May 8, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0161

On May 8, 1996, Gilberte R. Brashear filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on April 8, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (AO). That determination was issued in response to a request for information submitted by Mrs. Brashear under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In her Appeal, Mrs. Brashear asserts that AO failed to provide her with responsive documents in its possession regarding a Request for Information she made on September 10, 1995.

I. Background

On September 10, 1995, Mrs. Brashear wrote to the Health Physics Policy and Programs, Dose Assessment Section, of the Los Alamos National Laboratory (LANL) to request information regarding the possible exposure to radiation of her late husband, Junior R. (John R.) Brashear, while he was in the U.S. Army at Los Alamos, New Mexico. Mrs. Brashear specifically requested the LANL to provide her the Radiation Dosimetry data pertaining to her late husband. On January 11, 1996, the LANL provided Mrs. Brashear a copy of a two-page Dosimetry Response for her late husband. The LANL forwarded Mrs. Brashear's Request to AO so that it could conduct a search for any radiation exposure records regarding Mr. Brashear. In its April 8, 1996 Determination Letter, AO stated that it conducted a search of its records at AO's Occupational Safety and Health Division (OSHD) and that it found no responsive documents.

In her Appeal, Mrs. Brashear impliedly argues that AO conducted an inadequate search for records relating to her husband. She maintains that her late husband was not given accurate facts regarding the danger of working with and being exposed to radioactive substances. See Appeal Letter at 1. Mrs. Brashear asks that the Office of Hearings and Appeals direct AO to conduct a new search for responsive documents.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was inadequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was reasonable, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In reviewing the present Appeal, we contacted officials at AO to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. Upon receiving Mrs. Brashear's Request for Information, AO instituted a search at the only facility other than the LANL it expected would possess radiation exposure records, OSHD. With regard to the search conducted at OSHD, we were informed that it does not normally possess radiation exposure records of U.S. Army personnel, as it only possesses radiation exposure records for civilian federal employees. Nonetheless, AO requested that a search of the radiation exposure records at OSHD be conducted. OSHD officials conducted a search of their computer database of radiation exposure records and found no records concerning Mr. Brashear. Given the facts presented to us, we find that AO conducted an adequate search which was reasonably calculated to discover documents responsive to Mrs. Brashear's Request. Therefore, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Gilberte R. Brashear on May 8, 1996, is denied.

in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Decision and Order

of the Department of Energy

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Association of Public Agency Customers

Date of Filing: May 8, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0162

On May 8, 1996, the Association of Public Agency Customers (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on April 19, 1996, by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, BPA withheld information identified as responsive to the Appellant's February 27, 1996 Request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) and charged $1,151.77 for search and review. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information, and reduce the amount which the Appellant has been ordered to pay for search and review costs.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by a covered branch of the federal government, and which have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On February 27, 1996, the Appellant submitted a FOIA request to BPA seeking information regarding four separate matters. Two of these matters are at issue in this Appeal:

(2) documents created since January 1993 demonstrating BPA's ability to serve new direct service industrial customers or other end use customers;

(3) documents relating to BPA's 1995 power and energy sales agreements with Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical and Elf Atochem North America, including relevant documents relating to BPA's power purchases from Enron and the Washington Water Power Company.

Letter from Melinda J. Horgan, Attorney for the Appellant, to Gene Tollefson, Freedom of Information Act Officer, BPA, at 1-2 (February 27, 1996) (Request Letter).

In its April 19, 1996 Determination Letter, BPA released 26 pages to the Appellant, some of which were redacted, and withheld approximately 1,500 other pages, citing FOIA Exemptions 4 and 5. The documents that were withheld include legal and policy analyses and discussions, draft talking points, and negotiating principles and notes, of BPA employees. BPA charged the Appellant $1,151.77 for fees, including search and review costs. Letter from Steven G. Hickok, Authorizing Official, BPA, to Melinda J. Horgan (April 19, 1996) (Determination Letter). On May 8, 1996, the Appellant filed the present Appeal in which it contends that BPA's refusal to release withheld information was improper and that BPA's fees were excessive. Appeal Letter from Melinda J. Horgan, to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (May 8, 1996) (Appeal Letter).

II. Analysis

A. Reasonableness of Fees

The DOE regulations provide for fees to be assessed to cover the "full allowable direct costs incurred" of responding to requests for information. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9. Pursuant to the FOIA, the DOE has issued regulations "specifying the schedule of fees applicable to the processing of requests . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(i). Under this fee schedule, the DOE charges for manual searches at the salary rate(s) (i.e. basic pay plus 16 percent) of the employees making the search. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(1). In addition, "[t]he DOE will charge requesters who are seeking documents for commercial use for time spent reviewing records to determine whether they are exempt from mandatory disclosure." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(3).<1>

The Appellant makes several arguments regarding the fees assessed in this case. First, the Appellant believes that the search time spent must have been exorbitant in view of the large fee and the release of only 26 pages. In connection with that belief, the Appellant asserts that this amount of search time must have been due to BPA's lack of an organized filing system. Second, the Appellant argues that lower-paid employees should have been used to conduct the search and review. Third, the Appellant states that the DOE is not permitted to charge for legal review of the documents to determine the applicability of FOIA exemptions. Finally, the Appellant notes that, because it is currently in litigation with BPA, it requested that it not receive any responsive documents which were already in the public record, and therefore, already possessed by the Appellant. Because 16 pages of responsive documents were released which were duplicative of public record documents, the Appellant argues that BPA's charges should be reduced.

We reject these arguments. First, unless a requester qualifies for a fee waiver, the fees specified in the DOE regulations must be imposed. Although the Appellant complains that only 26 responsive documents were produced, that is not relevant to whether appropriate fees were charged. There can never be any assurance that a FOIA request will yield any releasable documents or that the requester will find the documents released to be useful. Fees are not charged because the requester may derive a benefit from the documents, but because the government expends money to process the request. See ITech, Inc., 25 DOE ¶ 80,169 at 80,678 (1996). In fact, the regulations specifically provide that fees will be assessed even if no responsive documents are located. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(6).

We contacted BPA to determine how the fees charged to the Appellant were calculated. In this case, BPA charged $682.33 for search time, based on 27 hours of search time by approximately 25 BPA employees, and charged $462.00 for 17 hours of review time by several employees. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren, OHA Staff Attorney, and Brian Altman, Attorney, BPA (May 9, 1996). We find that this amount of search and review time was reasonable in this case. The Appellant made an extremely broad request for documents which were part of complex, technical, projects staffed by many employees. Moreover, the Appellant itself defined "relating to" in 21 different ways and "document" in more than 50 ways, see Attachments 1 and 2 of Request Letter, thus widening the search. Thus, we believe that 27 hours of search time is appropriate in this case. Nor do we view 17 hours as an unreasonable amount of time to spend reviewing approximately 1,500 pages of material.

Next, we find that it was not unreasonable to have highly-paid employees conduct the search and review. In BPA's view, it was most efficient to request that the attorneys and salespeople who possessed the documents and were most familiar with the technical terminology used in those documents search their own offices. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Koren and Brian Altman (May 9, 1996). Because the documents at issue were so technologically complex, we do not fault BPA for using attorneys familiar with these matters to review the material for the applicability of FOIA exemptions. Thus, we find that personnel was reasonably allocated to find responsive material quickly and redact it correctly.

We also reject the Appellant's assertion that it may not be charged for legal review time. DOE is permitted to charge commercial use requesters for all time spent determining whether material is exempt from mandatory disclosure, except time spent reviewing this administrative appeal. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(3).

We further find that the Appellant may be charged for the search and review of the sixteen pages of documents which the Appellant already possessed. Due to the extensive, dispersed nature of the responsive material, BPA judged that it would be inefficient to have every searcher and reviewer cross-reference the 1,500 pages of responsive material against the 44-page index of documents in the public record of the litigation between BPA and the Appellant. See Records of Telephone Conversations between Brian Altman and Dawn Koren (May 9 and 20, 1996). BPA further explained that although the reviewers attempted to separate out those documents already in the public record, and did so in many cases, these sixteen documents were simply mistakenly included. We find that, in this particular case, it would have been unreasonably time-consuming (and more costly to the requester) to cross-reference the responsive documents against the public record. Therefore, we find that BPA may charge for the search and review of those sixteen pages.

Under these circumstances, and given BPA's explanation of how it calculated the fee in this case, we conclude that the fees imposed were reasonable and necessary to recoup the cost of processing the request, with the exception of one incorrect charge, the $6.14 charged for photocopying time. Although BPA is permitted to charge five cents a page for the photocopies themselves (and did so), it is not permitted to charge the salary of the photocopier operator. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(4). Thus, we will require BPA to reduce the Appellant's charges by the amount of $6.14.

B. Exemption 4

Exemption 4 exempts from mandatory public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to qualify under Exemption 4, a document must contain either (a) trade secrets or (b) information which is (1) "commercial" or "financial," (2) "obtained from a person," and (3) "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765, 766 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). In National Parks, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit found that commercial or financial information submitted to the federal government involuntarily is "confidential" for purposes of Exemption 4 if disclosure of the information is likely either: (i) to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (ii) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. Id. at 770; see also Critical Mass Energy Project v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1579 (1993) (Critical Mass). By contrast, information that is provided to an agency voluntarily is considered "confidential" if "it is of a kind that the provider would not customarily make available to the public." Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879. Because the information at issue in this case was necessary in order for the corporations at issue to negotiate contracts with BPA, this information is not considered to have been submitted voluntarily and is therefore considered "confidential" if it meets the test set out in National Parks. Cf. Nayar & Company, P.C., 23 DOE ¶ 80,185 at 80,710 (1994) (information submitted in response to request for proposal).<2>

In the present case, the information withheld by BPA under Exemption 4 consists of certain information utilized in negotiating new contracts between BPA and two of its customers, Kaiser Aluminum and Chemical Corporation (Kaiser) and Elf-Atochem North America (Atochem). These portions include the cost and amount of power to be sold, as well as the amount that the customers may refuse to purchase from BPA. This information is clearly "commercial" within the meaning of Exemption 4, and was obtained from a "person," since the definition of "person" includes corporate entities. 5 U.S.C. § 551(2). The issue to be determined therefore is whether release of the withheld information would either cause competitive harm or impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future.<3>

Unlike previous contracts between these two customers and BPA, the new contracts are "take or pay." Under these contracts, Kaiser and Atochem must receive a certain amount of energy from BPA or pay a penalty. Thus, according to Kaiser and Atochem, access to the withheld information will inform their competitors of their energy supplies and cost, which is a major component of the costs of these corporations, and thus their production plans for the next five years. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Murphy, Attorney, Atochem, and Dawn Koren (May 13, 1996).

The Appellant argues that the amount of power purchased by customers has historically been publicly available. However, we note that only past amounts of energy purchased (load data) are released to the public. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Paul Murphy and Dawn Koren (May 13, 1996). BPA has never released its customers' planned purchases of power. We have determined that it is the forward-looking nature of this data which would create an unfair competitive edge in the hands of Kaiser and Atochem's competitors, because it shows future business strategy.

The Appellant also argues that this future load data would not have the predictive powers attributed to it by Kaiser and Atochem; not only can they reduce the amount that they purchase from BPA, they have the right to purchase additional power from third parties. Thus, according to the Appellant, the mere knowledge of how much energy Kaiser and Atochem are under contract to purchase from BPA does not allow their competitors to estimate their production capacities. However, the Appellant's assumptions are incorrect. First, the contracts are meant to be the exact statements of Kaiser and Atochem's planned energy usage for the next five years. See Contract between Atochem and BPA, Sections 9a and 9b (December 6, 1995) and Contract between Kaiser and BPA, Sections 9a and 9b (November 6, 1995). These firms may only vary the amount of energy purchased by an extremely small amount without penalty; any greater variance would require Kaiser and Atochem's plants to cease to operate and that each company pay the full contract value of the energy to BPA, yet only be reimbursed for the market value of the energy, placing the companies at full market risk. See Records of Telephone Conversations between Paul Murphy, Attorney, Atochem, and Dawn Koren (May 13 and 28, 1996); each contract at Section 18(b)(4). We agree that this provision does not easily allow Kaiser or Atochem to vary its purchases from BPA. Further, even if Kaiser and Atochem could reasonably purchase less energy from BPA, statutory restrictions prevent these customers from purchasing significant amounts from local utilities. 16 U.S.C. §§ 839a(13), 839e(b)(4), 839e(f). Thus, we find that release of the withheld information would give competitors a reliable enough picture of Kaiser's and Atochem's production capacities to be able to adjust their own production accordingly, creating a competitive harm.<4> We further find that the information meets each of the requirements of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(f): the information has been held in confidence by Kaiser and Atochem; it is of the type customarily held in confidence by these types of corporations and there is a reasonable basis for doing so; it was transmitted to and received by DOE in confidence; and it is not available in public sources. We therefore find that BPA correctly withheld this information under Exemption 4.

The DOE regulations provide that material exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is permitted by federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1. However, in cases involving material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 4, we do not make the usual inquiry into whether release of the material would be in the public interest. Disclosure of confidential information that can be withheld pursuant to Exemption 4 would constitute a violation of the Trade Secrets Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1905, and is therefore prohibited. See, e.g., Chicago Power Group, 23 DOE ¶ 80,125 at 80,560 (1993). Accordingly, we may not consider whether the public interest warrants discretionary release of the information properly withheld under Exemption 4.

C. Exemption 5

Exemption 5 protects "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). Exemption 5 is generally recognized as encompassing certain distinct privileges, including the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work product privilege, and the governmental deliberative process privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. DOE, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980). In the present case, BPA relied on the deliberative process and attorney-client privileges of Exemption 5.

1. Deliberative Process

The deliberative process privilege permits the government to withhold under Exemption 5 documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government decisions and policies are formulated. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. This privilege was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making government decisions. EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939, 946 (Cl. Ct. 1958)). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of the agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151. In order for an agency to withhold information properly under the deliberative process privilege, the information in question must be (1) predecisional and (2) deliberative. Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F.2d 1136, 1143-33 (D.C. Cir. 1975). See also Benedetto Enterprises, Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1989); Darci L. Rock, 13 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1985).

In this case, BPA withheld almost all 1,500 pages under the deliberative process privilege. First, the Appellant takes issue with BPA's statement that material was withheld because it did not contain any final decision made by BPA. According to the Appellant, if the documents do not contain a final decision, they are not protected by the deliberative process privilege. This argument reflects a misunderstanding of the deliberative process privilege, because if any of the documents contained a final decision, the document would fail to be pre-decisional. A document eligible for protection under the deliberative process privilege must reflect deliberative processes of the agency, concerning and leading up to a policy-oriented decision. Therefore, BPA is correct in withholding documents which do not contain a final decision, and in contrast, releasing documents such as the Atochem "Record of Decision," (with proper Exemption 4 redactions) which reflected BPA's final decision.

The Appellant further argues that once the contracts at issue were signed in 1995, any documents containing information relating to the contracts became post-decisional. This is also incorrect. As long as the documents withheld in this case were generated before the signing of the contracts, and are also deliberative, they always remain pre-decisional and withholdable under Exemption 5. We find, upon review of representative samples of the documents, that these documents were in fact central to the deliberative processes surrounding the formulation of a policy-oriented judgment, see Ethyl Corp. v. EPA, 25 F.3d 1241, 1248 (4th Cir. 1995), whether and how to enter into the contracts at issue. Thus, the documents were properly withheld under Exemption 5.

2. Attorney-Client Privilege

The attorney-client privilege exists to protect confidential communications, including facts, (a) from a client to an attorney, if for the purpose of securing legal advice, and (b) from an attorney to a client, if the communication is based on confidential information provided by the client. Sears, 421 U.S. at 154; In Re Grand Jury Proceedings 88-9 (MIA), 899 F.2d 1039, 1042 (11th Cir. 1990) (MIA); Schefler v. United States, 702 F.2d 233, 245 (D.C. Cir. 1983); In Re Grand Jury Subpoena of Slaughter, 694 F.2d 1258, 1259-60 (11th Cir. 1982); Brinton v. Department of State, 636 F.2d 600, 603-04 (D.C. Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 905 (1981); Murphy v. Department of the Army, 613 F.2d 1151, 1154 n.8 (D.C. Cir.

1979); Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Department of the Air Force, 566 F.2d 242, 252-53 (D.C. Cir. 1977). Not all communications between attorney and client are privileged, however. Clarke v. American Commerce Nat'l Bank, 974 F.2d 127, 129 (9th Cir. 1992) (Clarke). The courts have limited the protection of the privilege to those disclosures necessary to obtain or provide legal advice. Fisher v. United States, 425 U.S. 391, 403-04 (1976). Correspondence which reveals the motive of the client in seeking legal advice, litigation strategy or the specific nature of the services provided, such as researching particular areas of law, falls within the privilege. Clarke, 974 F.2d at 129; see also Matter of Fischel, 557 F.2d 209, 211 (9th Cir. 1977). In addition, for purposes of the attorney-client privilege, documents created by in-house counsel, such as these authored by BPA attorneys, generally are treated the same as those created by outside attorneys. See Natta v. Hogan, 392 F.2d 686, 692 (10th Cir. 1968).

After reviewing representative samples of the documents at issue, we find them to contain extensive legal analysis, recommendations and advice based on BPA-supplied information. These are communications which, if released, would have a tendency to reveal confidences of the client, BPA. The Appellant makes three arguments as to why the documents are not protected by the privilege: the client has not been sufficiently identified; the communications do not involve "actual legal advice"; and some of the information consists of communications between BPA attorneys. We reject each of these arguments. First, the client whose information is at issue here is clearly BPA. Second, it is untrue that only "actual legal advice" is protected by the privilege; as long as the information meets the requirements of the privilege, any type of information, including factual matters, can be protected. See MIA, 899 F.2d at 1042 (citing United States v. Jones, 517 F.2d 666, 670 (5th Cir. 1975)). The documents at issue here concern the negotiation of BPA contracts by BPA attorneys, and accordingly contain a mixture of legal and business advice, which is precisely the kind of information the attorney-client privilege protects. Third, the Appellant is wrong in its assertion that communications between BPA attorneys are not protected by the privilege. A communication between attorneys is protected so long as the communication is based on information supplied by the client, and satisfies the other requirements for application of the privilege. Green v. IRS, 556 F. Supp. 79, 85 (N.D. Ind. 1982). Here, the confidential communications were based on BPA-supplied information. Therefore, we find that this information was properly withheld under the attorney-client privilege of Exemption 5.

3. Public Interest Analysis and Reno Memorandum

As explained earlier, under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1, material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA may be released if disclosure is determined to be in the public interest. We find that the public interest in the deliberative material in these documents is best served by non-disclosure in order to insure continued honest and open discourse of situations and options confronting DOE. See Arent, Fox, Kitner, Plotkin & Kahn, 16 DOE ¶ 80,106 at 80,511 (1987). Were DOE employees or their agents to become inhibited in their analyses, reporting, or recommendations, and thus deprive the agency of the benefit of their complete and candid thoughts, it would stifle the free exchange of ideas and opinions which is essential to the sound operation of DOE programs. Boulder Scientific Company, 19 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,578 (1989). In this case, the Appellant has not claimed any public interest in releasing this material, nor can we imagine one. Therefore, we find that the public interest does not mandate release of the material withheld under Exemption 5.

We further find that the existence of these tangible risks to the deliberative process and the attorney-client relationship satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard set forth by the Attorney General in 1993. This relatively new standard applies a presumption in favor of disclosure which, in the absence of a reasonably foreseeable harm to an interest protected by an Exemption, should result in a determination by the agency that the public interest lies with disclosure. See J. Reno, Memorandum for Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993).

D. Duty to Segregate Non-Exempt Material

The FOIA, as implemented by 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(c), requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). See The Oak Ridger, 21 DOE ¶ 80,120 at 80,564-65 (1991) (and cases cited therein); Boulder Scientific Co., 19 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,577 (1989) (and cases cited therein). The only exceptions to the command of segregation are where exempt and non-exempt material are so "inextricably intertwined" that release of the non-exempt material would compromise the exempt material, Lead Industries Assoc., Inc. v. Occupational Safety and Health Admin., 610 F.2d 70, 85 (2d Cir. 1979), or where non-exempt material is so small and interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate it. Id. In the instant case, the Appellant has asserted that BPA failed to segregate non-exempt material from documents withheld under Exemption 4. We have reviewed representative samples of the material withheld under each exemption at issue, and find that there is no reasonably segregable non-exempt material. On the basis of the foregoing discussion, we find that the portions of the Appeal pertaining to the application by BPA of Exemption 4 and Exemption 5 should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the Association of Public Agency Customers on May 8, 1996, Case Number VFA-0162, is granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This case is hereby remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration, which shall reduce its fees in this case by the amount of $6.14.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>The Appellant has not challenged the determination that it is a commercial use requester. It is a consortium of several large corporations. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Brian Altman and Dawn Koren (May 9, 1996).

<2>DOE regulations set forth four additional criteria to be considered in determining whether information is exempt from mandatory disclosure pursuant to Exemption 4: (i) whether the information has been held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains; (ii) whether the information is of a type customarily held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains and whether there is a reasonable basis therefor; (iii) whether the information was transmitted to and received by the DOE in confidence; and (iv) whether the information is available in public sources. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(f).

<3>In its Appeal, the Appellant noted that although BPA made specific arguments with respect to the information submitted by Kaiser, no such arguments were made with respect to Atochem. Brian Altman of BPA has informed us that BPA had mistakenly failed to describe Atochem's specific Exemption 4 arguments. However, he explained that these arguments were very similar to those made on behalf of Kaiser. Moreover, we have given Atochem an opportunity to present its arguments directly to us, see Record of Telephone Conference between Paul Murphy, Attorney, Atochem, and Dawn Koren (May 13, 1996); Letter from Paul Murphy to Dawn Koren (May 13, 1996), and sent a copy of the letter (which summarized arguments made in the telephone conversation) to the Appellant's attorney. We will therefore consider the validity of those arguments with respect to both customers.

<4>Because of this finding of competitive harm, there is no need to examine the "impairment prong" of the National Parks analysis.

Case No. VFA-0163, 25 DOE 80,202

June 6, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Dorothy M. Bell

Date of Filing: May 9, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0163

On May 9, 1996, the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) received an Appeal filed by Dorothy M. Bell from a determination issued to her by the Freedom of Information Officer at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Albuquerque Operations Office (hereinafter referred to as "the Officer"). The Officer's determination was issued in response to a request for information that was processed in accordance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the Officer to conduct a further search for documents responsive to the request.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

Ms. Bell's request was originally submitted to the U.S. Department of Defense (DOD). The DOD referred the request to DOE Headquarters (DOE/HQ), and DOE/HQ then transferred the matter to the Albuquerque Operations Office, having identified that Office as being most likely to possess documents responsive to Ms. Bell's request. In that request, Ms. Bell sought access to all documents concerning any occupational exposures to hazardous materials endured by her husband, John Bell, during his employment at the DOE's Pantex plant in Amarillo, Texas. Specifically, she sought access to any documents relating to an incident that occurred at Pantex on September 1, 1987, during which Mr. Bell was allegedly exposed to radioactive material.

In her determination, the Officer described the search for responsive documents that was conducted pursuant to the request. She stated that the Occupational Safety and Health Division and the Office of Chief Counsel of the Albuquerque Office were searched, and that the request was also forwarded to the Mason and Hanger-Silas Mason Co., Inc. (M&H), which operates the Pantex facility under contract with the DOE. The Officer further stated that no responsive documents were found in the Occupational Safety and Health Division, and that all relevant records in the possession of the Office of Chief Counsel and M&H had already been provided to Ms. Bell through the discovery related to a lawsuit that was filed by Ms. Bell and her husband against M&H and its insurance carrier. The Officer therefore concluded that no additional documents exist that are responsive to Ms. Bell's request.

In her Appeal, Ms. Bell does not directly address the scope of the search that was conducted. Instead, she contends that the search was inadequate because the documents provided to her have not answered all of her questions. These questions relate to the September 1, 1987 incident and the trial that followed the filing of the Bells' lawsuit against M&H.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (Truitt). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. The fact that the results of a search may not meet with the requester's expectations does not necessarily mean that the search was inadequate. Robert Hale, 25 DOE ¶ 80,101 at 80,501 (1995). Instead, in evaluating the adequacy of a search, our inquiry generally focuses on the scope of the search that was performed. See, e.g., Richard J. Levernier, 25 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1995).

In order to evaluate the scope of the search, we contacted the employee in the Albuquerque Office who coordinated the search. That employee indicated that the search was comprehensive, and that she was unaware of any locations, other than those already searched, in which responsive documents were likely to be found. She further stated that the discovery process in a civil lawsuit generally allows access to a much broader range of documents than is available under the FOIA, and that discovery in the Bells' suit was extensive. See memorandum of May 14, 1996 telephone conversation between Carolyn Becknell, Albuquerque Operations Office, and Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney. In addition, we have reviewed documents that were submitted by Ms. Bell. These documents were apparently obtained by the Bells during their lawsuit against M&H, and they relate to the September 1, 1987 incident and M&H's response to that incident. There is no mention in those documents of additional locations in which responsive documents are likely to be found. Based on the information before us, we conclude that the search for documents responsive to Ms. Bell's request was adequate. Her Appeal will therefore be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Dorothy Bell on May 9, 1996 is hereby denied.

which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are located, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Todd M. Clark

Date of Filing: May 9, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0164

On May 9, 1996, Todd M. Clark filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on April 8, 1996, by the Freedom of Information Act Contact of the Office of Environmental Management (FOIA Contact) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the FOIA Contact granted a request for information filed by Mr. Clark on January 11, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his request for information, Mr. Clark sought:

Records of any telephone calls, including appointment calendars, between Hazel O'Leary, Tom Grumbly, Willis Bixby or any other senior official of DOE and officials of ICF Kaiser or their agents including, but not limited to, James Edwards, Wilson Golden and Mike Driver.

Records of any meeting or discussion, including appointment calendars, within the last 12 months involving the Democratic National Committee and officials of DOE, particularly Hazel O'Leary or Tom Grumbly, where officials of ICF Kaiser were involved, present or participating including, but not limited to, James Edwards, Wilson Golden and Mike Driver.

Any records, minutes or notes, including appointment calendars, where DOE Headquarters officials met with ICF Kaiser officials or their agents where the Mound procurement was discussed.

Any records, minutes or notes, of any meetings or discussion between DOE Headquarters officials, specifically Hazel O'Leary and/or Tom Grumbly, and Tom Schneider of Restructuring Associates, concerning Mound.

Any consulting contracts between DOE and Tom Schneider of Restructuring Associates.

On April 8, 1996, the FOIA Contact provided Mr. Clark with copies of responsive documents. The FOIA Contact's determination letter referred to Mr. Clark's request as dealing with "correspondence documents between various named individuals cited in the request." In his written Appeal, Mr. Clark contends that the search should have been broader than the description the FOIA Contact used in his determination letter. Mr. Clark requests that we direct the FOIA Contact to conduct a further search concerning each item in his initial request as quoted above. Furthermore, the FOIA Contact had previously informed Mr. Clark that his request had been forwarded to the Office of the Executive Secretariat for a response regarding the portions of his inquiry dealing with Hazel O'Leary, the Secretary of Energy. Since he has not yet received a response from the Office of the Executive Secretariat, Mr. Clark requests that we direct that Office to respond formally to his request. ??

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that an FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was adequate, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In considering this Appeal, we conferred with the FOIA Contact to ascertain the extent of the search he performed. The FOIA Contact informed us that in conducting his search he sent photocopies of Mr. Clark's January 11, 1996 request letter to all of the parties who might have responsive information. He stated that these parties therefore did not rely on his subsequent characterization of Mr. Clark's request, but relied on Mr. Clark's actual request letter in conducting their searches.<1> Accordingly, the search for documents was not in any way based on the FOIA Contact's imprecise characterization of Mr. Clark's request and his search could not have been any broader than the way in which he conducted it. Since we find that the FOIA Contact followed procedures reasonably calculated to uncover all material within the scope of Mr. Clark's May 9, 1996 information request, we must deny this Appeal.

As for Mr. Clark's remaining request that we order the Office of the Executive Secretariat to respond formally to his request, the OHA lacks jurisdiction to order the relief requested. Specifically, the DOE regulations state that the Office of Hearings and Appeals has jurisdiction to consider FOIA Appeals when "the Authorizing Officer has denied a request for records in whole or in part or has responded that there are no documents responsive to the request . . . or when the Freedom of Information Office has denied a request for waiver of fees." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.8(a), 53 Fed. Reg. 14660 (May 3, 1988). Since the Office of the Executive Secretariat has not issued an appealable determination regarding Mr. Clark's request, the OHA has no jurisdiction to consider this portion of his appeal. However, the FOIA Contact has contacted the Office of the Executive Secretariat and reminded the Office of the need to respond promptly to Mr. Clark's request.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Todd M. Clark on May 9, 1996, Case Number VFA-0164, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). The requester may seek judicial review in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0166, 25 DOE ¶ 80,210

June 28, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Supplemental Order

Name of Petitioner: Keith E. Loomis

Date of Filing: May 16, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0166

Keith E. Loomis filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on October 17, 1995, by the Office of Naval Reactors of the Department of Energy. In that determination, Naval Reactors denied in part a request for information that Mr. Loomis initially filed on April 10, 1995, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. After assisting Mr. Loomis with subsequent modifications to his request, Naval Reactors ultimately responded by releasing some documents responsive to portions of his modified request, withholding some material under the exceptions to mandatory disclosure permitted under the FOIA, and stating that other documents requested either were not found or were known not to exist. This Supplemental Order addresses one aspect of his Appeal that was inadvertently omitted from consideration in a Decision and Order concerning information that was withheld for national security reasons in the October 17 determination. Keith E. Loomis, 25 DOE ¶ 80,183 (1996).

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his Appeal, Mr. Loomis contended that the DOE's search for responsive documents was inadequate and that its failure to disclose the material it withheld under Exemptions 1, 3, and 6 of the FOIA was improper. In order to handle this case as efficiently as possible, the Office of Hearings and Appeals bifurcated this Appeal, separating those issues on which it could rule without additional Departmental support from those issues requiring such support. As a result, this Office issued a final Decision and Order regarding the adequacy of Naval Reactors' search and its invocation of the FOIA's Exemption 6 on December 21, 1995 (Case No. VFA-0102). Keith E. Loomis, 25 DOE ¶ 80,155 (1995). The remaining issues, which concern Naval Reactors' withholding of certain information pursuant to Exemptions 1 and 3 of the FOIA, were addressed in a later Decision and Order issued on March 25, 1996 (Case No. VFA-0104). Keith E. Loomis, 25 DOE ¶ 80,183 (1996).

It has been brought to our attention that the two Decisions and Orders, when taken together, fail to address one aspect of Mr. Loomis's appeal. One of the documents that Naval Reactors provided, in redacted ("desensitized") form, to Mr. Loomis in response to his request was a Schenectady Naval Reactors investigative report on Mr. Loomis's allegations. Naval Reactors determined that the portions of the document it withheld from disclosure contained "information related to reactor vessel design, evaluation, and analyses" that it identified as Naval Nuclear Propulsion Information (NNPI) and withheld under Exemption 3 of the FOIA. On appeal, Mr. Loomis contended that some of the withheld information in that report are titles of documents, identification numbers and dates, and that such information could not be properly withheld from disclosure. This Decision will address this sole remaining unresolved aspect of Mr. Loomis's appeal.

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). The controlling statutory provision in this case is 10 U.S.C. § 130, which permits the Secretary of Defense to withhold from public disclosure "any technical data with military or space application in the possession of, or under the control of, the Department of Defense, if such data may not be exported lawfully outside the United States without an approval, authorization, or license" granted under specified statutes. 10 U.S.C. § 130(a). The term "technical data with military or space application" is defined as "any blueprints, drawings, . . . or other technical information that can be used, or be adapted for use, to design, engineer, produce, manufacture, operate, repair, overhaul, or reproduce any military or space equipment or technology concerning such equipment." 10 U.S.C. § 130(c).

The "technical data" statute has been found to satisfy subpart (B) of the Exemption 3 criteria because it refers to sufficiently "particular types of matter to be withheld." Chenkin v. Department of the Army, No. 93-494, slip op. at 7 (M.D. Pa. Jan. 14, 1994), affirmed, 61 F.3d 894 (3d Cir. 1995); Colonial Trading Corp. V. Department of the Navy, 735 F. Supp. 429, 431 (D.D.C. 1990). It therefore qualifies as a statute upon which a claim of withholding under Exemption 3 may be based. The federal regulations treat NNPI as technical data with military application of the sort envisioned in 10 C.F.R. § 130. See, e.g., 15 C.F.R. §§ 778.1, 778.5. Consequently, information accurately identified as NNPI is exempt from mandatory disclosure to the public under Exemption 3 of the FOIA.

Consistent with Executive Order 12344, 3 C.F.R. 128 (1982), reprinted in 42 U.S.C. § 7158 (1995), and statutorily prescribed by the Department of Defense Authorization Act, P.L. 98-525, 98 Stat. 2492 (1984), the Director of the Office of Naval Reactors (Director of NR) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving classified Naval Reactors information and NNPI. Upon referral of this Appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of NR reviewed the material that Mr. Loomis contended in his Appeal to have been improperly withheld from the investigative report. The Director's review revealed that the contents of the withheld material does not include document titles and identification numbers and dates, as Mr. Loomis has contended. Instead, the withheld portions of the documents contain information regarding specific naval propulsion plant components and other technical information concerning naval reactors.

As a result of that review, the Director of NR concluded that the redacted information should continue to be withheld from Mr. Loomis. Although not classified, this information is defined by the Navy as NNPI, the uncontrolled dissemination of which to foreign nationals is prohibited by 10 U.S.C. § 130 and the regulations cited above. The Director of NR maintains that because Naval Reactors would be unable to control the further dissemination of the NNPI contained in the requested document if it were released to the requester or any other member of the public, disclosure of this information would be tantamount to disclosure to foreign nationals. Such disclosure is therefore prohibited by the "technical data" statute and accordingly is exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 3 of the FOIA.

Based on the review performed by the Director of the Office of Naval Reactors, we have determined that 10 C.F.R. § 130 requires the continued withholding of the redacted portions of the investigative report. Although a finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information nevertheless, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemption 3, the non-disclosure is required by statute. Accordingly, Mr. Loomis's Appeal will be denied.<1>

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The portion of Keith E. Loomis's November 21, 1995 Appeal that concerns the withheld portions of a responsive document described as a Schenectady Naval Reactors investigative report on Mr. Loomis's allegations, Case No. VFA-0166, is hereby denied.

Case No. VFA-0167, 25 DOE ¶ 80,203

June 17, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Government Accountability Project

Date of Filing: May 17, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0167

On May 17, 1996, the Government Accountability Project (GAP) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (AO) on April 8, 1996. In that determination, AO denied a request for a waiver of fees in connection with a FOIA request filed by GAP under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, GAP asks that we reverse AO's determination and grant it a fee waiver.

I. Background

In a submission dated January 16, 1996, GAP filed a Request for Information under the Freedom of Information Act requesting from AO "any and all reports made by Dr. Jay Feierman for the U.S. Department of Energy prepared since May 1, 1994 to the present." In its FOIA Request, GAP also requested a fee waiver for the costs associated with processing its FOIA Request. In support of this request, it claimed that it was a non-profit, public interest organization which seeks to serve the public through achieving governmental accountability by assisting governmental and private employees who observe and report threats to public health and safety and other abuses by government entities ("whistleblowers"). GAP also asserted that the requested information would contribute significantly to the public's understanding of the operations of government by highlighting potential abusive practices such as the subjecting of whistleblowers to security clearance psychiatric evaluations for the purposes of reprisal.

In its April 8, 1996 determination letter (Determination Letter), AO denied GAP's fee waiver request. AO concluded that the documents responsive to GAP's information request, psychiatric evaluations of government and government contractor employees prepared by Dr. Feierman, would not contribute significantly to the public's understanding of the operations or activities of the government. In support of its conclusion, AO noted that the fact that DOE uses contractor psychiatrists such as Dr. Feierman is already public knowledge and that the individual medical analysis contained in each evaluation contains no information which illuminates the government's activities or operations. AO further stated in its Determination Letter that the individual psychiatric evaluations would be heavily redacted due to the nature of the personal information contained in the reports and the requirements of the Privacy Act. Thus, AO stated that the redacted reports would reveal nothing more than that a psychiatric evaluation was conducted on an individual because of a particular type of concern. The AO noted that the types of concerns which DOE has determined that merit psychiatric evaluations are listed in DOE regulations or could be determined by reviewing DOE's psychiatric evaluation request letters to Dr. Feierman. Additionally, AO noted that it had already provided to GAP, pursuant to a March 1994 FOIA request, a number of redacted psychiatric evaluations prepared by Dr. Feierman and that in light of these released documents, AO did not believe that additional information would be gleaned from the documents requested by GAP in its present request.

AO, in its Determination Letter, also concluded that GAP was not eligible for a fee waiver on the grounds that its FOIA Request was primarily in the commercial interest of an individual. Specifically, AO stated that it had information which led it to believe that GAP was seeking the documents mentioned in its FOIA Request solely for the benefit of Marlene Flor, an individual who is currently engaged in litigation against Dr. Feierman. Thus, AO concluded that the information was being requested solely for the personal and commercial purposes of Ms. Flor.

In its Appeal, GAP argues that it was wrongly denied a fee waiver by AO. Specifically, GAP states that it was previously granted a fee waiver for costs associated with its March 1994 FOIA request for similar reports created by Dr. Feierman. Thus, GAP argues that DOE has already determined that the subject matter of the requested reports would shed light on the activities and operations of the government and that it is eligible for a fee waiver. GAP also argues that the requested documents would help it determine whether DOE is using psychiatry as a tool of discrimination with regard to whistleblowers. <1> GAP asserts that the requested documents as well as the other psychiatric evaluations it has previously obtained will be incorporated as part of its on-going advocacy and reform campaign.

With regard to AO's assertion that GAP's request for documents is exclusively on behalf of Ms. Flor, GAP argues that it has an independent interest in the requested information. GAP asserts that it seeks the requested information in order to shed light on an allegedly abusive practice of using psychiatric evaluations to remove the security clearances of whistleblowers whom AO's management seeks ultimately to fire. GAP states that it does engage in pro bono legal representation of Ms. Flor with regard to her EEO complaint. However, GAP asserts that it is not representing Ms. Flor with regard to her individual suit against Dr. Feierman. GAP further argues that its involvement with Ms. Flor is not inconsistent with its intent to use the requested information to shed light on government activities. Specifically, GAP notes that it has publicized Ms. Flor's case to several major newspapers and maintains an Internet web site highlighting Ms. Flor's case. Finally, GAP argues that the fact that a requester may seek information to assist in a suit seeking compensation does not mean that such a suit is a commercial interest within the meaning of the applicable fee waiver statute. GAP draws our attention to McClelland Ecological Seepage Situation v. Carlucci, 835 F.2d 1282 (9th Cir. 1987) (MESS), as authority supporting its position.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that requesters pay fees for the processing of their requests. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(I); see also 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a). However, the Act provides:

Documents shall be furnished without any charge or at a charge reduced below the fees established under clause (ii) if disclosure of the information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government and is not primarily in the commercial interest of the requester.

5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii) (1988 ed.). The burden of satisfying this two prong test is on the requester. Larson v. Central Intelligence Agency, 843 F.2d 1481, 1483 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (per curiam) (Larson). The DOE has implemented the statutory standard for fee waiver in its FOIA regulations. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8). Those regulations set forth the following four factors which must be considered by the agency in order to determine whether the first statutory fee waiver condition has been met, i.e., whether disclosure of the requested information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of government operations or activities:

(A) The subject of the request: Whether the subject of the requested records concerns "the operations or activities of the government;"

(B) The informative value of the information to be disclosed: Whether the disclosure is "likely to contribute" to an understanding of government operations or activities;

(c) The contribution to an understanding by the general public of the subject likely to result from disclosure; and

(D) The significance of the contribution to public understanding: Whether the disclosure is likely to contribute "significantly" to public understanding of government operations or activities.

10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(I). If the DOE finds that a request satisfies these four factors, it must also consider the following two factors in order to determine whether disclosure of the information is primarily in the commercial interest of the requester:

(A) The existence and magnitude of a commercial interest: Whether the requester has a commercial interest that would be furthered by the requested disclosure; and, if so

(B) The primary interest in disclosure: Whether the magnitude of the identified commercial interest of the requester is sufficiently large, in comparison with the public interest in disclosure, that disclosure is "primarily in the commercial interest of the requester."

10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(ii).

We have performed a de novo review of the merits of GAP's request for a fee waiver and find that GAP should be granted a fee waiver for the reasons described below.

As an initial matter, we reject GAP's argument that by waiving fees in regard to GAP's March 1994 request, DOE has already determined the subject matter of the requested documents would shed light on government activities or operations and would significantly contribute to the public's understanding. DOE's letter waiving fees in regard to GAP's March 1994 request explicitly stated that the justification given by GAP for a fee waiver was not sufficient to satisfy the fee waiver criteria but that despite this failure, DOE would nevertheless grant a fee waiver to GAP. Thus, we find no evidence that DOE has previously determined that documents similar to those currently sought by GAP would shed light on government activities or would significantly contribute to the public's understanding.

Factor A

Factor A asks us to determine whether the subject of the requested documents concerns the operations or activities of the government. A fee waiver is only appropriate where the subject matter of the requested documents specifically concerns identifiable "operations or activities of the government." See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 109 S. Ct. 1468, 1481-83 (1989); U.A. Plumbers and Pipefitters Local 36, 24 DOE ¶ 80,148 at 80,621 (1994) (Local 36). The requested documents are psychiatric evaluations performed by Dr. Feierman on individuals undergoing review of their security clearances. Since these reports are expert evaluations upon which DOE directly relies in determining whether individuals should retain their security clearances, see, e.g., 10 C.F.R. § 710.9(a), we conclude that the requested information concerns a government activity and thus, the Factor A criterion is satisfied.

Factor B

Factor B requires a consideration of whether the disclosure of information is "likely to contribute" to the public's understanding of government operations and activities. See Local 36; Seehuus Associates, 23 DOE ¶ 80,180 (1994) (Seehuus). With regard to Factor B, AO has argued that the releasable portions of the requested documents would not contribute to the public's understanding of government operations. AO asserts that the redacted reports would reveal nothing more than the fact that a psychiatric evaluation was conducted on an individual because of a particular type of concern and that these concerns are contained in the DOE regulations or are available by obtaining copies of DOE letters referring individuals for psychiatric evaluations. After reviewing one of the requested documents, we disagree with AO's conclusion. Employing the same redactions made by AO in responding to the March 1994 request for psychiatric evaluations, we find that the report contains significant amounts of information relating to the specific reasons why an individual was selected for a psychiatric evaluation and the diagnostic methodology and rationale used by Dr. Feierman in his evaluations, information which is not available through publicly available sources such as the DOE regulations. Accordingly, such redacted reports could enable GAP to determine whether a suspect criterion, such as an individual's filing of a complaint with the DOE Office of Civil Rights, is used to determine whether an individual is referred for evaluation or are used in making a diagnosis of such an individual. See James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,154 (1991) (Schwab) (government treatment of an individual may be indicative of its operations generally). In addition, the fact that information may be available in other non-requested, non-publicly available agency documents, such as the DOE psychiatric request letters referred to in the Determination Letter, is irrelevant to the determination whether the requested documents would contribute to the public's understanding of government activities or operations.

AO further argues that it has already provided GAP, pursuant to its March 1994 FOIA request, Dr. Feierman's reports prepared prior to March 1994 and that providing GAP with reports prepared since May 1, 1994 would add little to the public's understanding. We must again disagree with AO. The requested documents cover a time period different from GAP's March 1994 FOIA request. Consequently, the requested documents could provide significantly different information regarding DOE psychiatric evaluations which could assist the public's understanding of government operations.

In sum, we find that the information which may possibly be obtained from the requested documents is likely to contribute to the public's understanding of government operations.

Factor C

Factor C requires us to consider whether the requested documents would contribute to the understanding of the subject by the general public. To meet this test, the requester must have the ability and intention to disseminate this information to the public. James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,133 at 80,569 (1992). In the present case, GAP has asserted that information it discovers regarding potential abuse of whistleblowers would be published in its newsletter which has a circulation of 15,000 and on its WebPage site on the Internet. Further, GAP has demonstrated an ability to obtain media coverage on whistleblower issues, and has been able to interest newspapers such as the Houston Post, the Albuquerque Journal and the Sante Fe New Mexican to write articles regarding Ms. Flor's case. Given the totality of the facts and assertions presented to us and GAP's demonstrated history of publicizing information, we find that GAP has demonstrated that it has the ability to disseminate information to the general public. See Knolls Action Project, 25 DOE ¶ 80,148 (1995) (ability to disseminate information to public demonstrated through record of involvement with published articles). We also find that GAP has also demonstrated the intention to disseminate information it obtains from the requested documents to the general public and thus improve the general public's understanding of government operations.

Factor D

In order to satisfy the requirements of Factor D the requested documents must contribute significantly to the public understanding of government operations or activities. The Department of Justice has suggested the following test for this factor:

To warrant a fee waiver or reduction of fees, the public's understanding of the subject matter in question, as compared to the level of public understanding existing prior to the disclosure, must be likely to be enhanced by the disclosure to a significant extent.

1995 Justice Department Guide to the Freedom of Information Act 381 (1995); See Local 36; Seehuus.

In the present case, GAP asserts that the requested documents will enable it to determine whether whistleblowers are inappropriately targeted for security clearance psychiatric evaluations and thus will contribute significantly to the public's understanding of government operations and activities. If the requested documents do in fact contain information indicating the inappropriate use of psychiatric evaluations or bearing on the issue of the circumstances under which such evaluations are used, we believe that the public's understanding regarding the DOE's treatment of whistleblowers and the integrity of the security clearance system would likely be enhanced to a significant extent by disclosure.

In view of our evaluation of the foregoing factors, we find that GAP has satisfied the four factors which must be weighed by the agency in order to determine whether the first statutory fee waiver condition has been met, i.e., whether disclosure of the requested documents is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to the public understanding of government operations or activities. However, we must next determine whether there is any commercial interest that would be furthered by the requested disclosure.

B. Commercial Interest

A "commercial interest" has been defined as "one that furthers a commercial, trade or profit interest as those are commonly understood." See 1995 Justice Department Guide to the Freedom of Information Act 382 (1995); Local 36.

AO asserts that GAP is in reality requesting documents in order that it may provide them to Ms. Flor free of charge. Specifically, AO claims that Ms. Flor is currently in litigation with Dr. Feierman over various tort, implied contract and Unfair Trade Practice Act causes of action regarding his psychiatric evaluation of her and seeks to use the requested documents in that litigation. In support of this claim, AO has submitted a copy of a letter from GAP authorizing Ms. Flor to receive the psychiatric evaluations requested in its March 1994 FOIA request. AO also brings our attention to the fact that Ms. Flor sent it a letter attempting to modify GAP's January 16, 1994 FOIA Request. AO also argues that the very nature of the requested documents, documents specific to only Dr. Feierman, indicates that GAP is seeking the documents for Ms. Flor and thus, should be deemed to have a commercial interest in the requested documents.

Assuming arguendo that GAP is requesting the documents for Ms. Flor in connection with her case against Dr. Feierman, Ms. Flor's suit can not be considered a "commercial interest" under the FOIA. Courts have held that where a requester seeks information to assist in a suit seeking "compensation or retribution," such a suit is not a "commercial interest" within the meaning of the Freedom of Information Act. MESS, 835 F. 2d at 1285; Government Accountability Project, 23 DOE ¶ 80,169 at 80,668 (1993). The remedies available in Ms. Flor's tort, implied contract and Unfair Trade Practice Act suit against Dr. Feierman entail seeking compensation and retribution for alleged improper conduct. As such, her suit against Dr. Feierman does not constitute a "commercial interest" within the meaning of the FOIA. Since we find there is no commercial interest, we need not consider the factor regarding the primary interest in disclosure.

Having determined that GAP has satisfied the regulatory fee waiver requirements discussed above, we find that GAP's Appeal should be granted and that GAP should be granted a fee waiver for regarding its January 16, 1996 FOIA Request. <2>

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the Government Accountability Project on May 17, 1995, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below.

(2) The fees assessed for complying with the January 16, 1996 Government Accountability Project FOIA Request shall be waived in full.

<1>In support of its Appeal, GAP has submitted a copy of an amended final agency decision issued by the DOE's Office of Civil Rights regarding several equal employment opportunity (EEO) complaints filed by Ms. Flor. In the decision, the DOE found that Ms. Flor's mental status had been inappropriately questioned on the basis of her having filed various EEO complaints, and that a psychiatric evaluation performed on Ms. Flor had been inappropriately based in part on her participation in the EEO process. See May 17, 1996 GAP FOIA Appeal Letter, Attachment 7 at 20-22.

<2>AO has also argued that it should not be required to grant a fee waiver to GAP in light of the tremendous hardship complying with the GAP FOIA request would impose on personnel and financial resources at AO. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney, and Elva Barfield, FOIA Officer, Albuquerque Operations Office (May 30, 1996). The fee waiver standards, however, do not permit consideration of these concerns with regard to whether a fee waiver should be granted to a requester.

Case No. VFA-0168, 25 DOE ¶ 80,205

June 18, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Burlin McKinney

Date of Filing: May 20, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0168

On May 20, 1996, Burlin McKinney filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on April 26, 1996, by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge). In that determination, Oak Ridge found that there were no responsive documents to a request for information filed by Mr. McKinney on March 4, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA generally requires that federal agencies release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his request for information, Mr. McKinney sought information concerning the enactment of safety measures prohibiting the ingestion of food and smoking in areas of Oak Ridge's Y-12 plant in which beryllium was handled. On April 26, 1996, Oak Ridge issued a determination in which it informed Mr. McKinney that it had not located any documents responsive to his request. However, the determination letter also stated that:

The subject of eating, drinking, and smoking in facilities handling beryllium is addressed in several Y-12 plant Standard Practice Procedures and Depleted Uranium Operations Organization (formerly Fabrication Division) Operating Procedures dating back to early 1952. We were informed by the contractor that you have copies of these procedures.

Determination Letter at 1. On May 20, 1996, Mr. McKinney filed the present Appeal contending: (1) that it is unlikely that DOE does not possess responsive documents, and (2) that he was not in fact provided with copies of the procedures referred to in the determination letter.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that federal agencies release documents to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). We review the adequacy of an agency's search under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

After conducting a search for responsive documents under the FOIA, the statute requires that the agency provide the requester with a written determination notifying the requester of the results of that search and, if applicable, of the agency's intentions to withhold any of the responsive information under one or more of the nine statutory exemptions to the FOIA. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(A)(I). The statute further requires that the agency inform the requester of its right "to appeal to the head of the agency any adverse determination." Id.

The written determination letter serves to inform the requester of the results of the agency's search for responsive documents and of any withholdings that the agency intends to make. In doing so, the determination letter allows the requester to decide whether the agency's response to its request was adequate and proper and provides this office with a record upon which to base its consideration of an administrative appeal.

It therefore follows that the agency has an obligation to ensure that its determination letters: (1) adequately describe the results of searches; (2) clearly indicate which information was withheld, and (3) specify the exemption(s) under which information was withheld. Without an adequately informative determination letter, the requester and the review authority must speculate about the adequacy and appropriateness of the agency's determinations.

In the present case, the determination letter does not provide enough information to allow us to determine the reasonableness of Oak Ridge's search. This office generally attempts to clarify ambiguous determinations through telephone consultations with the field office in question. However, our conversations with Oak Ridge did not resolve the ambiguities present in the instant case. For that reason, we have determined that this matter shall be remanded to the Oak Ridge Operations Office for further processing in accordance with the instructions given below.

Oak Ridge's determination letter appears to claim simultaneously that its search did not locate any responsive documents and that the requester had previously been provided with responsive documents. While it is entirely possible that a logical explanation exists for this apparent contradiction, that explanation is not apparent in the determination letter. Nor have we been able to clarify Oak Ridge's determination through telephone conversations. As a result both the requester and this office are left to speculate about the actual results of Oak Ridge's search. On remand, Oak Ridge should issue a new determination letter that provides a clear description of the results of Oak Ridge's search, and lists the responsive documents (if any) which it found.

Oak Ridge's letter is also confusing because it claims that the responsive documents discussed above were already provided to Mr. McKinney by "the contractor." Mr. McKinney has previously, through several prior FOIA requests, already received numerous documents from Oak Ridge or the contractor. Since Oak Ridge has failed to sufficiently specify which of these documents were those it considers to be responsive to the present request, Mr. McKinney and this office can only guess which of these documents Oak Ridge considers responsive to this request. Oak Ridge's new determination letter should specifically identify each operating procedure that it considers responsive to Mr. McKinney's request.

Finally, we note that the determination letter states that Oak Ridge was "informed by the contractor that [Mr. McKinney has] copies of these procedures." Since Mr. McKinney has denied receiving these procedures, it is important that, on remand, Oak Ridge verify that Mr. McKinney has actually received copies of all responsive documents. If on remand Oak Ridge is unable to verify that Mr. McKinney has been previously provided with any responsive documents, Oak Ridge should promptly supply him with copies of those documents.

For the reasons set forth above, we are remanding this matter to the Oak Ridge Operations Office with instructions to promptly issue a new determination letter that clearly addresses the concerns discussed above.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Burlin McKinney on May 20, 1996, Case Number VFA-0168, is hereby granted and remanded to the Oak Ridge Operations Office for further processing in accordance with the instructions set forth above.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0169, 25 DOE ¶ 80,206

June 25, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: The Cincinnati Enquirer

Date of Filing: May 22, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0169

On May 22, 1996, The Cincinnati Enquirer filed an Appeal from a determination issued on May 17, 1996 by the Ohio Field Office of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part The Cincinnati Enquirer's request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by a covered branch of the federal government, and which have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

BACKGROUND

On April 8, 1996, a member of The Cincinnati Enquirer staff filed a FOIA request with the DOE seeking documents of the DOE and the Fernald Environmental Restoration Management Company (FERMCO) regarding the latter's proposed ten-year accelerated "rebaseline" proposal. The newspaper reporter limited his request to those documents generated after December 15, 1995 because he believed that is when FERMCO submitted its first "rebaseline" proposal for DOE review. The Ohio Field Office identified responsive documents and released the information to the requester. It withheld from the documents, however, the names of DOE employees who had made comments on the "rebaseline" proposal. The DOE withheld this information under Exemption 6 of the FOIA, which permits an agency to withhold information the release of which could infringe upon personal privacy. The Cincinnati Enquirer appeals the withholding of these names.

Exemption 6 permits an agency to make a discretionary withholding of information which must otherwise be released in response to a FOIA request if the materials are "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5

U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). After ensuring that the documents meet the threshold test for types of material covered by Exemption 6, an agency must balance the public interest in disclosure with the privacy interest involved. Department of State v. Ray, 502 U.S. 164, 175 (1991); Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989); Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976); Harold H. Johnson, 21 DOE ¶ 80,148 at 80,640 (1991). We will assume, without deciding, for the purposes of our analysis that the documents here meet the threshold test of being "personnel and medical files and similar files."

We have recently found that names, by themselves, reveal nothing private about a person and therefore they are not the type of information that creates a protectable privacy interest for the purposes of Exemption 6. The News Tribune, 25 DOE ¶ 80,181 at 80,700 (1996). Rather, we noted that a privacy interest may be created when an individual's name is linked with some other piece of information "which reveals something personal about an individual." Id. at 80,699. In an Exemption 6 analysis, we must examine this linkage of information to determine the extent of any privacy interest.

In this case, release of the names would identify particular individuals as DOE employees. In addition, release of the names would link certain individuals with their opinions on the "rebaseline" proposal. Absent unusual circumstances usually directly related to the nature of the job where the possibility of harassment is inherent in the position such as Inspector General investigators, see, e.g., Fine v. Department of Energy, 823 F. Supp. 888, 909 (D.N.M. 1993), individuals do not have a privacy interest in the fact that the federal government employs them. In fact, from virtually its establishment, the United States Government has made public the names, titles, and emoluments of its employees. See, e.g., Alexander Hamilton, List of Civil Officers of the United States, 2d Cong., 2d Sess. (1793), reprinted in 20 American State Papers, Class X, 1 Miscellaneous, No. 34 at 57 (W. Lourie & W. Franklin, eds., 1834); Thomas Jefferson & Albert Gallatin, Role of the Officers, Civil, Military and Naval of the United States, 7th Cong., 1st Sess. (1802), reprinted in 20 American State Papers, Class X, 1 Miscellaneous, No. 154 at 260 (W. Lourie & W. Franklin, eds., 1834). This is a practice the Federal Government has continued to the present day by routinely releasing names, titles, grades, salaries and duty stations of civilian federal employees. 5 C.F.R. § 293.311. Under these conditions, we do not believe that, except in unusual cases, there is a privacy interest in being identified as an employee of the Federal Government. See William Payne, 25 DOE ¶ 80,190 at 80, 727 (1996) (William Payne); Center for Community Action, 20 DOE ¶ 80,120 at 80,560 (1990) (and cases cited therein); cf. Richard M. Ross, 25 DOE ¶ 80,116 at 80,549 (1995) (and cases cited therein).

Nor do we think there is any privacy interest in these government evaluators being linked with their comments. It is perfectly appropriate, when individuals are involved, to analyze under Exemption 6 whether personal privacy might be implicated. Robert S. Foote, 24 DOE ¶ 80,169 at 80,672-73 (1995). However, we do not believe there is ordinarily any privacy interest in being linked with a particular work-product done in the course of federal employment unless the work somehow reveals something personal or private about an individual, William H. Payne, 25 DOE at 80,727, or there is some other special circumstance (for example, a reasonable, articulable belief that the person could be subject to harassment, see, e.g., Robert S. Foote, 25 DOE ¶ 80,127 at 80,566 (1995)). We agree with the Ohio Field Office that there is a "significant privacy interest in avoiding the public disclosure of their names which would subject them to unwanted public inquiries." However, we believe this generally means that steps may be taken to protect federal employees from inquiries related to personal or private matters. William Payne, 25 DOE at 80,727. While this privacy interest may even extend to inquiries about official business at a time or location other than the person's official duty station, we do not believe a privacy interest usually extends to most activities undertaken in the ordinary course or time of federal employment. Id. As a general matter. it can hardly be contested that there is no discernable privacy interest in the vast majority of official actions taken by government employees and the public does have at least some level of interest in knowing which public employees perform which actions. See Lawyers Committee for Human Rights v. Immigration and Naturalization Serv., 721 F. Supp. 552, 569 (S.D.N.Y. 1989). As we noted above, if the inquiries become vexatious, it is possible that a privacy interest may arise. However, in many cases, simply declining comment or referring the matter to a more highly ranked official may ameliorate any problem. However, without a more definite explanation than provided here, we are unable to determine if any of these concerns are present in this case. We believe that it is appropriate to allow the Ohio Field Office to make this determination. Accordingly, we will remand this matter to the Ohio Field Office to either release the names or provide a more definite statement of the privacy interest involved in the names, balance this with any relevant public interest, and explain how the privacy interest identified outweighs the public interest.

EXEMPTION 5

The fact that there may be no privacy interest in these names, however, does not necessarily mean that the Ohio Field Office may not withhold the names. Because these apparently are internal government documents expressing the individual opinions and views of the authors prior to final agency action, and do not necessarily reflect an official agency position, they may be eligible for treatment under the "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege incorporated into Exemption 5 of the FOIA. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5).

Exemption 5 allows an agency to withhold material in intra- or inter-agency documents which falls within a generally accepted civil litigation discovery privilege. Environmental Protection Agency v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 86-87 (1973). One of the most common of the accepted Exemption 5 privileges is the "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. As its names imply, this Exemption 5 privilege allows the withholding of all or part of internal documents generated in the course of agency consideration of some issue and which contain "advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of a process by which government decisions and policies are formulated." National Labor Relations Bd. v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 150 (1974). In addition, in the Sixth Circuit (of which Ohio is a part), the courts look at "the effect of the material's release, with the key question being whether disclosure of materials would expose an agency's decision-making process in such a way as to discourage discussion within the agency and thereby undermine the agency's ability to perform its functions." Concrete Constr. Co. v. Department of Labor, 748 F. Supp. 562, 567 (S.D. Ohio 1990) (paraphrasing Dudman Communications Corp. v. Department of the Air Force, 815 F.2d 1565, 1568 (D.C. Cir. 1987)). This inquiry is similar to the one required by the Memorandum issued by Attorney General Janet Reno in October 1993, which mandates agencies to identify a reasonably specific, foreseeable harm to an interest protected by a FOIA exemption before withholding any information.

Under this privilege, an agency may withhold the text of the deliberative material (assuming the agency correctly identifies and applies a protectable FOIA interest). See, e.g., Schell v. Department of Health and Human Services, 843 F.2d 933, 940-42 (6th Cir. 1988); Mehta Tech, Inc., 15 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,516-17 (1986) (engineer's evaluation comments may be withheld under privilege); Dr. Ping-Wha Lin, 13 DOE ¶ 80,130 at 80,607 n. 33 (1986) (names of evaluators/recommenders may only be withheld under deliberative process privilege in clear cases of possible coercion or to vindicate policy of Exemption). This material may be withheld because persons advising or making recommendations on proposed actions "should not be limited in thought or expression to just those preliminary views which they [are] prepared to defend in the public prints." Tennessean Newspapers, Inc. v. Federal Housing Admin., 464 F.2d 657, 660 (6th Cir. 1972). See also Dr. Ping-Wha Lin, 13 DOE at 80,602 ("predecisional" privilege protects against misleading public, premature release of material, and "open, uninhibited and robust debate of various options so that the final decision-maker has the benefit of thoroughly evaluated options by eliminating the fear of disclosure of preliminary viewpoints").

In addition, when necessary to protect a policy protected by the privilege, an agency may withhold the names of government employees who authored deliberative material. Brinton v. Department of State, 636 F.2d 600, 604 (D.C. Cir. 1980), cert. denied, 452 U.S. 905 (1981); Cofield v. City of LaGrange, 913 F. Supp. 608, 616 (D.D.C. 1996); Tax Reform Research Group v. Internal Revenue Serv., 419 F. Supp. 415, 423-24 (D.D.C. 1976). However, the agency need not withhold both the name of the evaluator and the associated comments even if material otherwise falls within the scope of the privilege. The agency acts in the spirit of the FOIA when, as the Ohio Field Office did in this case, it releases much responsive material. Thus, we have long held that where an office releases internal, predecisional, deliberative material, it may withhold the names of persons making those remarks. See, e.g., Eugene S. Post, 17 DOE ¶ 80,142 at 80,603 (1988). Although this may not always be sufficient to vindicate the policies of the privilege, VECTRA Gov't Services, Inc., 25 DOE ¶ 80,160 at 80,653-54 (1996), we believe this is an excellent way to balance the FOIA goal of maximum disclosure of relevant information with the need to insure that government employees evaluating options can enjoy "mutual consultation and full debate on a decision." Accordingly, we will remand this matter to allow the Ohio Field Office to determine whether Exemption 5 covers the withheld names as part of internal, pre-decisional, deliberative documents. In addition, that Office must have a reasonably specific and articulable reason why release in this case could chill future evaluations or recommendations. Finally, as we indicated above, the Ohio Field Office may make a discretionary release of the names even if Exemption 5 is applicable.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal of The Cincinnati Enquirer, OHA Case No. VFA-0169 is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Ohio Field Office, which shall issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552 (a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0170, 27 DOE ¶ 80,115

March 3, 1998

` DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Glen Milner

Date of Filing: May 23, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0170

Glen Milner filed an appeal from a determination issued to him on April 22, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque). In that determination, Albuquerque denied in part a request for information that Mr. Milner filed on June 15, 1987, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. The information deleted from the documents released to Mr. Milner in that determination was withheld after a review of the documents had been performed by the Office of Declassification of the Department of Energy's Office of Security Affairs. This appeal, if granted, would require Albuquerque to release the information that it withheld in its April 22, 1996 determination.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On June 15, 1987, Mr. Milner submitted a request to Albuquerque under the FOIA for all information maintained by the Department of Energy pertaining to several named peace and justice organizations and specifically to James Wilson Douglass and Shelley Mae Douglass of the Ground Zero Center for Nonviolent Action.

Albuquerque located only two responsive documents, which consisted of six pages in total and concerned the shipment of W-76 warheads. Because it determined that the documents contained classified information, Albuquerque forwarded them to the DOE's Office of Declassification for review. On April 22, 1996, after the Office of Declassification completed its review, Albuquerque released to Mr. Milner a copy of each responsive document. From each document, Albuquerque withheld information it claimed to be classified on either of the following two grounds: (1) the information was determined to be Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, and is therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 3 of the FOIA, or (2) the information was defined as National Security Information in Executive Order 12958, and is therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 1 of the FOIA.

The present appeal seeks the disclosure of the withheld portions of the documents that Albuquerque provided to Mr. Milner. In his appeal, Mr. Milner states that “there will never be warhead shipments of this nature in the future.” On the basis of that assumption, he contends that release of information concerning past shipments relates to no current program, is of merely historical value, and therefore does not present a threat to national security. (1)

II. Analysis

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). We have previously determined that the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2011-2296, is a statute to which Exemption 3 is applicable. See, e.g., Barton J. Bernstein, 22 DOE ¶ 80,165 (1992); William R. Bolling, II, 20 DOE ¶ 80,134 (1990). According to the Office of Declassification, the portions that the DOE deleted from the responsive documents under Exemption 3 were withheld on the grounds that they contain information about nuclear weapons design that has been classified as Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act and is therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure.

The Director of the Office of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of SA reviewed those portions of the requested document for which the DOE had claimed an exemption from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA.

The Director of SA considered the concerns Mr. Milner specifically raised in his appeal, and performed as well a general review of the material under the current classification guidance. Based on the review that the Director of SA performed, the DOE has determined that the Atomic Energy Act requires the continued withholding of small portions of those passages of the documents previously identified as classified information. Specifically, the Director of SA has determined that the routes of weapons shipments must continue to be withheld from disclosure because information about routes used in the past could reveal routes that might be used in the future when the weapons need to be returned for modification or disassembly. In addition, he determined that the number of warheads in each shipment must continue to be withheld from disclosure because this information could reveal the amount of special nuclear material contained in specific weapons as well as production rates and stockpile numbers of specific weapons. Under current classification guidance, these categories of information concern nuclear weapons design or military utilization, which is classified as Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act. Consequently, this information is being withheld pursuant to Exemption 3 of the FOIA. (2) The remainder of the previously withheld information may now be released, as discussed below.

A finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information. Nevertheless, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemption 3, the disclosure is prohibited by statute. Therefore, those portions of the responsive documents that the Director of SA has determined to be properly classified must continue to be withheld from disclosure. However, on review the Director of SA was able to perform more precise deletions within passages that were previously excised in their entirety, and as a result we can now release much of the information that had previously been withheld. Newly redacted versions of the two responsive documents will be provided to Mr. Milner under separate cover. Accordingly, Mr. Milner’s appeal will be granted in part and denied in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The appeal that Glen Milner filed on May 23, 1996, Case No. VFA-0170, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) Newly redacted versions of the two documents that the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office determined to be responsive to Mr. Milner's June 15, 1987 request under the Freedom of Information Act, in which additional information is now released, will be provided to Mr. Milner under separate cover.

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: March 3, 1998

(1)In his appeal, Mr. Milner also questions whether the search for responsive documents was conducted for documents in existence as of the date of his request (June 15, 1987) or as of the date of Albuquerque's response (April 22, 1996). We have verified that, although the search was conducted in 1988, if it had been conducted in 1996, the results would have been the same. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Elva Barfield, FOI Officer, Albuquerque Operations Office and William Schwartz, Staff Attorney, Office of Hearings and Appeals (February 10, 1998).

(2)Although the initial determination withheld information contained in these documents under both Exemption 1 and Exemption 3 of the FOIA, the Director of SA now relies on Exemption 3 alone as justification to withhold the information.

Case No. VFA-0171, 25 DOE ¶ 80,207

June 26, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Appellant: Anibal L. Taboas

Case Number: VFA-0171

Date of Filing: May 28, 1996

Anibal L. Taboas (Taboas) files this appeal from a determination letter issued by the manager of Chicago Operations Office (the Authorizing Official). The determination letter responded to Taboas' request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. In the determination letter, the Authorizing Official released some documents and withheld all or parts of others. Taboas's appeal, if granted, would require the Chicago Operations Office to release portions of withheld documents and to undertake a search for additional documents.

Background

The FOIA generally provides that any person has a right of access to federal agency records, except to the extent that the records (or portions of them) are protected from disclosure by one of nine exemptions or three special law enforcement exclusions. In his request, Taboas asked the Chicago Operations Office for records about complaints, investigations, allegations, reports, and external correspondence that directly or indirectly involved him.<1> The resulting search found responsive documents that can be grouped into three categories: records of open Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) cases; records of closed EEO cases; and records involving what the Authorizing Official termed "workplace violence" issues.

At issue in this case are three FOIA exemptions invoked by the Authorizing Official: 5, 6, and 7(A). In addition, Taboas has questioned whether the Chicago Operations Office performed an adequate search for some documents, and whether it has properly applied the provisions of the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, to his request.

Analysis

As an initial matter, it is important to note that a FOIA requester's rights to access are neither increased nor decreased because he has a greater interest in the records than a member of the general public has. Thus, although Taboas has requested material concerning himself, his rights under the FOIA are no greater than those of any other requester. NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 143 n.10 (1975) (NLRB).<2>

Exemption 5

Exemption 5 protects "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party … in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5). The language of Exemption 5 has been construed to "exempt those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in a civil discovery context." NLRB at 149.

Courts have recognized several categories of records protected by Exemption 5. One such category consists of records subject to the "deliberative process privilege." To fall within the ambit of the deliberative process privilege, a document must be: (1) predecisional, that is, antecedent to the adoption of an agency policy; and (2) deliberative, that is, recommending or expressing an opinion on legal or policy matters. Mapother v. Department of Justice, 3 F.3d 1533, 1537 (D.C. Cir. 1993); Petroleum Info. Corp. v. United States Dep't of the Interior, 976 F.2d 1429, 1434 (D.C. Cir. 1992); Jordan v. United States Dep't of Justice, 591 F.2d 753, 774 (D.C. Cir. 1978); Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F.2d 1136, 1143-44 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

Pursuant to Exemption 5, the Authorizing Official withheld certain documents in their entirety. These documents, listed as item 5(c) in the determination letter, concern workplace violence issues. Although the documents in this group are not individually specified in the determination letter, the Chicago Operations Office informed us that the group consists of drafts of correspondence and settlement or mediation agreements. Draft documents are, by their nature, predecisional and deliberative. Exxon Corp. v. Dept. of Energy, 585 F. Supp. 690, 698 (D.D.C. 1983).

Nevertheless, not all draft documents may be withheld under Exemption 5. The Attorney General's Memorandum of October 24, 1993 established a standard that promotes discretionary disclosure of records under the FOIA. In accordance with the Memorandum, it is necessary to determine whether disclosure of the requested information would cause foreseeable harm to the deliberative process.

We find several factors that point to foreseeable harm resulting from releasing the draft documents in their entirety. The subject matter of the documents is highly sensitive, involving charges of serious misconduct by various employees. The process of resolving those charges requires total confidentiality. Moreover, since these matters are still pending, disclosing draft letters and settlement documents could have a chilling effect on the DOE's investigative, deliberative, and decision-making processes.

In applying any FOIA exemption, however, any reasonably segregable portion of a record must be provided to the requester after deletion of the portions that are exempt. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). We find that these documents may contain sections of segregable material. For example, a draft letter we examined includes factual, non-deliberative sections that could be easily segregated. No foreseeable harm would result from releasing these segregable portions. We will therefore remand this matter as to Exemption 5 for release of segregable material or further justification for withholding.

Exemption 6 allows the agency to withhold all information about individuals "in personnel and medical and similar files" where the disclosure of the information "would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6). The Authorizing Official withheld certain documents in their entirety based on Exemption 6, asserting the privacy interests of individuals who had filed complaints against Taboas. These documents, like those discussed under Exemption 5, are characterized by the Authorizing Official as dealing with workplace violence issues. They form, however, a group of documents separate from those withheld under Exemption 5.

As an initial requirement, information protected by Exemption 6 must fall within the category of "personnel and medical and similar files." It is generally clear what constitutes a personnel or medical file. The term "similar file" is not defined in the FOIA, but has been construed in this context to include all information that "applies to a particular individual."United States Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 602 (1982).

The analysis of a claim under Exemption 6, however, does not end with the identification of a file as falling within its ambit. As with any exemption, any reasonably segregable portions of the record must be provided to the requester. Nevertheless, for some documents subject to Exemption 6, the deletion of personal identifying information is inadequate to protect personal privacy. Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 380-81 (1976). This may be the case if the requested documents concern a small group of individuals who are known to each other and easily identifiable from information in the documents. For example, the deletion of names and other identifying data concerning a small group of coworkers would be inadequate to protect them from embarrassment or reprisals if the requester could still possibly identify the individuals. Alirez v. NLRB, 676 F.2d 423, 428 (10th Cir. 1982). Moreover, if deletion of personal information would "leave only essentially meaningless words and phrases," the entire record may be withheld. Neufeld v. IRS, 646 F.2d 661, 663 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (Neufeld).

We reviewed a sample of the documents withheld under Exemption 6 by the Authorizing Official. Our review included both the applicability of Exemption 6 to the documents, and the possibility of redacting the documents to delete personal information. Some of these documents consist of allegations against other employees for their response to acts of purported misconduct by Taboas. Other documents consist primarily of information relating to persons alleging misconduct by Taboas. Since the persons referred to in the documents form a small, tightly-knit group of coworkers, we believe that deleting names alone would not protect their privacy interest. If all information identifying these individuals were deleted from the documents, the remaining portions would not be meaningful. See Neufeld at 663. We therefore find that the Authorizing Official properly withheld these documents pursuant to Exemption 6.

Other documents in this group, however, contain identifying information that apparently can be easily deleted. Information pertaining to a single individual whose identity cannot be determined after deletion of his name from the records does not qualify for Exemption 6 protection. Citizens for Environmental Quality v. USDA, 602 F. Supp. 534, 538-39 (D.D.C. 1984).

For example, one document in this category is a letter from a U.S. Congressman to the Secretary of Energy that mentions a meeting with some employees of Chicago Operations Office without specifying their names or concerns. That document can safely be made public. Another document in this category is a letter from the regional manager of DOE's Office of Economic Impact and Diversity, forwarding a complaint to the field manager. After the deletion of the addressee's name and address, there does not seem to be anything in the letter that would qualify for protection under Exemption 6. We will therefore remand this matter as to Exemption 6 for release of segregable material or further justification for withholding.

Exemption 7(A)

Exemption 7(A) authorizes the withholding of "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that production of such law enforcement records or information … could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(A). The Authorizing Official withheld under Exemption 7(A) documents dealing with an ongoing investigation of Taboas by the Chicago Operations Office's Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) Office. These documents are designated 1(a) through 1(h) in the determination letter.

Taboas requests the additional release of the official complaints (Document 1(c)), notices of acceptance or dismissal of complaints (Document 1(e)), investigators' notes (Document 1(g)), correspondence from the complainants to the Office of Civil Rights (Document 1(h)), and any document containing an inventory of the allegations against him.

The threshold requirement for withholding records under Exemption 7(A) is that they have been compiled for law enforcement purposes. Taboas challenges the application of Exemption 7(A) to these documents. He argues in his appeal that "the use of an exclusion for ?law enforcement purposes' assumes a significant leap from the role of the agency in an ongoing EEO investigation, and the relevant known facts in this case."

There is no support for Taboas' argument that EEO records are not compiled for "law enforcement purposes." In the context of the FOIA, law enforcement proceedings have been interpreted to mean not only criminal actions, but regulatory proceedings as well. Injex Indus. v. NLRB, 699 F. Supp. 1417, 1420 (N.D. Cal. 1986); Fedders Corp. v. FTC, 494 F. Supp. 325, 327-28 (S.D.N.Y. 1980), aff'd 646 F.2d 560 (2d Cir. 1980). Thus, records of an EEO investigation are considered as records compiled for law enforcement purposes within the context of the FOIA. Raytheon Company, 25 DOE ¶80,156 (1996).

To warrant protection under Exemption 7(A), however, it is not enough that records have been compiled for law enforcement purposes. It must also be shown that the release of the records could reasonably be expected to interfere with enforcement proceedings. The interference need not be established on a document-by-document basis, but can be shown generically as to the types of documents involved. NLRB v. Robbins Tire & Rubber Co., 437 U.S. 214, 236 (1978). Of the documents specifically requested by Taboas, release of the official complaints (1(c)), investigators' notes (1(g)), and correspondence between the complainants and the DOE's Office of Civil Rights (1(h)) could clearly interfere with the ongoing EEO investigation by affecting the testimony of witnesses, subjecting witnesses to potential reprisals, and detering other witnesses from providing information. See Dow Jones & Co. v. United States Dep't of Justice, 880 F. Supp. 145, 150 (S.D.N.Y. 1995); Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. v. EPA, 856 F.2d 309, 311 (D.C. Cir. 1988).

In contrast, the release of documents designated 1(e) -- notices of acceptance or dismissal of complaints -- does not seem to pose a threat of interference with the ongoing EEO investigations. These documents appear to be form letters containing easily segregable identifying information. We will therefore remand this matter as to Exemption 7(A) for release of segregable material or further justification for withholding.

Adequacy of Search

The Authorizing Official released certain documents, and withheld certain others, concerning two closed EEO cases involving Taboas. These documents are designated 3(a) through 3(u) and 4(a) through 4(c) in the determination letter.

Taboas does not raise any issues about the documents in this group that were withheld. He asserts that he was told, however, in informal office conversations, that there were other EEO cases involving him.

If a requester has reasonably described the information he is seeking and has complied with the DOE's FOIA regulations, 10 C.F.R. Part 1004, the DOE must conduct a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). Accordingly, we will remand a case where a search was inadequate. E.g., Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,187 (1996); Dennis McQuade, 25 DOE ¶ 80,158 (1996).

We talked with Sarah Brunson, manager of the EEO Office at Chicago Operations Office, to ascertain the adequacy of the search for these records. Brunson acknowledged that records concerning complaints involving Taboas were stored in her office. She also stated that she received Taboas' request, and that she herself performed a thorough manual search of the EEO files. In addition, she called the EEO Office at DOE headquarters to ascertain whether any complaints about Taboas were stored there. She states that the EEO Office at Chicago found all closed EEO cases involving Taboas. Based on Brunson's statements, we conclude that a thorough and conscientious search was performed for closed EEO files.

The Privacy Act requires each federal agency to permit an individual to gain access to information pertaining to him or her which is contained in any "system of records" maintained by the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.6(a)(2). A "system of records" is defined as a "group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or some identifying number, symbol or other identifying particular assigned to the individual." 5 U.S.C. § 552a(a)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.2(m).

Because Taboas had requested information about himself, the Chicago Operations Office processed his request under the Privacy Act as well as the FOIA. After a preliminary search, Taboas was informed that the information he requested was contained in the records of other individuals, not in his own.<3> Under the Privacy Act, a search would be conducted only of records filed by Taboas' name or particular identifier. In view of the facts of this case, Taboas' request was properly processed under the more expansive provisions of the FOIA instead of the Privacy Act.

In his appeal, Taboas argues that "It appears … that all information has been cataloged by complaint, and that therefore there is no system [of records] in my name. I believe that judicial review would find the filing convenience to be irrelevant…"

In responding to Taboas' argument, it is important to note that administrative convenience is not being claimed by Chicago Operations Office. The Privacy Act prohibits the disclosure of personally identifiable records to a third party without the consent of the individual to whom the record pertains. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(b).<4> In addition, the Privacy Act does not require an agency to create records that do not exist. DeBold v. Stimson, 735 F.2d 1037, 1041 (7th Cir. 1984). Thus, the Chicago Operations Office was precluded from releasing to Taboas records identified by others' names, and under no obligation to rearrange the records to create a file in Taboas' name. We therefore reject Taboas' argument concerning the Privacy Act.

Waiver

Finally, Taboas claims that "some of the material declined is in the public domain … For example, many individuals have [a] copy of covered correspondence." Taboas implies that DOE has waived the application of exemptions to some documents because it has previously disclosed them.

The extent to which the DOE has waived FOIA exemptions depends on the circumstances of the disclosure. Carson v. United States Dep't of Justice, 631 F.2d 1008, 1016 n.30 (D.C. Cir. 1980). It does not appear that the documents referred to in this case by Taboas were disclosed by official departmental action. It is possible that departmental employees may have made unauthorized disclosure of certain documents. Such unauthorized disclosures, however, would not constitute a waiver of exemption by the DOE. Simmons v. United States Dep't of Justice, 796 F.2d 709, 712 (4th Cir. 1986). Furthermore, official disclosure of additional records could exacerbate the harm created by the unauthorized disclosures. Murphy v. FBI, 409 F. Supp. 1138, 1142 (D.D.C. 1980). We therefore reject Taboas' argument that the Department has waived any exemptions.

Conclusion

We shall remand this matter to the Chicago Operations Office for further review of its determination under Exemptions 5, 6 and 7(A), in accordance with the discussion set forth above. After review, the Chicago Operations Office will either release reasonably segregable portions of the documents identified in the above discussion, or provide adequate justification for withholding them. We will deny Taboas' appeal in all other respects.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The appeal filed by Anibal L. Taboas, Case No. VFA-0171, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Chicago Operations Office for processing in accordance with the instructions provided in this Decision.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business; or in which the agency records are situated; or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Bradley S. Tice

Date of Filing: May 29, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0172

On May 29, 1996, Bradley S. Tice filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on May 8, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (AO). That determination was issued in response to a request for information that Mr. Tice submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Mr. Tice challenges the adequacy of the search conducted by AO.

I. Background

On October 11, 1995, Mr. Tice filed a request for information in which he sought information regarding "aspects of nuclear propulsion for aircraft as well as Richard Feynman's patented design for a nuclear reactor to heat air for a jet engine." See October 11, 1995 FOIA Request. On May 8, 1996, AO issued a determination which stated that the Los Alamos National Laboratory (LANL) conducted a search and reported that a patent application was filed on behalf of Richard P. Feynman on August 13, 1948, entitled "Method and Apparatus for Releasing Nuclear Energy." See Determination Letter at 1. The AO further stated that this patent application was abandoned because there was insufficient information available to make a practical device. Id. In addition, the LANL advised that there was a notation in their records that the patent application described a "rocket motor" and that some documents were declassified. Consequently, the LANL searched their patent files and located no responsive documents. However, the LANL did provide Mr. Tice with "a copy of a portion of the Patent Application File listing subject patents pertaining to Mr. Feynman". Id.

On May 29, 1996, Mr. Tice filed the present appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals. In his Appeal, Mr. Tice requests the following: (1) more information than was sent to him by the LANL; (2) a review of classified information that pertains to the subject of his request and (3) a search conducted at the U.S. Patent Office in Washington, DC.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was inadequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was adequate, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

As an initial matter, Mr. Tice requested in his Appeal that AO conduct a search at the U.S. Patent Office in Washington, D.C. The DOE cannot conduct a search of another agency's records. However, Mr. Tice may submit a FOIA request directly to the U.S. Patent Office.

In reviewing the present Appeal, we contacted officials at AO to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. Upon receiving Mr. Tice's Request for Information, AO instituted a search at the LANL. The LANL indicated that it searched its computer database concerning the subject of nuclear propulsion and related topics and found no responsive documents. In addition, the LANL manually searched its classified and unclassified patent files in the Laboratory Archives and found no documents relating to Mr. Tice's request other than the information provided to him in AO's Determination Letter. Given the facts presented to us, we find that AO conducted an adequate search which was reasonably calculated to discover documents responsive to Mr. Tice's Request. Therefore, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Bradley S. Tice on May 29, 1996, is denied.

in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: David W. Smith

Date of Filing: June 4, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0173

On June 4, 1996, David W. Smith, on behalf of his mother Hettie L. Smith, filed an Appeal from a determination issued under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) on April 1, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (AO). In his Appeal, Mr. Smith asserts that AO failed to provide his mother with all of the responsive documents in its possession regarding a Request for Information she made on January 20, 1994.

I. Background

On January 20, 1994, Mrs. Smith filed a FOIA request with AO seeking records relating to her late husband's exposure to radiation while he worked for the Atomic Energy Commission from 1948 to 1956. In its May 9, 1996 Determination Letter, AO stated that it had conducted a search of its records at AO's Occupational Safety and Health Division (OSHD) and at the Los Alamos National Laboratory (LANL). Along with the Determination Letter, AO provided Mrs. Smith with a copy of the radiation dosimetry records it discovered at LANL.

In his Appeal, Mr. Smith implicitly argues that AO conducted an inadequate search for records relating to his father. However, Mr. Smith does not state any specific reasons why he considers the search made by AO to be inadequate.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was reasonable, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095,1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted officials at AO to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. Upon receiving Mrs. Smith's Request for Information, AO instituted searches at the only two facilities that possess radiation exposure records, OSHD and LANL. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Terry Apodaca, AO, and Steven Goering, OHA Staff Attorney (June 17, 1996). With regard to the search conducted at LANL, we were informed that a LANL official manually searched through the binders containing LANL's radiation exposure records using the name of Vincent L. Smith. Id. All of the radiation exposure records LANL discovered pertaining to Vincent Smith were provided to Mrs. Smith. Id. In addition, AO requested that a search of the radiation exposure records at OSHD be conducted. Id. OSHD officials conducted a search of their computer database of radiation exposure records and found no responsive records. Id. Given the facts presented to us, we find that AO conducted an adequate search which was reasonably calculated to discover documents responsive to Mrs. Smith's Request. Consequently, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by David W. Smith on June 4, 1996, is denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Association of Public Agency Customers

Date of Filing: July 8, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0174

On June 4, 1996, the Association of Public Agency Customers (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on May 21, 1996, by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) of the Department of Energy (DOE). On July 8, 1996, the Appellant modified its Appeal by filing further documents. In its determination, BPA notified the Appellant that it was discontinuing processing of the Appellant's February 15, 1996 request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) due to non-payment of $2,421.54 for search and review costs. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to reinstate the request and reduce the amount which was billed to the Appellant.

I. Background

On February 15, 1996, the Appellant submitted a thirteen-item FOIA request to BPA seeking information regarding business transactions between BPA and its direct service industrial customers (DSIs). Letter from Melinda J. Horgan, Attorney for the Appellant, to Gene Tollefson, Freedom of Information Act Officer, BPA, (February 15, 1996) (Request Letter). On March 1, 1996, BPA sent a letter to the Appellant requesting advance payment of $2,582.00 for search and review costs. Although the Appellant believed that this amount was excessive, it sent a check to BPA in the amount of $1,200.00. In the course of several installment responses, BPA released to the Appellant 1,870 pages of material, and billed the Appellant a total of $3,621.54. The Appellant subsequently notified BPA that it would not authorize any further charges associated with the request, and asked that BPA stop processing the request until the Appellant's counsel and BPA's counsel could meet. In a May 21, 1996 letter, BPA notified the Appellant that, in compliance with the Appellant's request, it was discontinuing processing of the FOIA request. Although the requested meeting never took place, see Record of Telephone Conversation between Carol Jacobson, Paralegal, BPA, and Dawn Koren, Staff Attorney, OHA (July 30, 1996), APAC filed the present Appeal.

II. Appeal

The Appellant makes several arguments regarding the fees BPA assessed and the manner in which BPA processed the request. First, the Appellant argues that BPA violated the FOIA when it did not fully respond to its request within ten working days, as required by 10 C.F.R. 1004.5(d)(1), and further violated the FOIA by responding in installments. Second, the Appellant claims that the charges for search and review time are exorbitant. In connection with this claim, the Appellant asserts that the amount of search time must have been due to BPA's lack of an organized filing system, and that the Appellant should not be penalized for this lack of organization. Third, the Appellant argues that lower-paid employees should have been used to conduct the search, review and photocopying of material.<1> Fourth, the Appellant notes that it had amended its request to state that it did not wish to receive any responsive documents which were already in the administrative record of six ongoing legal cases involving BPA. Because 750 pages of the released documents were, in the Appellant's view, duplicative of public record documents, the Appellant argues that BPA's charges should be reduced. Fifth, the Appellant lists three reasons why it believes many of the documents released were non-responsive to its request. Finally, the Appellant notes that it never received a "privilege log," i.e, an index of withheld documents, listing the reasons for withholding certain documents.<2>

III. Analysis

The FOIA authorizes the promulgation of regulations "specifying the schedule of fees applicable to the processing of requests." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(i). DOE regulations provide for fees to be assessed to cover the "full allowable direct costs incurred" of responding to requests for information. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a). Under this fee schedule, the DOE charges for manual searches at the salary rate(s) (i.e., basic pay plus 16 percent) of the employees making the search. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(1). In addition, "[t]he DOE will charge requesters who are seeking documents for commercial use for time spent reviewing records to determine whether they are exempt from mandatory disclosure." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(3).

We have examined each of the Appellant's arguments carefully and make the following determinations. First, failure to respond within the ten-day statutory deadline for processing the request is not a matter that is subject to administrative appeal. We note, however, that the FOIA regulations permit a ten-day extension of the initial time limit because of the voluminous amount of records required by this request. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(B); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.5(d)(2)(ii). Once this ten day extension expired, the Appellant acquired the right to file a complaint with the appropriate federal district court. See Duquesne Light Company, 1 DOE ¶ 80,206 at 81,087 (1978); 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B), (6)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.5(d)(4).

Further, it was reasonable for BPA to believe that the Appellant would rather receive responses to this voluminous request as they became available, rather than have to wait until BPA completed the entire response. In the interests of timely disclosure, partial responses are appropriate when responding to such a large request. Cf. David K. Hackett, 25 DOE ¶ 80,107 (1995) (each office searching for responsive records may issue its own determination letter).

We reject the Appellant's contention that the amounts of search time, 49.5 hours, and review time, 70.5 hours, expended so far in this case were unreasonably high. The Appellant made an extremely broad request for documents. The projects on which it sought information are complex, technical, and staffed by many employees. BPA's search required the services of twenty-five employees and the large number of responsive documents required BPA to assign ten people to review them. See Records of Telephone Conversations between Carol Jacobson and Dawn Koren (June 6, 1996 and July 12, 1996). Moreover, the Appellant itself defined "document" in more than 50 ways, see Attachment 1 of Request Letter, thus widening the search. Furthermore, aside from the 1,870 pages sent to the Appellant as responsive, BPA identified approximately 4,500 other pages, 1,500 of which it finished reviewing by the time it stopped processing the request. Thus, we believe that the expended amount of search and (partially completed) review time for approximately 6,370 technically complex pages is appropriate in this case.

We also find that it was not unreasonable to primarily have highly-paid employees conduct the search and review.<3> In BPA's view, it was most efficient to have the attorneys and salespeople who possessed the documents and were most familiar with the technical terminology used in those documents search their own offices. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Carol Jacobson and Dawn Koren (June 5, 1996). Because the documents at issue were so technologically complex, we do not fault BPA for using employees familiar with these matters to review the material for the applicability of FOIA exemptions. Thus, we find that BPA reasonably allocated personnel to find responsive material quickly, review it, and redact it correctly. Association of Public Agency Customers, 25 DOE ¶ 80,200 (1996) (APAC); see also Marlene Flor, 25 DOE ¶ 80,211 (1996).<4>

However, we have discovered one incorrect cost in BPA's bills, the $352.94 charged for photocopying time. Although the FOIA regulations permit BPA to charge five cents a page for the photocopies themselves (and BPA did so), these regulations do not permit BPA to charge, in addition to the per-page rate, the salary of the photocopier operator. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(4); APAC. Thus, we will require BPA to reduce the Appellant's charges by the amount of $352.94.

We further find that BPA did not disregard the Appellant's request that BPA not send documents duplicative of the administrative record. The majority of the documents released were without question non-duplicative from the Appellant's perspective. However, in its responses to the Appellant, BPA released 750 pages of actual power sale contracts. In the Appellant's view, these actual contracts were virtually the same as a sample power sale contract located in the administrative record, and thus BPA disregarded the scope of the Appellant's request. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Melinda J. Horgan, Attorney, Appellant, and Dawn Koren (June 5, 1996). We do not accept this argument. BPA should not be faulted for adhering to the precise language of the Appellant's request. The fact is that these contracts were not in the administrative record. BPA should not have to guess at and interpret what documents the Appellant would consider similar enough to administrative record documents as to be beyond the scope of the request. Aside from these contracts, only about six pages released by BPA were duplicative of the administrative record. Id. This amount, when considered within the context of 1,870 released pages, is de minimis. Therefore, we find that BPA may charge for the search and review of the power sale contracts as well as the half dozen duplicated pages.

We have also determined that BPA's response was properly within the scope of the Appellant's request. The Appellant lists three arguments to the contrary: (i) many of the released pages are unrelated to its February 15, 1996 Request; (ii) some pages are photocopies of other pages; and (iii) it received fax cover sheets attached to many of the documents. First, we note that BPA need not eliminate the fax cover sheets from its response. These cover sheets were attached to the documents requested and serve to show how the requested documents were disseminated.<5> Thus, these documents are within the scope of the request. Second, although approximately 25 pages of documents located turned out to be copies of other documents, we agree with BPA that to have searched 1,870 pages looking for duplicates would most likely have increased the amount of review time unnecessarily. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Brian Altman, Staff Attorney, BPA and Dawn Koren (July 9, 1996).

After examining the remaining specific documents which the Appellant asserts are non-responsive, we find that they are responsive to its broadly worded request. We find that a 60-page power transmission contract between BPA and a DSI, Intalco, is responsive to item 2 of the Appellant's request, which seeks "all documents reflecting or relating to power supplies, power supply proposals, or any power sale agreements for providing power or related services to DSI's from BPA or third parties." The Intalco contract concerns BPA's arrangement with Intalco to send power to the DSI whenever circumstances force BPA to divert Intalco's normal supply. This document is clearly responsive to item 2. We also find that several pieces of Congressional correspondence are responsive to item 2 since they also relate to power supply to the DSIs. In addition, we believe that a large amount of the technical analysis papers are responsive to the request. According to BPA, these are documents prepared by BPA's engineering department in order to develop and complete various attachments to power and transmission contracts with the DSIs. BPA therefore believes that these documents are responsive to items 2, 3, 6, and 7. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Brian Altman and Dawn Koren (July 9, 1996).<6> We find that documents used in preparing the contracts referred to in the Appellant's request must be considered responsive.

Finally, we note that because the Appellant has refused either to pay the advance fee or to assure BPA that all fees would be paid in accordance with 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(8)(i), the FOIA regulations permit BPA to stop working on the FOIA request. Although BPA had informed the Appellant in its May 21, 1996 discontinuation of processing letter that it would send an index of withheld documents upon its completion, BPA stated that it was doing so based on its belief that preparation of the index is not chargeable. However, upon learning of this Office's judgment that preparation of the index involves analysis and is therefore chargeable, see Record of Telephone Conversation between Carol Jacobson and Dawn Koren (June 6, 1996), BPA permissibly chose to not incur additional non-recoverable costs. Moreover, until completion of the document review, the preparation of such an index would be premature.

In conclusion, we find that BPA properly stopped processing the Appellant's request, given the Appellant's refusal to pay reasonable charges for search and review. We grant this Appeal in part based solely on the improper charges for the salaries of the photocopier operators.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the Association of Public Agency Customers on July 8, 1996, Case Number VFA-0174, is granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This case is hereby remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration, which shall reduce its fees in this case by the amount of $352.94.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Director

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: August 1, 1996

<1>The Appellant has improperly requested in its Appeal the titles of the personnel executing the searches. If the Appellant wishes documents listing these titles, the Appellant should file a new request for that information.

<2>The Appellant asserts that these withheld documents must exist because the released documents reference them. BPA agrees that many other responsive documents have been identified, but explains that no determination can be made regarding these documents until BPA completes the review following the Appellant's payment. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Carol Jacobson and Dawn Koren (June 5, 1996).

<3>We note that a small portion of the search and most of the photocopying was conducted by lower-paid employees. But, as explained below, the charges for the salary of the photocopier operators were impermissable.

<4>In response to the Appellant's comment regarding BPA's alleged lack of an organized filing system, we note that the FOIA does not require agencies to maintain their files in order to make the files easily accessible to requesters. As long as the files are organized in a way that is functional for the office using them, the FOIA does not dictate a "better" filing system.

<5>Further, even if BPA had taken the time to remove all the fax cover sheets after it located the responsive documents, this would not have decreased its search time to find these documents.

<6>Items 3, 6, and 7 request documents "reflecting or relating to" the provision of transmission or ancillary services to the DSIs by BPA, the five- and fifteen-year transmission contracts between DSIs and BPA and BPA's decision to enter into such contracts.

Case No. VFA-0175, 25 DOE ¶ 80,211

July 2, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Marlene Flor

Date of Filing: June 5, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0175

On June 5, 1996, the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) received an Appeal filed by Marlene Flor pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In her appeal, Ms. Flor contests the dismissal of a request for information that she submitted to the DOE's Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE/AL). Her request was dismissed by the DOE/AL's FOIA Officer because Ms. Flor did not agree to pay the estimated costs associated with searching for, identifying and providing copies of documents responsive to her request. In her appeal, Ms. Flor contends that her request should be reinstated and that the estimate of costs associated with processing her request should be lowered significantly.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by a covered branch of the federal government, and which have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In her FOIA request, Ms. Flor sought copies of "all contracts, contractual material, material related to the expenditure of federal funds, correspondence of all types regardless of the point of origin, and all memoranda for the record and notes, between the [DOE] and those providing psychiatric and psychological services to the [DOE/AL] from May 1994" to the date of the request. She stated that she would pay "all fees involved" in processing her request, but that she wished to be notified in advance if the fees exceeded $25.

Ms. Flor's request was referred to three divisions of DOE/AL: Contracts and Procurement (CPD), Personnel Security (PSD) and Financial Management (FMD). Each division was asked to prepare an estimate of costs associated with searching for and providing documents responsive to the request. In a letter dated February 8, 1996, DOE/AL provided Ms. Flor with estimates from CPD and PSD.<1>

PSD provided an estimated cost of $50. This estimate, which is not at issue here, consisted of one half hour of search time billed at $15 per hour for a total of $7.50, two hours for review of any responsive documents for portions exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA at $20 per hour, for a total of $40, and a copying fee of $0.05 for each of an estimated 50 pages of responsive documents, for a total of $2.50.

CPD submitted an estimated cost for search and production of responsive documents of $1,100. This estimate consisted of 24 hours of search time billed at an hourly rate of $10 for a total of $240, an additional 24 hours of search time billed at $25 per hour for a total of $600, four hours for review of responsive documents for exempt material at $40 per hour for a total of $160, and $0.05 per page for copying expenses for an estimated 2,000 pages of responsive documents, for a total of $100.

In her appeal, Ms. Flor contends that CPD's estimate is unreasonably high. As an initial matter, she claims that the $25 hourly rate used by CPD to compute a portion of its estimated search costs, and the $40 per hour review rate, are too high. She states that these hourly rates indicate that CPD intends to use employees who are compensated at the level of a GS-12 or GS-13 to conduct the search and review, when lower salaried employees could just as readily be used. Furthermore, Ms. Flor states that the estimated search time of 48 hours is too high given the nature of the computer and automated filing systems in use at CPD. Finally, Ms. Flor contests the CPD's estimate that 2,000 pages of responsive documents will be identified. In this regard, she claims that in response to an earlier, broader FOIA request, CPD was able to identify only 1,888 pages of responsive documents.

II. Analysis

Pursuant to the FOIA, the DOE has issued regulations "specifying the schedule of fees applicable to the processing of requests . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(I). These regulations provide for the assessing of fees to recover the "full allowable direct costs incurred" of responding to requests for information. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9. In so doing, the DOE must "use the most efficient and least costly methods to comply with requests for documents made under the FOIA." Id. In calculating fees, the DOE may include charges for manual searches at the salary rate(s) (i.e. basic pay plus 16 percent) of the employees making the search, and for the paper copy reproduction of documents at the rate of $0.05 per page. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(1),(4). However, with the exception of requesters seeking documents for a commercial use, the DOE will provide the first 100 pages of reproduction and the first two hours of search time without charge. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(6).

For purposes of determining the appropriate fees to be charged, the DOE regulations set forth four categories of FOIA requesters: those who seek documents for a commercial use, educational and non-commercial scientific institution requesters, requesters who are representatives of the news media, and all other requesters. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(1)-(4). The fees for requesters in the fourth, "catch-all" category are limited to the reasonable direct cost of searching for and reproducing responsive documents, minus the costs associated with the first 100 pages of reproduction and the first two hours of search time. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(4).

Based on the record before us, it does not appear that Ms. Flor is seeking the requested documents for a commercial use, or on behalf of an educational, scientific, or media-related entity. Ms. Flor should therefore properly be included in the category of "all other requesters." See memorandum of June 12, 1996 telephone conversation between Ms. Barfield and Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney. Because we conclude that DOE/AL's estimate includes costs that may not charged to requesters in Ms. Flor's category, we will remand this matter to DOE/AL for the preparation of a new estimate.

As we previously stated, Ms. Flor's estimates from PSD and CPD included $40 and $160 respectively for the review of responsive documents for portions exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA. However, pursuant to the DOE regulations, such review costs may not be charged to individuals in the "all other requesters" category. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(4). See also Seehuus Associates, 23 DOE ¶ 80,123 at 80,552 (1993) (Seehuus); Glen Milner, 21 DOE ¶ 80,116 at 80,553 (1991) (Milner). We therefore need not address Ms. Flor's contention that the $40 per hour review rate set forth in the CPD estimate is excessive.

Ms. Flor further claims that the $600 estimate for the 24 hours of search time billed at $25 per hour is inflated. In order to determine the manner in which this estimate was calculated, we contacted DOE/AL. We were told that the reason for CPD's proposed use of GS-12 and GS-13 contracting specialists to conduct this portion of the search rather than lower-salaried contracting technicians was because the specialists were needed to identify and delete information pertaining to the personal privacy of individuals mentioned in the responsive documents. See memorandum of June 12, 1996 telephone conversation between Ms. Barfield and Mr. Palmer.

Based upon its knowledge of the records involved and the abilities of its personnel, DOE/AL has determined that the most efficient use of its resources would be to use contracting specialists to conduct a portion of its search, and for those specialists to review the documents that they identify as responsive for information that is exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA. There is nothing in the record that would lead us to believe that this determination is unreasonable. See Association of Public Agency Customers, 25 DOE ¶ 80,200 (1996)(use of higher-salaried employees to conduct search for responsive documents upheld for reasons of efficiency and because of complexity of records to be searched). However, to the extent that "search time" is spent by the specialists in identifying and deleting information that is exempt from mandatory disclosure, this in reality constitutes a review function for which Ms. Flor may not be charged. See Seehuus; Milner. Consequently, upon remand DOE/AL should subtract from its estimated search time any time estimated to be spent by these specialists in reviewing documents for exempt material.

Finally, Ms. Flor contends that CPD's estimate of the number of pages of responsive documents is inflated. In this regard, we emphasize that CPD's figures are estimates, and that Ms. Flor will only be charged for the number of pages of responsive documents actually provided. <2>

III. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, we will remand this matter to the DOE/AL for the provision of a new estimate to Ms. Flor. In calculating this estimate, DOE/AL should delete any costs associated with the review of responsive documents for exempt material.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Marlene Flor on June 5, 1996 is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to DOE/AL for the calculation of a new estimate in accordance with the guidelines set forth in this Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>FMD did not provide an estimate. According to DOE/AL, FMD was waiting for the contract numbers of the contracts that were deemed responsive by CPD. FMD believed that obtaining these numbers from CPD would reduce the costs of search and production. See April 12, 1996 letter from Elva Ann Barfield, FOI Officer, DOE/AL to Ms. Flor.

<2>In addition, we note that the estimate provided to Ms. Flor did not factor in the two hours of free search time and the 100 pages of free document reproduction provided for in the DOE regulations. DOE/AL will adjust its calculation accordingly upon remand.

Case No. VFA-0176, 25 DOE ¶ 80,212

July 2, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Tenaska Washington Partners II, L.P.

Date of Filing: June 10, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0176

Tenaska Washington Partners II, L.P. (TWP) filed an Appeal of a May 21, 1996 determination issued to it by the Office of Inspector General of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Deputy Inspector General for Audit Services of the Office of Inspector General (IG) partially denied a request for information that TWP filed pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that a federal agency generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that a federal agency may withhold at its discretion. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b).

Background

In its original October 6, 1995 request, TWP sought:

1) All documents and records reviewed or relied upon by the IG's office in preparing its Report of Audit of BPA's [Bonneville Power Administration] Energy Resource Programs, DOE/IG-0379 (Report).

2) All communications between any IG's office representative and any BPA Representative on the subject of the Report, including but not limited to all BPA comments on or relating to the Report.

3) Any other IG's office report commenting upon or evaluating BPA energy resource or energy acquisition programs or practices.

On March 8, 1996, the IG released most of the records it identified as responsive, but withheld one document and portions of several other documents pursuant to Exemption 5. In addition, the IG redacted information from several documents pursuant to Exemptions 6 and 7(C). On April 2, 1996, TWP filed an Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals of the DOE (OHA) contending that the DOE improperly withheld information. The OHA issued a determination regarding TWP's Appeal on April 29, 1996. Stoel Rives, LLP, 25 DOE ¶ 80,189 (1996). In that Decision, the OHA remanded the Appeal to the IG for a further review of the material withheld pursuant to Exemption 5, but denied the Appeal in all other respects.

On May 21, 1996, the IG issued a new determination regarding the Exemption 5 material. In that determination, the IG released some information, but continued to withhold material pursuant to Exemption 5. Specifically, the IG stated that the withheld material is predecisional and that public disclosure would likely inhibit frank and open discussion of the matter within the agency and hinder the government's ability to reach sound and well-reasoned resolutions to problems.

In its June 6, 1996 Appeal, TWP requests that the DOE release the withheld material. TWP contends that the IG improperly withheld "underlying facts" concerning its policy making decisions. Specifically, TWP argues that the IG cannot withhold "technical evaluation[s]" regarding "the economics of BPA's resource acquisitions" because these evaluations are factual in nature. Furthermore, TWP states that IG "cannot unilaterally decide that the ?public interest' justifies its continuing refusal to open its files to the public." Finally, TWP contends that the IG may not rely on Exemptions 6 and 7 to withhold a document referred to as Document No. 7. Specifically, TWP states that the DOE "waived" its ability to claim these exemptions when it "voluntarily" disclosed the name of an individual in Document No. 7. TWP argues that since the IG has now released the individual's name, he will not suffer any increase to the invasion of his privacy if DOE releases Document No. 7 in its entirety. Thus, TWP contends that the FOIA requires the DOE to release the entire document.

Analysis

As an initial matter, we note that the IG inadvertently released the individual's name in a header of one page of Document No. 7. Regarding this fact, we find that an individual's privacy rights do not evaporate simply because an agency may have inadvertently released his name to a requester. Furthermore, there is no doubt that the individual could suffer an increase to the invasion of his privacy if the IG released Document No. 7 because statements made in the document could then be directly attributable to him. The IG's inadvertent release currently reveals only that the individual was a participant in an interview that also involved others. Thus, there is no merit to TWP's argument that the FOIA requires that the DOE now release Document No. 7 in its entirety.

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears) (footnote omitted). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). Only the "deliberative process" privilege is at issue here.

The "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5 permits the government to withhold documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government formulates decisions and policies. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions by promoting frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making governmental decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151. See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939, 946 (Ct. Cl. 1958)) (Mink).

In order for Exemption 5 to shield a document, it must be both predecisional, i.e., generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e., reflecting the give-and-take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id. Even then, however, the exemption only covers the subjective, deliberative portion of the document. Mink, 410 U.S. at 87-91. An agency must disclose factual information contained in the protected document unless the factual material is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material. Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1077 (D.C. Cir. 1971).

In the present case, we have reviewed the redacted information and find it is clearly both predecisional and deliberative pursuant to Exemption 5. In fact, we have confirmed that the redacted information contains opinions, recommendations and interpretations from various DOE and BPA employees, the disclosure of which would discourage open, frank discussions between these individuals. Finally, we have verified that the redacted information does not contain any "underlying facts" regarding "technical evaluation[s]" of "the economics of BPA's resource acquisitions." Thus, we conclude that the IG made a correct determination consistent with the principles outlined above. Accordingly, the IG properly withheld the redacted information pursuant to Exemption 5.

The Public Interest in Disclosure

Notwithstanding our finding that the IG properly applied Exemption 5 to the requested information, we must consider another factor. The DOE regulations state that the agency should release a document to a requester if disclosure is consistent with other laws, and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R § 1004.1. In applying this regulation, we note that the Department of Justice has reviewed its administration of the FOIA and adopted a "foreseeable harm" standard for defending FOIA exemptions. Memorandum from the Attorney General to Heads of Departments and Agencies, Subject: The Freedom of Information Act (October 4, 1993) (Reno Memorandum). The Reno Memorandum indicates that whether or not there is a legally correct application of an exemption, it is the policy of the Department of Justice to defend the assertion of a FOIA exemption only in those cases where the agency articulates a reasonably foreseeable harm to an interest protected by that exemption. See Reno Memorandum at 1, 2. In the present case, the requested information consists of the opinions of individuals during various meetings. The release of this information would in our opinion have a chilling effect on the willingness of employees and managers to make candid statements of opinion during these meetings. Employees and managers would be less likely to communicate their opinions during such meetings if they knew or suspected that an agency would release their opinions to the public. Consequently, we find that this harm satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard articulated by the Attorney General and that the release of the requested documents would not be in the public interest.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Tenaska Washington Partners II, L.P. on June 10, 1996, Case No. VFA-0176, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Burlin McKinney

Date of Filing: June 10, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0177

On June 10, 1996, Burlin McKinney (McKinney) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on May 20, 1996 by the Deputy General Counsel of the Office of General Counsel (OGC) of the Department of Energy (DOE). This determination concerned a request for information submitted by McKinney pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the OGC to release the information requested by McKinney.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552; 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In 1995, McKinney wrote to the DOE regarding possible personal exposure to radiation from beryllium while employed at Oak Ridge Laboratories. That request was referred to the Office of Human Radiation Experiments (OHRE), which determined that the experiences described in the letter involved occupational, not experimental, exposure to radiation. OHRE then transferred his inquiry to the Oak Ridge Operations Office. See Letter from Special Counsel and Director, OHRE, to Burlin McKinney (July 28, 1995). The Oak Ridge Operations Office released to McKinney a memorandum in which the Assistant Secretary for Environment, Safety and Health recommended that the Under Secretary approve a policy for notification of former beryllium plant workers concerning potential exposure to beryllium. See Memorandum from Assistant Secretary for Environment, Safety and Health to Under Secretary (October 6, 1986).

In 1996, McKinney filed a request for access under the Freedom of Information Act to Enclosure 2 to this memorandum. Enclosure 2 is a three page legal memorandum from then-General Counsel Michael Farrell to the Assistant Secretary recommending that the DOE not initiate such a notification program based on the legal analysis contained in the memorandum. See Memorandum from J. Michael Farrell, General Counsel, to Mary L. Walker, Assistant Secretary for Environment, Safety and Health (October 1, 1986) (Farrell Memorandum). The OGC determined to withhold this document from McKinney, labeling the document "an attorney-client, attorney work-product document which is exempt from disclosure under Exemption 5 of the FOIA . . . ." See Letter from Deputy General Counsel to McKinney (May 20, 1996) (Determination Letter). In addition, the OGC stated that "discretionary disclosure would not be in the public interest because it could adversely impact currently pending and possibly future litigation in which the agency is involved." See Determination Letter at 2.

On June 10, 1996, McKinney filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). In his Appeal, McKinney challenges the OGC determination. This Appeal, if granted, would require that OGC release to McKinney the withheld memorandum.

II. Analysis

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency memoranda or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). The three principal privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion are the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege, and the "deliberative process" privilege. See Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In the present case, the OGC relied upon the first two privileges of Exemption 5.

The Attorney-Client Privilege

The attorney-client privilege exists to protect confidential communications, including facts, (a) from a client to an attorney, if for the purpose of securing legal advice and (b) from an attorney to a client, if the communication is based on confidential information provided by the client. Sears, 421 U.S. at 154. Not all communications between attorney and client are privileged, however. Clarke v. American Commerce National Bank, 974 F.2d 127, 129 (9th Cir. 1992) (Clarke). The courts have limited the protection of the privilege to those communications necessary to obtain or provide legal advice. Fisher v. United States, 425 U.S. 391, 403-04 (1976). In other words, the privilege does not extend to social, informational, or procedural communications between attorney and client. Government Accountability Project, 24 DOE ¶ 80,129 at 80,570 (1994). Correspondence which reveals the motive of the client in seeking legal advice, litigation strategy or the specific nature of the services provided, such as researching particular areas of law, fall within the privilege. Clarke, 974 F.2d at 129.

We have reviewed the Farrell Memorandum, and find that it is a communication between an agency attorney and his client "concerning a legal and policy matter on which the [client] sought professional advice." See Determination Letter. The matter involved was the creation of agency policy regarding notification of beryllium workers concerning the possibility of toxic exposures. Farrell, in his capacity as legal counsel to the agency, recommended a specific legal course of action to his client. Thus, the Farrell Memorandum is protected from disclosure by the attorney-client privilege of Exemption 5.

The Attorney Work-Product Privilege

The attorney work-product privilege protects from disclosure documents which reveal "the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3); see also Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 511 (1947).This privilege does not extend to every written document generated by an attorney, but only to those prepared either for trial or in anticipation of litigation. See e.g. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 865. So long as there is "some articulable claim likely to lead to litigation," id., or potential litigation has become "identifiable," the work-product privilege will attach. See William Hyde, 17 DOE ¶ 80,130 at 80,570 (1988) (citing Kent Corp. v. NLRB, 530 F.2d 612, 623 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 920 (1976)).

The Determination Letter states that the memorandum concerns a key issue in "fairly foreseeable" litigation. At the time the Farrell Memorandum was written, there was much concern about possible litigation by beryllium workers seeking remedies for occupational exposure to beryllium. We find that this meets the standard of "identifiable potential litigation." In recent conversations, the OGC has informed us that there is pending beryllium exposure litigation and the possibility exists of future suits in this area. Therefore, based upon our review of the Farrell Memorandum and the Determination Letter, and upon our conversations with the OGC, we find that the withheld document was in 1986, and continues to be today, protected from disclosure by the attorney work-product privilege of Exemption 5.

Discretionary Disclosure

Under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1, material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA may be released if disclosure is determined to be in the public interest. The OGC concluded that discretionary disclosure would not be in the public interest because such release could adversely impact currently pending and possibly future litigation in which the agency is involved. See Determination Letter. In response, McKinney asserts broadly that the public has a right to know that "DOE lawyers do not have our health and safety in mind." See Appeal Letter at 1. He presents as support a 1949 Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) document that contains references to moral issues, moral responsibility, public relations, and the public health. Id.

As stated previously, we agree with the OGC that the withheld document is privileged. However, both DOE's openness policy and the Attorney General's presumption that the public interest lies with disclosure in the absence of a reasonably foreseeable harm to an agency interest protected by an exemption require that we further examine the agency determination within the framework of both policies. McKinney is already privy to the final recommendation of the Farrell Memorandum (that the DOE should not initiate a notification program for beryllium plant workers because the agency has no legal duty to warn) through a previous disclosure. He now seeks disclosure of the entire memorandum, which sets forth the legal analysis used by agency counsel in arriving at this result. The OGC has stated clearly that DOE could be harmed in current and future litigation were this document, containing the legal advice, theories and opinions of its attorneys, to be released to the public.

Assuming, arguendo, that disclosure of the entire memorandum might be consistent with the public interest in knowledge of the operations of the government, we must balance this interest with the potentially chilling effect that full disclosure could have on future attorney-client communications, especially those made in anticipation of litigation. We recognize that there is also a substantial public interest in impartial litigation. Thus, we conclude that release of the Farrell Memorandum could cause foreseeable harm to the agency in ongoing and future litigation, and is not in the public interest. Accordingly, this Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Burlin McKinney on June 10, 1996, Case Number VFA-0177, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

July 10, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: William H. Payne

Date of Filing: June 11, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0178

On June 11, 1996, William H. Payne filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) on June 3, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (AO). In his Appeal, Mr. Payne asserts that AO failed to provide him with all of the responsive documents in its possession regarding a Request for Information he made on November 14, 1995 (November FOIA Request).

I. Background

In the November FOIA Request, Mr. Payne requested from Sandia National Laboratory (SNL) copies of documents relating to four specified categories of information regarding various complaints he had filed while he was an employee at SNL. <1> AO, in its Determination Letter dated June 3, 1996, informed Mr. Payne that it had conducted a search of the files at SNL and at the Kirtland Area Office and that it could find no documents responsive to his request.

In his Appeal, Mr. Payne argues that responsive documents must exist regarding the categories of information he requested in his FOIA Request. Specifically, Mr. Payne asserts that in January 1992 he contacted the SNL Ombudsman regarding his allegation that he was improperly ordered to "reverse engineer" the software for a Hirsch Scramblepad electronic lock.<2> After he was fired by his employer at SNL in July 1992, Mr. Payne discovered material he says substantiates his belief that SNL possesses documents of the type described in the November FOIA Request. He refers to an August 1993 affidavit prepared by an SNL patent attorney in which the attorney stated that reverse engineering of copyrighted software for various purposes was permissible under U.S. copyright laws. In the affidavit, the attorney cited two U.S. Court of Appeal cases decided in September and October 1992 as support for his conclusion. <3> Mr. Payne alleges that these cases declared reverse engineering of copyrighted software legal only as of September 1992, and thus the reverse engineering practices he complained of were in fact illegal at the time he submitted his complaints to SNL and at the time he was subsequently fired. He therefore maintains that, because his complaint concerned illegal practices, it is likely that SNL created and retained investigatory documents which would be responsive to his November FOIA Request.<4>

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was reasonable, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095,1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

As an initial matter, we decline to accept Mr. Payne's argument regarding the reason additional documents must exist. After reviewing the two cited cases in the affidavit, we find no evidence that either court opined that the software reverse engineering practices at issue were illegal prior to the court's decision. Thus, there is no indication that the practices Mr. Payne allegedly complained about were illegal or that SNL would necessarily have created investigatory documents regarding his complaint. Consequently, the assertions in the affidavit provide no evidence as to whether SNL ever possessed documents responsive to Mr. Payne's request.

We did, however, contact officials at AO to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. We were informed that AO undertook a search at the SNL offices and other AO facilities most likely to possess responsive documents. Specifically, AO searched the files at SNL's Staffing Organization (personnel department), Personnel Security Organization, System Research Center and the Legal Department, but found no responsive documents.<5> AO also inquired of the SNL Ombudsman who informed AO officials that he retained no records regarding Mr. Payne and does not retain any written records regarding individuals who may come to his office. Additionally, AO also searched its files at the Kirtland Area Office, the area office which supervises SNL and found no responsive documents. Given the facts presented to us, we find that AO conducted an adequate search which was reasonably calculated to discover documents responsive to Mr. Payne's November FOIA Request. Consequently, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by William H. Payne on June 11, 1996, is denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>Specifically, Mr. Payne requested from SNL copies of all investigatory reports regarding his allegations that the National Security Agency attempted to sabotage a DOE/SNL cryptographic project and that he was illegally requested to "reverse engineer" the software for a Hirsch Scramblepad electronic lock. Additionally, Mr. Payne requested copies of all investigation reports relating to his complaints regarding two SNL supervisors, Preston Herrington and Thomas Wright. Mr. Payne also requested copies of all investigation reports regarding his complaints regarding a SNL manager, Tommy Sellers.

<2>In this Decision, the term "reverse engineering" refers to the practice of obtaining a copy of a copyrighted software product and then deciphering the software to ascertain the actual computer program contained in the software. For a more complete description of the process of reverse engineering of software, see the cases cited in footnote 3 infra.

<3>The two cases cited in the affidavit were Sega Enterprises Ltd. v. Accolade, Inc., 977 F.2d 1510 (9th Cir. 1992) and Atari Games Corp. v. Nintendo of America, Inc., 975 F.2d 832 (Fed. Cir. 1992).

<4>Additionally, Mr. Payne apparently argues that AO may have responded to the wrong FOIA Request. Mr. Payne notes that the Determination Letter states that it is responding to a March 18, 1996 FOIA Request and not his November FOIA Request. The explanation provided below should clarify matters. AO informed us that Mr. Payne sent his November FOIA Request to an official at SNL but the official failed to forward the request to AO. Subsequently, Mr. Payne sent a letter dated March 18, 1996 to AO inquiring as to why he had not received a response to his November FOIA Request. In this letter, he enclosed a copy of the November FOIA Request. Subsequently, AO processed his November FOIA Request but dated the request as of March 18, 1996, the date AO received a copy of the November FOIA Request. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Ms. Carolyn Becknell, FOIA Officer, AO, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (June 24, 1996).

<5>During the time Mr. Payne worked there, SNL lacked a central office to handle complaints of the type described in the November FOIA Request. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Carolyn Becknell, FOIA Officer, AO and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (July 1, 1996).

Case No. VFA-0179, 25 DOE ¶ 80,215

July 16, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Glen Milner

Date of Filing: June 14, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0179

On June 14, 1996, Glen Milner filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on May 29, 1996, by the Freedom of Information Act/Privacy Act Division (FOI/PA) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination concerned a request for information submitted by Mr. Milner pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If the present Appeal were granted, FOI/PA would be required to conduct a further search for responsive material.

I. Background

In his March 22, 1996 request to Albuquerque, Mr. Milner sought information regarding "the decision in 1992 to send specially fitted railcars to Russia to transport nuclear weapons and the present use and condition of these railcars." Request Letter dated March 22, 1996 from Glen Milner to Freedom of Information Officer, Albuquerque Operations Office. (Request Letter). Mr. Milner sent a copy of this request to Secretary O'Leary and it was forwarded to the FOI/PA Division for a response. FOI/PA asked the Office of Defense Programs (DP) to search DOE Headquarters records for information regarding this request. DP conducted a search of the Office of Nuclear Weapons Management and the Surety Office. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Janet R. H. Fishman, Attorney-Examiner, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) and Joan Ogbazghi, FOI/PA, July 2, 1996. On May 29, 1996, FOI/PA issued its determination stating that it could find nothing responsive to Mr. Milner's request. At the present time, the Albuquerque Operations Office is still processing Mr. Milner's request.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988).

In reviewing the present Appeal, we contacted Joan Ogbazghi in the FOI/PA Division to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any documents responsive to Mr. Milner's request might exist. We were informed by Ms Ogbazghi that DP conducted a search of the Office of Nuclear Weapons Management and the Surety Office at Headquarters for information regarding a 1992 decision to send the railcars to Russia. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Janet R. H. Fishman, and Joan Ogbazghi, July 2, 1996. In our conversation with DP, we determined that information about the "White Train," as it is also known, is maintained in Albuquerque. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Janet R. H. Fishman, and Joe Hobbs, DP, July 3, 1996 (Memorandum of July 3, 1996 Telephone Conversation). DP searched the two offices at Headquarters that would be most likely to have any information on a 1992 decision about the White Train and did not find anything responsive to Mr. Milner's request.

In his Appeal, Mr. Milner states that he was requesting "all documents on record since 1985 concerning the specially fitted railcars used for the transport of nuclear weapons." Appeal Letter dated June 8, 1996, from Glen Milner to Director, OHA. (Appeal Letter). However, FOI/PA and DP quite properly believed that, as stated in the first sentence of his letters to both Albuquerque and Secretary O'Leary, Mr. Milner was requesting information on a decision to send the White Train to Russia. In the letter to Albuquerque, he requests information on a 1992 decision in the first paragraph and does not broaden his request until later in the letter. Request Letter. In his letter to Secretary O'Leary, he never broadens the request but merely states that he is "requesting information on the decision in 1992 to send specially fitted railcars to Russia." Letter dated March 25, 1996, from Glen Milner to Secretary Hazel O'Leary, DOE. Therefore, we believe that it was reasonable for DP to limit its search to information on a decision made in 1992.<1>

We are convinced that the interpretation accorded his letter was reasonable and that FOI/PA followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the material requested by Mr. Milner. See Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Mr. Milner asserts that DOE must have additional documents. However, the fact that the search did not uncover documents Mr. Milner believed may be in the possession of DOE does not mean that the search was inadequate. In addition, Mr. Milner has not provided any evidence, beyond his personal belief, that any additional documents exist in Headquarters' files. Finally, DP has informed us that the DOE never considered sending specially fitted railcars to Russia. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Janet R. H. Fishman and Joe Hobbs, July 15, 1996. Therefore, under the circumstances of this case, we find that FOI/PA's search for responsive documents was adequate and that no documents responsive to Mr. Milner's request for information on a 1992 decision concerning the White Train exist at Headquarters. Accordingly, Mr. Milner's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed on June 14, 1996, by Glen Milner, Case No. VFA-0179, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0180, 26 DOE ¶ 80,102

July 31, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: U.S. Solar Roof

Date of Filing: June 19, 1996

Case Numbers: VFA-0180

VFA-0181

On June 19, 1996, U.S. Solar Roof of Bothell, Washington filed two Appeals from a determination issued on June 5, 1996 by the Acting Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Office of Utility Technologies, Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy (Utility Technologies) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part U.S. Solar Roof's requests for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the requested information.

Background

On April 2, 1996, U.S. Solar Roof filed two FOIA requests with the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts Division of the DOE in Washington, D.C. The first request, which was given FOIA Control No. 9604080004, consists of two parts. In the first part, U.S. Solar Roof sought information dealing with the DOE PV:BONUS program. PV:BONUS is a DOE initiative intended to promote the development of cost-effective photovoltaic products and infra-structure for practical use in domestic, residential, commercial, and institutional construction and buildings. In particular, U.S. Solar Roof sought minutes from PV:BONUS "program meetings" that it stated were held in Washington, D.C., between November 16, 1992 and January 27, 1993. U.S. Solar Roof also listed potential meeting attendees, the applicable DOE Program Office (Office of Solar Electric Conversion) and potential DOE points of contact. The second part of U.S. Solar Roof's first request asked for "trip reports" resulting from those "program meetings." U.S. Solar Roof's second FOIA request, denominated FOIA Control No. 9604080005, seeks statements and non-disclosure certifications made between August 16, 1994 and March 31, 1995 by persons outside the agency who reviewed

U.S. Solar Roof's unsolicited proposal to demonstrate and validate solar roofing tile technologies.

These requests were forwarded to Utility Technologies, which responded in a letter to U.S. Solar Roof on May 20, 1996. That letter, which referenced both FOIA Control Numbers, informed U.S. Solar Roof that there had been no meetings in Washington, D.C., on the matters it specified during the requested period. Utility Technologies stated that all relevant meetings had taken place in Golden, Colorado, at the DOE's Golden Field Office. Thus, Utility Technologies concluded that its search had not revealed any documents directly responsive to U.S. Solar Roof's specific request. Utility Technologies also stated that there were no "trip reports" for the meetings in Golden, Colorado or for the alleged meetings in Washington, D.C. Utility Technologies made no mention of the request for the material on U.S. Solar Roof's unsolicited proposal.

U.S. Solar Roof wrote a response to Utility Technologies on May 31, 1996, in which it attempted to clarify its request. The clarification was in fact an expansion of the original request from "program meetings" to include "other meetings (formal or informal) between DOE Golden Field Office personnel and DOE Headquarters personnel [where] the PV:BONUS program was discussed." Utility Technologies responded to this second letter on June 5, 1996, again referencing both FOIA Control Numbers. For the purposes of this Appeal, this second letter was identical to the first letter. U.S. Solar Roof then filed this Appeal challenging the adequacy of Utility Technologies' search.

Analysis

Under the FOIA, in response to an appropriate request that reasonably describes the information sought and conforms to agency regulations, an agency must search its records and release responsive, unpublished, non-exempt information which it has created or obtained at the time of the request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3), (b); Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 144-45 (1989); James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,127 at 80,558 (1992). A search that complies with the FOIA need not cover every corner of the agency. Oglesby v. Department of the Army, 920 F.2d 57, 68 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (and cases cited therein); Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1383 (8th Cir. 1985); Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 705 F.2d 1344, 1351 (D.C. Cir. 1983); Martha L. Powers, 24 DOE ¶ 80,147 at 80,618 (1994); Citizens' Action Committee of Pike County Citizens, 22 DOE ¶ 80,178 at 80,679 (1993). Rather, an adequate search under the FOIA need only be one reasonably calculated to uncover the documents requested. Safecard Services, Inc. v. Securities and Exchange Comm'n, 926 F.2d 1197, 1201 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (and cases cited therein); Meeropol v. Meese, 790 F.2d 942, 950-51 (D.C. Cir. 1986); Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984); William H. Payne, 24 DOE ¶ 80,145 at 80,615 (1994); Energy Products, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,528 (1993). "An adequate search, however, must be 'a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents.'" Energy Research Foundation, 22 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,529 (1992) (quoting The Lowry Coalition, 21 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,535 (1991)). This Office will remand a case for further action if it is evident that an inadequate search was conducted, or if evidence reveals that other documents that were not identified during the initial search exist. Id. See also Linda J. Carlisle, 24 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,560 (1994); McGraw-Hill Nuclear Publications, 22 DOE ¶ 80,157 at 80,627 (1992); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,153 at 80,658 (1991).

In its Appeal of the matters covered by its first FOIA request, FOIA Control Number 9604080004, OHA Case Number VFA-0180, U.S. Solar Roof claims that Utility Technologies' response is insufficient because it does not provide documents from meetings allegedly held in Washington, D.C. It claims that it knows at least one such meeting took place because it was told about the meeting by the Golden Field Office contract specialist who worked on the PV:BONUS program.

To test U.S. Solar Roof's contentions in its Appeal, we contacted the contract specialist at the Golden Field Office. He informs us that he remembers the conversation with U.S. Solar Roof's president but that there appears to be an unfortunate misunderstanding by U.S. Solar Roof. The contract specialist states that he did not personally participate in any meetings with DOE Headquarters personnel. However, he thinks that telephonic discussions between DOE Headquarters and the Golden Field Office regarding funding matters may have taken place. There were, to the best of his knowledge, no meetings held in Washington, D.C., or any meetings with DOE Headquarters personnel regarding the substance of the PV:BONUS program or any particular PV:BONUS grant proposal. All substantive work on the PV:BONUS program, he informed us, was done at the Golden Field Office.

The contract specialist also referred us to a member of the Technical Development Division of the Golden Field Office who was involved in the determination of the PV:BONUS awards. This individual was also one of the persons that U.S. Solar Roof believed attended the PV:BONUS meetings allegedly held in Washington, D.C. Our conversation with this gentleman, who was chairman of the PV:BONUS evaluation board and who reported to the selection official at the Golden Field Office, substantially confirmed what the contract specialist told us. He stated that there were no meetings held with Golden Field Office personnel at DOE Headquarters in Washington, D.C. concerning the PV:BONUS program and that he had checked his files for responsive documents and found none. He also confirmed that all of the PV:BONUS work was done at the Golden Field Office. He states that there was no discussion of specific proposals submitted to the PV:BONUS program with DOE Headquarters personnel during the time specified in U.S. Solar Roof's FOIA request.

We also checked with the other Golden, Colorado-based person who U.S. Solar Roof claims attended the alleged Washington, D.C. meetings. Like his colleague at the Golden Field Office, this consultant with the National Renewable Energy Laboratory states that all PV:BONUS review meetings were held in Golden. He informs us that there were no programmatic meetings held in Washington, D.C. or with DOE Headquarters personnel during the time period specified by U.S. Solar Roof. He had confirmed this at the time of the original request by checking his records for such meetings and found no responsive documents.

In addition to the two persons at the Golden Field Office and the consultant at the National Renewable Energy Laboratory, we spoke to the Director of the Photovoltaic Technology Division at DOE Headquarters. U.S. Solar Roof also listed this individual as being at the alleged Washington, D.C. meetings. He told us that he had checked his records and calendar and determined that he had no meetings on the PV:BONUS program in Washington, D.C. with Golden Field Office personnel during the requested time period. He also reaffirmed that all PV:BONUS grant selection work had been done at the Golden Field Office.

Finally, we interviewed the manager of the PV:BONUS program at DOE Headquarters who had performed the FOIA search in this case. Like the other people we spoke with, he told us that all PV:BONUS meetings and selections were made at the Golden Field Office. He also informed us that he had double-checked his calendars and files and found that there were no PV:BONUS meetings during the time and of the type described by U.S. Solar Roof in its FOIA request. In addition, he had asked the chairman of the PV:BONUS evaluation board at the Golden Field Office and the consultant from the National Renewable Energy Laboratory, both of whom are referred to above, to search for records. They both informed him that there were no responsive documents and that all programmatic work on PV:BONUS was done in Golden.

We have contacted every person U.S. Solar Roof named in either its FOIA request or its FOIA Appeal. Every person related the same information, viz., that all substantive PV:BONUS work was done at Golden, that no substantive meetings on PV:BONUS were held in Washington, D.C. or with DOE Headquarters personnel during the specified time frame, and that U.S. Solar Roof has received all the information the agency has concerning its PV:BONUS application. Given all of these facts, we are unable to conclude that any meetings matching a reasonable construction of the language in U.S. Solar Roof's FOIA request took place. Thus, there are no documents memorializing discussions at such meetings or travel reports for them. Accordingly, we find no flaw with Utility Technologies' search and response to U.S. Solar Roof on FOIA Control Number 960408004.

We reach a different conclusion on U.S. Solar Roof's second FOIA request, FOIA Control Number 9604080005, which was assigned OHA Case Number VFA-0181. U.S. Solar Roof states that it has received no response to this request and that this constitutes constructive denial of its request. This Office has consistently found that it has no jurisdiction to consider an Appeal until a determination is issued by a DOE office. See Suffolk County, Long Island, New York, 17 DOE ¶ 80,111 at 80,524-25 (1988). Although we lack jurisdiction to offer U.S. Solar Roof a remedy on this Appeal, we have contacted Utility Technologies on this matter. It appears that its lack of a response was due to an inadvertent omission. Once the oversight was discovered, Utility Technologies agreed to undertake an expeditious search for responsive documents and will respond directly to U.S. Solar Roof. Accordingly, this portion of the U.S. Solar Roof Appeal will be dismissed.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by U.S. Solar Roof, OHA Case No. VFA-0180, is hereby denied.

(2) The Appeal filed by U.S. Solar Roof, OHA Case No. VFA-0181, is hereby dismissed.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the alleged agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0182, 26 DOE ¶ 80,143

December 6, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Burns Concrete, Inc.

Date of Filing: June 17, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0182

On June 17, 1996, Burns Concrete, Inc., filed an Appeal from a determination issued on April 26, 1996, by the DOE's Pittsburgh Naval Reactors Office (PNR). The determination responded to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On December 20, 1995, Burns filed a request under the FOIA for documents submitted by Walters Ready Mix, Inc. (Walters) in connection with a purchase order for concrete supplied for the Expanded Core Facility Dry Cell Project at DOE's Bettis Atomic Power Laboratory, Naval Reactors Facility (NRF). This project was terminated in 1993 and Walters submitted the documents sought by Burns as part of a settlement proposal to recover its costs associated with the project. The project was rebid in early 1996, and the DOE again chose Walters to fill the purchase order.

Because Burns sought information submitted by a third party, PNR sought and received comments on Burns' request from Walters. Letter from Sally B. Pfund and Robert J. Martinez, Williams & Jensen (representing Walters), to James S. Carey, Jr. (April 2, 1996); see Exec. Order No. 12,600, 3 C.F.R. 235 (1988) (requiring notice to submitters). PNR issued a final determination on April 26, 1996. Letter from H.A. Cardinali, Manager, PNR, to Linda Szimhardt, Office Manager, Burns (April 26, 1996). In its determinations PNR released documents to Burns, but withheld certain responsive documents and portions of other responsive documents under FOIA Exemption 4, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). Id. The present Appeal was filed on June 17, 1996. Letter from Linda Szimhardt, Burns, to Director, OHA (June 7, 1996). In its Appeal, Burns objects to the withholding of information in many of the documents responsive to its request. Id. We received comments from PNR in response to the Appeal on July 16, 1996. Memorandum from James S. Carey, Jr., Chief Counsel, PNR, to Steve Goering, OHA (July 9, 1996). Finally, Burns requested an opportunity to submit additional information in support of its appeal, the last of which was received by the OHA on November 7, 1996. Letter from Linda Szimhardt, Burns, to OHA (November 1, 1996); Letter from Linda Szimhardt to OHA (October 29, 1996); Letter from Linda Szimhardt to OHA

(September 18, 1996).

II. Analysis

A. Applicability of Exemption 4

Exemption 4 exempts from mandatory public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to qualify under Exemption 4, a document must contain either (a) trade secrets or (b) information which is (1) "commercial" or "financial," (2) "obtained from a person," and (3) "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has found that commercial or financial information submitted to the federal government under non-voluntary conditions is "confidential" for purposes of Exemption 4 if disclosure of the information is likely either: (i) to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (ii) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. Id. at 770; Critical Mass Energy Project v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 507 U.S. 984 (1993) (Critical Mass). By contrast, information that is provided to an agency voluntarily is considered "confidential" if "it is of a kind that the provider would not customarily make available to the public." Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879.

Clearly, documents submitted by a company to the DOE in connection with a proposal for reimbursement of costs it incurred are "commercial" within the meaning of Exemption 4 because of the vendor's commercial interest in receiving compensation. Public Citizen Health Research Group v. FDA, 704 F.2d 1280, 1290 (D.C. Cir. 1983) (citing Washington Post Co. v. HHS, 690 F.2d 252, 266 (D.C. Cir. 1982)) (records are commercial so long as the submitter has a "commercial interest" in them). In addition, the information was obtained from a "person," as required by Exemption 4, since corporations are deemed "persons" for purposes of that Exemption. See Allnet Communications Servs. v. FCC, 800 F. Supp. 984, 988 (D.D.C. 1992) ("person" under Exemption 4 "refers to a wide range of entities including corporations"), aff'd, No. 92-5351 (D.C. Cir. May 27, 1994); see also Ronson Management Corp., 19 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1989).

Regarding whether the documents at issue are "confidential," we consistently have held that information submitted in connection with a Request for Proposal is not submitted voluntarily and is therefore to be considered confidential only if it meets the test set out in National Parks. E.g., Glen M. Jameson, 25 DOE ¶ 80,191 (1996). The federal courts have reasoned that even though such submissions are voluntary in the sense that no company is forced to do business with the government, information required by the terms of a Request for Proposal must be submitted if "contractors want to win lucrative government contracts . . . ." McDonnell Douglas Corp v. NASA, No. 91-3134, slip op. at 4 (D.D.C. June 30, 1995).

Similarly in the present case, the documents submitted by Walters were required to be submitted in order for the company to do business in connection with a government project, and specifically in order to receive reimbursement once that project was terminated. Indeed, Walters did not argue, nor did PNR conclude, that the documents at issue were submitted voluntarily. Accordingly, we will find the information at issue to be "confidential" only to the extent that its disclosure is likely either to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the submitter, Walters.

B. Information Withheld from the Appellant

1. Concrete Mix Design Test Data

Some of the information withheld from Burns concerned a mix design, High Density Concrete Mix Design 3500 psi (Trial Batch NX145-1), submitted by Walters for concrete that was to be used in the Dry Cell Project. Burns was provided with the mix design for this specialty concrete, but data from tests performed on the mix design was withheld. This information is located at Tab C(1) (six pages withheld in their entirety) and Tab K (p. 122).

Where there is competition in a given industry, the courts have reasoned that release of "proprietary technical information ?would seriously undermine a company's competitive advantage by allowing competitors to have access to ideas and design details that they would not have had or would have had to spend considerable funds to develop on their own.'" SMS Data Prods. Group, Inc. v. Department of the Air Force, No. 88-0481-LFO, slip op. at 3 (D.D.C. March 31, 1989) (citation omitted). The submitter argues that there is competition in its local concrete market. We agree with Walters that there is such competition, as demonstrated by the fact that the Burns competed with Walters on the Dry Cell Project. See Gulf & W. Indus., Inc. v. United States, 615 F. 2d 527, 530 (D.C. Cir. 1979) (Gulf & Western). However, Walters must also demonstrate that there is a "likelihood of substantial competitive harm" in order for the information to be exempt from release. Id. at 530. For the most part, we find that Walters has not made this showing with regard to the testing data, but as we explain below, we do find that some of this data may be withholdable under Exemption 4.

a. Competitive Harm Based on the Cost of Running Tests if there is a Rebid of the Dry Cell Project

First, Walters argues that the test data in the present case should be withheld because [a] competitor intending to use the mix design furnished the Government by Walters would still be expected to run tests and produce supporting data, comparable to that for which Walters seeks protection. Release of Walters' data to Burns would allow Burns to do so without incurring the cost which Walters has borne, without reimbursement by the Government.

Letter from Sally B. Pfund and Robert J. Martinez, Williams & Jensen, to James S. Carey, Jr. (April 2, 1996) at 3.

Walters admits that "the information in question relates to a special mix which was developed by Walters for a particular project . . . ." Letter from Sally B. Pfund and Robert J. Martinez, Williams & Jensen, to James S. Carey, Jr. (April 2, 1996) at 3. Nonetheless, Walters contends that "Burns intends to use the information to try to affect the project for which the special mix was developed to force a recompetition of the requirement." Id. at 3-4.(2) At present, this prospect seems extremely unlikely. Though Walters correctly points out that this project has been terminated and rebid once before, the project has now proceeded to the point where it would likely be economically impractical to terminate it. Memorandum of telephone conversation between James Carey, PNR, and Steve Goering, OHA (October 28, 1996).(3) Therefore, we cannot find that Walters may suffer substantial competitive harm based on unfounded speculation that there will be another rebid of this project.

b. Competitive Harm in Future Procurements

Walters further argues that "[e]ven if Burns is unable to displace Walters from the current requirement, Walters would be injured by the release, since it would give Burns an improved position in future competitions. Although DOE may not have current plans for a project which would require use of the special mix design for this project, it is possible that there will be a future need by DOE or another customer." Letter from Sally B. Pfund and Robert J. Martinez, Williams & Jensen, to James S. Carey, Jr. (April 2, 1996) at 4. See Affidavit of Cary W. Sargent, Walters at 4 ("It is likely that other projects will arise in the future which would be appropriate for use of the special mix design designed for this project, or for a very similar mix.").

We agree with Walters that release of the testing data could reveal information regarding the properties and characteristics of the special mix beyond that which is revealed by the mix design alone. Data on the performance of a product design under testing conditions can reveal the strengths and weaknesses of that design. Such information could help Walter's competitors to improve upon the mix design and market a better product or to develop a comparable product at a lower cost. Even if Walters was reimbursed for the testing of the specialty mix design on the current project, this would not compensate Walters for the competitive harm it could suffer in the future as a result of the release of this information.(4)

However, we do not believe that the likelihood of this type of competitive harm exempts all of the testing data withheld from Burns from release under the FOIA,(5) especially considering the fact that Burns has already obtained the actual mix design in question. Therefore, we are remanding the testing data portion of the determination to PNR for the segregation and release of non-exempt material. We believe that PNR is in the best position to make a determination as to whether the release of the specific information at issue would cause substantial harm of this type to the competitive position of Walters. Finally, we have found that there was information withheld from Burns at Tab K, p. 122, that is contained in the mix design released to Burns. On remand, this information should be released.

2. Company Names

From four of the pages released to Burns, PNR redacted "Walters' letterhead . . . ." Letter from H.A. Cardinali, Manager, PNR, to Linda Szimhardt, Office Manager, Burns (April 26, 1996) at 3. PNR stated that release of the Walters name on the test results performed on two aggregates "will enable Burns to use the mix designs on Walters' letterhead as comparison documents to present to potential customers in attempting to market particular characteristics of its own designs. This will give Burns an advantage over Walters greater than it would have against other competitors and cause competitive harm to Walters." Id. Burns was already informed in PNR's determination that it is Walters' name that was redacted from the test results in question (located at Tab B, pp. 33, 35; and Tab C, pp. 40, 42). Moreover, the redacted information in these pages sought by Burns consists not of "letterhead," but merely the typewritten name of the company appearing near the top of the document in the same typeface as the rest of the document. Because release of this redacted information would provide no more information to Burns than it already possesses, we fail to see how release of the information would make the pages any more useful to Burns in competing with Walters, and as a result cause substantial harm to Walters' competitive position. Therefore, we believe this information should be released.

PNR also redacted "points of contact for aggregates used by Walters" from another page released to Burns. Id. This document (Tab B, p. 32) is a letter from the President of Nuclear Shielding Supplies and Service, a producer of aggregates, which lists the names of companies that have used certain of its products. The company names, contacts, phone numbers, and the projects in which the aggregates were used were redacted from the document. In addition, the name of the recipient of the letter was redacted from the document. The courts have found in certain cases that information which reveals the customers and suppliers of a company is protected under Exemption 4. See, e.g., Braintree Elec. Light Dept. v. Department of Energy, 494 F. Supp. 287 (D.D.C. 1980) (customers and suppliers); Goldstein v. ICC, No. 82-1511, slip op. at (D.D.C. July 20, 1984) (customers). However, none of the companies that would be revealed by a release of the names in the letter in this case is either a customer or a supplier of Walters. Rather, all of these companies are, like Walters, manufacturers of concrete. Because we cannot conclude that release of the identity of these companies would likely cause substantial harm to the competitive position of Walters, this information should also be released. In addition, company names which have been revealed in the documents already released to Burns are redacted at Tab K, pp. 146-51. These names should also be released.

3. Cost, Profit, and Overhead Data

The vast majority of the data withheld from Burns concerned costs incurred by Walters prior to the termination of the Dry Cell Project in 1993. This information was submitted by Walters as part of a settlement proposal to recover its costs associated with the project. From our review of the documents, we find that Walters' profit, actual costs and historic overhead rate are contained in many of them. Specifically, such information is contained at Tab E (pp. 51- 52), Tab F (p. 54), Tab G (pp. 56-67, 70, 73-78, 82, 84-91), Tab H (pp. 94-102, 104-06, 108), Tab I (pp. 111-14, 116-18), Tab J (p. 120), and Tab K (pp. 124, 128, 138-143, 145-175).

The United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia has held that, in a competitive market, information that would reveal the profit rates, general and administrative rates, and actual costs of a competitor company is exempt from release under the FOIA. Gulf & W. Indus., Inc. v. United States, 615 F. 2d 527 (D.C. Cir. 1979) (Gulf & Western). In Gulf & Western, the court found that with such information, the company's "competitors would be able to accurately calculate [the company's] future bids and its pricing structure from the withheld information. The deleted information, if released, would likely cause substantial harm to [the company's] competitive position in that it would allow competitors to estimate, and undercut, its bids." Id. at 530.

Burns makes the following arguments in support of its position that this cost data should be released: (1) much of the cost information redacted is "composite" data, and thus its release would not reveal the cost of individual items; (2) many of the costs incurred by Walters were specific to the Dry Cell Project, and therefore would not be predictive of future costs; (3) some of the costs are quotes Walters received from other firms, which include profit, overhead, and depreciation, and therefore their release would not reveal Walters' direct costs; (4) certain costs are described by Walters as "value, not out of pocket costs." The appellant argues that the decisions in General Dynamics Corp., Space Sys. Div. v. Department of the Air Force, 822 F. Supp. 804 (D.D.C. 1992), and Acumenics Research & Technology v. Department of Justice, 843 F.2d 800 (4th Cir. 1988) should be applied to the present case.

However, in actuality the cases cited by the appellant indirectly support the withholding of the cost information that Burns argues should be released. In these cases, the information at issue was unit prices or option prices. Key to the courts' decisions to uphold the release of the information was the fact that "competitively sensitive information such as cost, overhead, or profit identifiers would not be revealed." General Dynamics, 822 F. Supp. at 807; see Acumenics, 843 F.2d at 802, 806 (release of unit prices would not reveal Acumenics' "profit multiplier," the "product of a company's overhead, general and administrative costs (G & A), and profit, (overhead rate x G & A rate x profit)"). By contrast, release of the cost information submitted by Walters would reveal the company's general and administrative expense and profit. This can be easily illustrated by reference to one of the documents released to Burns (Tab K, p. 175). The document contains a final tabulation of all the costs for which Walters sought reimbursement, plus its general and administrative expenses and profit. At the bottom of the page is the total of all these figures, which PNR released to Burns. If the costs claimed by Walters were released, Burns or anyone else could simply subtract the costs from the total, and arrive at the amount apportioned to Walters' general and administrative expenses and profit.

Profit, general and administrative expenses, and overhead have been recognized by the courts as "competitively sensitive information" which is protected under Exemption 4. General Dynamics, 822 F. Supp. at. 806; see Gulf &Western, 615 F.2d at 530 (general and administrative expenses and profit); Braintree, 494 F. Supp. at 287, 290 (profit and overhead); Westinghouse Elec. Corp. v. Schlesinger, 392 F. Supp. 1246, 1249 (E.D. Va. 1974) (profit margin); cf. North Carolina Network for Animals v. Department of Agric., No. 90-1443, slip op. at 2 (4th Cir. Feb. 5, 1991) (information not protected by Exemption 4 because it does not reveal, inter alia, profit margin); Pacific Architects and Eng'rs Inc. v. Department of State, 906 F.2d 1345, 1347-48 (9th Cir. 1990) (upholding disclosure because competitor would not be able to calculate submitter's profit margin); Brownstein Zeidman and Schomer v. Department of the Air Force, 7821 F. Supp. 31, 33 (D.D.C. 1991) (ordering disclosure because claim that profit margin could be deduced from withheld information was "speculative"). Though Burns' arguments accurately characterize much of the withheld cost information in the present case, these characterizations do not change the fact that release of the information would reveal Walters' profit and general and administrative expenses.(6) We therefore agree with PNR's withholding of this information.

Nonetheless, there is also information that was withheld from Burns that we believe should be released. The release of this information, described below, would be unlikely to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of Walters:

51: two words at the bottom of the page under the word "Melment- Superplasticizer"

52: dollar figure in the middle of the page below the body of the letter (does not appear to related to any other item on the page, and would therefore not identify an actual cost to Walters)

57: number of hours listed next to the name "Cary Sargent" (is revealed elsewhere in the documents released to Burns)

58: number of years under the column "Estimated Useful Life" (revealed elsewhere in documents); number of months on line "Suspension period"

59: first five words in Note 1

62: volume of melment superplasticizer (revealed elsewhere in documents); last two words of the first line of Note 6

63: last two words of the first sentence in Note 1

64: cost of item 3 (is revealed by volume and price on same line)

66: % of quantity required under column 6

67: submittal preparation time (revealed elsewhere in documents); remaining project to complete

74: three handwritten words at the bottom of page

76: number of months on line "Suspension period"

86: quantities in footnote at bottom of page

87: all information other than dollar amounts

90: absorption rate (revealed in mix design already released)

97: quantity under 1(a), "stockpiling;" number of tons/trip in Note 3

98: number of hours of labor in Note 5

104: number of units and tons

105: number of miles and tons

112: information under column 5, lines "Advance, Progress and Partial Payments" and "Net Payment Requested"

113: information under column 4, lines "Advance, Progress and Partial Payments" and "Net Payment Requested"

115: number of miles

116: number of miles, months; usage credit; information on last two lines of paragraph (c)

117: number of months, trucks

120: any dollar amounts that do not directly reflect costs claimed by Walters

In addition, many of the documents withheld from Burns contain handwritten numbers in the form of "##-#.#" (e.g., Tab G, p. 61). Because these numbers do not appear to reveal any information regarding Walters cost, profit, or overhead, they should also be released.

Finally, there are three pages of information that were inadvertently not released to Burns. Two of these pages appear to be the documentation referred to as "Tab J" on p. 99, n. 10. On remand, PNR should release any non-exempt information on these pages in accordance with the guidance set forth above.(7)

C. Adequacy of PNR's Search for Responsive Documents

Burns also asserts that there should be additional documentation in the possession of PNR concerning aggregates submitted for use in the Dry Cell Project. See Letter from Linda Szimhardt, Burns, to OHA (September 18, 1996) at 2-5. In the event we were to agree, we would order an additional search. A FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and the OHA has remanded cases where it was evident that the search conducted was inadequate. See, e.g., James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,138 (1991); Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1988). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord, Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

We have contacted PNR, and they have informed us that any documents sought by Burns concerning the aggregates submitted by Walters would have been kept in the same location as the documents already released to Burns. PNR also has confirmed with the personnel who conducted the search that no additional documents exist which are responsive to its request. We therefore conclude that PNR conducted a search reasonably calculated to uncover responsive documents. However, on remand, Burns may provide any additional information to PNR that it thinks might help identify additional locations where responsive documents may be located. The FOIA and DOE regulations encourage the requester and agency to communicate and work together to resolve difficulties in providing responsive documents. This type of cooperation assists the agency in fulfilling the intent of the FOIA to make agency records accessible to the public, and it increases administrative efficiency in handling these requests. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(c)(2); see also Douglas L. Parker, 20 DOE ¶ 80,107 (1989); Hartford Courant, 15 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987).

III. Conclusion

For the reasons explained above, we will remand this case to PNR, which should promptly issue a new determination releasing the non-exempt information to the appellant in accordance with this decision, or shall explain in detail its reasons for withholding any of this information. In all other respects, the present appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Burns Concrete, Inc., Case No. VFA-0182, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the DOE's Pittsburgh Naval Reactors Office, which shall promptly issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1) The responsive documents provided to Burns in PNR's January 16, 1996 determination were organized under Tabs labeled A through J. The documents provided to Burns under Tabs A and D are not at issue in the present case. Letter from Linda Szimhardt, Burns, to Director, OHA (June 7, 1996); Memorandum of telephone conversation between Linda Szimhardt, Burns, and Steven Goering, OHA (October 16, 1996).

(2) Burns disputes Walters' contention that Walters was not reimbursed by the government for the costs incurred in running tests on the specialty mix design. Although it appears from our review of the relevant documents that Walters was in fact reimbursed for the cost of testing, PNR assures us that Walters was reimbursed for the costs incurred in preparing the test results for submittal, but not for the costs of running the tests. Memorandum of telephone conversation between James Carey, PNR, and Steve Goering, OHA (October 24, 1996).

(3) Walters cites Gulf & Western as support for the position that its rather speculative claim of harm is sufficient to warrant Exemption 4 protection. However, the court in Gulf & Western was informed that future bids were going to be solicited on the same product at issue in that case. Gulf & Western, 615 F.2d at 530.

(4) Burns argues that the test data is not protected by Exemption 4 because ownership of the information passed to the government upon the termination of the project. See Letter from Linda Szimhardt, Burns Concrete, to OHA (November 1, 1996); Letter from Linda Szimhardt to OHA (October 29, 1996). However, the fact that the Government has ownership of information does not in itself preclude its withholding under Exemption 4 if its release would cause competitive harm to the submitter of the information. Cf. Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 877-79 (competitive harm prong of Exemption 4 protects the interest of both the government and the submitter).

(5) We note that the FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b) (1982). See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 89, 91 (1973); Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Air Force, 556 F.2d 242, 259-62 (D.C. Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 927 (1978); Casson, Calligaro & Mutryn, 10 DOE ¶ 80,137 at 80,615 (1983). Segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary where it is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material so that release of the non-exempt material would "compromise" the withheld material, or where the amount of non-exempt material is small and so interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate. Lead Indus. Ass'n v. OSHA, 610 F.2d 70, 83-86 (2d Cir. 1979). Such segregation was performed by PNR on all the documents at issue other than the six pages containing testing data, which were withheld in their entirety.

(6) The "value engineering markup" withheld from Burns (Tab G, pp. 70, 84, 85) was derived solely from the overhead and profit figures which we have found to be protected under Exemption 4.

(7) Burns also contends that it was not provided "Tab L" referred to on p. 99 and the "Supplemental File" referred to on p. 94. PNR has informed us that "Tab L" refers to the documents at pp. 156-60, and that the "Supplemental File" refers to the documents at pp. 97-110. Memorandum of telephone conversation between James Carey, PNR, and Steve Goering, OHA (July 17, 1996).

Case No. VFA-0183, 26 DOE ¶ 80,101

July 22, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Appellant: Richard Joslin

Case Number: VFA-0183

Date of Filing: June 21, 1996

Richard Joslin (Joslin) files this appeal under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. Pursuant to the FOIA, Joslin had requested a copy of an investigative report written by the audit staff at the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA). In response, BPA informed Joslin that it found a responsive document, but would withhold it in its entirety. Joslin's appeal, if granted, would require BPA to release all or part of the responsive document.

Background

The FOIA generally provides that any person has a right of access to federal agency records, except to the extent that the records (or portions of them) are protected from disclosure by one of nine exemptions or three special law enforcement exclusions.

The report requested by Joslin investigated allegations of impropriety by an official at a BPA site. BPA responded to Joslin's request in a Determination Letter dated June 12, 1996. In the letter, BPA informed Joslin that it would withhold the document under the provisions of Exemption 5 of the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. Section 552(b)(5). BPA further explained that it was asserting the deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5 to withhold the report.

Analysis

Exemption 5 protects "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party … in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5). The language of Exemption 5 has been construed to "exempt those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in a civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975).

Courts have recognized several privileges incorporated into Exemption 5, including the deliberative process privilege which is asserted here by BPA. To fall within the scope of the deliberative process privilege, a document must be: (1) predecisional, that is, antecedent to the adoption of an agency policy; and (2) deliberative, that is, recommending or expressing an opinion on legal or policy matters. Mapother v. Department of Justice, 3 F. 3d 1533, 1537 (D.C. Cir. 1993); Petroleum Info. Corp. v. United States Dep't of the Interior, 976 F.2d 1429, 1434 (D.C. Cir. 1992); Jordan v. United States Dep't of Justice, 591 F.2d 753, 774 (D.C. Cir. 1978); Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F.2d 1136, 1143-44 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

Joslin's position is that the deliberative process privilege does not apply because the report is not predecisional. In his Appeal Letter, he contends that "there has been no communication on [the] part of the Agency that this report is not final or that another report (final report) will be issued in the future."

Contrary to Joslin's assertion, BPA clearly claims in its Determination Letter that the report is "a predecisional document that … provides information to BPA management… While this report presents an analysis, it does not reflect any final decision by BPA." We confirmed by telephone that the report was compiled to assist BPA management in deciding what action to take regarding the allegations of impropriety. Moreover, the BPA management has not reached that decision, and may require further investigation. We therefore conclude that the report is predecisional.

To qualify for protection under Exemption 5, the report must be deliberative as well as predecisional. In the determination letter, BPA implied that the report is deliberative, explaining that "BPA management will determine how it will use this report in any future decisions." We examined a copy of the report to assess the validity of BPA's claim.

The report consists of three parts: a brief background section, summaries of statements by witnesses, and a conclusion. The witness statements reflect the recollections, opinions, and interpretations of the employees. The report makes no finding of fact. Such unsworn statements of witnesses, in which they give personal opinions and speculations, have been found to be deliberative.Cooper v. Dep't of Navy, 558 F. 2d 274 (5th Cir. 1977); aff'd on reh'g, 594 F. 2d 484 (1979); cert. denied, 444 U.S. 926 (1979). We conclude that the summaries of witness statements are deliberative and fall within the scope of Exemption 5. Moreover, the conclusion of the report summarizes the witness statements and suggests a possible course of action for the management of BPA. The conclusion is therefore also predecisional and deliberative.

We find therefore that the report requested by Joslin is a draft document, portions of which are predecisional and deliberative. It thus meets the threshold requirements for the deliberative process privilege. Nevertheless, not all documents falling within the scope of the deliberative process privilege may be withheld. The Attorney General's Memorandum of October 24, 1993 established a standard that promotes discretionary disclosure of records under the FOIA. To comply with the Memorandum, we must decide whether disclosure of the requested information would cause foreseeable harm to the deliberative process.

BPA's Determination Letter did not address the question of foreseeable harm resulting from release of the report. Nevertheless, Carol Jacobson of BPA's Legal Department supplemented the Determination by relating BPA's foreseeable harm analysis in a telephone statement to the OHA on July 3, 1996. As a result of Jacobson's statement and our examination of the report, we find several factors that point to foreseeable harm resulting from releasing the draft report in its entirety.

The subject matter of the documents is highly sensitive, involving charges of serious misconduct by a BPA employee. The process of resolving those charges requires total confidentiality on the part of BPA. Since further investigation may be required, releasing witnesses' statements at this time may influence future testimony. Furthermore, since the witnesses comprise a small group of coworkers, release of their testimony at this time could discourage some of them from testifying candidly in future investigations. Moreover, release of the witnesses' versions of events could give the false impression that the DOE has made a finding that their versions are facts. We conclude that release now could cause foreseeable harm to the DOE's investigative, deliberative, and decision-making processes.

In applying any FOIA exemption, however, any reasonably segregable portion of a record must be provided to the requester after deletion of the portions that are exempt. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). We find some passages in the report, particularly in the introductory section, that are recitations of fact. There does not appear to be deliberative content in these passages. Consequently, these segregable passages do not qualify for protection under Exemption 5. Consequently, BPA must either release these segregable factual passages or provide another ground for withholding them.

As an additional argument for release of the report, Joslin says that he had "been told by the Agency that the report cannot be obtained since it contains possible incriminating information about a Department of Energy manager." He argues that this is not a valid ground to withhold material under the FOIA.

We are unable to respond to Joslin's argument, because there is no claim in the determination letter that the report is being withheld because it contains incriminating information. There is no general FOIA protection for material that is "incriminating." Some exemptions, however, such as Exemption 6, which protects personal privacy interests, and Exemption 7, which protects law enforcement records, could conceivably be construed to cover certain material that contains incriminating information. BPA, however, did not claim either Exemption 6 or Exemption 7. The only protection that BPA asserts in the determination letter is Exemption 5. We have therefore confined our analysis to Exemption 5, which provides for no consideration of whether the requested material is incriminating.

Conclusion

We have determined that the report requested by Joslin is predecisional and deliberative, and its release in its entirety would cause foreseeable harm to the DOE's deliberative process. We also found, however, segregable portions of the report that are recitations of fact and do not fall within the scope of the deliberative process privilege. We will therefore remand this matter to BPA for release of segregable material or further justification for withholding.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The appeal filed by Richard Joslin, Case No. VFA-0183, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration for processing in accordance with the instructions provided in this Decision.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business; or in which the agency records are situated; or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0184, 26 DOE ¶ 80,104

August 5, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Marlene Flor

Date of Filing: June 24, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0184

On June 24, 1996, Marlene Flor (Flor) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on May 16, 1996 by the Department of Energy's Albuquerque Operations Office (AO). In that determination, AO denied in part a request for information filed by the Appellant on January 7, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On January 7, 1996, Flor filed a FOIA request for the time and attendance sheets for each employee of the Kirtland Area Office Contracts and Business Management Organization (CBMO) for the 1995 leave year. On May 16, 1996, AO released redacted copies of the requested records from which the leave codes and description of the type of leave were deleted. AO had determined, pursuant to Exemption 6 of the FOIA, that disclosure of this information would violate the privacy of the employees and would not be in the public interest. On June 24, 1996, Flor filed the present Appeal contending that the "type of leave one takes is not personal in the same sense as one's date of birth, employment history, etc., as AL claims . . ." See Appeal Letter at 2. Flor further contends, inter alia, that release of the requested information would further the public interest because it would reveal how AL treats its whistleblowers. Id. In addition, Flor states that she did not want the names of the employees at CBMO, but that AO provided this information to her despite her request. Flor asks that the Office of Hearings and Appeals direct AO to provide the requested information to her.

II. Analysis

Exemption 6 allows an agency to shield from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information."

Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Housing and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Second, the agency must determine whether release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Hopkins v. Department of Housing and Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991) (Hopkins); FLRA v. Department of Treasury Fin. Management Service, 884 F.2d 1446, 1451 (Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 864 (1990) (FLRA). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest to be served in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762-70.

A. The Privacy Interest

In order to determine whether there is a privacy interest in the withheld time and attendance information, we must determine whether release of this information might reveal something personal about the people involved. See News Tribune, 25 DOE ¶ 80,180 (1996). Thus, it is only when the release of some personal information about an individual would cause a "clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy" that the information may be exempt from mandatory release under the FOIA.

In support of withholding the information in this case, AO compared the withheld information to more personal information such as place or date of birth and employment history. We do not consider this to be an appropriate comparison. However, we have identified two possible privacy interests present in this case which might be impacted by release of the withheld information on the time and attendance reports. First, there is a privacy interest in not disclosing health issues such as the illness of an employee or the illness of an employee's family member. This kind of information could be revealed by the disclosure of a person's sick leave. The second possible privacy interest present in this case is that one might infer that an employee is looking for another job if one observes how much annual leave the employee took at any given time. We must note that Flor has already been provided with the names of the employees in CBMO. An invasion of privacy can occur when a name is linked with some other information that reveals something personal about an individual. News Tribune, 25 DOE at 80,700; Professional Programs Group v. Department of Commerce, 29 F.3d 1349, 1354 (9th Cir. 1994). Therefore, we must examine the withheld information in the context with which it is associated, i.e. what release of the information would specifically reveal about those particular persons. See News Tribune, 25 DOE at 80,699; see also National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873, 876 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied sub nom. National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Newman, 494 U.S. 1078 (1990) (NARFE).

As stated above, release of the withheld information could possibly disclose health information about an employee or disclose an employee's future employment plans. We have stated in the past that material which is not strictly personal, but is nonetheless identifying, can be protected if release could cause interference with personal privacy. See Southwest Resource Development, 24 DOE ¶ 80,164 (1995) (individuals involved in Inspector General's investigations protected under Exemptions 6 and 7(c)). However, the nature of the withheld information in this case is not the type of strictly personal information usually protected by Exemption 6. See Department of Defense v. Federal Labor Relations Auth., 114 S. Ct. 1006 (1994) (home addresses); Sangre de Cristo Animal Protection, Inc,, 25 DOE ¶ 80,121 (1995) (Social Security numbers); Foundation for Fair Contracting, 21 DOE ¶ 80,169 (1991) (names and home addresses redacted from payroll records); Robert E. Caddell, 20 DOE ¶ 80,164 (1990) (selected SF-171 information). The information withheld here would reveal an individual's use of annual leave and sick leave. While federal employees do not have a legitimate expectation of privacy with respect to leave use, they do, however, have an expectation of privacy with respect to the manner in which they choose to use their leave. Although this information is not as significantly private as other personal information such as home addresses and social security numbers, the public release of this information will nevertheless result in, at the least, a minimal invasion of privacy.

B. The Privacy Interest/Public Interest Balance

The Supreme Court has held that there is a public interest in disclosure of information that "sheds light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties." Reporters Comm., 489 U.S. at 773. The burden of establishing that disclosure would serve the public interest is on the requester. Carter v. Department of Commerce, 830 F.2d 388 (D.C. Cir. 1987).

In her Appeal, Flor contends that the release of the leave codes and the description of leave on the time and attendance reports would reveal how AO treats its whistleblowers and states that release of this information would have "a deterrent effect on AO repeating its retaliation action against other employees." Appeal at 3. In a July 29, 1996 letter, Flor further explains that she is a whistleblower and argues that her supervisor at AO has justified low performance ratings of her by citing her high leave usage. See Letter from Marlene Flor to Office of Hearings and Appeals (July 29, 1996). Even if Flor could use the requested information to support her contention that she has been treated unfairly, we fail to see how this information would establish that her treatment is the result of her status as a whistleblower. Moreover, we fail to see how the release of the withheld information would aid the public in understanding that AL allegedly has a policy of retaliating against its federal whistleblowers in general. Flor has advanced no other justification in support of her argument that release of this information could further the public interest, and we can discern none.

It is well established that even a "minimal" privacy interest should prevail over no "public interest" in disclosure. See e.g., NARFE 879 F.2d at 879 ("something, even a modest privacy interest, outweighs nothing every time"). In view of the fact that there is no apparent public interest to balance against the minimal invasion of personal privacy here, we find that AO properly withheld from disclosure the time and attendance information at issue.

C. Waiver

In her July 29, 1996 Submission, Flor contends that the withheld information has already been shared with the twelve federal employees in her branch. Id. Specifically, Flor states that at least once every pay period her branch Secretary "brings the T&A sheet fully completed with names and leave information to each branch member who has taken leave or accrued compensatory leave during the pay period." Id. Flor implies that DOE has waived the application of Exemption 6 to the withheld information because it has previously been disclosed.

The extent to which the DOE has waived FOIA exemptions depends on the circumstances of the disclosure. Carson v. United States Department of Justice, 631 F.2d 1008, 1016 n.30 (D.C. Cir. 1980). It does not appear that the information referred to in this case by Flor was disclosed by official departmental action. It is possible that departmental employees may have made unauthorized disclosure of certain information. Such unauthorized disclosure, however, would not constitute a waiver of exemption by the DOE. Simmons v. United States Department of Justice, 796 F.2d 709, 712 (4th Cir. 1986). We therefore reject Flor's argument that the Department has waived Exemption 6.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Marlene Flor on June 24, 1996 (Case Number VFA-0184) is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeals

Names of Petitioners:Vernon J. Brechin

Paul McGinnis

Dates of Filings:June 26, 1996

July 17, 1996

Case Numbers:VFA-0185

VFA-0194

Vernon J. Brechin and Paul McGinnis filed appeals from determinations issued to them on June 10, 1996 and June 17, 1996 respectively, by the Nevada Operations Office (Nevada) of the Department of Energy. In those determinations, Nevada stated that it could neither confirm nor deny the existence of the records that Mr. Brechin and Mr. McGinnis sought in their respective requests for information. These requests were filed pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, and dated February 20, 1996 and March 6, 1996.

I. Background

In his request, Mr. Brechin sought a copy of a document describing the delegation of management responsibilities from the Atomic Energy Commission or from the Department of Energy to the U.S. Air Force for a portion of land in Nevada known as "Area 51" or "the United States Air Force's operating location near Groom Lake, Nevada (Groom Lake)." In his request, Mr. McGinnis sought,inter alia, "[a]ny memorandums of understanding between the U.S. Department of Energy and the U.S. Air Force (or any other descriptive material) concerning the Air Force's facility at Groom Lake, Nevada." In its June 10 and June 17, 1996 responses, Nevada replied to each requester that, “[t]his office can neither confirm nor deny the existence of any documents responsive to your request.” The basis for Nevada's response appears to be that the existence or non-existence of the requested documents is itself a classified fact.

The requesters make several arguments regarding these appeals. Mr. Brechin argues that Nevada's response is not in compliance with 10 C.F.R. § 1004.5(b)(1) and similarly, Mr. McGinnis argues that the response does not comply with 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7(b)(1).(2) Mr. McGinnis further argues that neither the FOIA nor the DOE regulations provides for the type of response which Nevada made. Next, Mr. McGinnis claims that Nevada's response that it cannot confirm the existence of the requested documents is untenable because he already received one of the requested documents from a non-DOE source, which he submitted with this appeal. Finally, Mr. McGinnis argues that if any requested documents exist, they should be released because release would serve the public interest. He bases his public interest claim on his belief that the requested documents could provide relevant evidence in several ongoing lawsuits alleging that employees have been exposed to toxic chemicals at the Groom Lake facility. None of these arguments affects the OHA's determination in these appeals, as explained below.

II. Analysis

Although the Department rarely responds to requests for information in this manner, Nevada's statement that it will neither confirm nor deny the existence of records is not without precedent. This type of response is commonly called a Glomar response, which refers to the first instance in which the adequacy of such a response was upheld by a Federal court. In Phillippi v. CIA, the agency responded to a request for documents pertaining to a submarine-retrieval ship named the Hughes Glomar Explorer by neither confirming nor denying the existence of any such documents. Phillippi v. CIA, 546 F.2d 1009 (D.C. Cir. 1976). Agencies have typically used this response where the existence or non-existence of requested documents is itself a classified fact exempt from disclosure under Exemptions 1 and 3 of the Freedom of Information Act, see, e.g., id. at 1012, or where admission that documents exist would indicate that the agency was involved in a certain issue, Gardels v. CIA, 689 F.2d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 1982), or that an individual is the target of investigation or surveillance, Marrera v. Department of Justice, 622 F. Supp. 51 (D.D.C. 1985). Thus, the FOIA does not bar a Glomar response. In addition, this Office has upheld the adequacy of the DOE's Glomar response where, as here, the existence or non-existence of requested documents is classified. A. Victorian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,188 (1996). The DOE regulation Mr. McGinnis cited, 10 C.F.R. § 1004.7(b)(1), does not apply in this instance since the Glomar response is not a denial. Further, although the DOE regulation Mr. Brechin cited, 10 C.F.R. § 1004.5(b), does not appear to contemplate a Glomar response, nevertheless, the courts permit this type of response in appropriate circumstances.

Mr. McGinnis has also raised arguments in his appeals specifically related to his request. He argues that the public interest requires the release of the requested documents because they could lead to relevant evidence in an ongoing civil suit concerning exposure of employees to toxic chemicals at the facility. We do not agree. Public interest considerations are not a factor in the FOIA matter where the existence or non-existence of requested documents is classified. Cf. Ferenc M. Szasz, 25 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1995) (public interest considerations not a factor in applying FOIA Exemptions 5 U.S.C. §§ 552(b)(1) and (3)).

Mr. McGinnis further argues that his possession of one of these documents shows the untenableness of Nevada's Glomar response that it cannot confirm the existence of the documents. Although Mr. McGinnis did not elaborate on this argument, we infer that he believes that FOIA protection of one of the documents he seeks has been waived; that is, because he has produced what he alleges to be a copy of one of the document he seeks, the DOE may no longer refuse to confirm or deny its existence. We disagree. Mr. McGinnis has not made the necessary showing that the document he possesses meets the latter two of the three requirements for waiving FOIA protection laid out by the D.C. Circuit in Fitzgibbon v. Central Intelligence Agency, 911 F.2d 755 (D.C. Cir. 1990). These criteria are the following: (1) the information requested is as specific as the information previously released; (2) the information matches the information previously disclosed; and (3) the information requested was already made public through an official and documented disclosure. Id. at 765 (citing Afshar v. Department of State, 702 F.2d 1125, 1133 (D.C. Cir. 1983)). Since he has requested any "memorandums of understanding" about the Groom Lake Facility between the DOE and the U.S. Air Force, and has submitted what he has alleged to be such a memorandum of understanding, he appears to have met the first criterion and requested a document as specific as the one he possesses. We cannot make a determination regarding the second criterion because we cannot answer whether requested documents exist or not. But regarding the third criterion, Mr. McGinnis said only that he received the submitted document from "another source." He has therefore not met his burden of showing that the document was released in an official and documented disclosure. See Davis v. Department of Justice, 968 F.2d 1276, 1279-82 (D.C. Cir. 1992). Therefore, no FOIA protection has been waived.

The Director of the Office of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). OHA referred both of these appeals to the DOE Office of Declassification (OD), to which SA has delegated the duty to prepare SA's determinations on FOIA appeals involving classified matters. The Director, Policy and Quality Management Division, OD, further referred them to the Office of the Secretary of Defense (Public Affairs) (OSD(PA)) because the Groom Lake facility at issue is now an Air Force facility. The OSD(PA) referred the appeals to the Director, Security and Special Program Oversight (SSPO), within the Department of the Air Force, for supplementary review. The Director, SSPO, Eugene F. Boesch, Jr., concluded that the Air Force can neither confirm nor deny the existence of documents responsive to the requests at issue. This position was concurred with by OSD(PA). Because of the Air Force's exclusive responsibility for the Groom Lake facility, SA stated that it defers to their judgment. Accordingly, Mr. McGinnis' and Mr. Brechin's appeals must be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Vernon J. Brechin on June 26, 1996, Case No. VFA-0185, is hereby denied.

(2) The Appeal filed by Paul McGinnis on July 17, 1996, Case No. VFA-0194, is hereby denied.

Case No. VFA-0186, 26 DOE ¶ 80,106

August 12, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Greenpeace

Date of Filing: July 16, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0186

On July 16, 1996 Greenpeace filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it by the Deputy Secretary for Military Applications and Stockpile Management (hereinafter referred to as "the Deputy Secretary"). This determination was issued on June 5, 1996 in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the release of documents that were withheld by the Deputy Secretary pursuant to the FOIA.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In its FOIA request, Greenpeace sought access to a copy of all documents relating to the rationale for the modification of the B61-11 gravity bomb. In response to this request, the Deputy Secretary identified 6 documents and 24 pages of printouts from electronic mail (e-mail) as being responsive to Greenpeace's request. The six documents were provided to Greenpeace in their entirety, but portions of the e-mail printouts were withheld pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5) (Exemption 5). Exemption 5 protects from mandatory disclosure "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5).

In its Appeal, Greenpeace contests the Deputy Secretary's application of Exemption 5 in this matter. Specifically, Greenpeace argues that the subject matter of its request suggests that the withheld portions of the e-mail messages contain segregable factual material that is not exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA.

II. Analysis

A. Applicability of Exemption 5

Exemption 5 is generally recognized as encompassing the attorney-client, attorney work-product and governmental deliberative process privileges. See, e.g., Coastal States Gas Corp. v. DOE, 617 F.2d 854 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In withholding portions of the e-mail messages from Greenpeace, the Deputy Secretary relied upon the "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5. That privilege shields from mandatory disclosure documents which were created during agency consideration of a proposed action and which were part of a decision making process. Darci L. Rock, 13 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1985); Texaco, Inc., 1 DOE ¶ 80,242 (1978). The privilege serves to insure open, uninhibited and robust debate of various options by eliminating the fear of disclosure of preliminary viewpoints. See, e.g., Lewis, King, Krieg & Waldrop 21 DOE ¶ 80,103 (1991). Thus, by shielding predecisional deliberations from public scrutiny, the quality of final governmental decisions is enhanced. NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149-51 (1975) (Sears).

In order to properly evaluate the Deputy Secretary's application of Exemption 5, we conducted a de novo review of the withheld material. The e-mail items in question are communications between employees of the DOE's Defense Programs office concerning budget matters and the obtaining of Congressional approval for the replacement of the B53 gravity bomb with the B61-11 gravity bomb. These e-mail items consist of the opinions and recommendations of their authors and responses to those opinions and recommendations. As such, they clearly reflect the "give-and-take" of the consultative process, and they set forth the personal opinions of the authors rather than the final position of the DOE. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. For these reasons, we find that the withheld material is precisely the sort of record of the deliberative and "group thinking" processes that Exemption 5 is designed to protect. Sears, 421 U.S. at 153 (quoting Davis, The Information Act: A Preliminary Analysis, 34 U. Chi. L. Rev. 761, 797 (1967)). We therefore agree with the Deputy Secretary that the withheld material falls within the scope of Exemption 5.

B. Segregability

The fact that a document contains material which is exempt from disclosure does not necessarily make the entire document exempt. The FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt under this subsection." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). However, segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary when it is inextricably intertwined with the exempt material, such that release of the non-exempt material would compromise the confidentiality of the withheld material. See, e.g., Canyon Consultants, 21 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,548 (1991).

Based on our review of the e-mail items, we find that the Deputy Secretary has already provided Greenpeace with all the segregable factual information contained in these communications. The redacted copy of the e-mail communications provided to the Appellant includes the names of the authors and recipients of the messages, and the dates, times, and subjects of the messages. Some of the messages contain no exempt material, and were provided to Greenpeace in their entirety. The segregable factual portions of other messages were included in the material provided to Greenpeace. Although the withheld portions of the e-mail communications contain some factual matter, we conclude that it is inextricably intertwined with exempt material, such that release of the factual material would expose the particular deliberative processes of which these e-mail communications are a part. Accordingly, we find that the withheld portions of the e-mail communications contain no segregable factual material.

C. Public Interest Determination

The fact that material requested falls within a statutory exemption does not necessarily preclude release of the material to the requester. The DOE regulations implementing the FOIA provide that "[t]o the extent permitted by other laws, the DOE will make records available which it is authorized to withhold under 5 U.S.C. § 552 whenever it determines that such disclosure is in the public interest." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

We find that release of the withheld material would not be in the public interest. Although the public does have a general interest in learning about the manner in which its government operates, we find that interest to be attenuated by the fact that the withheld portions of these communications are composed mainly of predecisional, non-factual recommendations and opinions, and would therefore be of limited educational value. Any slight benefit that would accrue from the release of the withheld material is far outweighed by the chilling effect that such a release would have on the willingness of DOE employees to make open and honest recommendations on policy matters. Accordingly, we conclude that release of the withheld information would result in forseeable harm to the interests that are protected by the deliberative process privilege. See FOIA Update, U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Information and Privacy (Spring 1994); Memorandum from Janet Reno, Attorney General, to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993) (in order to withhold material, agency must first determine that release would forseeably harm basic institutional interests that underlie the deliberative process privilege).

D. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the Deputy Secretary properly redacted the e-mail communications provided to Greenpeace pursuant to the FOIA, and that release of the withheld material would not be in the public interest. We will therefore deny Greenpeace's FOIA appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Greenpeace on July 16, 1996 is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Michael J. Ravnitzky

Date of Filing: July 2, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0188

Michael J. Ravnitzky filed an appeal from a determination that the Albuquerque Operations Office issued to him on June 12, 1996. In that determination, the DOE denied in part a request for information that Mr. Ravnitzky filed on August 8, 1992, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. At that time, Albuquerque provided Mr. Ravnitzky with a copy of the document he sought, with certain information deleted. The withheld information was deleted from Mr. Ravnitzky's copy after a review of the document had been performed by the Office of Declassification of the Department of Energy's Office of Security Affairs. This appeal, if granted, would require the Department of Energy (DOE) to release much of the information that it withheld in its June 12, 1996 determination.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On August 8, 1992, Mr. Ravnitzky submitted a request under the FOIA for a copy of Volume 0 (Zero) of the Los Alamos Technical Series, entitled "Relation Between the Various Activities of the Laboratory" and written by S.K. Allison and dated December 23, 1946. The Los Alamos National Laboratory located that document and the DOE's Office of Declassification noted, upon review, that it contained classified Restricted Data and Unclassified Controlled Nuclear Information (UCNI). As a result of its review, the Office of Declassification provided Albuquerque with a redacted version of the document. On June 12, 1996, Albuquerque released that version to Mr. Ravnitzky. In its determination letter accompanying the released document, Albuquerque informed Mr. Ravnitzky that the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. § 2011 et seq., prohibited the disclosure of restricted data (sections 141-146) and UCNI (section 148). As a result, the information was withheld under Exemption 3 of the FOIA.

The present appeal seeks the disclosure of the portions of the document that the DOE withheld from Mr. Ravnitzky. In his appeal, Mr. Ravnitzky contends that the deletion made were overly broad and that, in any event, the great age of the requested report has trivialized the information contained therein and eliminated the need for protecting that information from disclosure.

II. Analysis

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). We have previously determined that the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2011-2296, is a statute to which Exemption 3 is applicable. See, e.g., The National Security Archive, 27 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1998); Barton J. Bernstein, 22 DOE ¶ 80,165 (1992).

The Director of the Office of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of SA reviewed those portions of the requested document for which the DOE had claimed an exemption from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA.

The Director of SA considered the specific concerns that Mr. Ravnitzky raised in his appeal, and performed as well a general review of the material under the current classification guidance. Based on the review that the Director of SA performed, the DOE has determined that the Atomic Energy Act requires the continued withholding of all information regarding the design details of nuclear devices, despite its age. Although Mr. Ravnitzky has argued that the public has a right to know what the government did at Los Alamos, the nuclear weapons design information contained in the report remains classified for reasons of national security and nonproliferation, because it would provide those with access to it the necessary knowledge to build such weapons. Under current classification guidance, this category of information is classified as Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act. Consequently, this information is being withheld pursuant to Exemption 3 of the FOIA.

The Director of SA has also determined, however, that a great deal of information that was deleted from the copy of the document provided to Mr. Ravnitzky may now be released. To maximize efficiency, the initial deletions were made on a sentence-by-sentence basis. In doing so, some unclassified information was excised along with classified information. On appeal, only those words that reveal or infer classified information have been deleted. In addition, information initially withheld because it was considered to be UCNI may now be released. The considerable amount of initially withheld information that may now be released should help Mr. Ravnitzky understand the general nature of the deleted portions without revealing classified information.

A finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information. Nevertheless, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemption 3, the disclosure is prohibited by statute. Therefore, the portion of the responsive document that the Director of SA has determined to be properly classified must continue to be withheld from disclosure without considering the public interest issue. A newly redacted version of the responsive document will be provided to Mr. Ravnitzky under separate cover. Accordingly, Mr. Ravnitzky’s appeal will be granted in part and denied in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal that Michael J. Ravnitzky filed on July 2, 1996, Case No. VFA-0188, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) A newly redacted version of the text of Volume 0 (Zero) of the Los Alamos Technical Series, entitled “Relation Between the Various Activities of the Laboratory” and written by S.K. Allison and dated December 23, 1946, in which additional information is now released, will be provided to Mr. Ravnitzky under separate cover.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:The National Security Archive

Date of Filing: July 12, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0189

On July 12, 1996, the National Security Archive filed an appeal from a determination that the Department of Energy's Office of Energy Intelligence issued in response to a request the National Security Archive filed on March 17, 1988, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. In its determination, Energy Intelligence identified two responsive documents and released one of them after withholding portions of it. This appeal, if granted, would require Energy Intelligence to release the information that it withheld from that document.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On March 17, 1988, the National Security Archive submitted a request to the DOE under the FOIA for records pertaining to "July 1984 reports that China provided Pakistan with a nuclear weapon design and the decision to halt for one year the U.S. approval of a nuclear trade pact with China." The Office of Energy Intelligence identified two documents that were responsive to the request. It referred one of the documents, entitled "Pakistan: Nuclear Decision Makers-- Unanimous Opinion," to the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) for review, and the CIA provided that document to the appellant. This document is not at issue in the present appeal. Energy Intelligence provided the second responsive document, a March 6, 1985 "Intelligence Note" from John B. Stewart to James C. McAvoy, to the appellant after deleting most of its content. The information was withheld as the result of a review of the document by the DOE's Office of Declassification, which determined that it contained information classified as National Security Information (NSI) and therefore exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 1 of the FOIA.

On June 12, 1996, the National Security Archive appealed Energy Intelligence's determination to the Office of Hearings and Appeals. The present appeal seeks the disclosure of some, if not all, of the withheld portions of the "Intelligence Note." In its appeal, the National Security Archive states that a great deal of information has been revealed to the public about Pakistan's nuclear program through extensive media coverage and unclassified Congressional hearings. It contends that, given the level of public knowledge, "it seems unlikely that national security would be harmed by release of additional information from this document."

II. Analysis

Although Energy Intelligence's determination withheld information from the requester only under Exemption 1 of the Freedom of Information Act, both Exemption 1 and Exemption 3 have been considered in this appellate review. Exemption 1 provides that an agency may exempt from disclosure matters that are "(A) specifically authorized under criteria established by an Executive order to be kept secret in the interest of national defense or foreign policy and (B) are in fact properly classified pursuant to such Executive order." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1). Executive Order 12958 is the current Executive Order that provides for the classification, declassification and safeguarding of national security information. When properly classified under this Executive Order, national security information is exempt from mandatory disclosure by Exemption 1. See National Security Archive, 26 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1996); Keith E. Loomis, 25 DOE ¶ 80,183 (1996); A. Victorian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,166 (1996).

Exemption 3 provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). The statutes underlying the claim of Exemption 3 in this case are the National Security Act of 1947 and the Central Intelligence Agency Act of 1949. The federal courts have found each of these statutes to be a statute on which withholdings under Exemption 3 may be supported. See, e.g., CIA v. Sims, 471 U.S. 159, 167 (1985) (section 102(d)(3) of the National Security Act, 50 U.S.C. § 403(d)(3), precursor of current 50 U.S.C. § 403-3(c)(5)); Minier v. Sims, 88 F.3d 796, 801 (9th Cir. 1996) (section 6 of the Central Intelligence Agency Act, 50 U.S.C. § 403g).

The Director of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who makes the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of SA reviewed those portions of the requested document that the DOE withheld under Exemption 1, and determined that they do not contain any DOE classified information.

However, because the document under consideration contains intelligence information, the Director of SA referred it to the CIA for supplementary review. The CIA concluded that several small portions of the document consist of information regarding intelligence activities, sources or methods and foreign relations or activities, which have been classified as NSI under Section 1.5(c) and (d) of Executive Order 12958, and must continue to be protected from public disclosure under Exemption 1 of the FOIA. The CIA also determined that one additional passage in the document was withheld under Exemption 3 of the FOIA on the grounds that it contains intelligence sources and methods (protected under section 102(d)(3) of the National Security Act) and the organization, names and functions of CIA personnel (protected under section 6 of the Central Intelligence Agency Act).

The Denying Officer for the CIA is Mr. Lee S. Strickland, Information and Privacy Coordinator. Because we only have jurisdiction to review FOIA determinations made by DOE officials, we cannot review the determination that the CIA made in this case.

Based on the CIA's review we have determined that the March 6, 1985 "Intelligence Note" from John B. Stewart to James C. McAvoy, redacted to withhold those portions the CIA protected under Exemptions 1 and 3 of the FOIA, may be released to the appellant. Accordingly, the National Security Archive's appeal will be granted in part and denied in part. A copy of that document that contains the information now determined to be releasable will be delivered to the National Security Archive.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The appeal filed by the National Security Archive on July 12, 1996, Case No. VFA-0189, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) The March 6, 1985 “Intelligence Note” from John B. Stewart to James C. McAvoy, redacted to withhold from disclosure information that the Central Intelligence Agency has determined to be classified, will be provided to the National Security Archive.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Michael A. Grosche

Date of Filing: November 26, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0193

On November 26, 1996, Michael A. Grosche of Norwalk, Connecticut completed the filing of an Appeal from a determination issued on June 7, 1996, by the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part Mr. Grosche's request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that agency records held by a covered branch of the federal government, and that have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). The FOIA also lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

BACKGROUND

In April of 1992, OIG received information from the Defense Contract Audit Agency regarding alleged labor mischarging on DOE projects from August 1990 to April 1991 at Ebasco Services, Inc. These allegations were made by Mr. Grosche. OIG investigated the allegations for possible criminal violations under 18 U.S.C. § 287 (dealing with making and presenting false claims) and for possible violations of 31 U.S.C. § 3729 (The False Claims Act). The OIG examination did not substantiate the allegations for some of the persons it investigated. For the other persons investigated, the OIG found that section 31.202 of the Federal Acquisition Regulation (FAR), 48 C.F.R. § 31.202 (dealing with direct costs) may have been violated by incorrect and inaccurate allocation of time to various accounts. However, OIG determined that there was no loss or overcharge to the DOE, and that the net effect of making the accounting adjustments would be a credit to Ebasco Services, Inc. That is to say, the misbilling resulted in a lower cost to the government than if the hours had been correctly billed. The OIG then closed its investigation of this matter.

Mr. Grosche requested documents dealing with the OIG investigation and findings. OIG identified three responsive documents: (1) a memorandum summarizing findings and recommending closure of the case; (2) a memorandum from the Chief Financial Officer at the Savannah River Operations Office; and (3) an Administrative Report on the investigation to the Manager of the Savannah River Operations Office. Portions of all three documents were withheld because "[n]ames and information that would tend to disclose the identity of certain individuals have been withheld pursuant to Exemptions 6 and 7(C)." Mr. Grosche appeals all of the withholdings.

ANALYSIS

Both Exemptions 6 and 7(C) allow the withholding of information dealing with personal privacy. The former permits the non-disclosure of "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). Exemption 7(C) applies to a much narrower class of cases, but has a less exacting standard that gives it somewhat more expansive coverage. Under Exemption 7(C), agencies may withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information... (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of a personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). Both of these exemptions require a balance of the interest in personal privacy in the withheld information against the public interest in the same information. There are, however, two significant differences between Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Under Exemption 7 (C), the information must have been compiled for law enforcement purposes. In addition, because information may be withheld where there is only a reasonable expectation of an "unwarranted invasion of a personal privacy," there is a lower threshold of privacy interest employed in Exemption 7(C) than in Exemption 6 where the balance calls for a "clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy" (emphasis added). Because, as we find below, the documents at issue in this case meet Exemption 7's threshold test, we need only examine the withholding under the standard of Exemption 7(C). See, e.g., Burlin McKinney, 25 DOE ¶ 80,149 at 80,620 (1995); K.D. Moseley, 22 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,550 (1992).

Applying these standards to the records in this case, we find that the records sought by the appellant were compiled for a law enforcement purpose. The courts have held that where Inspectors General are investigating potentially criminal activity, they are engaged in law enforcement activities for the purposes of Exemption 7(C) even if they conclude there was no criminal wrongdoing. Ortiz v. Department of Health and Human Services, 70 F.3d 729, 732-33 (2d Cir. 1995) (and cases collected therein), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 134 L.Ed.2d 546, 116 S.Ct. 1422 (1996). We also have made extensive examinations of the Inspector General's activities in this area and found that they are law enforcement activities. See, e.g., Stoel Rives, LLP, 25 DOE ¶ 80,189 at 80,723 (1996); Robert Burns, 19 DOE ¶ 80,134 at 80,596-97 (1989). In this case, the investigation into potential criminal activities clearly demonstrates the relation "to the enforcement of federal law and ... a rational connection between the investigative activities and the agency's law enforcement duties" that meets the Exemption 7 threshold test. Western Journalism Center v. Office of the Independent Counsel, 926 F. Supp. 189, 191 (D.D.C. 1996).

Once the material qualifies for Exemption 7 treatment, we consider whether release of the withheld material would result in one of the harms listed in Exemption 7. Ferguson v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 957 F.2d 1059, 1065 (2d Cir. 1992). In this case, OIG believes release would harm the personal privacy of certain individuals and invoked Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Thus, the agency must perform the balancing test noted above. The OIG Determination Letter divided the withheld material into two categories: (1) names and (2) other information which might disclose individual identity. We will follow OIG's categories in this examination.

1. Names

In Documents 1 and 3, OIG withheld the names of persons it investigated who allegedly misbilled their time on DOE projects. In addition, in Document 3 OIG withheld the names of persons it interviewed in the course of its investigation. As we have stated previously, a name by itself does not create a protectable privacy interest for the purposes of FOIA exemption analysis. The News Tribune, 25 DOE ¶ 80,181 at 80,700 (1996). Rather, the privacy interest exists when a name is linked with information which reveals something personal or private about an individual. Id. at 80,699.

In this case, the names are linked with an OIG investigation into possible criminal conduct. Both this office and the courts have held time and again that a person has a strong privacy interest in the fact that he or she was subject to an investigation with potential criminal consequences especially where, as here, the investigation uncovered no criminal act. Stern v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 737 F.2d 84, 91-92 (D.C. Cir. 1984); Abramson v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 566 F. Supp. 1371, (D.D.C. 1983); Blumberg, Seng, Ikeda & Albers, 25 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,563 (1995); James E. Phelps, 20 DOE ¶ 80,169 at 80,702 (1990). The reason for this is simple and obvious. Linking a person with a potential criminal investigation could result in harassment and certainly would involve considerable embarrassment. Manna v. Department of Justice, 51 F.3d 1158, 1166 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 133 L.Ed.2d 405, 116 S.Ct. 477 (1995); Wichlacz v. Department of the Interior, 938 F. Supp. 325, 333 (E.D. Va. 1996). The same is true for those who were interviewed during the investigation. Id.; McDonnell v. United States, 4 F.3d 1227, 1255 (3d Cir. 1993); Jon Berg, 22 DOE ¶ 80,140 at 80,587 (1992).

Conversely, the public interest in this information in this case is minimal. In the case of Exemption 7(C), the Supreme Court has constructed a narrow public interest standard. Information falls within the public interest for the purposes of the FOIA only if release of the information is likely to contribute "'significantly to public understanding of the operations of the government.'" Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 775 (1989) (quoting 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii)). See also Department of Defense v. Federal Labor Relations Auth., 510 U.S. 487, 494-95 (1994). Release of the names in this case would add little to the public's knowledge about governmental activity. Rather, it is the information dealing with what happened, the government's investigation and conclusions which serve the public need for insight into the workings of government. James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,557 (1991). Thus, under the circumstances of this case, release of the names of the private citizens who OIG concluded did not mischarge the government would not advance the public's understanding of government. Similarly, knowing the names of those who were interviewed would not appreciably assist the public understanding of government. In fact, both this office and the courts have found that withholding the names of witnesses better serves the public interest by allowing those witnesses to speak freely to government investigators without fear that their identities will be disclosed and that they will be subject to possible harassment. Kiraly v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 728 F.2d 273, 278-79 (7th Cir. 1984); Holy Spirit Ass'n for the Unification of World Christianity v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 683 F.2d 562, 564-65 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (per curiam); Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,109 at 80,523-24 (1990); The Die-Gem Co., 19 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,569 (1989).

Turning to the balancing test on these names, we find that in the present case there is little or no public interest in the additional information to be gained by release of the names. On the other side of the scale there is a considerable privacy interest in not being linked with allegations of potential criminal conduct (particularly when OIG has determined there was no criminal act). There is also a strong privacy interest in not being identified as a person interviewed in a criminal investigation. Thus, on balancing these facts, we find that the privacy interest of these individuals outweigh the public interest and that release of the names would pose an unacceptable breach of personal privacy. See, e.g., Fund for Constitutional Gov't v. National Archives and Record Admin., 656 F.2d 856, 866 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (where person investigated but not charged for potential criminal act, release of name is "a severe intrusion on the privacy interests of the individual and should yield only where exceptional circumstances militate in favor of disclosure"); L&C Marine Transp., Ltd. v. United States, 740 F.2d 919, 922-23 (11th Cir. 1984) (witnesses); Southwest Resource Development, 24 DOE ¶ 80,164 at 80,654 (1995). Accordingly, we find that OIG properly withheld these names under Exemption 7(C).

Notwithstanding these factors, Mr. Grosche contends that there is a strong public interest that outweighs any intrusion into the privacy of the persons whose names were withheld. In particular, he states he is seeking the names of those who defrauded and committed a crime against the government. He states that release of this information would deter future criminal acts and that other government agencies should have this knowledge about these individuals before hiring them to manage financial accounts. He also states he needs this information to pursue a Qui Tam action under the False Claims Act as well as to seek reconsideration of a whistleblower complaint he filed with the DOE's Office of Contractor Employee Protection.

Each of Mr. Grosche's claims can be simply answered. First, although the report does make clear that there was inaccurate billing of time and a possible violation of the FAR, the report also makes clear that there was no loss to the government. Thus, contrary to Mr. Grosche's assertion, there is no evidence of fraud in the record of this FOIA appeal. Absent some special circumstance not apparent in this case, where the OIG finds no fraud or criminal violation, the privacy interest outweighs the public interest in the release of the names of persons investigated, and the public interest is satisfied by release of the facts and conclusions of the investigation. Robert E. Caddell, 20 DOE ¶ 80,103 at 80,508-09 (1990).

In regard to the other two claims, even if we were to assume that pursuing his Qui Tam and whistleblower complaints constitute a public interest for the purposes of the FOIA, Mr. Grosche has not explained how the withheld information would aid his pursuit of these suits and thus aid the public understanding of some governmental operation. Mr. Grosche informed us he already knows all of the names OIG withheld. Given the imposition on personal privacy, it is difficult to see how release of information already in his possession would advance his suit and aid the public interest. Indeed, if Mr. Grosche were to bring this suit in the Second Circuit where he resides or in the Third Circuit where the misbilling apparently occurred, release of the names might in fact impair his suit. See United States ex rel. Doe v. John Doe Corp., 960 F.2d 318, 322-23 (2d Cir. 1992) (public availability of information in report makes the False Claims Act action publicly known and limits the class of people who may bring suit); United States ex rel. Stinson v. Lyons, Gerlin & Bustamante, P.A. v. Prudential Ins. Co., 944 F.2d 1149, 1155-60 (3d Cir. 1991) (same). In addition, the potential invasion of personal privacy on these grounds also seems unwarranted in this case because the statute of limitations may have expired for at least some of Mr. Grosche's claims. 31 U.S.C. § 3731(b)(1) (6 year statute of limitation from date of violation). Similarly, in seeking reconsideration of his whistleblower claim, Mr. Grosche has not explained how release of the names would contribute to public understanding of government operations. Again, we find that release to the public of these names for these reasons seems unreasonable given the fact that OIG now has authority for initial consideration of all DOE contractor employee whistleblower cases. See H.R. Conf. Rep. No. 104-782 at 83 (1996). Because Mr. Grosche knows the withheld names and because OIG has access to its own files, we can see nothing that can be added by release of names that would justify the intrusion into those persons' privacy.

Although we find that OIG properly withheld the names of persons investigated and the names of witnesses it contacted in the course of its investigation, there is another set of withheld names that do not appear to belong in either of these two classes. In Document Number 2, OIG withheld the names of two persons who are apparently federal auditors. The first person works for the Defense Contract Audit Agency. The second person works for the Savannah River Operations Office of Procurement and Contractor Human Resources. Document Number 2 memorializes a conversation between these two persons concerning future checks on time billing. We have previously held that federal employees carrying out their official duties have no privacy interest in having their names linked with their work-product unless it reveals something personal or private about that individual or there are other special circumstances (such as a reasonable, articulable belief of potential harassment). The Cincinnati Enquirer, 25 DOE ¶ 80,206 at 80,769 (1996); William H. Payne, 25 DOE ¶ 80,190 at 80,727 (1996). Document Number 2 seems to deal only with official business. Although the persons in this document do not appear to be sources or subjects of investigation and no other special factors appear to be present, we believe the best avenue is to allow OIG, which is most familiar with the overall file and with the circumstances surrounding this document, to focus on this document in particular and to determine whether these names may be released.

2. Other Information

OIG also withheld small amounts of a wide variety of other information. This includes, but is not limited to, general job titles, report and document titles, cost codes, accounts which were billed, subcontract numbers, pronouns, and contract types. None of this material has an inherent privacy interest. Nor does it appear to reveal anything personal or private about an individual. Conversely, much of this material seems to have a high level of public interest. For example, the public surely has an interest in learning which subcontracts are well or poorly managed. Also, the OIG determined that although there was no overbilling of the government, some of the billing did violate the FAR. The public has an interest in knowing all the pertinent facts of what constitutes compliance or a violation of the FAR. Cost codes and accounts billed for particular types of actions seem essential to complete the picture of activity. Even if this material might somehow reveal an identity of a person when coupled with other information, we have held that Exemption 7(C) may not be used to withhold information if there is sufficient public interest. See, e.g., Valley Times, 23 DOE ¶ 80,154 at 80,633 (1993). As we have done in similar cases considering nearly identical Determination Letter language and material which does not appear to have any privacy interest, we will remand the withheld material in this category to the OIG for further consideration. See, e.g., James L. Schwab, 23 DOE ¶ 80,146 at 80,614, 80,615-16 (1993).

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Michael A. Grosche of Norwalk, Connecticut, OHA Case No. VFA-0193, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Office of the Inspector General which shall either release the information previously withheld on which the foregoing Decision did not reach a final conclusion, or issue a new determination in accordance with the above Decision.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Southwest Research and Information Center

Date of Filing: July 22, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0195

On July 22, 1996, the Southwest Research and Information Center (SRIC) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) on June 14, 1996, by the Department of Energy (DOE) Headquarters' Office of the Executive Secretariat (ES). In its Appeal, SRIC asserts that ES failed to provide it with all of the responsive documents in the possession of DOE Headquarters regarding a May 16, 1996 Request for Information (FOIA Request).

I. Background

In the FOIA Request, SRIC requested from Sandia National Laboratory (SNL) copies of documents relating to meetings and conference calls held on December 12, 13 and 15, 1995 and January 4, 5, 11, 16 and 19, 1996, that involved representatives of DOE and the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and/or the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) regarding compliance criteria for the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant (WIPP). <1> ES, in its Determination Letter dated June 14, 1996, informed SRIC that it conducted a search of the files of the Office of Environmental Management (EM) at DOE Headquarters and that it did not find documents responsive to SRIC's FOIA Request at EM.

In its Appeal, SRIC argues that responsive documents must exist regarding its FOIA Request. Specifically, SRIC has submitted copies of documents apparently obtained from EPA that summarize meetings EPA officials had with DOE and OMB officials during the dates specified in the FOIA Request (EPA Summaries).<2> According to the EPA Summaries, two DOE officials, Rich Guimond and Scott Van Camp, participated in the meetings and SRIC argues that it is inconceivable that neither individual received documents pertaining to those meetings or that documents were not created by DOE regarding those meetings.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To ascertain the extent of the search conducted for documents responsive to SRIC's FOIA Request, we contacted an official at ES. ES informed us that during the pendency of this Appeal, officials at EM discovered documents that may be responsive to SRIC's request. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Tonya Griffith, ES, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (August 9, 1996). Consequently, we will remand this matter to ES so that it may issue a determination regarding the newly discovered documents. SRIC may, if it wishes, appeal the new determination.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Southwest Research and Information Center on June 22, 1996, is granted as specified in paragraph (2).

(2) This matter is remanded to the Department of Energy Headquarters' Office of the Executive Secretariat so that it may issue a determination regarding any documents that may be responsive to the Southwest Research and Information Center's FOIA Request dated May 16, 1996.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0196, 27 DOE ¶ 80,130

April 16, 1998

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:The National Security Archive

Date of Filing: July 24, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0196

The National Security Archive filed an appeal from a determination that the Secretary of the Air Force issued to it on June 14, 1996. In that determination, the Air Force denied in part a request for information that the National Security Archive filed on November 1, 1993, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. The Air Force's determination was a partial response to the organization's FOIA request, in which it identified and released, with material deleted, one of the requested documents. The withheld information was deleted from the version of the document released to the National Security Archive after a review of the document had been performed by the Office of Declassification of the Department of Energy's Office of Security Affairs. This appeal, if granted, would require the Department of Energy (DOE) to release the information that it directed the Air Force to withhold in its June 14, 1996 determination.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On November 1, 1993, the National Security Archive submitted a request to the Air Force under the FOIA for, among other information, the text of a January 27, 1954 lecture on atomic and thermonuclear weapons that Major General James McCormack, Jr., delivered at the National War College. The Air Force located that document and noted that it was marked "Restricted Data," which requires review by the DOE before it can be declassified and released to the public. As a result of its review, the Office of Declassification provided the Air Force with a redacted version of the document, which deleted twelve portions of the lecture on seven pages. On June 14, 1996, the Air Force released that version to the National Security Archive. In its determination letter accompanying the released document, the Air Force informed the National Security Archive that "much of the content [of the lecture] falls under the provisions of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. § 2011 et seq.) and thus it has been reviewed by the [DOE], which determined the exemptions" under the FOIA pursuant to which the information was withheld.

The present appeal seeks the disclosure of the portions of the document that were withheld from the National Security Archive. In its appeal, the National Security Archive states that the lecture is "on such a general theoretical level that further declassification would not involve any risk [to the national security]."

II. Analysis

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). We have previously determined that the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. §§ 2011-2296, is a statute to which Exemption 3 is applicable. See, e.g., Barton J. Bernstein, 22 DOE ¶ 80,165 (1992); William R. Bolling, II, 20 DOE ¶ 80,134 (1990).

The Director of the Office of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of SA reviewed those portions of the requested document for which the DOE had claimed an exemption from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA.

The Director of SA considered the concerns that the National Security Archive specifically raised in its appeal, and performed as well a general review of the material under the current classification guidance. Based on the review that the Director of SA performed, the DOE has determined that the Atomic Energy Act requires the continued withholding of one page of the lecture, page 7, which consists of a chart entitled “Yield vs. Size.” The Director of SA has determined that the data plotted on the chart are related to nuclear weapon design. Under current classification guidance, this category of information is classified as Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act. Consequently, this information is being withheld pursuant to Exemption 3 of the FOIA. The Director of SA has also determined that the remainder of the previously withheld information may now be released.

A finding of exemption from mandatory disclosure generally requires our subsequent consideration of the public interest in releasing the information. Nevertheless, such consideration is not permitted where, as in the application of Exemption 3, the disclosure is prohibited by statute. Therefore, the portion of the responsive document that the Director of SA has determined to be properly classified must continue to be withheld from disclosure. A newly redacted version of the responsive document will be provided to the National Security Archive under separate cover. Accordingly, the National Security Archive’s appeal will be granted in part and denied in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal that the National Security Archive filed on July 24, 1996, Case No. VFA-0196, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) A newly redacted version of the text of a January 27, 1954 lecture that Major General James McCormack, Jr., delivered at the National War College, in which additional information is now released, will be provided to the National Security Archive under separate cover.

Case No. VFA-0197, 26 DOE ¶ 80,109

August 20, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: David L. Anderson

Date of Filing: July 25, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0197

On July 25, 1996, David L. Anderson filed an Appeal from a determination issued on June 27, 1996, by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA). The determination responded to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On May 29, 1996, Mr. Anderson filed a request under the FOIA for information relied upon by BPA official Fred Johnson "as a basis for the Personnel Action taken against me, . . . [on] November 27, 1995, of my Directed Permanent Reassignment from Snohomish, WA, Substation Maintenance District to Pasco, WA, Substation Maintenance District." Letter from David L. Anderson to Gene Tollefson, BPA (May 29, 1996). The Appellant specifically requested "copies of the officially written statements, complaints and depositions from January 1, 1995 through November 27, 1995" about him made by 13 persons named in his request. Id. BPA issued a decision on June 27, 1996, in which it denied under FOIA Exemption 5, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), Mr. Anderson's "request for the written statements of several people interviewed in conjunction with factfinding conducted at Snohomish, Washington . . . ." Letter from Richard A. Nelson, Employee Relations Manager, to David L. Anderson (June 27, 1996). BPA forwarded to this office a copy of the document that it withheld from Mr. Anderson, a report of an investigation conducted on behalf of the BPA Office of General Counsel by an outside investigator between September 14, 1995, and November 20, 1995. Included with the report are 16 witness statements and 23 exhibits consisting of intra-agency documents collected by the investigator.

II. Analysis

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency memoranda or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). The three principal privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion are the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work product privilege, and the "deliberative process" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In the present case, BPA relied upon the attorney work product privilege of Exemption 5.

The attorney work product privilege protects from disclosure documents which reveal "the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3); see also Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 511 (1947) (Hickman). This privilege does not extend to every written document generated by an attorney, but only to those prepared either for trial or in anticipation of litigation. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 865. So long as there is "some articulable claim likely to lead to litigation," id., or potential litigation has become "identifiable," the work product privilege will attach. See William Hyde, 17 DOE ¶ 80,130 at 80,570 (1988) (citing Kent Corp. v. NLRB, 530 F.2d 612, 623 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 920 (1976)).

Although the report identified by BPA as responsive was generated by an outside investigator, this fact does not place the document outside the "inter-agency or intra-agency" scope of Exemption 5. Documents created by outside parties at the behest of an agency have been held to fall within the scope of the exemption. See, e.g., Badhwar v. Department of the Air Force, 829 F.2d 182, 184-85 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (upholding application of Exemption 5 to document generated by contractor). Moreover, there is no question that there was potential for litigation in September through November 1995, when the report of investigation was generated. In his Appeal, Mr. Anderson states that he has filed a whistleblower complaint with the Office of Special Counsel, a federal agency which investigates allegations of prohibited personnel actions and litigates before the Merit Systems Protection Board. Clearly, this action was identifiable as potential litigation at the time the report was compiled. See Williams v. McCausland, No. 90-Civ-7563, slip op. at 29 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 18, 1994) (documents generated in connection with litigation before MSPB). In fact, the report states that the investigation involved the Appellant's claims of retaliation and a hostile work environment.

It is also clear that the report in question is precisely the type of document meant to be protected by the work product privilege.<1> In the seminal case of Hickman v. Taylor, the Supreme Court set forth the rationale behind the privilege. "Proper preparation of a client's case demands that he assemble information, sift what he considers to be the relevant from the irrelevant facts, prepare his legal theories and plan his strategy without undue and needless interference. That is the historical and the necessary way in which lawyers act within the framework of our system of jurisprudence to promote justice and to protect their clients' interests." Hickman, 329 U.S. at 510-11. In this case, the investigator sifted relevant from irrelevant facts on behalf of the attorney, and presented his findings in the report that was withheld from the Appellant. Therefore, based on our review of the report and the circumstances present, we agree with BPA that the body of the report, the witness statements, and the exhibits are protected from disclosure by the attorney work product privilege of Exemption 5. See Martin v. Office of Special Counsel, 819 F.2d 1181, 1187 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (witness statements); Exxon Corp. v. FTC, 466 F. Supp. 771, 772-73 (D.D.C. 1978) (economist's report), aff'd, 663 F.2d 120 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Wilson v. Department of Energy, No. 84-3163, slip op. at 8 (D.D.C. Jan. 28, 1995) (consultant's report).

As explained earlier, under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1, material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA may be released if disclosure is determined to be in the public interest. We find that the public interest is best served by non-disclosure in order to insure that government attorneys are able to prepare their clients' cases free from the kind of "undue and needless interference" cited by the Supreme Court in Hickman v. Taylor. "Were such materials open to opposing counsel on mere demand, much of what is now put down in writing would remain unwritten." Hickman, 329 U.S. at 510-11. Without the protection of the privilege, government attorneys would be handicapped from providing effective representation to agencies. Therefore, we find that the public interest does not mandate release of the material withheld under Exemption 5.

We further find that the existence of tangible risks to the interests protected by the work product privilege satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard set forth by the Attorney General in 1993. This standard applies a presumption in favor of disclosure which, unless an "agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would be harmful to an interest protected" by an Exemption, should result in a determination by the agency that the public interest lies with disclosure. Memorandum from Attorney General Janet Reno to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993). Because the documents in question were created in response to the Appellant's allegations of retaliation, and the Appellant's whistleblower complaint is currently pending before the Office of Special Counsel, we can reasonably foresee that release of the document will give the Appellant "the benefit of the agency's legal and factual research and reasoning, enabling him to litigate ?on wits borrowed from the adversary.'" FTC v. Grolier Inc. 462 U.S. 19, 30 (1983) (Brennan, J., concurring) (quoting Hickman, 329 U.S. at 516 (Jackson, J., concurring)). Accordingly, the DOE cannot responsibly make a discretionary disclosure of the report of investigation.

However, from our review of the exhibits to the report, consisting of various intra-agency documents, it appears that there exist other documents responsive to the Appellant's request for "officially written statements" of certain persons named in his request. Although this request was understandably interpreted by BPA to be only for the report of the investigation conducted from September through November 1995 (the phrasing of the request makes it susceptible to this interpretation), the Appellant requested written statements made "from January 1, 1995 through November 27, 1995." If the request is read literally, its scope also includes intra-agency documents other than the report of investigation. Unless otherwise exempt, these other documents should be located and released, even if some of them eventually became exhibits to the report of investigation. This does not mean that the documents should be released to the Appellant and identified as exhibits to the report. Such a release would obviously reveal which documents were considered relevant by the investigator, and would therefore defeat the purpose of the work product privilege as discussed above. But to identify and, if not otherwise exempt, release intra-agency documents responsive to the request without indicating which of those documents were exhibits to the report will not violate the work product privilege. We will therefore remand this matter to BPA to conduct a search for any documents dated from January 1, 1995, through November 27, 1995, concerning the appellant and authored by the individuals named in his request. Upon completion of this search, BPA must issue a new determination either releasing the documents located or explaining the reasons for withholding the information.<2>

For the reasons explained above, the present Appeal will be granted as specified in this Decision. In all other respects, the Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by David L. Anderson on July 25, 1996, Case Number VFA-0197, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration, which shall issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0199, 26 DOE ¶ 80,112

September 9, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Diane C. Larson

Date of Filing: August 9, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0199

On August 9, 1996, Diane C. Larson (the Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on July 25, 1996, by the Director, Office of External Affairs, Richland Operations Office (DOE/RL). That determination denied in part a request for information which the Appellant filed on May 13, 1996, pursuant to the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1008, and the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If the present Appeal were granted, the DOE would be ordered to release in its entirety information that was withheld in the July 25, 1996 determination.

I. Background

In her May 13, 1996 FOIA and Privacy Act Request, the Appellant, an employee of a DOE contractor, Westinghouse Hanford Company (WHC), sought, inter alia, the following four categories of information: (i) her DOE and WHC employee concerns records,<1> (ii) reports written by WHC employees concerning investigations of alleged misconduct by the WHC safeguards and security manager, (iii) other documents which were part of WHC's investigative file in this matter and (iv) copies of any records relating to the criteria used to determine layoffs within the WHC safeguards and security department. In the July 25, 1996 determination, DOE/RL released the Appellant's DOE employee concerns file and a "Westinghouse Force Report," <2> but deleted the dates of employment of WHC employees contained within the latter document under Exemption 6 of the FOIA. The DOE/RL also found that the remaining requested records were not in the possession of DOE but were owned exclusively by WHC and therefore were not "agency records" subject to the provisions of the Privacy Act or the FOIA. The Appellant is challenging each determination.

II. Analysis

As an initial matter, we note that we must consider the Appeal under the provisions of both the Privacy Act and the FOIA, because requested material must be released if it is disclosable under either act. James E. Davies, 11 DOE ¶ 80,151 (1983). Our threshold inquiry in this case is whether the WHC-owned materials which were not possessed by DOE are subject to either the FOIA or the Privacy Act. Only organizations meeting the definition of "agency" under the Privacy Act are subject to its access provisions. See 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d). Documents are subject to the FOIA if they meet the criteria set out by the courts for determining "agency records." See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Further, if the documents are not "agency records," they may still be subject to release under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e).

A. Privacy Act

The Privacy Act, like the FOIA, defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f) and 5 U.S.C. § 552a(1). A private organization will be considered a federal agency only where its organizational structure and daily operations are subject to substantial government control. See United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807, 815-816 (1976) (FOIA case); Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977) (FOIA case); see also Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169 (1980) (FOIA case).

We have held previously that WHC is not an "agency" for FOIA purposes because DOE does not supervise WHC's day-to-day operations. Government Accountability Project, 22 DOE ¶ 80,103 (1992). We find that to be the case for Privacy Act purposes as well. Therefore, the remaining question is whether the Appellant can gain access to the WHC-owned documents under the FOIA.

B. "Agency Records"

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records" but merely lists examples of the types of information required to be made available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, this Office has applied a two-stage analysis fashioned by courts for determining whether documents created by nonfederal organizations are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., Cowles Publishing Co., 24 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1994); Concord Oil Co., 24 DOE ¶ 80,109 (1994); International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, 22 DOE ¶ 80,101 (1992); B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1987). That analysis involves a determination first whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA. Since that is not the case here, we must determine whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987). A document is an "agency record" if it was (i) either created or obtained by an agency, and (ii) under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-45 (1989) (Tax Analysts). For purposes of analysis, the term "obtain" means that the agency must have possession of the material at the time of the request in order for the material to qualify as an agency record. Id.

After speaking with DOE/RL, we learned that all responsive documents obtained by DOE/RL were turned over to the Appellant (with the deletions discussed below). See Record of Telephone Conversation between Angela Ward and Dawn Koren (August 9, 1996). There were no other responsive documents that had been created or obtained by DOE or that were under DOE control at the time of the request. Under these circumstances, the documents which were named as belonging to WHC do not meet the "agency records" test set forth in the Tax Analysts case.

C. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)

Under this Office's previous case law, see, e.g., Vista Control Systems, 24 DOE ¶ 80,104 at 80,510 (1994); John Lohrenz, 23 DOE ¶ 80,116 (1993); Government Accountability Project, 22 DOE ¶ 80,103 (1992), and as set forth in 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1), even if a contractor-acquired or contractor-generated document fails to qualify as an "agency record," it may still be subject to release under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e) if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. We must determine whether the relevant contract makes any of the documents at issue the property of the agency.

Section (b) of Article H-8 of the current contract between WHC and DOE provides in pertinent part that the following records are not the property of the government:

(1) Personnel records and files maintained on individual employees and applicants;

(2) . . . Employee Concerns Program records and files maintained on individual employees;

(4) Employee relations records and files such as records and files pertaining to:

(i) Qualifications or suitability for employment of any employee, applicant, or former employee, subcontractor or subcontractor employee records;

(ii) Allegations, investigation and resolution of employee misconduct;

(iv) Employee charges of discrimination;

. . . .

(5) Records and files pertaining to wages, salaries, and benefits and wage, salary and benefit administration.

. . . .

All of the records at issue in this Appeal which were not already released to the Appellant fall within these provisions. First, the Appellant's WHC employee concerns file clearly falls under the provision of Section (b)(2) above. Second, the reports written by WHC employees concerning the investigations of the WHC safeguards and security manager's alleged misconduct, and other documents which were part of WHC's investigative file in this matter, clearly fall under Section (b)(4)(ii) and may also fall under Section (b)(4)(iv) of that contract.<3> We also find that DOE/RL's interpretation of the contract term "personnel records" to include documents setting forth general criteria for any WHC layoff is reasonable.<4> We therefore uphold DOE/RL's determination that these categories of records are exclusively the property of WHC and do not fall within the reach of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3. Therefore, the requested records at issue in this Appeal are not subject to disclosure under the FOIA.

D. Exemption 6

The Appellant has also challenged the deletions made under Exemption 6 of WHC employees' dates of service listed in the Westinghouse Force Report. Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post). Furthermore, the term "similar files" has been interpreted broadly by the Supreme Court to include all information that "applies to a particular individual." Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 602. Thus, there is no doubt that the Westinghouse Force Report qualifies as a "similar file" under Exemption 6. See Jeffrey R. Leist, 25 DOE ¶ 80,159 at 80,651 (1996).

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a substantial privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest exists or if only a de minimis privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (Ripskis). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 772-73 (1989) (Reporters Committee). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

In this case, DOE/RL redacted names, job titles and service dates of all WHC employees listed in the Westinghouse Force Report. According to the Determination Letter, disclosure would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy. See Determination Letter at 1. In her Appeal, the Appellant has requested that the names and service dates (not job titles) be released to her. In response, DOE/RL argues that the persons named in the report have a protectible privacy interest in their names, and further, that to release the names connected to service dates would betray the employees' ages. This release of age, in DOE/RL's view, would also invade a privacy interest. Record of Telephone Conversation between Angela Ward and Dawn Koren (August 12, 1996).

1. The Privacy Interest

In order to determine whether there is a privacy interest in the withheld information, we must determine whether release of this information might reveal something personal about the people involved. See News Tribune, 25 DOE ¶ 80,180 (1996).<5> Thus, it is only when the release of some personal information about an individual would cause an invasion of a substantial privacy interest that the information may be exempt from mandatory release under the FOIA.

We note first that there is no privacy interest in the names of these individuals, in and of themselves. News Tribune, 25 DOE at 80,700; Payne. An invasion of privacy can become recognizable when a name is linked with some other information that reveals something personal about an individual. Department of State v. Ray, 502 U.S. 164, 176 & n.12 (1991) (Ray); Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762; Professional Programs Group v. Department of Commerce, 29 F.3d 1349, 1354 (9th Cir. 1994); Multnomah County Medical Soc'y v. Scott, 825 F.2d 1410, 1415 (9th Cir. 1987). Therefore, we must examine the withheld information in the context with which it is associated; i.e., what release of this information would specifically reveal about those particular persons. See News Tribune, 25 DOE at 80,699; see also Horner, 879 F.2d at 876.

In this case, the employees listed in the Force Report are linked with having worked a certain number of years at WHC. We have first considered DOE/RL's argument that the length of service may betray the employee's age, which could be considered a protectible privacy interest. We have also considered whether there is a privacy interest in the length of time worked for WHC. We do not find a protectible privacy interest in either case, for the following reasons.

Although there may a privacy interest in a person's exact age or birth date, that information is not being disclosed here, since there is no direct correlation between years of service and age. At most, it is possible that length of service may in some cases disclose a person's general age. We find neither a person's general age, nor their length of service, to be the type of strictly personal information protected by Exemption 6. See Department of Defense v. Federal Labor Relations Auth., 114 S. Ct. 1006 (1994) (home addresses); Ray (marital and familial status); Sangre de Cristo Animal Protection, Inc., 25 DOE ¶ 80,121 (1995) (Social Security numbers); A. Victorian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,111 (1995) (autopsy pictures); Foundation for Fair Contracting, 21 DOE ¶ 80,169 (1991) (names and home addresses redacted from payroll records). In the cases cited, the information protected is by its nature easily hidden and therefore corresponds with the aim of Exemption 6, the guarding against unnecessary disclosure of files "which would contain ? intimate details' of a ?highly personal' nature." New York Times Co. v. National Aeronautics and Space Administration, 782 F. Supp. 628, 631 (D.D.C. 1991) (citations omitted). The acts of advancing through life stages and of going to work are carried out in the public realm and we therefore find no recognizable privacy interest in either case. Thus, we are unable to find that a privacy interest exists in the withheld information in this case.

2. The Privacy Interest/Public Interest Balance

In this case, we have been unable to discern any privacy interest in withholding any of the material redacted by DOE/RL. If there is no identifiable privacy interest, then information may not be withheld under Exemption 6. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3; J/R/A Associates, 24 DOE ¶ 80,165 at 80,655 (1995); William D. Lawrence, 24 DOE ¶ 80,139 at 80,600 (1994); Virginia Johnson, 23 DOE ¶ 80,168 at 80,664-65 (1993). Accordingly, we will remand this matter to DOE/RL to either release the withheld information or issue a new determination identifying some other privacy interest that justifies the continued withholding of this information.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, we find that none of the requested information held solely by WHC is an agency record or is subject to the FOIA under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3. However, we have found that with respect to a document in DOE/RL's possession, the Westinghouse Force Report, the deletions made under Exemption 6 were incorrect. Accordingly, we shall grant the Appellant's FOIA Appeal in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Diane C. Larson on August 9, 1996, Case Number VFA-0199, is hereby granted to the extent set forth in paragraph (2) below and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This case is hereby remanded to the Department of Energy's Richland Operations Office, which shall release the names and service dates of the WHC employees withheld pursuant to Exemption 6 described above or issue a new determination justifying any withholding of this information in accordance with the above Decision.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>An employee concerns file is the record of any complaint brought by an employee to an Employee Concerns office, including such matters as discrimination claims, waste, fraud, abuse, health, and safety. See Electronic Mail Message from Angela Ward, FOIA Specialist, DOE/RL, to Dawn Koren, Staff Attorney, OHA (August 16, 1996).

<2>This document is a listing of the names, job titles, job descriptions and service dates of all WHC safeguards and security employees.

<3>The employee misconduct at issue involved a sexual harassment allegation of a hostile work environment. See Telephone Conversation between Diane C. Larson, Appellant, and Dawn Koren (August 9, 1996).

<4>/ The Appellant also requests in her Appeal the salaries of WHC employees who were not subject to a recent layoff. DOE/RL believes that this is a new request, see Records of Telephone Conversation between Angela Ward and Dawn Koren (August 9, 1996), and is not properly the subject of an Appeal. In any case, such salary information would clearly fall under Section (b)(5) of the contract as the property of WHC.

<5>/ Further, material which is not strictly personal, but is nonetheless identifying, can be protected if there is a substantial probability that release would cause interference with personal privacy. See National Ass'n of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873, 878 (D.C. Cir. 1989) (Horner); William H. Payne, 25 DOE ¶ 80,190 at 80,727 (1996) (Payne); Southwest Resource Development, 24 DOE ¶ 80,164 (1995) (individuals involved in Inspector General's investigations protected under Exemptions 6 and 7(c)). DOE/RL has not invoked this provision.

Case No. VFA-0200, 26 DOE ¶ 80,113

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Dennis J. McQuade

Date of Filing: August 9, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0200

On August 9, 1996, Dennis J. McQuade filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on July 29, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Oak Ridge Operations Office (OR). That determination was issued in response to a request for information submitted by Mr. McQuade under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Mr. McQuade asserts that OR failed to provide him with responsive documents in its possession regarding a Request for Information he made on July 24, 1996.

I. Background

On July 24, 1996, Mr. McQuade filed a request for information in which he sought the following information:

1. The identity of the person who furnished Rufus Smith, OR's Diversity Program Manager, with a copy of an anonymous survey response. A written statement from Jim Hall and Steve Richardson as to what disciplinary measures will be utilized to punish the perpetrators of this gross breach of confidentiality/anonymity.
2. A copy of the letter referring the anonymous response to the FBI, and any attachments thereto. The identities of all signatories to the referral letter.
3. Copies of any and all responses, communications from the FBI, including written, verbal, E-mail, or any other type of correspondence, to include any conclusions they may have reached and any recommendations made.

July 24, 1996 FOIA Request.

On July 29, 1996, OR issued a determination which stated that it conducted a search of its files which included the Office of Assistant Manager for Defense Programs, the Quality and Reliability

Division, the Safeguards and Security Division, and the Office of Chief Counsel. See Determination Letter at 1. OR stated that the only record which could be located was a record which responded to item 2 of Mr. McQuade's request. OR provided that record, a memo dated May 28, 1996 to Harry Franz transmitting a copy of the survey response, to Mr. McQuade in its entirety. Id. OR further stated that no documents could be located in response to item 1 and item 3 of Mr. McQuade's Request. Id.

On August 9, 1996, Mr. McQuade filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals. In his Appeal, Mr. McQuade challenges the adequacy of the search conducted by OR. Specifically, Mr. McQuade makes the following contentions: (1) the Determination Letter did not indicate whether Rufus Smith was contacted regarding the identity of the person who provided him with a copy of the anonymous survey; (2) the Determination Letter did not provide the identity of Harry Franz and (3) OR did not provide the full 13 pages of material described in the memo dated May 28, 1996.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was inadequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was reasonable, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01, modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In reviewing the present Appeal, we contacted officials at OR to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. Upon receiving Mr. McQuade's Request for Information, OR instituted a manual search of its files in the Office of Assistant Manager for Defense Programs, the Quality and Reliability Division, the Safeguards and Security Division, and the Office of Chief Counsel. The OR indicated that it located the only responsive document to Mr. McQuade's request, which consisted of a copy of the subject survey response and record of its transmittal to Harry Franz on May 28, 1996. OR indicated that it found no documents in response to items 1 and 3 of Mr. McQuade's request. However, since that time OR has supplemented its Determination by providing the following information to Mr. McQuade: (1) the remaining seven of the 13 pages attached to the memo dated May 28, 1996, to Harry Franz; (2) the identity of Harry Franz and (3) a confirmation that an additional manual search for responsive documents was conducted by Rufus Smith in the Office of Diversity Programs. See Supplemental Letters from Amy L. Rothrock, FOIA Officer to Dennis J. McQuade (August 12, 13, and 15, 1996). With regard to the additional search conducted by Rufus Smith, OR informed Mr. McQuade that no additional responsive documents could be located. OR has now responded to each of the contentions Mr. McQuade made in his Appeal. Given the facts presented to us, we find that OR conducted an adequate search which was reasonably calculated to discover documents responsive to Mr. McQuade's Request. Therefore, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Dennis J. McQuade, OHA Case No. VFA-0200, on August 9, 1996, is hereby denied.

in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0201, 26 DOE ¶ 80,114

September 9, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

APPEAL

Name of Petitioner: Mary Towles Taylor

Date of Filing: August 12, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0201

On August 12, 1996 , Mary Towles Taylor filled an Appeal from a determination that denied a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552 (FOIA), as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. Ms. Taylor appeals from a July 19, 1996 determination issued by the FOIA/Privacy Act Division at DOE Headquarters (Headquarters' FOIA Office). This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to conduct a further search for documents responsive to Ms. Taylor's request. (1)

I. Background

On July 1, 1996, Ms. Taylor filed a FOIA request seeking documents that relate to her father's exposure to radiation during his employment at Oak Ridge. The Headquarters' FOIA Office determination indicated that the Department's Office of Human Radiation

Experiments (OHRE) and Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge) searched for documents responsive to this request, but that no responsive documents were found.(2)

II. Analysis

We have held that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we find that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g. Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1993); Marlene R. Flor, 23 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1993); Native Americans for a Clean Environment, 23 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1993). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "The standard of reasonableness that we apply to the agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

In reviewing this Appeal, we contacted employees at OHRE and Oak Ridge to discuss the search conducted by these offices for documents concerning Arcellus Towles' exposure to radiation. We were informed that OHRE and Oak Ridge had searched for records that might show that Mr. Towles had experienced an occupational exposure to radiation. However, neither office had conducted a search for records that might show exposure to radiation for experimental purposes. Both OHRE and Oak Ridge have requested that Ms. Taylor's FOIA request be remanded so that these offices may conduct an additional search to determine whether records exist which would show whether Mr. Towles had been exposed to radiation for experimental purposes. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amy Rothrock, Freedom of Information Act/Privacy Act Officer at Oak Ridge, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (August 30, 1996); Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Robert Zielinski, Case Manager, OHRE, and Linda Lazarus (August 30, 1996).

In view of the foregoing, we shall grant the present Appeal to the extent that DOE will be required to conduct a further search for documents. This matter will be remanded to the Headquarters' FOIA Office for a new determination with instructions to seek additional documents from OHRE and Oak Ridge.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Mary Towles Taylor on August 12, 1996, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraphs (2) below, and is in all other respects denied.

(2) This matter is remanded to the Headquarters' FOIA Office which is instructed to request that OHRE and Oak Ridge conduct a further search for documents that relate to any human radiation experiments which might have involved Arcellus Towles during the time that he was employed at Oak Ridge. After OHRE and Oak Ridge inform the Headquarters' FOIA Office of the results of these searches, the Headquarters' FOIA Office shall issue a new determination in this matter.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of busi ness, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)In her Appeal, Ms. Taylor indicates that she believes that her father was a participant in the Manhattan Project. Her conclusion is based on the fact that the Manhattan Project involved a black male employee of Oak Ridge. However, from the documents submitted by Ms. Taylor, it is clear that this employee was not Ms. Taylor's father. The employee involved in the Manhattan Project died in 1952 at age 60. According to the death certificate that Ms. Taylor provided, her father died in 1960 at age 72.

(2)In her Appeal, Ms. Taylor indicates that she believes that her father was a participant in the Manhattan Project. Her conclusion is based on the fact that the Manhattan Project involved a black male employee of Oak Ridge. However, from the documents submitted by Ms. Taylor, it is clear that this employee was not Ms. Taylor's father. The employee involved in the Manhattan Project died in 1952 at age 60. According to the death certificate that Ms. Taylor provided, her father died in 1960 at age 72.

(3)Ms. Taylor indicates that she believes that her father was a participant in a study of plutonium injections related to the Manhattan Project. Her conclusion is based on the fact that the study involved an unnamed black male employed at the Oak Ridge site. However, from the documents submitted by Ms. Taylor, it is clear that this employee was not Ms. Taylor's father. The employee involved in that study died in 1952 at the age of 60. According to the death certificate provided by Ms. Taylor, her father died in 1960 at the age of 72.

Case No. VFA-0202, 26 DOE ¶ 80,115

September 11, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: William Donnelly

Date of Filing: August 13, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0202

On August 13, 1996, the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) received an Appeal filed by William Donnelly from a determination issued to him by the Freedom of Information Officer at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Pittsburgh Energy Technology Center (hereinafter referred to as "the Officer"). The Officer's determination was issued in response to a request for information processed in accordance with the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the Officer to conduct a further search for responsive documents.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his request, Mr. Donnelly sought access to documents concerning his arrest and 1987 conviction of various federal offenses that occurred during his employment with the DOE. Specifically, he requested copies of log books that he maintained as a part of his duties with the DOE, records of all purchases of steel by the DOE and its subcontractors at the Bruceton Research Center in Pittsburgh prior to 1987, and records of any investigations of employee theft of government property at the Bruceton Research Center.

In her determination, the Officer informed Mr. Donnelly that no documents responsive to his request could be located. The Officer stated that because the DOE's procurement office is only required to maintain purchase records for three years, no records exist for steel purchases made prior to 1992. The Officer further stated that the log books could not be found and that no records satisfying the parameters set forth in Mr. Donnelly's request existed concerning investigations of employee thefts.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (Truitt). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. The fact that the results of a search may not meet with the requester's expectations does not necessarily mean that the search was inadequate. Robert Hale, 25 DOE ¶ 80,101 at 80,501 (1995). Instead, in evaluating the adequacy of a search, our inquiry generally focuses on the scope of the search that was performed. See, e.g., Richard J. Levernier, 25 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1995).

In order to evaluate the scope of the search, we contacted the Officer. In particular, we inquired about the statements she made in the determination letter concerning the log books that Mr. Donnelly requested. In the determination, the Officer stated that the Inspector General's (IG) Office conducted an investigation of Mr. Donnelly, "and may have taken possession of any evidence incidental to that investigation." In a telephone conversation on September 4, 1996, she stated that a colleague who was a DOE employee at the time of Mr. Donnelly's arrest told her that the IG's Office had conducted an investigation of Mr. Donnelly. However, she has since that time consulted with the IG's Offices in Pittsburgh and at DOE Headquarters in Washington. She now says that her statement in the determination letter was in error, that there had been no investigation of Mr. Donnelly by the IG's Office, and that neither the IG's Office in Pittsburgh nor the Headquarters IG's Office has any documents that are responsive to Mr. Donnelly's request. The Officer further informed us that the DOE's personnel, procurement and security offices had also been searched, and that no responsive documents had been located. See Memorandum of August 26, 1996 telephone conversation between the Officer and Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney.

Based on our conversations with the Officer and with the Headquarters IG's Office, we are satisfied that there was no DOE investigation of Mr. Donnelly, and that the search for responsive documents conducted by the Officer was comprehensive. See also memoranda of August 29, 1996 and September 4, 1996 telephone conversations between Mr. Palmer and Jayne Payne, Headquarters IG's Office. We will therefore deny Mr. Donnelly's Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by William Donnelly on August 13, 1996, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are located, or in the District of Columbia.

September 12, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: US Solar Roof

Date of Filing: August 15, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0203

On August 15, 1996, US Solar Roof (USSR) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on August 1, 1996, by the Manager of the Golden Field Office (Manager) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Manager denied a request for information filed by USSR on July 11, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In its request for information, USSR sought all electronic mail from October 12, 1992 through May 14, 1993, and from September 5, 1994 through January 31, 1995, sent to and received by either Roger Taylor of the National Renewable Energy Laboratory (NREL), or John W. Meeker of the Golden Field Office. On August 1, 1996, the Manager informed USSR that his search revealed no hard copies of responsive documents. In addition, the Manager found no responsive electronic mail files or backup electronic mail files for the years 1992 and 1993. The Manager stated that the Golden Field Office does have archived electronic files on tape for the years 1994 and 1995, but that Mr. Taylor and NREL do not have backup electronic mail files or hard copies for the time periods specified. The Manager could not immediately determine whether the Golden Field Office tapes contain responsive electronic mail messages. The computer system currently used in the Golden Field Office has hardware and software different from the system used in 1994 and 1995, and determining whether responsive electronic mail exists would require locating and reinstalling the old software and hardware, determining if the hardware still operates, searching the files, and then copying any responsive messages to a disk. The Manager informed USSR that he estimated the cost of this search to be between $2,000 and $3,000. The FOIA regulations do not require the Manager to undertake this type of costly search unless USSR agrees to pay for it. In its written Appeal, USSR requested that the DOE search its current electronic mail backup of one year's worth of files because these files may contain older files that predate the creation date of the file on backup, thus possibly containing responsive information.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was adequate, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In its Appeal, USSR did not provide any evidence that responsive information from prior years exists in last year's backup files. USSR only speculates that responsive information exists in those files. Accordingly, we contacted the Golden Field Office to ascertain the feasibility of USSR's contention.<1> Officials at the Golden Field Office informed us that, based on their experience, it is highly unlikely that the past year's backup electronic files contain any responsive information from prior years. The Golden Field Office officials informed us that short of searching the actual 1994 and 1995 files, the most likely place to find electronic mail communications from earlier years is in the hard copy files. For example, Mr. Meeker prints out any communication dealing with source selection information that arrives via electronic mail and places the hard copy into the relevant file. Since the Manager's search included a review of Mr. Meeker's hard copy files and that search did not come up with any responsive information, we find that the Golden Field Office searched all of the areas that might reasonably contain responsive information. As stated above, a determination on whether an agency's search was adequate does not require an absolutely exhaustive search of all files. Accordingly, we find that the Golden Field Office conducted a search reasonably calculated to uncover responsive information.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by US Solar Roof on August 15, 1996, Case Number VFA-0203, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0204, 26 DOE ¶ 80,116

September 12, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Cindy David

Date of Filing: July 31, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0204

On July 31, 1996, the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) of the Department of Energy (DOE) received an Appeal filed by Cindy David from a determination issued to her by the Western Area Power Administration (WAPA). That determination was issued in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require WAPA to release in their entirety several documents which were provided to Ms. David in redacted form.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On June 17, 1996, Ms. David filed a request for "a copy of the contract between Western Area Power Administration and Salazar Associates International, Inc. (Contract #DE-AC65-86WK08385), awarded to them in November 1990." Letter from Cindy David to Contracting Officer, WAPA (June 17, 1996). Ms. David specifically requested "any documentation that refers to fringe benefits for the employees and any reference to severance pay" and a copy of the entire contract. Id. Prior to responding to Ms. David, WAPA solicited comments from Salazar Associates International (Salazar) on the request. Salazar sent WAPA copies of responsive material with what Salazar considered the appropriate redactions of proprietary information. Letter from Vice President, Salazar, to FOIA Officer, WAPA (July 10, 1996). On July 18, 1996, WAPA released responsive documents to Ms. David, after withholding information that WAPA identified as proprietary and thus exempt from disclosure under Exemption 4. Letter from Administrator, WAPA, to Cindy David (July 18, 1996) (Determination Letter).

On July 31, 1996, Ms. David filed an Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). <1> In her Appeal, Ms. David maintains that the information contained in the Expense Categories of Exhibit F.1 (Summary of Labor Overhead Expenses) and Exhibit F.2 (Summary of General and Administrative Expenses) should not be considered proprietary information. She also requests a copy of the Salazar proposal, the opportunity to review the entire contract file under appropriate supervision and permission to copy relevant information. Letter from Cindy David to Director, OHA (July 31, 1996) (Appeal Letter). This Appeal, if granted, would release this information to Ms. David.

II. Analysis

Exemption 4 exempts from mandatory public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to qualify under Exemption 4, a document must contain either (a) trade secrets or (b) information which is "commercial" or "financial," "obtained from a person," and "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Ass'n. v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). In National Parks, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit found that commercial or financial information submitted to the federal government involuntarily is "confidential" for purposes of Exemption 4 if disclosure of the information is likely either: (i) to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (ii) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. Id. at 770; Critical Mass Energy Project v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 113 S.Ct. 1579 (1993) (Critical Mass). By contrast, information that is provided to an agency voluntarily is considered "confidential" if "it is of a kind that the provider would not customarily make available to the public." Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879. In choosing between these two tests, we have held consistently that information submitted in response to a request for proposals is submitted involuntarily and therefore is "confidential" if it meets the test set out in National Parks. See Hanford Education Action League, 23 DOE ¶ 80,143 (1993).

DOE regulations also provide that DOE must solicit the submitter's views regarding the impact of release of the information. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(c). WAPA obtained comments from Salazar in this case, and then did a de novo review of the requested information, releasing some items claimed by Salazar to be confidential which WAPA did not find exempt from disclosure. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Deputy General Counsel, WAPA, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (August 29, 1996).

We find that the withheld materials at issue are commercial within the meaning of Exemption 4 since the material was developed and submitted specifically for the purpose of acquiring a contract. See Industrial Constructors Corporation, 25 DOE ¶ 80,196 (1996) (Industrial); Tri-City Herald, 16 DOE ¶ 80,114 (1987). This material was obtained from a "person" as required by Exemption 4, since corporate entities are deemed persons for purposes of that exemption. See John T. O'Rourke & Associates, 12 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1985). We also conclude that the information withheld, labor and general and administrative expense data, is confidential because its release would substantially harm Salazar's competitive position. We have stated in the past that release of cost and financial information of this type could be used by a competitor to undercut another firm's bids and thus effectively eliminate the disclosing firm from competition. See Industrial; International Technology Corporation, 22 DOE ¶ 80,107 (1992); U.S. Rentals, 21 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1991). In this case, were Salazar to release, for example, its direct costs, indirect costs, and overhead rates, any competitor could easily determine how to adjust its own costs to arrive at a lower contract price and ultimately beat Salazar's best price in a future bid process.

Ms. David maintains that the withheld information should be disclosed because of the public interest in the manner in which tax dollars were used in a government contract. The DOE regulations provide that material exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is permitted by federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1. However, in cases involving material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 4, we do not make the usual inquiry into whether release of the material would be in the public interest. See Painters District Council No. 55, 24 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1994). Disclosure of confidential information that can be withheld pursuant to Exemption 4 would constitute a violation of the Trade Secrets Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1905, and is therefore prohibited. See, e.g., Chicago Power Group, 23 DOE ¶ 80,125 at 80,560 (1993). Accordingly, we may not consider whether the public interest warrants discretionary release of the expense and overhead information properly withheld under Exemption 4.

Finally, we find that allowing the requester an opportunity to view and copy the withheld material is equivalent to releasing the information to the requester. Although Ms. David may not be a competitor herself, releasing the information to her would be the same as releasing the information to the public, including any potential competitor. Since release of this information in any form would harm Salazar's competitiveness, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Cindy David on July 31, 1996, OHA Case No. VFA-0204, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0205, 26 DOE ¶ 80,119

September 17, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Malcolm Parvey

Date of Filing: August 19, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0205

On August 19, 1996, Malcolm Parvey filed an Appeal from two determinations issued to him on August 7, 1996, by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Western Area Power Administration (WAPA). In those determinations, WAPA released several documents to Mr. Parvey and found that a total of four documents requested by Mr. Parvey under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA)<1> did not exist. WAPA also assessed Mr. Parvey fees totaling of $96.25. If Mr. Parvey's Appeal were to be granted, the fees would not be assessed and new searches for responsive documents would be conducted.

I. Background

In two requests for information, Mr. Parvey sought copies of the most recent abstracts and bidders lists for two contract solicitations conducted by WAPA. On August 7, 1996, WAPA issued two determinations in which it: (1) informed Mr. Parvey that the abstracts he requested did not exist; (2) released copies of all bid requests it had received for both of the solicitations at the time of the request; and (3) assessed Mr. Parvey for search, review and duplication fees totaling $96.25 for the two requests. On Appeal, Mr. Parvey contends:

(1) WAPA's search for responsive documents was inadequate;

(2) WAPA used an excessive number of hours to review the documents it released to him;

(3) WAPA used managerial and professional employees to conduct the review, when it could have used clerical employees; and,

(4) WAPA failed to notify him in advance that it was going to assess him fees.

II. Analysis

A. Adequacy of the Search

We turn first to Mr. Parvey's allegations that the searches for responsive documents conducted by WAPA were inadequate. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶

80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). We review the adequacy of an agency's search under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

Mr. Parvey has expressed concern about WAPA's failure to locate bid abstracts for the two solicitations. According to Mr. Parvey, federal agencies are required to generate bid abstracts (or past procurement histories) for most solicitations. However, we contacted WAPA and were assured that it was not required to produce abstracts for the particular solicitations at issue in the present case and that it did not do so. We therefore find that the searches for responsive documents were adequate.

B. Assessment of Fees

Pursuant to the FOIA, the DOE has issued regulations "specifying the schedule of fees applicable to the processing of requests . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(i). These regulations provide for the assessing of fees to recover the "full allowable direct costs incurred" in responding to requests for information. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9. In so doing, the DOE is to "use the most efficient and least costly methods to comply with requests for documents made under the FOIA." Id.

For purposes of determining the appropriate fees to be charged, the DOE regulations set forth four categories of FOIA requesters: those who seek documents for a commercial use, educational and non-commercial scientific institution requesters, requesters who are representatives of the news media, and all other requesters. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(1)-(4). Mr. Parvey was seeking documents for a commercial use and therefore may properly be assessed fees for "document search, duplication, and review..." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(ii)(I).

WAPA has assessed Mr. Parvey a total of $96.25 in search, review and duplication fees for WAPA's response to two commercial FOIA requests. After reviewing the facts and circumstances of this case, we find that WAPA's assessment of fees was appropriate and reasonable.

We do not find merit in Mr. Parvey's contention that WAPA's use of managerial and professional employees to conduct the processing of his requests was improper. Neither the FOIA or the DOE regulations prevent WAPA's use of managerial or professional employees to process FOIA requests. In fact, the FOIA's legislative history indicates that Congress intended that agencies would use professional employees to process FOIA requests. See H. Rep. No. 93-876 93rd Cong. 2d Sess. 6 (1974) as cited in Marks v. Department of Justice, 578 F.2d 261, 263 (9th Cir. 1978) (finding that a FOIA request would be sufficiently descriptive "if it enabled a professional employee of the agency who was familiar with the subject area of the request to locate the record with a reasonable amount of effort").

Nor do we find that Mr. Parvey's contention that WAPA failed to notify him in advance that it was going to assess him fees to be persuasive. The DOE's FOIA regulations state in pertinent part:

If the DOE determines or estimates that the fees to be assessed . . . may amount to more than $25.00, the requester will be informed of the estimated amount of fees, unless the requester has previously indicated a willingness to pay the amount estimated by the agency.

10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(7). Both of Mr. Parvey's requests specifically indicate his intention to "pay any fees assessed." Accordingly, we find that WAPA was not required to notify him in advance of assessing fees under the FOIA.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the present appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Malcolm Parvey on August 19, 1996, Case Number VFA-0205, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0206, 26 DOE ¶ 80,121

September 20, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: James D. Hunsberger

Date of Filing: August 22, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0206

On August 22, 1996, James D. Hunsberger of Berlin, Germany filed an Appeal from a determination issued on July 22, 1996 by the Acting Director of the Office of Human Radiation Experiments of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part a request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would result in release of further requested information.

Background

On December 12, 1995 Mr. Hunsberger wrote to the Department of Energy requesting information under the Freedom of Information and Privacy Acts. The Freedom of Information and Privacy Group (FOIA Office) of the Office of the Executive Secretariat forwarded this request on February 20, 1996 to the Office of Environment, Safety and Health. Mr. Hunsberger's lengthy, twelve-part request is not easily summarized. Mr. Hunsberger apparently believes he has been the subject of human experimentation over part or all of the last twenty years. During this time he has resided in Riverside, California, North Wales, Pennsylvania, and various locations in Germany, most notably Berlin (before and after reunification) and the Bad Oldesloe home for asylum near Hamburg. Generally, he seeks all available information on human experiments, including any of those of which he may have been a part. In his request, Mr. Hunsberger particularly seeks information on experiments on the behavioral, psychological, and physical effects on humans of the beaming or the use of abnormal amounts of microwaves, electromagnetic waves, laser radiation and other radiation or wavelengths. He is also interested in learning what information was shared with other agencies and foreign governments (particularly in Germany). Mr. Hunsberger also made a series of broad requests for financial information, information dealing with violations of various laws and regulations, as well as some other matters.

The Acting Director of the Office of Human Radiation Experiments (a part of the Office of Environment, Safety and Health) responded to Mr. Hunsberger on July 22, 1996. In that letter, she states that her staff searched the documents available in the DOE's human radiation experimentation database and that they found no responsive documents. Likewise, they checked with the office that is responsible for electric and magnetic power field (EMF) research. That office stated that it has no responsive documents. Her letter also describes in general terms some EMF matters including inter-agency contacts (or lack thereof). In addition, the Acting Director sent Mr. Hunsberger two DOE publications on human radiation experiments. The first publication describes the record groups available. The second publication describes particular experiments. The letter cites the Internet browser address on the World Wide Web for the human radiation experiment documents the DOE has made public and invites him to write to the Coordination and Information Center (CIC) in Nevada for copies of any document. It also states that Mr. Hunsberger should contact other agencies directly for any documents they might have.

Mr. Hunsberger appeals this determination. He contends that the search was inadequate. In particular, he states that his request was far broader than EMF studies and that the DOE publications do not adequately address his request. He also doubts the accuracy of several of the statements in the determination letter, especially those dealing with ongoing research and inter-governmental agreements. In addition, he states that he lacks Internet access.(1)

Analysis

Under the FOIA, in response to an appropriate request that reasonably describes the information sought and conforms to agency regulations, an agency must search its records and release responsive, unpublished, non-exempt information that it has created or obtained at the time of the request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3), (b); Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 144-45 (1989); Martha Julian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,192 at 80,731 (1996); James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,127 at 80,558 (1992). A search that complies with the FOIA need not cover every corner of the agency. Oglesby v. Department of the Army, 920 F.2d 57, 68 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (and cases cited therein); Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1383 (8th Cir. 1985); Martha L. Powers, 24 DOE ¶ 80,147 at 80,618 (1994); Citizens' Action Committee of Pike County Citizens, 22 DOE ¶ 80,178 at 80,679 (1993). Rather, an adequate search under the FOIA need only be one reasonably calculated to uncover the documents requested. Safecard Services, Inc. v. Securities and Exchange Comm'n, 926 F.2d 1197, 1201 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (and cases cited therein); William H. Payne, 24 DOE ¶ 80,145 at 80,615 (1994); Energy Products, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,528 (1993). "An adequate search, however, must be 'a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents.'" Energy Research Foundation, 22 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,529 (1992) (quoting The Lowry Coalition, 21 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,535 (1991)). This Office will remand a case for more research if it is evident that an inadequate search was conducted, or if evidence reveals that other documents that were not identified during the initial search exist. Id. See also Linda J. Carlisle, 24 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,560 (1994); McGraw-Hill Nuclear Publications, 22 DOE ¶ 80,157 at 80,627 (1992); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,153 at 80,658 (1991).

In this case, we believe the search performed by the Office of Human Radiation Experiments in DOE Headquarters was adequate. That Office informs us that any potentially responsive records to which they have access would appear in the DOE's human radiation experimentation database on the World Wide Web. In searching that database, that Office searched by Mr. Hunsberger's name as well as various combinations using the words "Berlin," "Germany," "radiation," human," "laser," "electromagnetic," "microwave," "beam," "North," "Riverside," "Wales," and "California." None of these many combinations produced documents responsive to Mr. Hunsberger's request. We believe this search was well-conceived, well-conducted, and highly conscientious. As such, the search easily meets the standards for the adequacy of a FOIA records inquiry.

Although the search performed by the Headquarters Office of Human Radiation Experiments was adequate, this does not mean that the agency search as a whole was adequate. We have reviewed Mr. Hunsberger's original request, and we believe that it is possible that there are other parts of the DOE that could contain records he seeks. For example, Mr. Hunsberger clearly seeks, inter alia, human experiment records about himself. The documents in the database that the Office of Human Radiation Experiments searched have had all personal identifiers removed. The unredacted originals reside at the CIC in Nevada. We contacted the Nevada Operations Office (which is responsible for the CIC) sua sponte, and it confirmed that the records on the World Wide Web can be searched at the CIC by name. In addition, it appears from his request that Mr. Hunsberger was incarcerated or otherwise associated with a penal institution for at least part of the period for which he seeks documents. The Nevada Operations Office informs us that, although the process is far from complete, it is now reviewing and cataloging records connected to prisoner experimentation. Clearly an adequate DOE search would encompass a name search of the CIC unredacted versions of the records contained in the World Wide Web site and a search of those prisoner experimentation records for which review and cataloging is complete. Similarly, Mr. Hunsberger seeks information on the sharing of human experimentation data with other governments or agencies. This type of information would not necessarily be encompassed within the DOE World Wide Web database site, but may exist in other parts of the DOE.

In this case, we believe the best course of action is to remand this matter to the FOIA Office. The FOIA Office has the broadest overview of the DOE records systems and is best able to determine the appropriate place(s) for any further search on Mr. Hunsberger's request. However, although we are remanding this matter for a further search, we do not believe all of Mr. Hunsberger's request is susceptible to reasonable investigation. For example, Request (5) seeks "[a]ll information on just who did what. On the role of anyone, including the Department of Energy in providing assistance, participating in said research, Human Experimentation, etc." This request is so broad as to defy any attempt at a reasonable search. Similarly, Mr. Hunsberger's eighth request seeks all information on concealment of violations of law or violations of Department of Health and Human Services regulations or laws or regulations of the Federal Republic of Germany. There is nothing in the FOIA which requires agency personnel to familiarize themselves with all of the laws and regulations of another federal department, let alone of a different sovereign nation employing an entirely different legal system, in order to start a FOIA search. Because we are remanding this matter to the FOIA Office, that Office should determine which portions of his request may be subject to a reasonable search, whether the agency might have responsive documents, and the appropriate place(s) to search for documents.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed on August 22, 1996 by James D. Hunsberger of Berlin, Germany, OHA Case No. VFA-0206, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Freedom of Information and Privacy Group of the Office of the Executive Secretariat for further action in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the alleged agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: September 20, 1996

(1)In his submissions, Mr. Hunsberger relies on two Executive Orders. He first relies on sections 1.13 and 3.4 of Executive Order 12333, 46 Fed. Reg. 59941 (1981). This Order deals with United States Intelligence Activities, in particular the structure and relationship of foreign intelligence agencies and domestic departments (such as the DOE) as well as some collection and dissemination responsibilities of enumerated branches of government. Contrary to Mr. Hunsberger's apparent assumption, this general Executive Order does not demonstrate that the DOE has documents responsive to his request or that any documents on human experimentation were shared with other governments or parts of the Federal Government. Similarly, Mr. Hunsberger attempts to invoke sections 1.6, 3.2, 3.4, 6.1, and 6.2 of Executive Order 12356, 47 Fed. Reg. 14874 (1982). We note that this Order was revoked by Executive Order 12958, 60 Fed. Reg. 19824 (1995). Both of these Executive Orders deal with national security information.

However, there is no indication in the record that any of the information Mr. Hunsberger seeks has ever been classified as national security information. Like the first Executive Order cited, these two Executive Orders have no bearing whatsoever on Mr. Hunsberger's FOIA request.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: FOIA Group Inc.

Date of Filing: August 27, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0208

On August 27, 1996, FOIA Group Inc. (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on July 16, 1996 by the Department of Energy's Schenectady Naval Reactors Office (Schenectady). In its determination, Schenectady stated that it was unable to find any documents responsive to the Appellant's March 19, 1996 request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). This Appeal, if granted, would require an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On March 19, 1996, the Appellant submitted a FOIA request to DOE Headquarters (DOE/HQ) seeking copies of a contract between DOE and Gilbert Commonwealth (now named Parsons Power Inc. (Parsons)) and any modifications of that contract, as well as a related contract (and relevant winning proposals) between Parsons and Westinghouse Electric Corp. DOE/HQ believed that this information was located at Schenectady. Schenectady then conducted a search for documents responsive to the Appellant's Request. On July 16, 1996, Schenectady issued its determination, stating that it could not locate any responsive documents. On August 27, 1996, the Appellant filed the present Appeal in which it contends that DOE's search for documents was inadequate.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980).

We contacted DOE/HQ and Schenectady to determine the extent of the search which had been performed. We discovered that the documents the Appellant seeks are under the jurisdiction of DOE's Richland Operations Office (Richland).<1>Consequently, we shall direct this case to Richland. Upon receiving this case, Richland shall identify all documents responsive to the Appellant's request and either release them or provide adequate justification for withholding any portion of them.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by FOIA Group Inc. on August 27, 1996, Case Number VFA-0208, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to Richland Operations Office, which shall conduct a search for documents responsive to the Appellant's request as described in the above Decision and Order, and shall promptly issue a determination regarding those documents.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

<1>We note that this request was misdirected due to the Appellant's inaccurate description of the items sought. The Appellant provided what it described as the Request for Proposal number for this contract. The Request for Proposal number listed by the Appellant in its Request was misnamed - the number listed is an internal Parsons number, not a Request for Proposal number. Further, the contract the Appellant seeks is a Battelle Memorial Institute/Parsons contract, not a DOE/Parsons contract.

Case No. VFA-0209, 26 DOE ¶ 80,122

September 27, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Dirk T. Hummer

Date of Filing: August 29, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0209

On August 29, 1996, Dirk T. Hummer filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him by the Director of the Office of External Affairs at the Department of Energy's Richland Operations Office (hereinafter referred to as "the Director"). The Director issued that determination in response to a request for information submitted by Mr. Hummer under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the Director to release the requested information.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE shall release documents that are exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA if the DOE determines that federal law permits disclosure and that such disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

Background

Mr. Hummer was an employee of ICF-Kaiser Hanford (ICF), which is a sub-contractor of Westinghouse Hanford Company (WHC). WHC has operated the DOE's Hanford facilities pursuant to its contract with the DOE. In his FOIA request, Mr. Hummer sought copies of WHC Excel Idea number 94-0926, and of all "Employee Concerns" submitted by Mr. Hummer to ICF, with the exception of four enumerated Concerns.(1)

In response to this request, the Director provided Mr. Hummer with a copy of a document pertaining to WHC Excel Idea number 94-0926. However, in her determination, the Director stated that the Employee Concerns documents requested by Mr. Hummer could not be provided because they are the property of ICF and are therefore not subject to the provisions of the FOIA. In his Appeal, Mr. Hummer requests that we review the Director's determination that the Employee Concerns documents are not "agency records," and are therefore not subject to the provisions of the FOIA. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f).

Analysis

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information agencies must make available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-step analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents that did not originate with the federal government are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., BMF Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80, 127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination of (I) whether the entity that is in possession of the documents is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA and, if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether we should regard an entity as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case that involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974); cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with the WHC, ICF is responsible for certain duties pertaining to WHC's contract with the DOE. While the DOE exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise ICF's day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that ICF is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.

Although ICF is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, the Employee Concerns documents sought by Mr. Hummer could become agency records if the DOE obtained them and they were within the DOE's control at the time that Mr. Hummer made his FOIA request. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, we have determined that the DOE never obtained the documents, and the documents were not in the agency's control at the time of the appellant's request. See memorandum of September 18, 1996 telephone conversation between Angela Ward, Richland Operations Office, and Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney. Based on these facts, the Employee Concerns documents clearly do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86.

Even though the Employee Concerns documents are not agency records, they may still be subject to release if the contract between WHC and ICF provides that the documents in question are the property of the DOE. 10 C.F.R. 1004.3(e)(1). We must therefore look to the contract between WHC and ICF to determine the status of these records. That contract states that "[e]xcept as is provided in paragraph (b) below, all documents generated under this contract shall be the property of DOE. . . ." Paragraph (b) sets forth nine categories of records that are the property of ICF, including "Employee Assistance Program and Employee Concerns Program records and files maintained on individual employees. . . ." Contract WHC-380393, Section H. Thus, because Employee Concerns documents are specified in the contract as belonging to ICF, these records are not subject to release under the DOE regulations.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the Employee Concerns documents sought by Mr. Hummer are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA nor subject to release under the DOE regulations. Accordingly, we must deny his Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Dirk T. Hummer on August 29, 1996, Case Number VFA-0209, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0210, 26 DOE ¶ 80,123

September 27, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Local Union No. 701, I.B.E.W.

Date of Filing: August 30, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0210

On August 30, 1996, Local Union No. 701, I.B.E.W. (IBEW) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on August 22, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Fermi Group (Fermi). Fermi issued that determination in response to a request for information submitted by IBEW under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require Fermi to release the requested information.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the type of information that an agency may withhold at its discretion. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA if the DOE determines that federal law permits disclosure and that it is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

Background

On August 8, 1996, IBEW filed a request under the FOIA in which it sought copies of certified payroll records of COMNet Midwest Inc., a subcontractor at Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory (Fermilab), for fiber cable installation at Fermilab that started on June 10, 1996 and the fiber cable Wilson Hall Project underway as of August 8, 1996, also at Fermilab. Fermi issued a determination on August 22, 1996, in which it stated that it was unable to locate any records responsive to the IBEW request. However, Fermi stated that Fermilab has ownership of responsive records pursuant to the DOE's Prime Contract with Fermilab, Article 104 "Ownership of Records." In actuality, the DOE's Prime Contract to manage and operate Fermilab is not with Fermilab, but with the Universities Research Association, Inc. (URA). In its Appeal, IBEW requests that the OHA direct Fermi to release the requested information.

Analysis

Our threshold inquiry in this case is whether the requested records are "agency records," and thus subject to the FOIA, under the criteria set out by the federal courts. Cf., 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Second, records that do not meet these criteria can nonetheless be subject to release under the DOE regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e); see 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884

(December 12, 1994). For the reasons set forth below, we conclude that the records in question are not "agency records" and that they are also not subject to release under the DOE regulations.

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information agencies must make available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-step analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents created by non-federal organizations, such as URA, are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., BMF Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80, 127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination (i) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA and, if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at ¶ 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether we should regard an entity as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case that involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974); cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with the DOE, URA is the contractor responsible for maintaining and operating Fermilab. While the DOE obtained URA's services and exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise URA's day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that URA is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.

Although URA is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, its records relevant to the IBEW request could become "agency records" if DOE obtained them and they were within the DOE's control at the time IBEW made its FOIA request. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, we determined that COMNet Midwest Inc. created the documents in question, the DOE never obtained the documents, and the documents were not in the agency's control at the time of the appellant's request.(1) Based on these facts, the payroll documents clearly do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86.

Even if contractor-acquired or contractor-generated records fail to qualify as "agency records," they may still be subject to release if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. The DOE regulations provide that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)." 10 C.F.R. 1004.3(e)(1). (2)

We therefore next look to the contract between DOE and URA to determine the status of these records. That contract generally states,

Except as is provided in paragraph (b) below, all documents generated under this contract shall be the property of the Government (hereinafter referred to as "Government-owned Records") and subject to rights of the Association given in (c) below, shall be delivered to the Government. . . .

Contract DE-AC02-76CH03000. Paragraph (b) states that the excluded category of Contractor's records includes "[r]ecords and files pertaining to wages, salaries, and benefits and wage, salary and benefit administration. . . ." Thus, because records pertaining to wages, salaries, and benefits are not among the records that are property of the Government under the DOE's contract with URA, these records are not subject to release under the DOE regulations.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the certified payroll records sought by the appellant are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA nor subject to release under the DOE regulations. Accordingly, we must deny IBEW's Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Local Union No. 701, I.B.E.W., on August 30, 1996, Case Number VFA-0210, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)See September 17, 1996 Record of Telephone Conversation between Leonard M.Tao, OHA Staff Attorney, and John Chapman, Fermi Group.

(2)We note that there is no recordkeeping contract provision between URA and COMNet Midwest, Inc. nor is there a "flow down clause" in the contract between the DOE and URA requiring DOE sub-contractors to apply recordkeeping provisions outlined in the prime contract. Thus, COMNet Midwest, Inc.'s records are not directly subject to the provisions of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

Case No. VFA-0211, 26 DOE ¶ 80,124

September 30, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: James H. Stebbings

Date of Filing: August 30, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0211

On August 30, 1996, James H. Stebbings (Stebbings) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him in response to a request for documents submitted by Stebbings under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The determination was issued on August 19, 1996, by the Argonne Group, a component of the Department of Energy's Chicago Operations Office (Argonne). This Appeal, if granted, would require that we order Argonne to conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On January 16, 1996, Stebbings filed a request with Argonne for information pursuant to the FOIA. In his request, Stebbings sought information related to a project of the Argonne National Laboratory (ANL) entitled "Lung Cancer Risks from Radon Daughters in Domestic Environments (Contractor No. 63305/004617)." See Letter from James Stebbings to FOIA Officer, DOE Chicago Operations Office (January 16, 1996). Stebbings served as Epidemiology Group Leader of this project from the mid-1980's until he left ANL in 1990. See Letter from James Stebbings, ANL, to New York State Department of Health (October 18, 1985); Letter from J. Rundo, ANL, to Dr. Zhonghua Liang (October 29, 1991).

Argonne forwarded the request to ANL on April 22, 1996. See Letter from Manager, Argonne Group, to Director, ANL (April 22, 1996). ANL searched its offices and identified 15 responsive pages. Four additional responsive pages were identified and material redacted which would reveal information about individuals. See Letter from Director, Information and Publishing Division, ANL, to Manager, Argonne Group (July 19, 1996). Argonne released these pages to Stebbings, along with a determination letter. On August 30, 1996, Stebbings filed this Appeal. Stebbings alleges that a former colleague told him that a team from the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) visited ANL within the last year and copied extensive records of the radon study there. Thus, he contends that additional responsive material exists but was not released to him. See Appeal Letter. He goes on to say that additional relevant records may be in the possession of an employee of the Office of Health and Environmental Research (DOE/OHER) located in Germantown, Maryland. This Appeal requests that OHA direct DOE to conduct another, more detailed search of its files. Id.

II. Analysis

We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W. R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In conversations with Argonne, OHA learned that, in addition to the search of ANL's offices in Chicago, an ANL employee contacted DOE/OHER to determine if any responsive records could be found there. The former Radon Program Manager searched her location but found no responsive material. OHA then contacted the requester to ascertain why he alleged that records could still exist in Germantown. He maintains that there is correspondence between EPA and DOE/OHER regarding the copying of radon study records. According to the requester, because the former Radon Program Manager was one of the top managers working on the study, she should have records related to the project or know where they could be located. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between James Stebbings and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (September 20, 1996). We contacted the former Radon Program Manager in Germantown, who explained that she could not find any correspondence of the type requested or any other records related to the project. She said that, to her knowledge, the EPA never contacted or visited DOE for any information about the study. She stated that, according to the Research Contract Assistant who maintains records at that location, records are retained for 6 and one-half years. Because the radon project began in the mid-1980s, its data fell outside of the retention limit and would likely have been destroyed. The Radon Program Manager was the most knowledgeable person about the radon project who we contacted, and we have no reason to question the veracity of her statements. For example, the requester has not provided any copy of any correspondence with EPA that he maintains exists.

III. Conclusion

In view of the available information, we agree that the DOE has conducted a search reasonably calculated to uncover the documents requested. Searches were performed at ANL, where the requester alleged that additional records existed and were recently copied by another agency, and at DOE/OHER where the former program manager currently is assigned. It is likely that any responsive material in addition to what was provided to the requester was destroyed in the normal course of business due to the age of the project. Accordingly, the Appeal filed by Stebbings should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by James H. Stebbings on August 30, 1996, Case No. VFA-0211, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0212, 26 DOE ¶ 80,125

October 4, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Harold Bibeau

Date of Filing: September 3, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0212

On September 3, 1996, Harold Bibeau filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) on July 25, 1996, by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (DOE/OR) of the Department of Energy (DOE). (1) In his Appeal, Mr. Bibeau asserts that DOE/OR failed to provide him with all of the responsive documents in its possession regarding his Request for Information (FOIA Request) dated May 28, 1996.

I. Background

In his FOIA Request, Mr. Bibeau requested from DOE/OR copies of documents relating to radiation or "drug-hormone" experiments conducted within the confines of the Oregon or Washington State Penitentiaries. (2) Mr. Bibeau included a list of three researchers, Dr. Carl Heller, C.A. Paulsen and Mavis Rowley, who he states were associated with these studies. Also included in Mr. Bibeau's FOIA Request was a list of individuals he claims served on various review boards, individuals who were connected with various DOE facilities during the period the experiments were being conducted, and individuals who worked for the AEC. DOE/OR, in its Determination Letter dated July 25, 1996, informed Mr. Bibeau that it had conducted a search of its files but could not find any documents responsive to his FOIA Request. However, because responsive documents might exist at DOE Headquarters, DOE/OR referred his request to DOE Headquarters.

In his Appeal, Mr. Bibeau argues that given the level of DOE/OR personnel involvement in the Washington and Oregon studies, responsive documents must exist. Specifically, he asserts that one physician, Dr. Eugene Oakberg, a researcher at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory (ORNL), was involved with the studies and that Dr. Oakberg was a member of the AEC Advisory Committee which conducted oversight of the Oregon experiments. Further, Mr. Bibeau maintains that Ms. Rowley, the assistant to the investigator for the Oregon studies, Dr. Heller, visited ORNL on two occasions to work in Dr. Oakberg's laboratory. Mr. Bibeau also asserts that Dr. Michael Bender of ORNL attended meetings in which the Washington and Oregon experiments were discussed. Mr. Bibeau argues that there must be correspondence between the above mentioned parties and a Mr. Paul Henshaw of the AEC.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To ascertain the extent of the search conducted for documents responsive to Mr. Bibeau's request, we contacted the FOIA Officer at Oak Ridge. See Memoranda of telephone conversations between Amy Rothrock, FOIA Officer, DOE/OR, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (September 11 and 17, 1996). She informed us that DOE/OR conducted a search using two computer data bases which indexed the two areas where responsive documents would be most likely to exist. The first was a database which contained information (such as document title and author) relating to documents stored at DOE/OR's records holding area. The second was the DOE Human Radiation Experiment database which accesses all of DOE/OR's documents in its human radiation experiment collection (as well as other DOE documents held outside of DOE/OR). This database searches the text of the documents contained in the database. Both databases were searched using the words "Oregon," "Washington," "Prisoner," "Drug-Hormone Experiment," "Experiment and Washington or Oregon" "Hormone and Washington or Oregon" and "Penitentiary." No responsive documents were discovered with these searches. After Mr. Bibeau's Appeal was filed, DOE/OR searched the databases using the names of the researchers associated with the experiments as listed in the Roadmap Document.(3)This search did not uncover any responsive documents. However, DOE/OR subsequently discovered documents potentially responsive to Mr. Bibeau's FOIA Request. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Amy Rothrock, FOIA Officer, DOE/OR, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (September 19, 1996). Consequently, we will remand this matter to DOE/OR so that it may issue a modified determination discussing the newly discovered documents.(4)Mr. Bibeau may, if he wishes, appeal the new determination.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Harold Bibeau on September 3, 1996, is granted as specified in paragraph (2).

(2) This matter is remanded to the Oak Ridge Operations Office of the Department of Energy so that it may issue a determination regarding any documents that may be responsive to Harold Bibeau's FOIA Request dated May 28, 1996.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)Mr. Bibeau's FOIA Appeal was made complete by our receipt of the determination letter at issue on September 5, 1996.

(2)From 1963 to 1973, the University of Washington, Seattle, conducted studies on the effects of radiation on human testicular function of inmate volunteers at the Washington State Prison. Tissue samples from this study were analyzed at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. During the period August 1963 to May 1971 the Pacific Northwest Research Foundation conducted similar studies on inmate volunteers at the Oregon State Prison in Salem, Oregon. Both studies were supported by the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC), a predecessor agency of the DOE. See Department of Energy, HUMAN RADIATION EXPERIMENTS: The Department of Energy Roadmap to the Story and the Records (1995) (Roadmap Document) (description of experiments catalogued as OT-14 (Washington) and OT-21 (Oregon)).

(3)OR searched the databases using the names of Dr. Heller, Ms. Rowley, William Latz, C.A. Paulsen and T.W. Thorsland. The Roadmap Document can be found in the DOE Internet site at http://www.ohre.doe.gov. This site also contains the Human Radiation Experiment database which the public can use to search for and retrieve documents. DOE also maintains the Opennet database, http://www.doe.gov/html/osti/opennet/opennet1.html, which can be searched for documents regarding human radiation experiments.

(4)DOE Headquarters has also discovered potentially responsive documents and is in the process of responding to Mr. Bibeau. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Verlette Moore, DOE Headquarters, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (September 17, 1996).

Case No. VFA-0215, 26 DOE ¶ 80,131

November 6, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Applicant: Thomas P. Koenigs

Case Number: VFA-0215

Date of Filing: October 7, 1996

On October 7, 1996, Thomas P. Koenigs of Raleigh, North Carolina completed his filing of an Appeal from a determination issued on August 2, 1996 by the Savannah River Operations Office of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part Mr. Koenigs's request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that agency records held by a covered branch of the federal government, and which have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

BACKGROUND

In February of 1994 and again in July of 1994, Mr. Koenigs wrote to the Savannah River Operations Office seeking information regarding DOE Account 89X6090. That account contains monies (including employee wages) owed by certain DOE contractors to non-Federal creditors that are unclaimed after one year or at the end of an entire contract. Funds in that account and accompanying information are transferred by the contractor to the appropriate DOE field office and are then transferred to the DOE Office of Headquarters Accounting Operations. In his request letters, he sought, for the period January 1986 to the present, the names, addresses, check numbers, dates, and check amounts for monies in, inter alia, Account 89X6090, for Savannah River Operations Office's Working Fund Account Check Reconciliation and/or General Disbursement Check Reconciliation accounts.

The Savannah River Operations Office responded to Mr. Koenigs on August 2, 1996. It identified lists of information relating to the accounts Mr. Koenigs enumerated as responsive to the request. The lists cover the nine year period March 1985 through June 1994. At the top of each of the lists are a title, an "as of" date of the list, and an account number. At the bottom there is summary information. In the middle, and making up the bulk of the lists, are column headings and corresponding information that vary somewhat among the many lists identified. Most of the lists have columns and listings for "check number," "payee" (or "vendor" or "name"), "date issued," and "check amount." In addition, some of the lists have columns and listings for "payroll" or "payee," "employee," or "social security" numbers. Others have additional information such as "bank account number."

The Savannah River Operations Office released all of the information on the lists except for the names of individuals and corresponding payroll/payee, employee, or social security numbers. It determined that this information is exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA by Exemption 6, which shields personal privacy. Mr. Koenigs also was informed that the addresses he sought were "not part of the subsidiary records maintained on Appropriation No. 89X6090." The Savannah River Operations Office's determination letter further stated on this point that under the relevant contract, contractor personnel records are owned by the contractor and thus are not subject to the FOIA. The Savannah River Operations Office informs us (although its determination letter does not so state) that it considers any records that would contain responsive addresses to be personnel records. Mr. Koenigs appeals the withholding of the material he sought. Mr. Koenigs also appeals the lack of responsive information for the period June 1994 to August 1996.

Exemption 6 permits an agency to make a discretionary withholding of information which must otherwise be released in response to a FOIA request if the materials are "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). After ensuring that the documents meet the threshold test for types of material covered by Exemption 6, an agency must balance the public interest in disclosure with the privacy interest involved. Department of State v. Ray, 502 U.S. 164, 175 (1991); Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Department of the Air Force v. Rose, 425 U.S. 352, 372 (1976); Harold H. Johnson, 21 DOE ¶ 80,148 at 80,640 (1991).

In considering the first part of the Exemption 6 test, we find that the financial records identified here meet the threshold for Exemption 6 protection. Although these lists are not "personnel and medical files," the Supreme Court has placed a broad definition on the term "similar files" in Exemption 6. In Department of State v. Washington Post Co., the Court said that Exemption 6 is "'intended to cover detailed Government records on an individual which can be identified as applying to that individual.'" 456 U.S. 595, 602 (quoting H.R. Rep. No. 89-1497, at 11 (1966), reprinted in 1966 U.S.C.C.A.N. 2418, 2428). Thus, Exemption 6 applies whenever "disclosure of information which applies to a particular individual is sought from Government records." 456 U.S. at 602. In this case, the withheld information would link sums owed to particular persons. This easily passes the Exemption 6 threshold. See Farnum v. Department of Hous. & Urban Dev., 710 F. Supp. 1129, 1134 (E.D. Mich. 1988) (Farnum) (list of names and addresses of persons owed money on mortgage insurance found subject to Exemption 6).

After determining that this is the type of information to which Exemption 6 applies, we advance to the second part of the Exemption 6 test. This second part has three prongs. For each type of information withheld, we must identify the relevant privacy interest(s) for the concerned individual, and the relevant public interest(s) in release, and then balance these two competing interests.

Two types of information are involved in this case: withheld names and identifying numbers. As we have stated on a number of occasions, there is no Exemption 6 privacy interest in a person's name as such. Rather, the privacy interest depends on what information that name is linked with and how that would reveal something personal or private about that individual. The Cincinnati Enquirer, 25 DOE ¶ 80,206 at 80,768-69 (1996); William H. Payne, 25 DOE ¶ 80,190 at 80,726-27 (1996); The News Tribune, 25 DOE ¶ 80,181 at 80,699-700 (1996). See also Raymond T. Nimmer & Patricia Ann Krauthaus, Information as a Commodity: New Imperatives of Commercial Law, 55 Law & Contemp. Probs., Spring 1992, at 103, 124

(under FOIA law, a person has an interest in "information about himself if the information is personally sensitive, if it is private, and if it is to be used or disclosed in a form related specifically to the individual.").

The individuals' names in this case are linked with unclaimed money owed them by the DOE contractor. The courts have considered similar situations. Under the Reporters Committee standard, there is little doubt that individuals have "a significant privacy interest" in avoiding disclosure where "the names and addresses would be coupled with personal financial information." Hopkins v. Department of Hous. & Urban Dev., 929 F.2d 81, 87 (2d Cir. 1991); National Assoc. of Retired Fed. Employees v. Horner, 879 F.2d 873, 875 (D.C. Cir. 1989). In applying this standard, the courts have found that lists of people connected to money due them raises important privacy interests. This is true because "[w]hen it becomes a matter of public knowledge that someone is owed a substantial amount of money, that individual may become a target for those who would like to secure a share of that sum by means scrupulous or otherwise." Aronson v. Department of Hous. & Urban Dev.. 822 F.2d 182, 186 (1st Cir. 1987) (names and addresses of persons owed reimbursement on mortgage insurance properly withheld while HUD attempting to locate those persons). See also Schoettle v. Kemp, 733 F. Supp. 1395, 1397-98 (D. Haw. 1990) (same) (Schoettle); Farnum, 710 F. Supp. at 1134 (same).

There is a similar, substantial privacy interest in the social security numbers withheld by the Savannah River Operations Office. In our society, social security numbers are the gateway to a wide spectrum of personal information held by both governments and private organizations. Congress has expressed its special concern about the privacy implications of this use of social security numbers. See S. Rep. No. 93-1183, at 181-84 (1974), reprinted in 1974 U.S.C.A.A.N. 6916, 6943-6946 (recognizing widespread use of social security numbers as identifiers in both public and private record system and discussing the serious privacy concerns arising from this use). For these reasons, both the courts and this Office have found a substantial privacy interest in an individual's social security number. See, e.g., International Bhd. of Elec. Workers Local Union No. 5 v. Department of Hous. & Urban Dev., 852 F.2d 87, 89 (3d Cir. 1988); Aronson v. Internal Revenue Serv., 767 F. Supp. 378, 388 (D. Mass. 1991), aff'd on other grounds, 973 F.2d 962 (1st Cir. 1992); International Bhd. of Elec. Workers Local Union 1579, 23 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,514 (1993); Southwest Contract Compliance Found., 22 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,556 (1992).

In addition to the social security numbers, the Savannah River Operations Office also withheld payee and employee numbers. It asserts that with these numbers, a person with access to the appropriate corporate computer system or a computer hacker could find the names of individuals and from there gain access to private information. For the employee number, we agree that there is a privacy interest involved, although less than with a social security number. Cf. Small v. Internal Revenue Serv., 820 F. Supp. 163, 168 (D.N.J. 1992) (Internal Revenue Service agent numbers properly withheld under lower privacy standard of Exemption 7(C)). A person armed with numbers keyed to particular individuals could gain access to the many private facts that are contained in any of the records an employer maintains on its employees. In addition, this concern extends beyond the central corporate computer records identified by the Savannah River Operations Office in this case. Employee numbers may be used on all sorts of private information in other media maintained in work locations (for example, on vacation and sick leave slips).

Even further down the privacy continuum lies the payee/payroll number. It is true that someone misusing computer access or illegally breaking into a computer system could eventually use this number to gain access to a name and, through the name, to private information. However, this information is fairly far removed from actual personal information. It appears one would only use the payee/payroll number to get to some other identifier (such as a name) which might then be used to view or acquire personal information. Thus, although there may be some privacy interest associated with such a number, it is so attenuated from private information about an individual, that we believe it to be small relative to a person's social security or employee number.

Ordinarily at this point we would attempt to determine whether this information would reveal something about the activities or operations of the government as required by the Supreme Court's Reporters

Committee public interest standard and then balance the privacy and public interests. 489 U.S. at 773. Unfortunately, despite our numerous inquiries and the diligent efforts of the Savannah River Operations Office FOIA contact person, the precise scope and nature of these lists is still not clear. Important matters such as how they were created, why they are so important that they are contractually required to be turned over to the DOE, how the DOE uses them, or for how long the agency uses them have not been satisfactorily explained. This information is necessary to identify and balance the public interest in this information.

For example, in the cases we cited above involving names and money owed on federal mortgage insurance (the closest factual analogy we found), the courts determined that the privacy interest outweighed the public interest only for the period the agency or its surrogates were actively seeking the persons owed the money. Aronson, 822 F.2d at 187-88; Schoettle, 733 F. Supp. at 1398; Farnum, 710 F. Supp. at 1135-36. See also Aronson v. Internal Revenue Serv., 973 F.2d 962, 963 (1st Cir. 1992) (although IRS has specific statute which allows withholding of taxpayer information, IRS releases names, cities, states, and zip codes of persons due unclaimed refunds as part of effort to find taxpayers). Without better information about these matters, it would be premature for this Office to attempt the balancing test. Thus, the proper course is to return this aspect of this case to the Savannah River Operations Office for further consideration.

Similarly, we cannot reach a conclusion on Savannah River Operations Office's determination that the requested addresses are (1) "not part of the subsidiary records maintained on Appropriation 89X6090" and (2) personnel records owned and maintained by the contractor. The problem with the first statement is that the very material Savannah River Operations Office sent to us explaining Account 89X6090 states that the last known address for each creditor is part of the information that is supposed to be transmitted to the DOE. It may be that the agency does not have any addresses associated with the creditors on the lists. However, Savannah River Operations Office should explain this apparent anomaly with greater precision in its determination letter. In addition, based on the record before us, we cannot agree with Savannah River Operations Office's assertion that addresses are contractor personnel records. The Savannah River Operations Office apparently concluded that only personnel records would contain responsive addresses because it believed that only employee addresses corresponded to the names on the lists. However, as noted above, the relevant lists contain the names of non-federal agency creditors owed unclaimed funds, not just employees. Because the Savannah River Operations Office limited its search based on this misapprehension, further inquiry is necessary. We believe the most prudent course is to remand this matter to that Office to undertake a further search for potentially responsive records.

Finally, on Mr. Koenigs's last claim, the matter of the lack of responsive records for June 1994 to present, it appears that the Savannah River Operations Office searched only to the approximate date it received Mr. Koenigs's request. Under ordinary circumstances this would be an acceptable search methodology. Typically an agency which replies within the statutory time-limit is legally required only to search up to the date it receives the request. Judicial Watch, Inc. v. Clinton, 880 F. Supp. 1, 10 (D.D.C. 1995). This rule exists to further administrative efficiency and to bring closure to the FOIA search process. Church of Scientology of Texas v. Internal Revenue Serv., 816 F. Supp. 1138, 1148 (W.D. Tex. 1993). As a general rule, we agree that this is a proper manner of processing FOIA request. However, as the D.C. Circuit has pointed out, "neither the terms of the statute nor the case law interpreting them supports a claim that the use of a time-of-request cut-off is always proper." McGehee v. Central Intelligence Agency, 697 F.2d 1095, 1103 (D.C. Cir.) (emphasis in original), vacated on other grounds on panel reh'g & reh'g en banc denied, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). Rather, the period for which any agency should reasonably search can vary based on the facts involved. Id. In this connection, we note President Clinton's directive that "[f]ederal departments and agencies should handle requests for information in a customer-friendly manner. The use of the [FOIA] by ordinary citizens is not complicated, nor should it be. The existence of unnecessary bureaucratic hurdles has no place in its implementation." Presidential Memorandum For Heads of Departments and Agencies on the Freedom of Information Act, 29 Weekly Comp. Pres. Doc. 1999 (Oct. 4, 1993). When a requester seeks current data and the agency's response is substantially delayed, based on the case law and prevailing policy, we believe a responding office ought to search for records reasonably close to the date of the search and/or the response (depending on when the delay occurred). This view is most in harmony with the basic purposes of the FOIA and furthers the President's customer-friendly FOIA initiative. Accordingly, we shall direct the Savannah River Operations Office also to search for responsive records from June 1994 to the date it starts work on this matter on remand.

In summary, we are remanding this matter to the Savannah River Operations Office to (i) make further inquiries into the nature and use of the relevant lists, (ii) identify any pertinent public interests in release, and (iii) balance the public interest with the privacy interest identified above. Further, the Savannah River Operations Office should (iv) re-examine its response to Mr. Koenigs concerning his request for addresses. Finally, the Savannah River Operations Office should (v) search for responsive records that meet the time frame guidance we outlined above.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal of Thomas P. Koenigs of Raleigh, North Carolina, OHA Case No. VFA-0215 is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is remanded to the Savannah Operations Office, which shall issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Hanford Education Action League

Date of Filing: September 24, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0217

The Hanford Education Action League (HEAL) filed an Appeal from a determination that the Department of Energy's Richland Operations Office (Richland) issued to it on August 6, 1996. In that determination, Richland denied in part a request for information that HEAL filed on February 28, 1992, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the information that was withheld in the August 6, 1996 determination.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Those nine categories are repeated in the DOE regulations implementing the FOIA. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In its request, HEAL sought a copy of Document Number HW-69237, entitled "Operation of the Reactor Complex at Production Levels Less Than Full Predicted 1965 Capacity." In its August 6, 1996 response, Richland provided HEAL with a copy of the document from which it had deleted information that had been classified Secret Restricted Data and which it withheld from HEAL under Exemption 3 of the FOIA. Richland stated that the withheld information concerned nuclear materials production, the disclosure of which could jeopardize the common defense and the security of the nation.

In its Appeal, HEAL contends that the withheld information, which concerns two plutonium valuation scenarios, is more than 35 years old and is in the public interest, and therefore "cannot be justifiably considered as jeopardizing the common defense or the security of the nation." HEAL argues that the information should be released or, if the DOE maintains that it must remain classified, better justification for its withholding must be provided.

II. Analysis

Exemption 3 of the FOIA provides for withholding material "specifically exempted from disclosure by statute . . . provided that such statute (A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matter to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); see 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). The controlling statutory provision in this case is the Atomic Energy Act of 1954, 42 U.S.C. § 2011 et seq., which prohibits the disclosure of information concerning atomic energy defense programs that is classified as Restricted Data under the Act. We have previously determined that the Atomic Energy Act is a statute to which Exemption 3 is applicable. See, e.g., National Security Archive, 25 DOE ¶ 80,103 at 80,504 (1995). The information that the DOE deleted from the requested document under Exemption 3 was withheld on the grounds that it concerned nuclear materials production and had been classified as Restricted Data under the Atomic Energy Act. If correctly classified, the information would therefore be exempt from mandatory disclosure.

Upon referral of the appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the DOE Office of Declassification reviewed the withheld information. That Office has now concluded that the document no longer contains any information that needs to remain classified by the DOE. The withheld information was based on a hypothetical scenario for operating the reactors at Richland. Specifically, the figures withheld were the estimated values for the plutonium produced by the reactors if two of the reactors were temporarily shut down. The withheld figures were derived by multiplying the estimated amount of plutonium that would be produced under this scenario by the per-gram value of the plutonium, estimated for purposes of this calculation at $30 and $50 per gram. Therefore, the two values for plutonium differed by a factor of nearly two. Moreover, information already released permitted the calculation of these values by simple arithmetic. Because the disclosure of the two withheld values would not impact upon national security, there is no basis for classifying that information. Accordingly, HEAL’s appeal will be granted and the withheld information will be provided to the appellant under separate cover.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the Hanford Education Action League on September 24, 1996, Case No. VFA-0217, is hereby granted.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0220, 26 DOE ¶ 80,126

October 21, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Radian International

Date of Filing: September 23, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0220

On September 23, 1996, Radian International (Radian) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it by the Manager of the Oak Ridge Operations Office (the Manager). The Manager issued that determination in response to a request for information submitted by Radian under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the Manager to release the requested information.

Background

Radian submitted an unsuccessful bid in response to a Request for Proposals issued by Lockheed Martin Energy Systems (LMES). LMES instituted the procurement to obtain services needed in order to satisfy its obligations as a DOE contractor. In its FOIA request, Radian sought access to documents concerning LMES' procurement procedure. Specifically, Radian requested information pertaining to the ratings of its proposal and of other proposals submitted, the manner in which the proposals were evaluated and the names and job titles of the evaluators, and the costs incurred by LMES as a result of the procurement proceeding.

In his determination, the Manager stated that all files under the control of the Oak Ridge Operations Office were searched for responsive documents, but that no such documents were found. The Manager further stated that the search did not extend to LMES' files, and that under the contract between the DOE and LMES, all procurement records of the type requested by Radian are the property of LMES. The Manager concluded that because the requested records are not in the possession of the DOE, they are not "agency records" and are therefore not subject to the FOIA.

In its Appeal, Radian concedes that, under the terms of the contract, all procurement records are the property of LMES. Nevertheless, Radian requests that we review the Manager's determination that the requested documents are not subject to the FOIA. In addition, Radian has included in its Appeal a request for information that is not within the scope of its original request. Specifically, Radian seeks access to a copy of the minutes and notes of any meeting in which recommendations of the LMES evaluation team concerning the procurement in question were presented to DOE personnel.

Analysis

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information agencies must make available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-step analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents that did not originate with the federal government are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., BMF Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80, 127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination of (i) whether the entity that is in possession of the documents is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA and, if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether we should regard an entity as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case that involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

LMES is a privately owned and operated company. While the DOE exercises general control over the contract work performed by LMES, it does not supervise the company's day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that LMES is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.

Although LMES is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, the documents sought by Radian could become agency records if the DOE obtained them and they were within the DOE's control at the time that Radian made its FOIA request. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, the Manager has stated that the DOE was not in possession of the records at the time of the request, and we have since confirmed that the records have never been in the DOE's possession or control. See Memorandum of October 8, 1996 telephone conversation between Amy Rothrock, Oak Ridge Operations Office, and Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney. Based on these facts, the documents requested by Radian clearly do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86. Therefore, the records requested by Radian are not subject to the FOIA. (1)

Finally, we note that Radian's Appeal includes a request for information that was not sought in the firm's original FOIA request. We have previously held that a FOIA appeal is not an appropriate venue for the consideration of new requests for information. See, e.g., Energy Research Foundation, 22 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,529-30 (1992); Cox Newspapers, 22 DOE ¶ 80,106 at 80,512 (1992). Consequently, on October 3, 1996, we referred Radian's request for documents relating to any meeting between LMES' evaluation team and DOE personnel to the Oak Ridge Operations Office for processing under the FOIA.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the Manager correctly determined that the documents requested by Radian are not subject to release under the FOIA. We must therefore deny Radian's Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Radian International on September 23, 1996, Case Number VFA-0220, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)/ Because the records are the property of LMES pursuant to its contract with the DOE, the provisions of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e) do not apply. Under that regulation, documents that are produced or acquired by a contractor during the performance of its contract with the DOE are subject to disclosure if the contract between the DOE and the contractor provides that the documents are the property of the DOE.

Case No. VFA-0221, 26 DOE ¶ 80,127

October 25, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Perkins Coie

Date of Filing: September 24, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0221

On September 24, 1996, the law firm of Perkins Coie filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on August 20, 1996 by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination concerned a request for information submitted by Perkins Coie pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If the present Appeal were granted, BPA would be required to release the information requested by Perkins Coie.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public, whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On July 28, 1996, Perkins Coie filed a FOIA request seeking a number of contract and engineering documents in the possession of BPA. On August 20, 1996, BPA issued a determination in which it identified a number of responsive documents. However, it concluded that eight documents were exempt from mandatory disclosure pursuant to Exemption 5. The BPA specifically asserted that these documents were exempt pursuant to the attorney-client privilege and the deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5.

On September 24, 1996, Perkins Coie filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA). In its Appeal, Perkins

Coie challenges BPA's August 20, 1996 determination with respect to documents numbered 3, 4 and 5 on the appendix attached to BPA's determination. BPA withheld these documents under the deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5. Perkins Coie asserts that these three documents "reflect merely the preparations for a deposition of BPA employees." See Appeal Letter. Further, Perkins Coie contends that the documents "do not relate to any upcoming decision on BPA's part and thus it is entirely unclear how their decision could chill deliberations or undermine the integrity of the decision-making process." Id. For these reasons, Perkins Coie requests that the OHA direct BPA to release the three documents in dispute.

II. Analysis

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents which are "inter-agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege, and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corporation v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In withholding the three documents in dispute from Perkins Coie, BPA relied upon the "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5.

The "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5 permits the government to withhold documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government decisions and policies are formulated. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. It is intended to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making governmental decisions. EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939 (Cl. Ct. 1958)) (Mink). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151. In order to be shielded by Exemption 5, a document must be both predecisional, i.e., generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e., reflecting the give-and-take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id.

After reviewing the three documents in dispute, we have concluded that the determination made by BPA in applying Exemption 5 was correct and consistent with the principles outlined above. The three documents at issue consist of possible questions and answers relating to a dispute that Puget Sound Power and Light Company has with the Montana Power Company. BPA has informed our office that these documents were not developed in preparation for a deposition, as Perkins Coie contends. These questions and answers were written by DOE employees and were used only for internal DOE purposes. Therefore, these documents are "intra-agency memoranda." In addition, the questions and answers are clearly predecisional and deliberative. They were created before the DOE adopted a final position or document and consist of personal opinions which reflect the consultative process. Furthermore, we note that the release of these potential questions and answers could inhibit employees from expressing their candid views if they believed that those views could become public knowledge. As such, the potential questions and answers contained in the withheld documents are precisely the sort of records of the deliberative and "group thinking" processes which Exemption 5 is designed to protect. Sears, 421 U.S. at 153 (quoting Davis, The Information Act: A Preliminary pnppnppnppnpAnalysis, 34 U. Chi. L. Rev. 761, 797 (1967)). Accordingly, we hold that the withheld documents meet all the requirements for withholding material under the Exemption 5 deliberative process privilege.

However, both the FOIA and the implementing DOE regulations require that non-exempt material which may be reasonably segregated from withheld material be released to a requester. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(c). See Environmental Protection Agency v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 89 (1972); Boulder Scientific Company, 19 DOE ¶ 80,126 at 80,577 n.3 (1989). Exemption 5 only covers the subjective, deliberative portion of the document. Mink, 410 U.S. at 87-91. Factual information contained in the protected document must be disclosed unless the factual material is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material or the non-exempt material is so small and interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate it. See Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1077 (D.C. Cir. 1971); Lead Industries Association, Inc. v. Occupational Safety and Health Administration, 610 F.2d 70, 85 (2d Cir. 1979). There is no indication in BPA's determination letter that it considered this step before withholding the withheld documents in full. Furthermore, after reviewing the documents, it appears that there may be some factual material which is non-exempt and reasonably segregable. Thus, it is appropriate to remand this case to BPA to review the three documents at issue and to release any reasonably segregable factual material or to issue a new determination explaining why this material should not be released.

III. Public Interest Determination

The fact that material requested falls within a statutory exemption does not necessarily preclude release of the material to the requester. The DOE regulations implementing the FOIA provide that "[t]o the extent permitted by other laws, the DOE will make records available which it is authorized to withhold under 5 U.S.C. § 552 whenever it determines that such disclosure is in the public interest." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1. No public interest would be served by release of the potential questions and answers which consist solely of the preliminary views and recommendations of DOE employees. The release of this deliberative material could have a chilling effect upon the agency. The ability and willingness of DOE employees to make honest and open recommendations concerning similar matters in the future could well be compromised. If employees were inhibited in providing information and recommendations, the agency would be deprived of the benefit of their open and candid opinions. This would stifle the free exchange of ideas and opinions which is essential to the sound functioning of DOE programs. Fulbright & Jaworski, 15 DOE ¶ 80,122 at 80,560 (1987). Consequently, we find that the disclosure of the non-factual portions of the three documents at issue would cause reasonably forseeable harm to the interests the agency is protecting under Exemption 5 and therefore is not in the public interest.

IV. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, the OHA finds that BPA properly applied the threshold requirements pnppnpof Exemption 5 to the withheld documents, and that there is no public interest in their release. However, we are remanding this matter to BPA to issue a new determination, either releasing reasonably segregable factual material or explaining the reasons for withholding any factual material contained in the documents.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Perkins Coie on September 24, 1996, Case Number VFA-0221, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Bonneville Power Administration, which shall issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth above.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc.

Date of Filing: October 18, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0222

On October 18, 1996, Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on October 9, 1996, by the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary for Energy Efficiency & Renewable Energy of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary granted a request for information filed by Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. on June 29, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In its request for information, Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. sought copies of documents containing information used in calculating the estimates of energy savings, cost savings, pollution prevention, and job creation claimed by the Department in "Budget-in-Brief Fiscal Year 1997," published by the DOE's Office of Energy Efficiency & Renewable Energy, and in pages 249-251 of Volume 4 of "FY 1997 Congressional Budget Request," DOE/CR-0037, March 1996. On October 9, 1996 the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary released four documents: (1) an explanatory note that summarized Energy Efficiency's method of program benefits estimation; (2) the final report of the peer review process for the FY 1997 budget estimates; (3) documentation of the IDEAS model; and (4) a description of the AMIGA model.

The last two items are models used to derive integrated estimates underlying the budget projection.

In its Appeal, Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. argues that the information it received on October 9, 1996 is not all of the information responsive to its FOIA request. Specifically, Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. states that additional information must exist to backup the calculations outlined in the budget documents. It believes the documents Energy Efficiency provided to it could not have been the only documents used to supply the inputs to the models.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was adequate, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100- 01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted Energy Efficiency to ascertain the validity of Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc.'s contention that other responsive documents must exist.(1) An official at Energy Efficiency informed us that additional reports directly responsive to the Energy Market and Policy Analysis, Inc. request do not exist. However, the same official informed us that additional responsive information probably exists in widely scattered memos, files and communications in the hands of numerous individual program managers and their contractors. The Energy Efficiency official estimated the cost of searching for additional responsive material to be in the range of $60,000 to $70,000. Moreover, the Energy Efficiency official stated that it would require at least two months to search for all of the responsive material.

Since the Energy Efficiency official has confirmed it is likely that additional responsive documents exist, we must remand the case to the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary for a search of the individual program managers' files, memos and communications, subject to a fee agreement between the DOE FOIA Office and Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. We note that Energy Efficiency has indicated to us its willingness to confer with Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. to reformulate the scope of its request to reduce the estimated costs of the DOE's response on remand. C.f. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(c)(2) (DOE should offer assistance in reformulating a non-conforming request).

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. on October 18, 1996, Case Number VFA-0222, is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Principal Deputy Assistant Secretary for Energy Efficiency & Renewable Energy of the Department of Energy for a search of individual program managers' files, memos and communications for any documents responsive to the Freedom of Information Act request filed by Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc. on October 18, 1996, or as subsequently modified, subject to a fee agreement between the Department of Energy Freedom of Information Act Office and Energy Market & Policy Analysis, Inc.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0223, 26 DOE ¶ 80,129

October 28, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Harold Bibeau

Date of Filing: September 27, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0223

On September 27, 1996, Harold Bibeau (Bibeau) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him in response to a request for documents submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The determination was issued on September 12, 1996, by DOE's Office of Human Radiation Experiments (OHRE). This Appeal, if granted, would require that OHRE conduct an additional search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On February 19, 1996 and May 10, 1996, Bibeau filed requests with DOE's FOIA/Privacy Acts Branch (DOE/HQ) for all documents related to the testicular irradiation experiments conducted by Dr. Carl Heller (Heller) and Dr. C. A. Paulsen in the Oregon and Washington State Penitentiaries. See Letters from Bibeau to DOE/HQ (February 19, 1996 and May 10, 1996). In the latter request, Bibeau advised DOE that he had not received any materials from any of DOE's Washington, D.C. or Germantown, Maryland headquarters offices, and again requested all documents related to the Oregon and Washington State prison experiments.(1) The letter also included the names of people who had contact with Heller and/or sat on Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) bodies that, according to Bibeau, reviewed the prison experiments. See Letter from Bibeau to DOE/HQ (May 10, 1996) (May 10th Request).

OHRE, located in Washington, D.C., responded to both requests. On September 12, 1996, OHRE released some responsive material to Bibeau, including a copy of a memo mentioned in a scientific journal and some documents related to the requester's participation in the Oregon State Penitentiary experiments. See Letter from Director, OHRE, to Bibeau (September 12, 1996) (Determination Letter). The OHRE search had uncovered records regarding some individuals named on the list in the May 10th Request; these records were being reviewed to determine if any responsive material existed. On September 27, 1996, Bibeau filed this Appeal, alleging that records of AEC Commissioners' meetings and records of still more individuals alleged to have had some relationship with Heller or his work exist in headquarters files. See Letter from Bibeau to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) (September 27, 1996) (Appeal Letter). In his Appeal, he requests that OHA order DOE to conduct another search of its files.

II. Analysis

We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. See W. R. Thomason, Inc., 10 DOE ¶ 80,150 (1983); Crude Oil Purchasing, Inc., 6 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1980). We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984).

In reviewing this Appeal, we reviewed the Determination Letter and contacted OHRE to determine the scope of its search. We found many answers to our questions in the Determination Letter. The Letter informed Bibeau that all "historically relevant records" of DOE were screened in 1994, at the request of the President, for documents related to the human radiation experiments. See Determination Letter at 2. These documents were provided to the Coordination and Information Center (CIC) in Las Vegas, which serves as a document dissemination service and public reading room for human radiation experiment material. Bibeau has received documents from CIC using the results of a database search provided by DOE/HQ. OHRE also secured additional documents for the requester with the help of Heller's widow. Id. Finally, OHRE searched the record series descriptions of the human radiation experiment database for names mentioned in the May 10th Request. They found documents with references to two named individuals, and are currently reviewing this material to determine if it can be released to the requester. See Memorandum from Director, OHRE, to Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (October 16, 1996). OHRE also released some relevant information it discovered that had been released to the requester in 1994 by DOE's Richland Operations Office in Richland, Washington (DOE/RL).

In his Appeal, the requester alleges that because many of the people who had contact with Dr. Heller worked in the AEC or Energy Research and Development Administration (ERDA) offices in Washington, D.C., some records must exist there. See Appeal Letter at 2. He specifically mentions minutes of the meetings of the Advisory Committee of the Division of Biology and Medicine (DBM), which reviewed Heller's work four times. Id. He alleges that DBM and the Office of the General Counsel should possess relevant documents, but provides no documentation in support of his claim.

In his Appeal, Bibeau said that he requested all documents related to the prisoner experiments, not only those in which he was a participant. OHRE was aware of this aspect of Bibeau's request and searched its files accordingly. In December 1994, DOE/RL sent Bibeau copies of all of its records related to the prisoner experiments--approximately 4400 pages. This material included experiments in which Bibeau was not a participant. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Yvonne Sherman, DOE/RL, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (October 21, 1996). These records were then released to the DOE/RL public reading room. In September 1996, DOE/RL made another release--this time of a small quantity of a variety of records to the public reading room. The records released in 1996 are currently under review for information relating to the prisoner experiments, and any responsive records will be sent to Bibeau as before. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Yvonne Sherman, DOE/RL, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (October 23, 1996). In addition, OHRE has stated, and we find no reason to question its veracity, that all records of Oregon and Washington State penitentiary experiments were maintained at DOE/RL. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Director, OHRE, and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (October 7, 1996). Thus, we find that Bibeau will soon receive all responsive Oregon and Washington State prisoner experiment records from DOE/RL, and it is highly unlikely that additional responsive material would be found at DOE headquarters.(2)

We note that Mr. Bibeau made two new requests in his appeal. First, he requested minutes of AEC Commissioners' meetings. Although this is a new request, OHRE has agreed to search for these records, in keeping with DOE's policy of openness. OHRE also agreed to search for any references to two individuals who did follow-up studies on Heller's work (Liverman and Marks), even though they were not mentioned in the original FOIA requests and OHRE could not have known otherwise that Bibeau was interested in their studies.

III. Conclusion

We find that OHRE has conducted a search reasonably calculated to uncover material responsive to Mr. Bibeau's request. See Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). In the spirit of openness, OHRE has also agreed to search again using new information provided by Bibeau in his Appeal. Thus, we will remand this request to OHRE for a new search for documents responsive to Bibeau's new request. Accordingly, the Appeal filed by Bibeau is granted in part and denied in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Harold Bibeau on September 27, 1996, Case No. VFA-0223, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

Date of Filing: September 30, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0224

On September 27, 1996, Action and Associates, Inc. (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) on August 30, 1996, by the Savannah River Operations Office (DOE/SR) of the Department of Energy (DOE). (1) In its Appeal, the Appellant asserts that DOE/SR failed to provide it with all of the responsive documents in its possession regarding its Request for Information (FOIA Request) dated March 21, 1996.

I. Background

In its FOIA Request, the Appellant requested from DOE/SR copies of "all proposals, documents, notes, and minutes of meetings (excluding Aiken and Action, Inc.)" pertaining to Subcontract CC001050K, Indefinite Delivery/Indefinite Quantity Subcontract for Scaffolding Services at the Savannah River Site (Subcontract). (2) DOE/SR, in its Determination Letter dated August 30, 1996, provided the Appellant with redacted copies of 30 documents and billed the Appellant $96.26 for expenses related to the processing of its FOIA Request.

In its Appeal, the Appellant argues that DOE/SR failed to provide it with all responsive documents related to its FOIA Request. Specifically, the Appellant asserts that as part of the bidding process for the Subcontract it and all other bidders attended pre-bid and pre-award meetings. However, the Appellant claims it was not provided any documents or minutes pertaining to the meetings that contracting officials had with one of the bidders, Allied Fabricators and Constructors, Inc. (Allied). The Appellant also challenges the amount it was charged for the documents it obtained pursuant to its FOIA Request.

II. Analysis

A. Adequacy of the Search

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To ascertain the extent of the search conducted for documents responsive to the Appellant's request, we contacted the FOIA Officer at DOE/SR. See Memoranda of telephone conversations between Pauline Conner, FOIA Officer, DOE/SR, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (October 17, 1996). She informed us that the search was performed by officials at Westinghouse Savannah River Company (Westinghouse), the Management and Operating contractor at the DOE's Savannah River facility. A procurement official at Westinghouse informed us that the only file which Westinghouse officials believed would contain responsive documents was the Purchase Order file for Subcontract CC001050K and that they conducted a search of that file. All responsive documents were provided in full or in redacted form to the Appellant. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Mike Cox, Procurement Department, Westinghouse Savannah River Company, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (October 21, 1996). In light of the facts before us, we believe that the search conducted was reasonable. (3)

B. Assessment of Fees

Pursuant to the FOIA, the DOE has issued regulations "specifying the schedule of fees applicable to the processing of requests . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(i). These regulations provide for the assessing of fees to recover the "full allowable direct costs incurred" in responding to requests for information. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9. In so doing, the DOE is to "use the most efficient and least costly methods to comply with requests for documents made under the FOIA." Id.

For purposes of determining the appropriate fees to be charged, the DOE regulations set forth four categories of FOIA requesters: those who seek documents for a commercial use, educational and non-commercial scientific institution requesters, requesters who are representatives of the news media, and all other requesters. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(1)-(4). The Appellant is seeking documents for a commercial use and therefore may properly be assessed fees for "document search, duplication, and review...." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(ii)(I).

DOE/SR has assessed the Appellant a total of $96.25 in search, review and duplication fees for its response to its commercial FOIA request. This charge is based on 4 hours of searching by non-clerical personnel, ½ hour spent reviewing the documents, and copying costs for the documents provided to the Appellant. In light of the search that was conducted, and after reviewing copies of the documents which were provided to the Appellant, we find that DOE/SR's assessment of fees was appropriate and reasonable.

In sum, we find that DOE-SR conducted a reasonable search for responsive documents and that the fees assessed the Appellant were appropriate. Consequently, we find that the present appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Action and Associates, Inc. on September 30, 1996, is denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: October 28, 1996

(1)The Appellant's FOIA Appeal was made complete by our receipt of the determination letter at issue on September 30, 1996.

(2)Aiken and Action, Inc. was one of the firms bidding for the Subcontract.

(3)Officials at Westinghouse did find minutes from a meeting regarding the Subcontract at which Aiken and Action, Inc. attended. Westinghouse determined these minutes to be non-responsive since the Appellant's FOIA Request expressly excluded minutes of meetings in which Aiken and Action, Inc. participated. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Mike Cox, Westinghouse Savannah River Company and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (October 21, 1996). Westinghouse, however, has agreed to provide to the Appellant a copy of those minutes. Id. The procurement official at Westinghouse stated that he had no knowledge of any meeting which was held with Allied alone since pre-bid meetings are usually held with all potential bidders present and pre-award meetings are held only with the winning bidder, in this case, Aiken and Action, Inc. DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Motion for Reconsideration

Name of Petitioner: Malcolm Parvey

Date of Filing: October 4, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0226

On October 4, 1996, Malcolm Parvey filed a Motion for Reconsideration of a Decision and Order issued to him by the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) on September 17, 1996. Malcolm Parvey, 26 DOE § 80,119 (1996). In that Decision, we denied an Appeal of two August 7, 1996 determinations issued to Mr. Parvey by the Western Area Power Administration (WAPA) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In those determinations, WAPA released several documents to Mr. Parvey and found that a total of four documents did not exist that Mr. Parvey requested pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. WAPA also assessed Mr. Parvey fees totaling $96.25. If the present Motion were granted, the fees would not be assessed or would be reduced, and a new search for responsive documents would be conducted.

The documents which Mr. Parvey seeks are copies of the most recent abstracts for two contract solicitations conducted by WAPA. In his FOIA request, Mr. Parvey asked the Western Area Power Administration to provide him with the relevant "pricing history." Request Postcard from Malcolm Parvey to Cheryl Arndt, WAPA. Specifically, he requested copies of the most recent abstract and bidders' list. He also agreed to pay any fees assessed. In response, on August 7, 1996, WAPA released copies of documents used as the bidders' list. These documents were basically the postcards and letters from various companies requesting the bid package. WAPA also indicated there was no bid abstract. In his Appeal, Mr. Parvey alleged that (1) WAPA's search for documents was inadequate and (2) the number of hours and level of employees used to review the documents was excessive. After looking into the matter, we found that WAPA's search was adequate because no bid abstract existed and WAPA was not required to generate one. In addition, we determined that the assessment of fees was appropriate and reasonable. Mr. Parvey's Appeal was therefore denied. See Malcolm Parvey, 26 DOE § 80,119 (1996).

We have thoroughly reviewed this Motion for Reconsideration, and have found no new material or circumstances that would lead us to alter our prior Decision.(1) In his Motion, Mr. Parvey reiterates the arguments made in his original Appeal. The first issue he raised in his Motion concerns his contention that a record must exist that shows the successful bidders on each previous contract. In response to Mr Parvey's Appeal, the OHA contacted WAPA to determine if the record he sought was maintained, and if not, why it was not preserved. We ascertained that these were both simplified solicitations, because they were for a small dollar amount, and the material Mr. Parvey continues to seek in his Motion is not generated for a simplified solicitation. The second issue raised in Mr. Parvey's Motion regarded the assessment of fees. In our Decision, we found that the fees are in compliance with the DOE regulations and the legislative history of the Freedom of Information Act. Mr. Parvey has not presented any new evidence or arguments on this issue. We will, therefore, deny this Motion for Reconsideration.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Motion for Reconsideration filed on October 4, 1996, by Malcolm Parvey, Case No. VFA-0226, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy.

(1)We will modify a prior Decision and Order in an FOIA proceeding where an applicant persuasively demonstrates that (1) the prior determination was incorrect because we did not consider all material facts or we misapplied the law or (2) the prior determination, though correct when issued, is no longer correct because of a change in the applicable law or the circumstances of the case. Case No. VFA-0227, 26 DOE ¶ 80,132

November 7, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: F.A.C.T.S.

Date of Filing: October 11, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0227

On October 11, 1996, F.A.C.T.S. (For A Clean Tonawanda Site), a public interest group, filed an Appeal from a determination issued on September 9, 1996 by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part F.A.C.T.S.' Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request. 5 U.S.C. § 552; 10 C.F.R. Part 1004 (DOE FOIA Regulations). F.A.C.T.S. appeals the adequacy of the search and requests additional documents.

F.A.C.T.S. seeks information on the Tonawanda, New York Formerly Utilized Site Remedial Action Program site. Oak Ridge released a number of documents. However, it found no material for parts 2 and 6 of the request. F.A.C.T.S. asserts there are documents responsive to parts 2 and 6, additional documents for part 3, and pages missing from items 15 and 16 of the released material.

We contacted Oak Ridge several times on this matter. In the interest of administrative efficiency, Oak Ridge agreed to perform a new search for documents responsive to this request in conjunction with other FOIA searches on behalf of F.A.C.T.S. Thus, we will remand this matter to Oak Ridge for a new search and determination on this F.A.C.T.S. FOIA request. However, we will not rule on F.A.C.T.S.' request for new documents because an appellant may not expand the scope of a request on appeal. See, e.g., Energy Research Found., 22 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,529-30 (1992).

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal of F.A.C.T.S., OHA Case No. VFA-0227, is hereby granted in part, remanded to the Oak Ridge Operations Office for further processing in accordance with the instructions set forth above, and is denied in all other respects.

Case No. VFA-0228, 26 DOE ¶ 80,136

November 26, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Ashok K. Kaushal

Date of Filing: October 15, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0228

On October 15, 1996, Ashok K. Kaushal filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on September 26, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Office of the Inspector General (IG). That determination was issued in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document which is exempted from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On July 12, 1995, Kaushal filed a request under the FOIA in which he sought a copy of documents related to a whistleblower complaint he has filed with the DOE. Specifically, Kaushal requested: (1) the response to his complaint filed by his employer Sandia Corporation (Sandia), a DOE contractor which operates the Sandia National Laboratories (SNL); (2) an audit report conducted for Sandia by Lockheed Martin Company; and (3) costs of the audit and legal costs incurred by Sandia related to his whistleblower complaint. Letter from A.K. Kaushal to Elva Barfield, DOE (July 4, 1995).

The IG issued a determination on September 26, 1996, denying Kaushal's request. Letter from Michael W. Conley, Deputy Inspector General for Inspections, IG, to A.K. Kaushal (September 26, 1996). The IG stated that the documents responsive to Kaushal's request were being withheld in their entirety pursuant to FOIA Exemption 7(A). Id. In invoking Exemption 7(A), the IG stated that it has not reached a final resolution of its investigation of Kaushal's whistleblower complaint; therefore, release "could prematurely reveal evidence and interfere with the ongoing enforcement proceeding." Id. The IG also stated that "it is not in the public interest to release inspection information when, as in this case, release could tend to prematurely disclose inspection efforts, or provide individuals involved in the inspection an opportunity to impede an appropriate resolution of the inspection." Id.

In his Appeal, Kaushal states that the information I requested is not part of the law enforcement proceeding. Therefore, the exemption is incorrectly applied. It is in the public interest to know how much money Sandia has spent on legal fees and costs and at the same time paying $2 million dollars [sic] extra to the [New Mexico] State Taxation and Revenue Department.

Appeal at 1.

Subsequent to the filing of Kaushal's Appeal, the IG informed us that it has no documents in its possession which would reflect the costs incurred by Sandia related to Kaushal's whistleblower complaint. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Richard Fein, IG, and Steve Goering, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) (November 6, 1996). The DOE's Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE/AL) informed us that Sandia had not submitted documentation of costs related to this matter to the DOE. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Sharon E. Klafke, DOE/AL, and Steve Goering, OHA (November 14, 1996).

II. Analysis

A. Documents Withheld from the Appellant

Regarding the documents withheld from the appellant, we find that Kaushal's request for documents should have been processed by the IG under both the FOIA and the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a. The Privacy Act requires each federal agency to permit an individual to gain access to information which is contained in any "system of records" maintained by the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.6(a)(2). A "system of records" is defined as a "group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or some identifying number, symbol or other identifying particular assigned to the individual." 5 U.S.C. § 552a(a)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.2(m). An individual is entitled under the Privacy Act "to gain access to his record or to any information pertaining to him which is contained in the system." 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d)(1).

The documents withheld by the IG in this case are contained in a group of records from which information is retrieved by the names of individuals or other identifying particulars, i.e. a "system of records" as defined under the Privacy Act, and are specifically contained in Kaushal's record. Therefore, subject to the exemptions set forth in the Privacy Act, Kaushal is entitled to gain access to this record.(1) Accordingly, we will remand the Kaushal request to the IG for processing under the Privacy Act.

B. Documentation of Sandia's Costs

Because, as we discussed above, no documents revealing Sandia's cost related to Kaushal's whistleblower complaint have been submitted to the DOE, we must determine whether any responsive records in the possession of Sandia, if such records exist, are subject to the FOIA. First, we must determine whether such records are "agency records," and thus subject to the FOIA, under the criteria set out by the federal courts. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Second, records that do not meet these criteria can nonetheless be subject to release under the DOE regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e); see 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884 (December 12, 1994). After reviewing this matter, for the reasons stated below we conclude that the Sandia records would not be "agency records" nor would they be subject to release under the DOE regulations.

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information required to be made available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-stage analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents created by non-federal organizations, such as a DOE contractor, are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination (i) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA, and if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether an entity should be regarded as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case which involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with the DOE, Sandia is the prime contractor responsible for maintaining and operating SNL. While the DOE obtained Sandia's services and exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise Sandia's day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that Sandia is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.

Although Sandia is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, records in its possession responsive to Kaushal's request could become "agency records" if they were obtained by the DOE and were within the DOE's control at the time the FOIA request was made. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, the documents in question had not been obtained by the DOE and were not in the agency's control at the time of the appellant's request. Thus, the records do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86, Kissinger v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136, 150-51 (1980).

Even if contractor-acquired or contractor-generated records fail to qualify as "agency records," they may still be subject to release if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. The DOE FOIA regulations provide that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)." 10 C.F.R. 1004.3(e)(1).

We therefore next look to the contract between the DOE and Sandia to determine the status of such records. That contract states:

H-18 OWNERSHIP OF RECORDS RELATING TO THIS CONTRACT

(a) Government's Records. Except as is provided in paragraph (b) of this provision and as may be otherwise agreed upon by the Government and the Contractor, all records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this contract shall be the property of the Government and shall be delivered to the Government or otherwise disposed of by the Contractor either as the Contracting Officer may from time to time direct during the progress of the work, or in any event, as the Contracting Officer shall direct upon completion or termination of the contract.

(b) Contractor's Records. The following records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this contract (to the extent not listed and maintained as a Privacy Act record pursuant to the Section H provision entitled "Privacy Act System of Records")(2) are the property of the Contractor and are not within the scope of paragraph (a), above.

(4) Employee relations records and files such as records and files pertaining to:

(ii) Allegations, investigations, and resolution of employee misconduct;

(iv) Employee charges of discrimination;

(7) Internal legal files;

. . . .

Contract No. DE-AC04-94AL85000, Clause H-18. We find that any documents in Sandia's possession which would reflect the costs incurred by Sandia related to Kaushal's whistleblower complaint would fall within the categories described in subsections (b)(4)(ii) and (b)(4)(iv) or (b)(7) of Clause H-18 of the contract between the DOE and Sandia. Therefore, until such time as these documents would be submitted to the DOE, they would be contractor's records, which are not subject to release under the DOE regulations. Accordingly, we find that the records relating to Sandia's costs sought by the appellant are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to the FOIA under DOE regulations.

III. Conclusion

For the reasons stated above, we will remand the appellant's request to the IG for processing under the Privacy Act. In all other respects, the Kaushal Appeal will be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Ashok K. Kaushal on October 15, 1996, Case Number VFA-0228, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Office of the Inspector General, which shall issue a new determination in accordance with the instructions set forth in the above Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)Although Kaushal's request cited only the FOIA, it is the general practice of the DOE to process a request for an individual's own record maintained in a Privacy Act system of records under both the Privacy Act and the FOIA, regardless of the statute(s) cited. Telephone conversation between GayLa Sessoms, Chief FOI and Privacy Group, DOE, and William Schwartz, Staff Attorney, OHA (November 21, 1996). See Freeman v. Department of Justice (FBI), 822 F. Supp. 1064, 1066 (S.D.N.Y. 1993) (implicitly accepting defendant's rationale that "because documents releasable pursuant to FOIA may not be withheld as exempt under the Privacy Act," it is proper for agency not to distinguish between FOIA and Privacy Act requests when assigning numbers to establish order of processing, and quoting Report of House Committee on Government Operations, H.R. Rep. No. 726, as mandating such practice); cf. Wren v. Harris, 675 F.2d 1144, 1146 & n.5 (10th Cir. 1982) (per curiam) (construing pro se complaint to seek information under either Privacy Act or FOIA even though only FOIA was referenced by name); Pearson v. DEA, No. 84-2740, slip op. at 2 (D.D.C. Jan. 31,1986) (same).

(2)Clause H-15, entitled "Privacy Act Systems of Records," lists the following systems of records, none of which would contain the documents reflecting Sandia's cost which are sought by Kaushal.

Case No. VFA-0229, 26 DOE ¶ 80,133

November 13, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Appellant: Nathaniel Hendricks

Case Number: VFA-0229

Date of Filing: October 22, 1996

Nathaniel Hendricks files this Appeal under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. Under the FOIA, Hendricks requested information from the Department of Energy's Chicago Operations Office. The Chicago Office replied by sending Hendricks responsive documents. Hendricks contends that the Chicago Office's search for responsive documents was inadequate. In his Appeal, he asks us to remand the request to the Chicago Office for a new search. As explained below, we will deny Hendricks' Appeal.

The information sought by Hendricks concerns the Manhattan Project, the United States' effort during World War II to produce the atomic bomb. The project was named for the Manhattan Engineer District of the Army Corps of Engineers, but much of the later work was conducted at sites outside Manhattan. One important site was Stagg Field, a stadium on the campus of the University of Chicago. Under the stands of Stagg Field, Enrico Fermi and his colleagues built the first working nuclear reactor in late 1942.(1)

Hendricks filed an FOIA request with the Presidential Advisory Committee on Human Radiation in July 1994, seeking information on accidental or planned releases of radiation from Stagg Field or other Chicago locations between 1940 and 1946. A copy of the request was referred to the Chicago Office and the Department's Office of Human Radiation Experiments (OHRE). The Chicago Office responded with one responsive document, and OHRE responded with two responsive documents.

This case marks the third time that Hendricks has appealed the adequacy of the search that led to those three responsive documents. On his first appeal, he raised eight issues, which he identified by the letters "a" through "h" in his appeal letter. We contacted the Chicago Office and OHRE to evaluate the adequacy of their searches considering these eight issues.

When we contacted the Chicago Office about the previous appeal, we learned that it possessed several thousand scientific notebooks compiled during the Manhattan Project. The Chicago Office did not examine these notebooks as part of its search, because there was no reason to believe that the notebooks contained material responsive to Hendricks' request, and the notebooks themselves were contaminated with radioactivity. We concluded that the high costs of equipping personnel to search through thousands of pages of radioactive materials outweighed the small possibility that the information in these notebooks would be responsive to Hendricks' request. We found then that the search performed by the Chicago Office was reasonable and adequate.

When we contacted OHRE, we learned that its search had included a check of its computerized data base. We discovered that OHRE had failed to include several likely query terms in its computer search. Therefore, we remanded the search to OHRE for a search based on these query terms. Nathaniel Hendricks, 25 DOE ¶ 80,164 (1996).

While OHRE was still conducting the remanded search, Hendricks filed a Motion for Reconsideration of our Decision and Order. He restated his claim that the search was inadequate and not responsive to his request. In the Motion, Hendricks repeated items "a" through "h" of his first appeal, and added some new items, which he identified by the letters "i" through "p." After considering the issues, we rejected "a" through "j" and "p," and remanded the search to the Chicago Office based on items "k" through "o." Nathaniel Hendricks, 25 DOE ¶ 80,173 (1996).

As the result of the new search, Timothy S. Crawford, manager of the Argonne Group at the Chicago Office, issued a determination letter on September 3, 1996. Crawford stated that the Chicago Office had not found any additional documents from the remand on items "k" through "o." In addition, he informed Hendricks that the Chicago Office had contacted the University of Chicago Laboratory School, where Hendricks had been a student during the Manhattan Project era. The Chicago Office found out that the school had medical records pertaining to Hendricks. Crawford informed Hendricks that he would have to make a written request to the school to obtain his medical records. Hendricks has made a request for these records by letter through the Chicago Office.

In the present appeal, Hendricks again claims that the search was inadequate. As grounds for his claim, he has resubmitted arguments identified by the letters "a" through "p." He has reproduced verbatim these arguments from the Motion for Reconsideration that we dealt with previously. Hendricks has not provided any new material to support these arguments. Since we have already dealt with items "a" through "j" and "p" in our previous decision, which was a final order of the Department, we will not revisit the issues raised in these items. Instead, we will confine our review to examining the results of the remand of items "k" through "o" to the Chicago Office. In summary and paraphrased form, these arguments are:

k: Hendricks lived near Stagg Field during the Manhattan Project era. During that era, he observed what looked like groups of men taking measurements near the field. In the same area he saw balloons being released. Hendricks says he was told at the time that this activity related to "sub chasers" that were under construction in Gary, Indiana.(2)

l: He also observed colored smoke being released from an area of Stagg Field.

m: He also observed men marching on the field when the balloons and smoke were released. He seldom saw men marching on the field at other times.

n: While a student at a school near Stagg Field, Hendricks was given physical examinations. He requests records of the examinations.

o: The Chicago Office failed to search for data on radiation levels found in Stagg Field and its neighborhood.

We contacted staff members of the Chicago Office to find out whether the search in response to these items had been adequate. The search had uncovered no responsive documents. Moreover, the Chicago Office found no records from the Manhattan Project era except the contaminated books. A scientist who was on the staff of the Manhattan project was asked about Hendricks' observations of colored smoke, balloons, and marching men. He was unfamiliar with these events, and knew of no records that might be associated with them. He was also unaware of any records held by the Chicago Office that related to radiation levels near Stagg Field. Thus, the Chicago Office concluded that there was no additional information responsive to Hendricks' request. As for item "n," we again point out that the University of Chicago Laboratory School is not a federal agency, nor is there any evidence that it was operating as a federal contractor of a predecessor agency of the Department while Hendricks was a student there. Any request for records from the University of Chicago Laboratory School, therefore, must be made to the School itself. We note, however, that the Chicago Office has voluntarily contacted the Laboratory School to verify that it holds Hendricks' records, and provided Hendricks with a form to obtain records from the Laboratory School.

The FOIA generally requires federal agencies to release agency records to the public upon request. If a requester has reasonably described the information he is seeking and has complied with the Department's FOIA regulations, the Department must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). If we find that a search was inadequate, we will remand it to the appropriate office of the Department for a new search. E.g., Petrucelly & Nadler, P.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,187 (1996);Dennis McQuade, 25 DOE ¶ 80,158 (1996). It is important to note, however, that "the standard of reasonableness … does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Dept. of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

There is no corroboration for the events that Hendricks allegedly witnessed at Stagg Field. If they did occur, there is no indication that they relate to the measurement of radioactive contamination, or that they generated records that still exist in the possession of the Department of Energy. We are mindful that "mere speculation that as yet uncovered documents may exist does not undermine the finding that the agency conducted a reasonable search for them." SafeCard Services v. SEC, 926 F.2d 1197, 1201 (D.C. Cir. 1991). With respect to Hendricks' statements "k," "l," "m," and "o," therefore, we find that the Chicago Office has conducted an adequate search for records related to them.

We believe that the Chicago Office has conducted a search reasonably calculated to uncover the requested information. Consequently, we find that the search was adequate. We will therefore deny Hendricks' Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Nathaniel Hendricks, Case No. VFA-0229, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business; or in which the agency records are situated; or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0232, 26 DOE ¶ 80,141

December 4, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Future Technology Intelligence Report

Date of Filing: October 22, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0232

On October 22, 1996, the Future Technology Intelligence Report (FTIR) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it by the Deputy Manager of the Oakland Operations Office (the Deputy Manager). The Deputy Manager issued that determination in response to a request for information submitted by FTIR under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The Appeal, if granted, would require the Manager to release the requested information.

Background

In its FOIA request, FTIR requested "a copy of the report made by the DOE" concerning a demonstration conducted by Professor Yull Brown on August 6, 1992 in Ontario, California. This demonstration, which was witnessed by a team of DOE representatives, involved a means of allegedly reducing the radioactivity of certain waste materials. In the DOE's initial response, the Deputy Manager informed FTIR that no documents responsive its request could be located. In its Appeal, FTIR challenged the sufficiency of the Deputy Manager's search for responsive documents. Based on information contained in the Appeal, the Deputy Manager was able to locate responsive documents, and a copy of those documents was provided to FTIR. These documents include a report made by Mike Schoonover, an employee of the University of California, to the DOE's Office of Environmental Restoration and Waste Management, an intra-agency memorandum, and a letter from a DOE employee to a representative of the facility at which the demonstration was conducted. These documents consist of discussions of the demonstration and its results.

On November 14, 1996 FTIR submitted an amendment to its FOIA Appeal. In this submission, FTIR continues to claim that the Deputy Manager has failed to locate and identify all responsive documents. Specifically, FTIR contends that Mr. Schoonover's notes containing the measurements upon which his report was based should have been provided. FTIR points out that although the report contains references to several measurements that were taken by Mr. Schoonover, some of these measurements are not included in the report.

Analysis

In responding to a request for information under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents."Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (Truitt). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. The fact that the results of a search may not meet with the requester's expectations does not necessarily mean that the search was inadequate. Robert Hale, 25 DOE ¶ 80,101 at 80,501 (1995). Instead, in evaluating the adequacy of a search, our inquiry generally focuses on the scope of the search that was performed. See, e.g., Richard J. Levernier, 25 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1995).

In order to evaluate the scope of the search, we contacted the Oakland Office. We were informed that files belonging to each employee who might have been involved in some manner with the subject matter of FTIR's request were searched. The search included files located in the DOE's Environmental Restoration and Weapons Research Divisions, and in the Lawrence Livermore Laboratories. In letters to FTIR dated August 15 and August 16, the Oakland Office requested further information concerning the demonstration in order to conduct a more effective search. Finally, information included in FTIR's Appeal enabled the Oakland Office to identify a current DOE employee who was directly involved in sending the DOE representatives to the demonstration. This employee's files were searched, and all documents relating in any way to the demonstration were provided to FTIR. See memoranda of November 25, 1996 telephone conversations between Roseanne Pelzner and Richard Vergas, Oakland Operations Office, and Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney.

Based on the record before us, we conclude that the Oakland Operations Office's search was reasonably calculated to uncover all responsive documents, and was therefore sufficient. As an initial matter, FTIR received an unredacted copy of the only document that it requested, along with two other related documents. Moreover, even if we were to assume that FTIR's request is broad enough to encompass Mr. Schoonover's notes, those notes, if they exist are the property of Mr. Schoonover and are not in the DOE's possession. The absence of measurement data cited by FTIR is not evidence of an inadequate search. We will therefore deny FTIR's Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Future Technology Intelligence Report, Case Number VFA-0232, is hereby denied.

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Glen M. Jameson

Date of Filing: October 22, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0233

On October 22, 1996, Glen M. Jameson filed an Appeal from a determination dated April 22, 1996 (but not received by him until October 1996), by the Freedom of Information Act/Privacy Act Officer of the Rocky Flats Office (FOIA Officer) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the FOIA Officer denied a request for information filed by Mr. Jameson on November 21, 1995, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his request for information, Mr. Jameson sought copies of the invoices for pension plan costs attributable to Scientific Applications International Corporation (SAIC) employees working at the Rocky Flats Field Office for a twelve-month period ending with the most recent and available invoices submitted by SAIC. In an April 22, 1996 letter, the FOIA Officer informed Mr. Jameson that her search revealed "no specific invoice line item pension costs." In addition, the FOIA Officer stated that SAIC "invoices pension costs" as part of its indirect rates and that the DOE Rocky Flats Field Office does not have knowledge of SAIC's rates for pension costs. Finally, the FOIA Officer advised Mr. Jameson to contact the Defense Contract Audit Agency (DCAA), an office that is a part of the Department of Defense, and thus, subject to the FOIA. Specifically, the FOIA Officer believes that DCAA, as the auditor of the contract, may have responsive information.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was adequate, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In his Appeal, Mr. Jameson did not provide any evidence that responsive information exists. Mr. Jameson only speculates that responsive information exists in the form of: (1) the underlying contract that defined what overhead charges were allowable; (2) the actual invoices for overhead charges and credits; or (3) the copies of audits that DCAA may have provided to the DOE. Accordingly, we contacted the Rocky Flats Office to ascertain the validity of Mr. Jameson's contention.(1) Officials at the Rocky Flats Office informed us that: (1) the underlying contract does not have information concerning pension plan costs attributable to SAIC employees; (2) the DOE does not have any actual invoices for overhead charges and credits; and (3) audits provided by DCAA to Rocky Flats do not contain any responsive information.

A Rocky Flats Official informed us that the underlying contract does not have responsive information because pension plan costs are only a small portion of a much larger "indirect" rate in the contract. The FOIA Officer has informed us that she has forwarded a copy of Mr. Jameson's request to the DCAA, but that Mr. Jameson should make a new FOIA request directly to the DCAA to ensure that they will respond directly to him. Since we find that the FOIA Officer searched all of the areas that might have reasonably contained responsive information, including those areas suggested by Mr. Jameson, and she has verified that no responsive documents exist, we must deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Glen M. Jameson on October 22, 1996, Case Number VFA- 0233, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Case No. VFA-0235, 26 DOE ¶ 80,139

November 27, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Research Information Services, Inc.

Date of Filing: October 29, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0235

On October 25, 1996, Research Information Services, Inc. (RIS) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on September 25, 1996, by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Office of Arms Control and Nonproliferation (OACN). In that determination, OACN responded to a request for information filed by RIS on July 26, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA generally requires that federal agencies release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. BACKGROUND

In its request, RIS sought information pertaining to determinations by the Secretary of Energy under 10 C.F.R. Part 810 concerning the People's Republic of China (PRC). Part 810 consisted of a series of regulations promulgated by the DOE in order to implement section 57b of the Atomic Energy Act. That section empowers the Secretary of Energy to authorize U.S. persons to engage directly or indirectly in the production of special nuclear material outside the United States.

On September 25, 1996, OACN issued a determination responding to RIS's request in which it explained:

During the past year, we have had other FOIA inquiries for records similar to that which you have requested. As a result, we have placed, with some exceptions, in the Freedom of Information Reading Room all records pertaining to specific determinations made by the Secretary of Energy authorizing U.S. firms, such as Westinghouse and Stone & Webster, to engage in specifically authorized activities in the PRC.

Determination Letter at 1. The determination letter further informed RIS that: (1) records that had originated with other Executive Branch agencies were not among those records kept in the DOE Reading Room; (2) OACN had forwarded RIS's request to those agencies at which responsive documents had originated; (3) several responsive documents have not been placed in the DOE Reading Room because they are classified; and (4) information was withheld under Exemption 4 from "[r]ecords pertaining to Part 810 authorizations granted to Stone & Webster to conduct activities in the PRC . . ." Id. at 1-2.

On October 29, 1996, RIS filed the present Appeal contending that the absence of several categories of responsive documents from the DOE Reading Room is evidence that OACN's search for responsive documents was inadequate. RIS also contends that OACN improperly withheld information under Exemption 4.

II. ANALYSIS

Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). We review the adequacy of an agency's search under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

After conducting a search for responsive documents under the FOIA, the statute requires that the agency provide the requester with a written determination notifying the requester of the results of that search and, if applicable, of the agency's intentions to withhold any of the responsive information under one or more of the nine statutory exemptions to the FOIA. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(6)(A)(i). The statute further requires that the agency provide the requester with an opportunity to appeal any adverse determination. Id.

The written determination letter serves to inform the requester of the results of the agency's search for responsive documents and of any withholdings that the agency intends to make. In doing so, the determination letter allows the requester to decide whether the agency's response to its request was adequate and proper and provides this office with a record upon which to base its consideration of an administrative appeal.

It therefore follows that the agency has an obligation to ensure that its determination letters: (1) adequately describe the results of searches; (2) clearly indicate which information was withheld, and (3) specify the exemption(s) under which information was withheld. Burlin McKinney, 25 DOE ¶ 80,205 at 80,767 (1996). Without an adequately informative determination letter, the requester and the review authority must speculate about the adequacy and appropriateness of the agency's determinations. Id.

While the determination letter issued to RIS clearly indicates that responsive documents were placed in the DOE Reading Room, withheld under Exemption 4, withheld because of classification concerns, or forwarded to other executive branch agencies where they had originated, it did not indicate which responsive documents fit into each of these categories. Most importantly, the determination letter does not identify the documents it considers to be responsive to RIS. As a result, the determination letter issued to RIS is inadequate. We are left without information that we need in order to determine whether OACN's search for responsive documents was adequate. Without knowing which information OACN determined to be responsive to RIS's request we are unable to assess the propriety of OACN's response. Moreover, since the determination letter failed to: (1) distinguish between the information that was withheld and the information that is subject to further processing; and (2) indicate the specific exemption(s) under which each document was withheld, we are unable to assess the propriety of OACN's withholdings and referral of information to other agencies.

Accordingly, we shall remand this matter to the OACN with instructions to issue a new determination letter. The new determination letter should specifically identify each document in the DOE's possession that is responsive to RIS's request and indicate whether the document is available in the DOE Reading Room, withheld under Exemption 1 or 3 as classified (or undergoing classification review), withheld under Exemption 4, or referred to the executive branch agency where the document had originated. For each responsive document the OACN has found to have originated with another agency, the new determination letter should indicate the name of the agency and the date on which RIS's request was forwarded to that agency.

III. CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, we are remanding this matter to the Office of Arms Control and Nonproliferation with instructions promptly to issue a new determination letter that complies with the requirements discussed above.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Research Information Systems, Inc. on October 29, 1996, Case Number VFA-0235, is hereby granted and remanded to the Office of Arms Control and Nonproliferation for further processing in accordance with the instructions set forth above.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

June 17, 1998

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Lee M. Graham

Date of Filing: October 30, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0236

Lee M. Graham filed an appeal from a determination issued to him on October 18, 1996, by the Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque) of the Department of Energy. In that determination, Albuquerque stated that it could neither confirm nor deny the existence of the records that Mr. Graham sought in the request for information that he filed on August 29, 1994, pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. In this Decision we review the nature of Albuquerque's response and reach a determination that the response was proper.

I. Background

In his request, Mr. Graham sought copies of documents that related to information described in a specified, published news article concerning instrumentation aboard a specified satellite. In its October 18, 1996 response, Albuquerque stated, "We can neither confirm nor deny the existence of the documents you have requested."

In his Appeal, Mr. Graham limits his request by stating that he seeks information about the satellite's instrumentation only if the "instrumentation is being used to detect the UFO phenomena."

II. Analysis

Although the Department rarely responds to requests for information in this manner, Albuquerque's statement that it will neither confirm nor deny the existence of records is not without precedent. This type of response is commonly called a Glomar response, which refers to the first instance in which the adequacy of such a response was upheld by a Federal court. In Phillippi v. CIA, the agency responded to a request for documents pertaining to a submarine-retrieval ship named the Hughes Glomar Explorer by neither confirming nor denying the existence of any such documents. Phillippi v. CIA, 546 F.2d 1009 (D.C. Cir. 1976). Agencies have typically used this response where the existence or non-existence of requested documents is itself a classified fact exempt from disclosure under Exemptions 1 and 3 of the Freedom of Information Act, see, e.g., id. at 1012, or where admission that documents exist would indicate that the agency was involved in a certain issue, Gardels v. CIA, 689 F.2d 1100 (D.C. Cir. 1982), or that an individual is the target of investigation or surveillance, Marrera v. Department of Justice, 622 F. Supp. 51

(D.D.C. 1985). In addition, this Office has upheld the DOE's Glomar response where, as here, the existence or non-existence of requested documents is classified. A. Victorian, 25 DOE ¶ 80,188 (1996).

The Director of the Office of Security Affairs (SA) has been designated as the official who shall make the final determination for the DOE regarding FOIA appeals involving the release of classified information. DOE Delegation Order No. 0204-139, Section 1.l (December 20, 1991). Upon referral of this appeal from the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the Director of SA reviewed the circumstances surrounding Mr. Graham's request and Albuquerque's determination, and considered Mr. Graham's attempt, in his appeal, to limit the scope of his request. Based on the review that the Director of SA performed, the DOE has determined that Albuquerque's response was correct and that the DOE's response must continue to be that it can neither confirm nor deny the existence of documents responsive to Mr. Graham's request, even as modified in his appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Lee M. Graham on October 30, 1996, Case No. VFA- 0236, is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: XXXXX

Date of Filing: October 31, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0237

On October 31, 1996, XXXXX filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him on October 4, 1996, by the Western Area Power Administration (WAPA) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination concerned a request for information submitted by Mr. XXXXX pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If the present Appeal were granted, WAPA would be required to conduct a further search for responsive material.

I. Background

In his September 19, 1996 request, Mr. XXXXX, a former employee at the WAPA, sought information concerning his application for the position of electronic equipment mechanic at Brush, Colorado, part of the Loveland, Colorado, Area Office of WAPA. Mr. XXXXX claims that he was told by Mel Callen, the selecting official for the position, that all his references had reservations about Mr. XXXXX's conduct. Therefore, Mr. XXXXX requested the following information:

(1) the names of all people contacted who volunteered opinions on his possible employment;

(2) the questions they were asked;

(3) the responses and additional comments they gave;

(4) the conclusions derived from these responses and comments by the selecting official; and

(5) WAPA's official policy or guidelines for selecting officials.

Request Letter dated September 19, 1996, from XXXXX to WAPA's Freedom of Information Officer. He also maintained that his character and integrity were being compromised to justify the hiring of non-government employees in a time of government downsizing, and he asked if WAPA was allowing this to happen. On October 4, 1996, WAPA issued its determination, releasing documents responsive to the fifth item in Mr. XXXXX's request. WAPA also stated that no documents responsive to items 1 through 4 were found and that it is not required to create documents or to respond to questions. On October 31, 1996, Mr. XXXXX filed an Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals of the DOE, contending that WAPA's search for documents was inadequate.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988).

In reviewing the present Appeal, we contacted John D. Bremer, an attorney at WAPA, to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed and to determine whether any other documents responsive to Mr. XXXXX's request might exist. Mr. Bremer informed us that Mr. Callen, the selecting official for the position, had been contacted. Mr. Callen indicated that the information regarding applicants for the position Mr. XXXXX was seeking had been discarded shortly after the position was filled. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Janet R. H. Fishman, Attorney-Examiner, OHA, and John D. Bremer, Attorney, WAPA, November 14, 1996; Electronic Mail Message from John D. Bremer to Janet R. H. Fishman, November 18, 1996. Mr. Callen's statement is consistent with what we know of WAPA's practices. WAPA maintains that it was under no obligation to retain the discarded documents, and in fact, it instructs its selecting officials to destroy their notes. Telephone Memorandum between Janet R. H. Fishman and John D. Bremer, November 18, 1996; Electronic Mail Message from John D. Bremer to Janet R. H. Fishman, November 19, 1996.

We are convinced that WAPA followed procedures which were reasonably calculated to uncover the material Mr. XXXXX sought in his request. See Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). The fact that the search did not uncover documents Mr. XXXXX believed may be in the possession of DOE does not mean that the search was inadequate. In addition, Mr. XXXXX has not provided any evidence, beyond his personal belief, that any additional documents exist in the WAPA's files. Mere personal belief is not a sufficient basis to support a finding that a search was inadequate. Glen Milner, 25 DOE ¶ 80,215 (1996); cf. Ron Vader, 23 DOE ¶ 80,183 (1994) (finding an inadequate search where the Appellant remembered an event that ought to have triggered the creation of documents); Deborah L. Abrahamson, 23 DOE ¶ 80,147 (1993). Therefore, under the circumstances of this case, we find that WAPA's search for responsive documents was adequate and that no further documents responsive to Mr. XXXXX's request exist at WAPA. Accordingly, Mr. XXXXX's Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed on October 31, 1996, by XXXXX, Case No. VFA-0237, is hereby denied.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Glen Milner

Date of Filing: December 2, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0238

On December 2, 1996, Glen Milner (Appellant) completed the filing of an Appeal from determinations issued to him by the Albuquerque Operations Office (AO) of the Department of Energy (DOE) on May 8, 1996 and October 7, 1996.(1) In each determination, AO denied a request for a waiver of fees in connection with a request filed by the Appellant under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, the Appellant asks that we reverse AO's determinations and grant him a fee waiver, either unconditionally or until such time as he fails to publish an article based on information contained in the requested documents.

I. Background

In a submission dated March 22, 1996, the Appellant filed a Request for Information under the FOIA (March 22 Request) requesting from AO all documents on record since 1985 concerning specially fitted railcars for the transport of nuclear weapons. In his FOIA Request, the Appellant also requested a fee waiver for the costs associated with processing his FOIA Request. In support of this request, he stated that he intended to write a newspaper article concerning the requested information and submit the article to various newspapers. He also asserted that the requested information would contribute significantly to the public's understanding of the operations of government by illustrating that the DOE had not followed through on plans announced in 1992 to send the specially fitted railcars to Russia for use in that country's disarmament. The Appellant described these plans in his March 22 Request as a "public relations effort" on the part of DOE.(2)

In its May 8, 1996 determination letter (Determination Letter), AO denied the Appellant's fee waiver request. AO concluded that the Appellant did not have the qualifications to "extract, synthesize, and the means to effectively convey to the public the information contained in the records."

In subsequent letters to AO, the Appellant argued that he had already received a commitment from one newspaper, Ground Zero, to publish his intended article. He also proposed that AO grant him a fee waiver, but if he did not succeed in publishing an article, he would then pay the fees associated with his FOIA request. He also argued that because he had succeeded in publishing an article in the Seattle Times in 1989 and the Seattle Post-Intelligencer in 1990 on the topic of nuclear weapons and their transportation, he had shown the ability to disseminate the information to the general public. AO determined on October 7, 1996, that the FOIA regulations did not provide for a conditional fee waiver. Therefore, it stated that in the absence of a commitment from the Appellant to pay fees, AO considered the Appellant's FOIA request as withdrawn. On November 26, 1996, the Appellant submitted his Appeal to this Office.

II. Analysis

The FOIA generally requires that requesters pay fees for the processing of their requests. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(i); see also 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a). However, the Act provides:

Documents shall be furnished without any charge or at a charge reduced below the fees established under clause (ii) if disclosure of the information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government and is not primarily in the commercial interest of the requester.

5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii) (1988 ed.). The burden of satisfying this two prong test is on the requester. Larson v. Central Intelligence Agency, 843 F.2d 1481, 1483 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (per curiam) (Larson). The DOE has implemented the statutory standard for fee waiver in its FOIA regulations. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8). Those regulations set forth the following four factors that an agency must consider to determine whether the requester has met the first statutory fee waiver condition, i.e., whether disclosure of the requested information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of government operations or activities:

(A) the subject of the request; whether the subject of the requested records concerns "the operations or activities of the government";

(B) the informative value of the information to be disclosed; whether the disclosure is "likely to contribute" to an understanding of government operations or activities;

(C) the contribution to an understanding by the general public of the subject likely to result from disclosure; and

(D) the significance of the contribution to public understanding; whether the disclosure is likely to contribute "significantly" to public understanding of government operations or activities.

10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(i). If the DOE finds that a request satisfies these four factors, it must also determine whether disclosure of the information is primarily in the commercial interest of the requester. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(ii).

We note initially that there is no provision in the DOE FOIA regulations for the type of conditional fee waiver that the Appellant has proposed.(3) Therefore, we have performed a de novo review of the merits of the Appellant's request for an unconditional fee waiver and find that the Appellant should be granted a fee waiver for the reasons described below.

Factor A

Factor A asks us to determine whether the subject of the requested documents concerns the operations or activities of the government. A fee waiver is appropriate only where the subject matter of the requested documents specifically concerns identifiable "operations or activities of the government." See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 109 S. Ct. 1468, 1481-83 (1989); U.A. Plumbers and Pipefitters Local 36, 24 DOE ¶ 80,148 at 80,621 (1994) (Local 36). The requested documents concern DOE's operation of railcars used for the transport of nuclear weapons, clearly a government activity, and thus, we find this request meets the conditions outlined in Factor A.

Factor B

Factor B requires a consideration of whether the disclosure of information is "likely to contribute" to the public's understanding of government operations and activities. See Local 36; Seehuus Associates, 23 DOE ¶ 80,180 (1994) (Seehuus). The focus of this factor is on whether the information is already in the public domain or otherwise common knowledge among the general population. Seehuus, 23 DOE at 80,694. If the information is already publicly available, release to the requester would not contribute to public understanding and a fee waiver may not be appropriate. The information at issue is not in the public domain and could contribute to the public's understanding of government operations. We therefore find that the requested information meets this criterion.

Factor C

Factor C requires us to consider whether the requested documents would contribute to the understanding of the subject by the general public. To meet this test, the requester must have the ability and intention to disseminate this information to the public. James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,133 at 80,569 (1992). In the present case, the Appellant has, since filing his Appeal, contacted one of the New York Times reporters, William J. Broad, who wrote one of the stories cited in Footnote 2. In a telephone conversation with an OHA attorney, Mr. Broad confirmed his belief that information contained in the documents would be newsworthy, because it might explain why DOE has apparently failed to follow through on the publicized 1992 plans. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Dawn L. Goldstein, OHA Attorney, and William J. Broad, Reporter, New York Times (December 4, 1996). The Appellant has also demonstrated the ability to summarize complex information into understandable articles, as shown by two articles he has published in major Seattle papers, albeit approximately seven years ago. Given the facts that have recently come to light, we find that the Appellant has now demonstrated that he has the ability to disseminate information to the general public. We also find that the Appellant has demonstrated the intention to disseminate information he obtains from the requested documents to the public and thus improve its understanding of government operations. See Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,111 at 80,522 (1993).

Factor D

In order to satisfy the requirements of Factor D the requested documents must contribute significantly to the public understanding of government operations or activities. The Department of Justice has suggested the following test for this factor:

To warrant a fee waiver or reduction of fees, the public's understanding of the subject matter in question, as compared to the level of public understanding existing prior to the disclosure, must be likely to be enhanced by the disclosure to a significant extent.

1995 Justice Department Guide to the Freedom of Information Act 381 (1995); See Local 36; Seehuus.

In the present case, the Appellant asserts that the requested documents will enable him to determine whether DOE failed to follow through on stated intentions to send specially fitted railcars to Russia for disarmament purposes and thus will contribute significantly to the public's understanding of government operations and activities. If the requested documents do in fact contain such information, we believe that the public's understanding of this matter would likely be enhanced to a significant extent by disclosure. However, we note that the public interest aspect of the Appellant's request relates only to documents generated between the time of DOE's publicized plans for the railcars in 1992 and the present time, because the newsworthy issue, in the context of this Appeal, is whether the railcars were ever sent to Russia as planned. Therefore, we will grant a fee waiver only for documents relating to that time period.

In view of our evaluation of the foregoing factors, we find that the Appellant has, with respect to the documents relating to the period above, satisfied the four factors that an agency must weigh to determine whether the requester has met the first statutory fee waiver condition. In other words, the Appellant has shown that disclosure of some of the requested documents is in the public interest because this disclosure is likely to contribute significantly to the public understanding of government operations or activities. We further note that AO did not determine whether the Appellant's interest is commercial, but there is no basis in the record for finding that it is.

Having determined that the Appellant has satisfied the regulatory fee waiver requirements discussed above, we find that his Appeal should be granted in part and that he should be granted a fee waiver for his March 22, 1996 FOIA Request.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Glen Milner on December 2, 1996, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) The fees assessed for complying with Glen Milner's March 22, 1996 FOIA request shall be waived in full with regard to documents generated from 1992 until the completion of the search that concern specially fitted railcars for the transport of nuclear weapons.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review. Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)The Appellant initially filed a submission with the OHA on November 1, 1996, but did not make any arguments asserting why AO's determination should be reversed. The OHA held the submission in abeyance until we received his arguments and the May 8, 1996 determination. We have accepted the Appellant's Appeal of the May 8, 1996 determination, despite its lack of timeliness, because the Appellant and AO continued to communicate regarding the fee waiver issue until AO's October 7, 1996 determination.

(2)These railcars were part of what was known popularly as the "White Train" or the "Nuclear Train." This train transported nuclear weapons in the 1980s, and was a source of much public protest. In 1992, several newspaper articles reported that the railcars would be sent to Russia to aid in disarmament. See Thomas L. Friedman, Baker and Yeltsin Agree on U.S. Aid in Scrapping Arms, N.Y. Times, February 18, 1992 at A1; Lloyd Pritchett, White Train May Travel in Russia, Bremerton Sun, February 13, 1992 at A1; see also William J. Broad, Moving A-Arms by Rail: Can Terrorists Be Foiled?, N.Y. Times, February 18, 1992 at A8. The Appellant has submitted a decision by this Office noting that an employee of DOE's Defense Programs stated that there never were any such plans. Glen Milner, 25 DOE ¶ 80,215 at 80,791 (1996). According to the Appellant, this statement is erroneous and contradicted by the newspaper articles.

(3)The Appellant argues that the DOE may start processing cases based merely on "an agreement to pay." While it is true that under certain circumstances, DOE can process a large request based on a "satisfactory assurance of full payment," 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(b)(8)(i), the Appellant has been unwilling to make such an assurance here. He is only willing to pay the fees if he fails to publish an article, which is not a "satisfactory assurance of full payment."

Case No. VFA-0239, 26 DOE ¶ 80,140

November 29, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Applicant: Thomas Stampahar

Case Number: VFA-0239

Date of Filing: October 31, 1996

On October 31, 1996, Thomas Stampahar of Henderson, Nevada filed an Appeal from a determination issued on October 3, 1996 by the Nevada Operations Office of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied Mr. Stampahar's request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The FOIA requires that agency records held by a covered branch of the federal government, and which have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

BACKGROUND

Mr. Stampahar, a former employee of the prime contractor at the Nevada Operations Office, Bechtel Nevada, filed a FOIA and Privacy Act request for his personnel, training, and medical records. He also sought a copy of a Bechtel Nevada interoffice memorandum which contained allegations of his suspected malfeasance during a work assignment in Atlanta. In addition he requested a copy of any documents prepared in connection with the Bechtel Nevada investigation into those allegations. Finally, he also sought Bechtel Nevada documents related to a shoving incident between him and another employee. The Nevada Operations Office responded on October 3, 1996 under both the FOIA and the Privacy Act. In its letter, that Office informed Mr. Stampahar that the DOE had no documents responsive to his request. It further informed him that any documents that might be responsive were the property of Bechtel Nevada. It also informed him that certain personnel records could be obtained directly from Bechtel Nevada. Mr. Stampahar appeals the Nevada Operations Office determination letter regarding the interoffice memorandum dealing with the alleged wrongdoing in Atlanta and corresponding investigatory material, as well as the documents dealing with the shoving incident.

ANALYSIS

Under the FOIA, in response to an appropriate request that reasonably describes the information sought and conforms to agency regulations, an agency must search its records and release responsive, unpublished, non-exempt information which it has created or obtained at the time of the request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3), (b); Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 144-45 (1989); James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,127 at 80,558 (1992). A search that complies with the FOIA need not cover every corner of the agency. Oglesby v. Department of the Army, 920 F.2d 57, 68 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (and cases cited therein);

Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1383 (8th Cir. 1985); Martha L. Powers, 24 DOE ¶ 80,147 at 80,618 (1994); Citizens' Action Committee of Pike County Citizens, 22 DOE ¶ 80,178 at 80,679 (1993). Rather, an adequate search under the FOIA need only be one reasonably calculated to uncover the documents requested. Safecard Services, Inc. v. Securities and Exchange Comm'n, 926 F.2d 1197, 1201 (D.C. Cir. 1991); Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (and cases cited therein); Meeropol v. Meese, 790 F.2d 942, 950-51 (D.C. Cir. 1986); Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984); U.S. Solar Roof, 26 DOE ¶ 80,102 at 80,504 (1996); William H. Payne, 24 DOE ¶ 80,145 at 80,615 (1994); Energy Products, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,528 (1993). "An adequate search, however, must be 'a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents.'" Energy Research Foundation, 22 DOE ¶ 80,114 at 80,529 (1992) (quoting The Lowry Coalition, 21 DOE ¶ 80,108 at 80,535 (1991)). This Office will remand a case for further action if it is evident that an inadequate search was conducted, or if evidence reveals that other documents that were not identified during the initial search exist. Id. See also Linda J. Carlisle, 24 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,560 (1994); McGraw-Hill Nuclear Publications, 22 DOE ¶ 80,157 at 80,627 (1992); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,153 at 80,658 (1991). Generally, a FOIA search is a broad, all-encompassing search that would identify any documents also subject to Privacy Act analysis. Anibal L. Taboas, 25 DOE ¶ 80,207 at 80,775 (1996). Thus, because this appeal only involves the adequacy of a search and falls under the general rule, we analyze this case under FOIA principles.

To determine if a proper search was performed, we contacted the Nevada Operations Office FOIA Officer. She informed us that, in the ordinary course of business, the Nevada Operations Office would not have records of this type dealing with Bechtel Nevada employees. She stated that the Nevada Operations Office would only receive such material if Mr. Stampahar had filed a whistleblower complaint, a complaint with the Office of the Inspector General or a complaint with the DOE legal staff. The Nevada Operations Office FOIA Officer checked for all of these possibilities and found no responsive documents. At our request, she rechecked all of these places and again found no responsive documents. Mr. Stampahar later confirmed that he has not filed any complaint with the DOE. Under these circumstances, we find that the Nevada Operations Office has undertaken a reasonable search and that it has no responsive documents. Cf. Archie M. LeGrand, Jr., 25 DOE ¶ 80,171 at 80,681 (1996).

Although the Nevada Operations Office does not have responsive documents, Bechtel Nevada may have the information Mr. Stampahar seeks. In his Appeal letter, Mr. Stampahar does not claim that Bechtel Nevada is an agency of the federal government subject to the FOIA. Instead, he specifically asserts that the records he requests fall within the scope of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e). Under that regulation, the DOE will, to the maximum extent possible, make available in response to a FOIA request contractor records which are acquired or generated by the contractor in the course of the contract and which are owned by the DOE even if not in the possession of the agency. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1), (e)(3)(ii).

The contract between the DOE and Bechtel Nevada, provides that all records acquired or generated by Bechtel Nevada in the course of the contract are the property of the United States Government. Contract No. DE-AC08-96NV11718, ¶ H.32(a). However, the contract contains some exclusions to this general rule. In particular, the contract states that:

3. Employee relation records and files such as records and files pertaining to:

(A) Qualifications or suitability for employment of any employee, applicant or former employee

(B) Employee and union grievances...

(D) Allegations, investigations, and resolution of employee misconduct

(E) Employee discipline.

Id. at ¶ H.32(b)(3).

We believe that the requested documents fall into one of these categories of exclusion. The interoffice memorandum alleging misfeasance and the associated investigation clearly fall into clause (B) and perhaps into clauses (A) and (D). Similarly, the shoving incident clearly falls into Clause (E) and perhaps into the other clauses as well. Cf. Diane C. Larson, 26 DOE ¶ 80,112 at 80,538 (1996). We have reviewed matters of this type before in connection with our FOIA appeal jurisdiction. Our previous determinations on these types of matters reach a similar conclusion. See, e.g., William H. Payne, 25 DOE ¶ 80,184 at 80,712 (1996) (records on alleged contractor employee "double-dipping" are contractor personnel documents not subject to section 1004.3(e)); Dr. J.C. Laul, 22 DOE ¶ 80,129 at 80,562 (1992) (matters related to contractor employee misconduct and dismissal are internal contractor personnel records not subject to FOIA); Government Accountability Project, 22 DOE ¶ 80,103 at 80,505-06 (1992) (depositions concerning alleged contractor retaliation against employee are internal personnel records not subject to FOIA). Accordingly, we find that the records Mr. Stampahar seeks are not subject to release under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e). Because the requested documents are neither in the possession of the DOE nor subject to the FOIA as agency records and do not fall under the criteria for FOIA treatment for DOE- owned, contractor-held records under section 1004.3(e), Mr. Stampahar's appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Thomas Stampahar of Henderson, Nevada, OHA Case No. VFA-0239, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the alleged agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

November 27, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Douglas A. Holman

Date of Filing: November 4, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0240

On September 16, 1995, Douglas A. Holman filed a request with the Department of Energy's Oak Ridge Operations Office (DOE/OR) under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. Holman requested documents related to an investigation of his role as a union steward conducted by his employer, Lockheed Martin Energy Systems (LMES). Letter from Doug A. Holman to Amy Rothrock, DOE/OR (September 16, 1995). Under a contract with the DOE, LMES operates the Y- 12 plant at DOE's Oak Ridge National Laboratory (ORNL). DOE/OR issued a determination on October 17, 1996, in which it stated that its search of files in the possession of DOE/OR did not reveal responsive records, but adding that its search did not extend to records which are the property of LMES. Letter from Amy L. Rothrock to Doug Holman (October 17, 1996). On November 4, 1996, Douglas A. Holman filed an Appeal from that determination. In his Appeal, Holman requests that the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) "take whatever steps are necessary to acquire from [LMES] the information I requested . . . ." Letter from Doug A. Holman to Director, OHA (October 30, 1996).

Our threshold inquiry in this case is whether the records requested by the appellant are subject to the FOIA. First, we must determine whether such records are "agency records," and thus subject to the FOIA, under the criteria set out by the federal courts. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). Second, records that do not meet these criteria can nonetheless be subject to release under the DOE regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e); see 59 Fed. Reg. 63,884 (December 12, 1994). After reviewing this matter, for the reasons stated below we conclude that the records in question are not "agency records" and are not subject to release under DOE regulations.

The statutory language of the FOIA does not define the essential attributes of "agency records," but merely lists examples of the types of information required to be made available to the public. See 5 U.S.C. § 552(a). In interpreting this phrase, we have applied a two-stage analysis fashioned by the courts for determining whether documents created by non-federal organizations, such as a DOE contractor, are subject to the FOIA. See, e.g., B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) (Gibbs). That analysis involves a determination (i) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA, and if not, (ii) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See Gibbs, 16 DOE at 80,595.

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether an entity should be regarded as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case which involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day-to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with the DOE, LMES is the prime contractor responsible for maintaining and operating ORNL. While the DOE obtained LMES's services and exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise LMES's day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that LMES is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.

Although LMES is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, its records responsive to Holman's request could become "agency records" if they were obtained by the DOE and were within the DOE's control at the time the FOIA request was made. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, the documents in question had not been obtained by the DOE and were not in the agency's control at the time of the appellant's request. Thus, the records do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. at 145-46; see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86, Kissinger v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136, 150-51 (1980).

Even if contractor-acquired or contractor-generated records fail to qualify as "agency records," they may still be subject to release if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. The DOE FOIA regulations provide that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)." 10 C.F.R. 1004.3(e)(1).

We therefore next look to the contract between the DOE and LMES to determine the status of these records. That contract states:

H.30 DEAR 970.5204-AL 92-84 OWNERSHIP OF RECORDS (NOV 1992)

(a) Government's Records. Except as is provided in paragraph (b) of this clause, all records acquired or generated by the Contractor in its performance of this contract shall be the property of the Government and shall be delivered to the Government or otherwise disposed of by the Contractor either as the Contracting Officer may from time to time direct during the progress of the work, or in any event as the Contracting Officer shall direct upon completion or termination of the contract.

(b) Contractor's Own Records. The following records are considered the property of the Contractor and are not within the scope of paragraph (a) above.

(1) Personnel files (excluding personnel radiation exposure records) maintained on individual employees, applicants, and former employees;

(4) Employee relations records and files such as records and files pertaining to:

(i) Qualifications or suitability for employment of any employee, applicant or former employee,

(ii) Internal complaints, grievance records,

(iii)Arbitration proceedings pursuant to the provisions of any labor contract,

(iv) Allegations, investigations and resolution of employee misconduct,

(v) Employee discipline,

(vi) Employee charges of discrimination,

(vii)Negotiation with any labor organization in connection with any labor contract,

. . . .

Contract No. DE-AC05-84OR21400, Clause H.30.

The documents Holman seeks, pertaining to an internal investigation by LMES of an employee relations matter, would fall within the categories described in subsections (b)(1) and (b)(4) of Clause H.30 of the contract between the DOE and LMES. They are therefore the contractor's own records, which are not subject to release under the DOE regulations.

For the reasons set forth above, we find that the records sought by the appellant are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to the FOIA under DOE regulations. Accordingly, we shall deny the present FOIA Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Douglas A. Holman on November 4, 1996, Case Number VFA-0240, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Appellant: Bechtel National, Inc.

Case Number: VFA-0241

Bechtel National, Inc., (Bechtel) files this appeal under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552. Pursuant to the FOIA, Bechtel had requested a copy of a contract between the Department of Energy and Fluor Daniel Hanford (FDH). Bechtel's request was processed by the Department's Richland Operations Office (Richland). In response, Richland released the text of the entire contract except for substantial portions of one clause, identified in the contract as "Clause H.52." Bechtel's appeal, if granted, would require Richland to release the full text of Clause H.52.

Background

The FOIA generally provides that any person has a right of access to federal agency records, except to the extent that the records (or portions of them) are protected from disclosure by one of nine exemptions or three special law enforcement exclusions. Only one of these exemptions, Exemption 4, is at issue in this case. Exemption 4 protects from mandatory disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person [that is] privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4).

The Department announced it had awarded FDH the contract to manage the Department's Hanford site on August 6, 1996. The contract includes a "contractor-controlled insurance program" ("CCIP"). The Department publicized the CCIP in a fact sheet, describing the program as having the contractor "assume third-party liability for [the] first $50 million.(1) Details of the CCIP are set out in Clause H.52.

Richland received the request from Bechtel for a copy of the contract on September 3, 1996.(2) The portion of Clause H.52 released by Richland is as follows:

H.52 CONTRACTOR CONTROLLED INSURANCE PROGRAM

A. The Contractor shall procure, at no cost to the DOE, a Contractor Controlled Insurance program (CCIP), as set forth in the Contractor's proposal dated [DELETED] to the extent available on a commercially reasonable basis. Generally the coverage will include [DELETED]. The Contractor supports the DOE's effort to improve their insurance program by the collection of insurance claim statistics and information. They will assist the DOE by complying with the insurance reporting requirements as defined by DOE's new draft Order 350.1.

B. [DELETED]

C. [DELETED]

D. This clause does not apply to liabilities covered by the Nuclear Hazards Indemnity Agreement.

Richland's determination letter on Bechtel's request was issued by Karen K. Randolph, Director of Richland's Office of External Affairs. In the determination letter, Randolph informed Bechtel that FDH had been given an opportunity, pursuant to 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(c), to identify parts of the contract that it believed to be protected from disclosure under the FOIA, and to provide a basis for any such claim. Randolph stated that she and her staff had reviewed FDH's claims, and concluded that portions of Clause H.52 should be deleted from the released copy pursuant to FOIA Exemption 4, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). Randolph explained that:

Exemption 4 of the FOIA was meant to protect the disclosure of proprietary information. If the deleted portions were released it would reveal FDH's proposed insurance program. This program is currently being negotiated with underwriters.(3)

Analysis

The analysis of whether material can be withheld under Exemption 4 is a complex task, in which we must consider judicial precedents and Departmental regulations. See Industrial Constructors Corporation, 25 DOE ¶ 80,196 (1996). For example, the Departmental regulations provide the following criteria for deciding if material can be withheld under Exemption 4:

(1) Whether the information has been held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains;

(2) Whether the information is of a type customarily held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains and whether there is a reasonable basis therefor;

(3) Whether the information was transmitted to and received by the Department in confidence;

(4) Whether the information is available in public sources;

(5) Whether the disclosure of the information is likely to impair the Government's ability to obtain similar information in the future; and

(6) Whether disclosure of the information is likely to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained.

10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(f).

The determination letter from Richland, cited above, claims that the full text of Clause H.52 is "proprietary" and that disclosure of the withheld portions would reveal FDH's proposed insurance program while negotiations with underwriters are in progress. This explanation does not address the criteria we must consider under case law and Departmental regulations. In addition, although we have discussed this matter with personnel at Richland, we have not received any further justification for withholding.

Both the FOIA and DOE regulations require reasonably specific justification for withholding documents or portions of documents. Mead Data Central v. Dep't of the Air Force, 566 F.2d 242 (D.C. Cir. 1977); Data Technology Industries, 4 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1979). Richland's determination, however, is not sufficiently specific for us to make a reasoned finding whether Clause H.52 merits protection under Exemption 4. Cf. Larson Associated, 25 DOE ¶ 80,204 (1996); Association of Public Agency Customers, 25 DOE ¶ 80,200 (1996). We will therefore remand this matter to Richland for a new determination, either releasing the text of Clause H.52 or providing adequate justification for withholding it in whole or in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The appeal filed by Bechtel National, Inc., Case No. VFA-0241, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2).

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Richland Operations Office for processing in accordance with the instructions provided in this Decision.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business; or in which the agency records are situated; or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0243, 26 DOE ¶ 80,144

December 16, 1996

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

APPEAL

Name of Petitioner: William H. Payne

Date of Filing: November 15, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0243

On November 15, 1996, William H. Payne (Payne or the Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on October 10, 1996, by the Department of Energy (DOE) in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004, and the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. §552a, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1008. In this Decision and Order, we will determine whether the DOE must release or identify materials withheld under FOIA Exemption 7(C), 5 U.S.C. §552(b)(7)(C), and conduct a further search for documents responsive to the Appellant's FOIA and Privacy Act requests.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

BACKGROUND

In a FOIA and Privacy Act request dated November 27, 1995, the Appellant sought copies of reports of investigations of misconduct by a named individual made by the DOE's Office of Inspector General (OIG) or other offices, and reports containing the Appellant's name.

By letter dated December 12, 1995, the Director of the FOIA/Privacy Act Division of the Office of the Executive Secretariat (Headquarters' FOIA Office) informed the Appellant that they had sent his FOIA and Privacy Act requests to OIG for a direct response. The Headquarters' FOIA and Privacy Office did not request that any other DOE office search for responsive documents.

On October 10, 1996, OIG issued a determination in response to the Appellant's FOIA request. It responded to the request for reports of investigation of misconduct by a named individual by stating:

[T]he Office of Inspector General neither confirms nor denies the existence of records responsive to your request. Lacking an individual's consent, an official acknowledgment of an investigation, or an overriding public interest, even to acknowledge the existence of such records pertaining to an individual could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy.

ANALYSIS

This Decision and Order will focus on the adequacy of DOE's search for records responsive to the Appellant's FOIA and Privacy requests and the propriety of OIG's refusal to confirm or deny the existence of enforcement records concerning a third person.(1) As detailed below, we will remand this matter to the Headquarters' FOIA Office to conduct an additional search for responsive records and uphold OIG's refusal to confirm or deny the existence of records.

I. Adequacy of the Search

Generally, a FOIA search is a broad, all-encompassing search that would identify any documents also subject to a Privacy Act analysis. Anibal L. Taboas, 25 DOE ¶ 80,207 at 80,775 (1996). Thus, we will analyze this case under FOIA principles. We have held that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we have found that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g. Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1993); Marlene R. Flor, 23 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1993); Native Americans for a Clean Environment, 23 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1993). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "The standard of reasonableness that we apply to the agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

In reviewing this Appeal, we contacted employees of the Headquarters' FOIA Office to discuss the search conducted for the requested documents. A FOIA/Privacy Act Specialist informed us that the Headquarters' FOIA Office had requested that only OIG, and no other DOE office, search for responsive records. The FOIA/Privacy Act Specialist asked that we remand Payne's FOIA and Privacy Act requests to the Headquarters' FOIA Office so that it may seek additional documents from other DOE offices. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Joan Ogbazghi, FOIA/Privacy Act Specialist, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (December 4, 1996).

In view of the foregoing, we shall grant the present Appeal to the extent that we will require that DOE conduct a further search for documents. We will remand this matter to the Headquarters' FOIA Office for a new determination with instructions to search other DOE offices for additional documents.

II. OIG's Refusal to Confirm or Deny the Existence of Records

An agency's statement in response to a FOIA request that it will neither confirm nor deny the existence of records is commonly called a "Glomar" response.(2) A Glomar response is justified when the records sought, if they exist, would be exempt from disclosure under the FOIA, and the confirmation of the existence of such records would itself reveal exempt information. See Antonelli v. F.B.I., 721 F.2d 615 (7th Cir. 1983). As detailed below, these circumstances exist here, and OIG correctly refused to admit or deny the existence of enforcement records involving a third person.

A. The Appellant's Contentions

In his Appeal, Payne alleges that the OIG's refusal to confirm or deny the existence of records concerning reports of misconduct by a named individual was improper because the individual's misconduct was public, acknowledged by an employee of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), and financed by taxpayer money.

In support of this position, the Appellant made the following contentions: (1) that the named individual was a high level official at Sandia National Laboratory (Sandia) and is currently a high level official with another DOE contractor; (2) that the named individual had sexual relations with his subordinate at Sandia, who may have been promoted in exchange for these sexual favors; (3) that Sandia security discovered the named individual having sexual relations with women in his office; (4) that the named individual has been the subject of many complaints of sexual harassment; and (5) that the named individual is married to a woman employed at Sandia who is overcompensated for the work that she does. The Appellant further contends that an EEOC employee has confirmed that these incidents occurred.

The Appellant has not substantiated any of these allegations. Moreover, the Appellant has not alleged that the named individual is the target of a public OIG investigation, or that charges arising from an OIG investigation have been filed against the named individual.

B. The OIG Response

In reviewing this Appeal, we contacted employees of OIG to discuss the Glomar response to the Appellant's FOIA request. An OIG staff attorney stated that OIG has a consistent policy of refusing to confirm or deny the existence of records in response to a FOIA request when the following circumstances exist:

1. The request is made by a third party.
2. The request is for information about a person identified by name.
3. The requested records, if they exist, would be contained in an enforcement file.
4. The named individual is not deceased.
5. The individual has not given the requester a waiver of his privacy right.
6. There has been no official confirmation that an enforcement file or proceeding exists.

In this case, OIG determined that the six factors existed and then issued a Glomar response to the Appellant's FOIA request. See Memorandum from Jackie Becker, Attorney, Office of the Inspector General to Linda Lazarus (November 27, 1996).

C. Exemption 7(C)

1. In general

Exemption 7(C) of FOIA, 5 U.S.C.§ 552(b)(7)(C), allows an agency to withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information . . . (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii).

The threshold test for withholding information under Exemption 7(C) is whether the agency compiled such information as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The scope of Exemption 7 encompasses enforcement of both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974). Amendments to the FOIA in 1986 extended the protection of Exemption 7 to all records compiled for "law enforcement purposes." See Attorney General's Memorandum on the 1986 Amendments to the Freedom of Information Act (Dec. 1987).

OIG is an investigative, law enforcement body charged with investigating and correcting waste, fraud or abuse in programs administered or financed by the DOE. See Inspector General Act of 1978, codified as amended at 5 U.S.C. app. §§2(1)-(2), 4(a)(1), (3)-(4), (d), 6(a)(1)-(4), 7(a), 9(a)(1)(E). As a result of its duties, we find that OIG compiles reports involving official misconduct for law enforcement purposes within the meaning of Exemption 7(C). See Burlin McKinney, 25 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1995).

2. The balancing test

In determining whether the disclosure of law enforcement records could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, courts have used a balancing test, weighing the privacy interests that would be infringed against the public interest in disclosure. Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Safecard Services, Inc. v. Securities and Exchange Commission, 926 F.2d 1197 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (Safecard); Lesar v. Department of Justice, 636 F.2d 472, 486 (D.C. Cir. 1980).

a. The privacy interest

The subject of an OIG investigation has a strong privacy interest in remaining anonymous because of the stigma associated with being investigated. See Fund for Constitutional Government v. National Archives & Records Service, 656 F.2d 856, 865 (D.C. Cir. 1981); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1991). The D.C. Circuit has acknowledged that investigation subjects possess substantial privacy interests because they may be embarrased and suffer harm to their reputations if others learn that they are the target of a law enforcement investigation. Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1205.

The Appellant argues that the named individual waived his privacy right because he was a high-level official of a government contractor and allegedly committed misdeeds on government time. This position is without merit. A person does not forfeit his or her right to privacy simply by accepting employment as an official of a government contractor. See Baez v. Department of Justice, 647 F.2d 1328 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Bast v. Department of Justice, 665 F.2d 1251, 1255 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (government officials do not surrender right to personal privacy although individuals' position may increase the public interest in disclosure).

The Appellant further contends that the named individual has no privacy right in the non- disclosure of OIG enforcement records because of the public nature of his alleged misconduct and the alleged verification of such misconduct by an employee of the EEOC. This argument is also without merit. The named individual's privacy interest is not destroyed because the requester may have some knowledge of the facts contained in the requested records. Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1491 (D.C. Cir. 1984); L & C Marine Transp. Ltd. v. United States, 740 F.2d 919, 922(11th Cir. 1984) (privacy interest is not lost because information may be discovered through other means.) Moreover, even assuming that an employee of the EEOC has confirmed the Appellant's allegations, such confirmation does not abrogate the individual's right to privacy on the issue of whether he is the target of an OIG investigation. See Davis v. Department of Justice, 968 F.2d 1276 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (requester has burden of proving that the specific material he seeks has been officially acknowledged or is in the public domain).

b. The public interest in disclosure

Having established the existence of a privacy interest, the next step is to determine whether there is a public interest in disclosure. We have held that the public interest in disclosure is measured not by the degree of the requester's interest in disclosure, but rather by "the right of the public to obtain the same information." The Die-Gem Co., Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,569 (1989) (quoting Nix v. United States, 572 F.2d 998, 1003 (4th Cir. 1978)). The Supreme Court has held that information that does not directly reveal government operations or activities "falls outside the ambit of the public interest that the FOIA was enacted to serve." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 775.

Here, the Appellant claims that the public interest in disclosure relates to the fact that the named individual was formerly a high official at Sandia and is currently a high level official with another DOE contractor. The Appellant claims that the named individual financed his alleged misdeeds with government money.

We agree that there is a strong public interest in the disclosure of official misconduct. Here, however, there has been no proof of official misconduct. The Appellant's allegations concerning the named individual are unsubstantiated. The Appellant has failed to demonstrate (or even allege) the existence of a formal OIG enforcement proceeding or criminal case arising from an OIG investigation. Courts have held that unsubstantiated allegations of official misconduct do not establish a public interest in disclosure. See McCutchen v. HHS, 30 F.3d 183 (D.C. Cir. 1994); Beck v. Department of Justice, 997 F.2d 1489 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (no public interest absent evidence of employee wrongdoing or public investigation); Triestman v. Department of Justice, 878 F. Supp. 667 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (no substantial public interest in disclosure of information concerning possible investigation of law enforcement agent).

c. Weighing the public interest against the privacy interest

When an individual who has not been formally charged with a crime or other mis-conduct would be exposed as a target of a law enforcement investigation, the public interest in disclosure must be very strong to overcome the invasion of privacy. Fund for Constitutional Government, 656 F.2d at 866. Here, as detailed above, the public interest in disclosure of unsubstantiated allegations of official misconduct is weak. Thus, the public interest in disclosure of these records does not outweigh the privacy right of the individual. Accordingly, if OIG enforcement records involving the named individual exist, these records may be withheld under Exemption 7(C).(3)

D. Disclosure of the Existence of Records Would Reveal Exempt Information

OIG has correctly refused to confirm or deny the existence of records that would reflect whether it has investigated misconduct by the named individual. As detailed below, a consistent Glomar response to such FOIA requests is necessary to protect the privacy rights of individuals who have been the subject of an OIG investigation.

If OIG had admitted that documents responsive to the Appellant's FOIA request exist, but claimed that the documents themselves were exempt from disclosure under Exemption 7(C), it would have revealed the existence of a law enforcement investigation involving the named individual. If OIG had responded that there were no records of an investigation concerning the named individual, then FOIA requesters could infer that OIG only refuses to confirm or deny the existence of enforcement records when such records actually exist. FOIA requesters could then properly infer that a Glomar response from OIG means that a law enforcement file involving a named individual exists. This could compromise the privacy rights of individuals who may be the subjects of third-party FOIA requests in the future.

E. The Glomar Response Was Appropriate

We find that OIG was justified in providing a Glomar response to the Appellant's FOIA request because the records sought, if they exist, would be exempt from disclosure under the FOIA and the confirmation of the existence of such records would itself reveal exempt information. Accordingly, we will deny the portion of the Appeal that relates to OIG's refusal to confirm or deny the existence of enforcement records concerning a third person.

CONCLUSION

We shall grant the present Appeal to the extent that we will require that DOE conduct a further search for documents. We will remand this matter to the Headquarters' FOIA Office for a new determination with instructions to conduct a search for additional documents in other DOE offices. We will deny the portion of the Appeal that relates to the OIG's refusal to confirm or deny the existence of enforcement records concerning a third person.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by William H. Payne on November 15, 1996, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and is in all other respects denied.

(2) This matter is remanded to the FOIA/Privacy Act Division of the Office of the Executive Secretariat which shall request that other DOE offices search for documents responsive to the Appellant's November 27, 1995 FOIA and Privacy Act request. The FOIA/Privacy Act Division of the Office of the Executive Secretariat shall issue a new determination which reflects the results of this additional search.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of busi ness, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)The OIG responded to the Appellant's request for records containing his name by stating that it will provide these records in response to another FOIA request. As the OIG has not provided a final response to this portion of the Appellant's request for records, this portion of the determination is not yet appealable. 10 C.F.R. §1008.11(a). See also Suffolk County, L.I., 17 DOE ¶ 80,111 at 80,524 (1988) (OHA can assume jurisdiction over a FOIA matter only after a DOE authorizing official has rendered an initial determination).

(2)"Glomar" refers to the first instance in which a Federal court upheld the adequacy of such a response. Phillippi v. CIA, 546 F.2d 1009 (D.C. Cir. 1976) (agency responded to a request for documents pertaining to a submarine-retrieval ship named the Hughes Glomar Explorer by neither confirming nor denying the existence of any such documents).

(3)It is important to note that we could reach the same result by relying on those cases that hold that names of private individuals appearing in an agency's law enforcement files are "categorically" exempt from disclosure under Exemption 7(C). Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1205-06.

Case No. VFA-0244, 26 DOE ¶ 80,152

January 15, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: James L. Hecht

Date of Filing: December 16, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0244

On December 16, 1996, James L. Hecht completed the filing of an Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his appeal, Mr. Hecht contests the adequacy of the search for responsive documents that was coordinated by the DOE's Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy (EE) pursuant to his FOIA request.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by a covered branch of the federal government, and which have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C.§ 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In his FOIA request, Mr. Hecht sought copies of "all documents related to the implementation of the energy conservation part of the Memorandum of Cooperation (MOC) with Russia which was signed by Secretary O'Leary in 1993....including, but not limited to, contracts, memoranda, notes, electronic mail records, minutes of meetings and other records concerning the allegations that conflicts of interest existed." FOIA request at 1. Mr. Hecht went on to specify three sub-categories of documents that were of particular interest to him: (i) contracts signed with either of two specified firms and subcontracts to those contracts; (ii) documents detailing why the specified firms were chosen as contractors; and (iii) reports on the results of those contracts.

In response to Mr. Hecht's request, the EE coordinated a search for responsive documents that included its files and those of the DOE's Office of General Counsel and Office of the Inspector General. In a determination letter dated October 29, 1996 the EE stated that it had located responsive documents, and that those documents were being provided to Mr. Hecht, with portions deleted pursuant to Exemption 6 of the FOIA.

In his appeal, Mr. Hecht does not challenge the EE's application of Exemption 6, but instead contends that the search for responsive documents was inadequate. In this regard, he claims that there are a large number of documents that should have been provided to him, but were not included in the EE's response to his request. As examples of the type of documents that Mr. Hecht claims should have been provided, he cites two letters that he wrote to Ronald Bowes, a DOE employee, the minutes of a meeting concerning the Russian - American MOC that occurred in Geneva, Switzerland on November 30 through December 3, 1993, and a report on Mr. Bowes' recent trip to Russia to discuss financing for energy efficiency demonstration zones.

In order to determine the scope of the search that was performed, we contacted the EE. We were informed that because of the extreme breadth of Mr. Hecht's request, the EE interpreted that request as covering only the three sub-categories of documents specified above. The EE informed us that a literal interpretation of the request would have required the EE to search for, review and reproduce thousands of pages of documents, and that such a task would be unreasonably burdensome and disruptive of that Office's operations. See memorandum of January 9, 1996 telephone conversation between Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney, and Tom Sacco, EE.

II. Analysis

The DOE regulations governing the processing of FOIA requests provide that such requests "must be submitted in writing and must reasonably describe the records requested to enable DOE personnel to locate them with a reasonable amount of effort."

10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(b). Requests for well-defined categories of documents shall be regarded as conforming to this requirement "if DOE personnel can reasonably determine which particular records are sought in the request. The request must enable the DOE to identify and locate the records sought by a process that is not unreasonably burdensome or disruptive of DOE operations. The Freedom of Information Officer may take into consideration problems of search which are associated with the files of an individual office within the Department and determine that a request is not one for reasonably described documents as it pertains to that office." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(c)(1). If a request does not reasonably describe the records sought, the DOE response "will specify the reasons why the request failed to meet the requirements of paragraph (c)(1) of this section and will invite the requester to confer with knowledgeable DOE personnel in an attempt to restate the request or reduce the request to manageable proportions by reformulation or by agreeing on an orderly procedure for the production of the records." 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(c)(2).

As an initial matter, it is clear from the record in this case that Mr. Hecht seeks access to a much broader range of documents than is reflected in the EE's interpretation of his request. In narrowing the scope of the request, the EE has apparently determined that Mr. Hecht has failed to submit a request for reasonably described documents as that term is defined in the DOE regulations. However, there is no indication in the record before us that the EE notified Mr. Hecht of this deficiency, or consulted with him in any meaningful way in its attempt to narrow his request. (1) This was inconsistent with the regulatory provisions quoted above. We will therefore remand this matter to the EE. On remand, the EE should inform Mr. Hecht that his request is overly broad, and should confer with him in an attempt to reduce the request to manageable proportions by reformulation or by agreeing to an orderly procedure for the production of records. See, e.g., Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,125 (1980).

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by James L. Hecht on December 16, 1996 is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy for further proceedings in accordance with the directions set forth in this Decision and Order.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)The EE has informed us that during telephonic communications with Mr. Hecht, he reiterated the statement in his request that he was particularly interested in the three sub- categories of documents. See memorandum of January 9, 1997 telephone conversation between Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney, and Tom Sacco, EE. However, we do not believe that these communications constitute a consultation with DOE officials in order to narrow the scope of a FOIA request within the meaning of 10 C.F.R. § 1004.4(c)(2). As set forth above, there is no indication in the record that Mr. Hecht was made aware at any point in this proceeding that his request was unacceptable as submitted. Furthermore, during these communications, Mr. Hecht did not indicate in any way that he intended to withdraw the broader requests for information that he submitted. Id.

Case No. VFA-0245, 26 DOE ¶ 80,154

January 15, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: J.B. (Jack) Truher

Date of Filing: December 16, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0245

On December 16, 1996, Mr. J.B. (Jack) Truher completed the filing of an Appeal from a determination issued to him on October 23, 1996, by the Deputy Inspector General for Inspections of the Office of Inspector General (Deputy IG) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, the Deputy IG partially granted a request for information filed by Mr. Truher under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004.

The FOIA requires that a federal agency generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that a federal agency may withhold at its discretion. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b).

I. Background

In his request for information, Mr. Truher sought the following documents concerning an IG investigation:

1. All pages of all DOE/IG investigative documents of file #94-RI-032 that name Mr. Truher.
2. All pages of all the documents that include a justification by the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center (SLAC) management for rehiring employees who just retired, and how SLAC implemented or exceeded these policies.
3. All pages of all documents that include a determination by the DOE IG of whether SLAC is in noncompliance with ethical or legal requirements regarding Stanford's Early Retirement Incentive Program (SERI).
4. All pages of documents explaining DOE sanctions on SERI, a determination of misconduct or a corrective response by SLAC, Stanford, or DOE, regarding Mr. Truher's complaint to the DOE/IG.
5. All pages of all documents related to Mr. Truher's charges of reprisal by SLAC and Stanford University.

In his determination, the Deputy IG released ten documents in their entirety, released fourteen documents with material redacted pursuant to Exemptions 5, 6 or 7(C) of the FOIA, and withheld another five documents in their entirety pursuant to Exemptions 5, 6 or 7(C). In his Appeal, Mr. Truher requests that the DOE release all of the redacted information and the withheld documents.

II. Analysis

A. Exemption 5

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter- agency or intra-agency memorandums or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears) (footnote omitted). The courts have identified three traditional privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion: the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work-product privilege and the executive "deliberative process" or "predecisional" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). Only the "deliberative process" privilege is at issue here.

The "deliberative process" privilege of Exemption 5 permits the government to withhold documents that reflect advisory opinions, recommendations, and deliberations comprising part of the process by which government formulates decisions and policies. Sears, 421 U.S. at 150. The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions by promoting frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making governmental decisions. Sears, 421 U.S. at 151. See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939, 946 (Ct. Cl. 1958)) (Mink).

In order for Exemption 5 to shield a document, it must be both predecisional, i.e., generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e., reflecting the give-and-take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id. Even then, however, the exemption only covers the subjective, deliberative portion of the document. Mink, 410 U.S. at 87-91. An agency must disclose factual information contained in the protected document unless the factual material is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material. Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1077 (D.C. Cir. 1971).

In the present case, we have reviewed the information withheld pursuant to Exemption 5 and find it is clearly both predecisional and deliberative pursuant to Exemption 5. In fact, we have confirmed that the information withheld pursuant to Exemption 5 contains opinions and interpretations from various DOE employees, the disclosure of which would discourage open, frank discussions between these individuals. Specifically, document number 37 (withheld in its entirety) and portions of other documents withheld pursuant to Exemption 5 contain handwritten notes and calculations from investigators commenting on and highlighting different facets of the IG investigation. These comments and calculations are clearly predecisional and deliberative in their nature and their release could only inhibit honest communication and evaluations by investigators in the future. Thus, we conclude that the Deputy IG made a correct determination regarding the material withheld pursuant to Exemption 5.

B. Exemptions 6 and 7(C)

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982) (Washington Post). Furthermore, the term "similar files" has been interpreted broadly by the Supreme Court to include all information that "applies to a particular individual." Washington Post, 456 U.S. at 602. Pursuant to established legal precedent, there is no doubt that the names of individuals redacted in this case qualify as "similar files" under Exemption 6.

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If the agency does not identify a privacy interest, it may not withhold the record pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984) (Ripskis). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 773 (1989) (Reporters Comm.). See also Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 (1994). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

Exemption 7(C) applies to a much narrower class of cases than Exemption 6, but it has a less exacting standard that provides more expansive coverage. Pursuant to Exemption 7(C), agencies may withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information . . . (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of a personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). Both Exemptions 6 and 7(C) require a balance of the interest in personal privacy in the withheld information against the public interest in the same information. There are, however, two significant differences between Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Pursuant to Exemption 7(C), the information must have been compiled for law enforcement purposes. Furthermore, since Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold information where there is only a reasonable expectation of an "unwarranted invasion of personal privacy," Exemption 7(C) has a lower threshold of privacy interest than Exemption 6 where the balancing test calls for a "clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy" (emphasis added). Since the documents at issue in this case meet Exemption 7(C)'s threshold test, we need only examine the Deputy IG's actions pursuant to the standard of Exemption 7(C). See, e.g., Burlin McKinney, 25 DOE ¶ 80,149 at 80,620 (1995); K.D. Moseley, 22 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,550 (1992).

Pursuant to the provisions of Exemption 7, we have examined investigations conducted by the Office of the Inspector General in response to complaints by individuals, as in this case, and found that they are law enforcement activities. See e.g., Stoel Rives, LLP, 25 DOE ¶ 80,189 at 80,723 (1996); Robert Burns, 19 DOE ¶ 80,134 at 80,596-97 (1989). Since the material qualifies for Exemption 7 analysis, we must consider whether release of the withheld material would result in one of the harms listed in Exemption 7. Ferguson v. Federal Bureau of Investigation, 957 F.2d 1059, 1065 (2d Cir. 1992). We have reviewed the material withheld pursuant to both Exemption 6 and 7(C) and found that it contains names (corresponding salary figures released), names and years of service and job title (corresponding retirement status and in some cases salary figures released), names and social security numbers and length of employment and job title (corresponding salary figures and in some cases employment status released), and the name of the person interviewed by an IG investigator (corresponding comments by the individual released). All of the individuals whose names and identifying information the Deputy IG withheld are either actual sources or possible sources in the investigation into alleged mismanagement of SERI.

We have found there is a strong privacy interest in the names and related identifying information of sources and witnesses to an investigation. Sources and witnesses have an obvious privacy interest in remaining anonymous. See James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,556 (1991); Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,109 at 80,524 (1990). Furthermore, the public interest favors protecting the identities of sources and witnesses, rather than disclosing them, to insure that witnesses continue to provide information voluntarily for law enforcement investigations, without fear of retribution. See generally King v. Department of Justice, 830 F.2d 210, 232-36 (D.C. Cir 1987). Since there are strong privacy and public interests in protecting these identities, we find that the Deputy IG properly withheld the names of its sources or potential sources. Furthermore, in the instances where the Deputy IG withheld the corresponding salary, retirement information, years of service, job title, and social security numbers, all of these involved identifying pieces of information that someone could use to discover the identities of these individuals. However, in reviewing documents 28, 30, 45 and 46, all withheld in their entirety, we found that disclosure of the title headings used in each of these documents would not invade anyone's privacy interest, nor are the headings "predecisional" or "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material pursuant to any Exemption 5 considerations. Accordingly, we find that the Deputy IG should release the title headings in documents 28, 30, 45, and 46.

The Supreme Court has held that there is a public interest in disclosure of information that "sheds light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties." Reporters Comm., 489 U.S. at 773. The burden of establishing that disclosure would serve the public interest is on the requester. Carter v. Department of Commerce, 830 F.2d 388 (D.C. Cir. 1987). Mr. Truher has not demonstrated and we do not find any public interest in the disclosure of the requested information. We fail to see how release of the particular names and other identifiers of the Deputy IG's sources or possible sources in an investigation would aid the public in understanding anything about the workings of the government. In view of the fact that there is no apparent public interest to balance against the significant potential invasion of personal privacy, we find that the Deputy IG properly withheld the names and identifying information of sources and possible sources from disclosure. Accordingly, we find that the Deputy IG properly withheld the names of individuals and the related information that someone could use to identify them.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by J.B. (Jack) Truher on December 16, 1996, Case No. VFA-0245, is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Deputy Inspector General for Inspections of the Office of Inspector General of the Department of Energy who will release only the title headings used in the documents numbered 28, 30, 45 and 46.

(3) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought either in the district where the requester resides or has a principal place of business or in which the agency records are situated or in the District of Columbia.

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Keci Corporation

Date of Filing: December 2, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0246

On December 2, 1996, August Kugler (Kugler) of Keci Corporation (Keci) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to the firm in response to a request for documents submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004 and the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1008. The determination was issued on September 25, 1996, by DOE's Office of Inspector General (OIG).(1) This Appeal, if granted, would require that OIG release responsive documents, if they exist, that were withheld under FOIA Exemption 7(C), 5 U.S.C. §552(b)(7)(C).

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

Keci is an engineering firm that was an unsuccessful bidder on a contract awarded by DOE's Richland Operations Office (DOE/RL). Keci contends that the successful bid by Kaiser Engineers Hanford (Kaiser) was not responsive to the RFP and that Kaiser was improperly awarded the contract. Keci further alleges that a named individual, formerly employed by Kaiser, provided information supporting this allegation to DOE. On February 7, 1994, Keci filed a request with DOE's FOI/Privacy Act Branch (DOE/HQ) for:

(1) the complete document(s) including any attachments or references submitted by [a named individual] to the Department of Energy in approximately October of 1993 on the subjects of Kaiser Engineers Hanford's implementation of or failure to properly implement Washington State Regulations for Corporations performing engineering in the State of Washington, including any allegation of retaliatory actions. The transmittal letter may be dated October 29, 1993, and the receipt date in the Department of Energy may be November 1, 1993.

(2) the complete response provided by the Department of Energy to [a named individual]. This response may be dated approximately November 18, 1993.

(3) documents prepared by or received by the Department of Energy related to the above subject including but not limited to recorded information whether on tape or on disc, including but not limited to telephone records and logs, meeting records and logs, activity reports and correspondence.

Letter from Keci to DOE (February 7, 1994).

DOE/HQ referred the request to OIG. On September 25, 1996, OIG issued a determination in response to Keci's FOIA request. It responded to the request for documents referring to the named individual by stating:

With respect to your request for documents concerning the above, the Office of Inspector General neither confirms nor denies the existence of such records. Lacking an individual's consent, an official acknowledgment of an investigation, or an overriding public interest, even to acknowledge the existence of investigatory records pertaining to an individual could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Refer to 5 U.S.C. §552 (b)(7)(C).

Letter from Deputy Inspector General for Inspections, OIG, to Keci (September 25, 1996) (Determination Letter).

II. Analysis

This Decision and Order will focus on the propriety of OIG's determination of a privacy interest and OIG's refusal to confirm or deny the existence of investigatory records concerning a third person. As detailed below, we will uphold both actions.

An agency's statement in response to a FOIA request that it will neither confirm nor deny the existence of records is commonly called a "Glomar" response.(2) A Glomar response is justified when the records sought, if they exist, would be exempt from disclosure under Exemption 7(C) of the FOIA, and the confirmation of the existence of such records would itself reveal exempt information. See Antonelli v. F.B.I., 721 F.2d 615 (7th Cir. 1983); William H. Payne, 26 DOE ¶ 80,144 (1996). In order to use a Glomar response, there must be a cognizable privacy interest at stake and insufficient public interest in disclosure to outweigh that privacy interest. See FOIA Update, U.S. Department of Justice, Office of Information and Privacy at 3 (Winter 1986) (FOIA Update). As explained below, these circumstances exist here, and OIG correctly refused to admit or deny the existence of investigatory records involving a third person.

A. Keci's Allegations

In this Appeal, Keci alleges that the OIG's refusal to confirm or deny the existence of records concerning disclosures made by a named individual was improper because (1) there was official confirmation that an enforcement file exists, and (2) there is an overriding public interest in the conduct of the DOE/RL procurement in question. Letter from Keci to Director, OHA (December 2, 1996) (Appeal Letter). In support of this position, Kugler informed us that he called the Office of the Secretary and was given the dates of correspondence between the named individual and DOE. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Kugler and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (December 13, 1996).

A FOIA appeal is not the proper forum for the consideration of any alleged irregularities in the DOE/RL contract award, procurement process, or Keci's subsequent bid protest. Thus, we will decide only whether OIG properly used the Glomar response. As an initial matter, we find that Keci has not substantiated its allegation that references to the named individual are found in an officially confirmed enforcement file or proceeding. Kugler may have received dates of correspondence between the named individual and DOE, although he did not receive written acknowledgment of any investigation or enforcement action regarding the named individual.(3) Therefore, we find no official confirmation of an enforcement action which identifies the individual.

B. The OIG Response

In reviewing this Appeal, we contacted employees of OIG to discuss the Glomar response to Keci's FOIA request. An OIG staff attorney stated that OIG has a policy of refusing to confirm or deny the existence of records in response to a FOIA request when the following circumstances exist:

1. The request is made by a third party.
2. The request is for information about a person identified by name.
3. The requested records, if they exist, would be contained in an enforcement file.
4. The named individual is not deceased.
5. The individual has not given the requester a waiver of his privacy right.
6. There has been no official confirmation that an enforcement file or proceeding exists.

Memorandum from Jackie Becker, Attorney, Office of the Inspector General to Linda Lazarus (November 27, 1996). In this case, OIG determined that the six factors existed and on that basis issued a Glomar response to Keci's FOIA request.

C. Exemption 7(C)

1. In general

Exemption 7(C) of FOIA, 5 U.S.C.§ 552(b)(7)(C), allows an agency to withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information . . . could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). The use of the Glomar response under Exemption 7(C) is justified only when it is determined that there is a cognizable privacy interest at stake and that there is insufficient public interest in disclosure to outweigh it. See FOIA Update at 3.

The threshold test for withholding information under Exemption 7(C) is whether the agency compiled such information as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The scope of Exemption 7 encompasses enforcement of both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974). Amendments to the FOIA in 1986 extended the protection of Exemption 7 to all records compiled for "law enforcement purposes." See Attorney General's Memorandum on the 1986 Amendments to the Freedom of Information Act (Dec. 1987).

OIG is an investigative, law enforcement body charged with investigating and correcting waste, fraud or abuse in programs administered or financed by the DOE. See Inspector General Act of 1978, codified as amended at 5 U.S.C. app. §§2(1)-(2), 4(a)(1), (3)-(4), (d), 6(a)(1)-(4), 7(a), 9(a)(1)(E). As a result of its duties, we find that OIG compiles reports involving official misconduct for "law enforcement purposes" within the meaning of Exemption 7(C). See Burlin McKinney, 25 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1995).

2. The balancing test

In determining whether the disclosure of law enforcement records could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, courts have used a balancing test, weighing the privacy interests that would be infringed against the public interest in disclosure. Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Safecard Services, Inc. v. Securities and Exchange Commission, 926 F.2d 1197 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (Safecard); Lesar v. Department of Justice, 636 F.2d 472, 486 (D.C. Cir. 1980).

a. The privacy interest

An individual who files an official complaint alleging irregularities in DOE's procurement process has a privacy interest in being protected from possible retaliation. We have previously found that sources mentioned in OIG files have a strong privacy interest in remaining anonymous. See Blumberg, Seng, Ikeda & Albers, 25 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,563 (1995); James L Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1991). Indeed, the courts have recognized the possibility of harassment or intimidation of these sources, and have consistently found that privacy interests in the identities of individuals providing information to government investigators are greatly amplified. Safecard Services, Inc. v. S.E.C., 926 F.2d 1197 (D.C. Cir. 1991), cited in Stoel Rives, LLP, 25 DOE ¶ 80,189 at 80,724 (1996). Therefore, unless that person has waived this privacy interest, he is entitled to protection from disclosure of his activities.

We asked Kugler if the named individual had waived his privacy right, and consented to the release of any responsive records that may exist. Kugler admitted that the named individual, an employee of a government contractor, never gave Keci a waiver of his privacy rights, and, in fact, was very reluctant to discuss the matter with Kugler. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation Between Kugler and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (December 13, 1996). We have previously stated that a person does not forfeit his or her right to privacy simply by accepting employment with a government contractor. See William Payne, 26 DOE ¶ 80,144(1996); Baez v. Department of Justice, 647 F.2d 1328 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Bast v. Department of Justice, 665 F.2d 1251, 1255 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (government officials do not surrender right to personal privacy although individual's position may increase the public interest in disclosure).

The Appellant further contends that the named individual has no privacy right in the non- disclosure of OIG enforcement records because of the public nature of a government contract and alleged misconduct in the award of that contract. This argument is also without merit. The named individual's privacy interest is not destroyed because the requester may have some knowledge of the facts contained in the requested records. Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1491 (D.C. Cir. 1984); L & C Marine Transp. Ltd. v. United States, 740 F.2d 919, 922 (11th Cir. 1984) (privacy interest is not lost because information may be discovered through other means). Moreover, even assuming, arguendo, that specific material that might confirm Keci's allegations may exist, the existence of those records does not abrogate the individual's right to privacy on the issue of whether he is involved in an OIG investigation. See Davis v. Department of Justice, 968 F.2d 1276 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (requester has burden of proving that the specific material he seeks has been officially acknowledged or is in the public domain).

b. The public interest in disclosure

Having established the existence of a privacy interest, the next step is to determine whether there is a public interest in disclosure. FOIA Update at 4. We have held that the public interest in disclosure is measured not by the degree of the requester's interest in disclosure, but rather by "the right of the public to obtain the same information." The Die-Gem Co., Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,569 (1989) (quoting Nix v. United States, 572 F.2d 998, 1003 (4th Cir. 1978)). The Supreme Court has held that information which does not directly reveal government operations or activities "falls outside the ambit of the public interest that the FOIA was enacted to serve." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 775.

Here, the Appellant claims that the public interest in disclosure stems from the named individual's alleged assertions of irregularities in a DOE/RL procurement. We agree that there is a strong public interest in the disclosure of official misconduct. However, we find no proof of official misconduct. The Appellant's allegations concerning the procurement process are unsubstantiated. The Appellant has failed to confirm the existence of a formal OIG enforcement proceeding or criminal case arising from an OIG investigation. Courts have held that unsubstantiated allegations of official misconduct do not establish a public interest in disclosure. See McCutchen v. HHS, 30 F.3d 183 (D.C. Cir. 1994); Beck v. Department of Justice, 997 F.2d 1489 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (no public interest absent evidence of employee wrongdoing or public investigation); Triestman v. Department of Justice, 878 F. Supp. 667 (S.D.N.Y. 1995) (no substantial public interest in disclosure of information concerning possible investigation of law enforcement agent).

c. Weighing the public interest against the privacy interest

Here, as detailed above, the public interest in disclosure of unsubstantiated allegations of official misconduct is weak. The privacy interest involved is real and identifiable. Thus, the public interest in disclosure of any records that may exist does not outweigh the privacy right of the individual.

D. Disclosure of the Existence of Records Would Reveal Exempt Information

Accordingly, if OIG enforcement records involving the named individual exist, refusal to confirm or deny the existence of these records is proper under Exemption 7(C).(4) As detailed below, a Glomar response to such FOIA requests is necessary to protect the privacy rights of individuals whose identity may be revealed in an OIG investigation.

If OIG had admitted that documents responsive to the Appellant's FOIA request exist, but claimed that the documents themselves were exempt from disclosure under Exemption 7(C), it would have revealed the existence of a law enforcement investigation involving the named individual. If OIG had responded that there were no files concerning the named individual, then FOIA requesters could infer that OIG only refuses to confirm or deny the existence of enforcement records when such records actually exist. FOIA requesters could then properly infer that a Glomar response from OIG means that a law enforcement file involving a named individual exists. This could compromise the privacy rights of individuals who may be the subjects of third-party FOIA requests in the future. Thus, by refusing to confirm or deny the existence of an enforcement file on the named individual, OIG has properly protected that individual's privacy rights.

III. Conclusion

We find that OIG was justified in providing a Glomar response to the Appellant's FOIA request because the records sought, if they exist, would be exempt from disclosure under the FOIA and the confirmation of the existence of such records would itself reveal exempt information. Accordingly, we will deny this Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Keci Corporation on December 2, 1996, OHA Case No. VFA- 0246, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of busi ness, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0247, 26 DOE ¶ 80,157

January 28, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Ezra A. Beattie, Sr.

Date of Filing: January 3, 1997

Case Number: VFA-0247

On January 3, 1997, Ezra A. Beattie, Sr. (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a final determination issued on October 24, 1996, by the Department of Energy's (DOE) Office of Inspector General (IG). In that determination, the IG released copies of one responsive document in its entirety and an additional three responsive documents from which information had been deleted. This partial release occurred in response to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552(b), as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

I. BACKGROUND

The Appellant submitted a request for information to the DOE seeking copies of all documents regarding certain allegations concerning him involving an alleged incident at the Pantex Courier Section in Amarillo, Texas. On October 24, 1996, the IG issued a determination in response to this request releasing one document in its entirety and withholding portions of three other documents under Exemptions 6 and 7(C). On January 3, 1997, the Appellant filed the present Appeal, contending that the DOE's withholding of the deleted information was improper.

II. ANALYSIS

While the FOIA generally requires that information held by government agencies be released to the public upon request, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Only Exemptions 6 and 7(C) are at issue in the present case.

Release of the withheld information would reveal the identities of potential witnesses, informants and confidential sources. Since release of these individuals' identities might subject them to harassment, intimidation or other personal intrusions, the IG has withheld it under both Exemptions 6 and 7(C). The Appeal contends that the IG improperly applied these exemptions.

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982).

Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, if release of such law enforcement records or information . . . could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). The threshold test for withholding information under Exemption 7(C) is whether such information is compiled as part of or in connection with an agency law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). The scope of Exemption 7 encompasses enforcement of both civil and criminal statutes. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 & n.46 (D.C. Cir. 1974); Williams v. IRS, 479 F.2d 317, 318 (3d Cir. 1973), cert. denied sub nom. Donolon v. IRS, 414 U.S. 1024 (1973). By law, the IG is charged with investigating waste, fraud, and abuse in programs and operations administered or financed by the DOE. 5 U.S.C. Appendix 3 § 4. In the present case, the requested information pertains to an IG investigation of allegedly criminal activities occurring at a DOE facility. The IG is therefore a classic example of an organization with a clear law enforcement mandate. In the present case the IG's investigatory actions were clearly within this statutory mandate.

In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under either Exemption 6 or 7(C), an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether or not a significant privacy interest would be compromised by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to either of the exemptions. Ripskis v. Department of Hous. and Urban Dev., 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Second, the agency must determine whether or not release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press v. Department of Justice, 109 S. Ct. 1468, 1481 (1989) (Reporters Committee). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether release of the record either: (1) would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy (the Exemption 6 standard), or (2) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy (the Exemption 7(C) standard). See generally Ripskis, 746 F.2d at 3.

We have previously considered cases in which both Exemption 6 and 7(C) were invoked, and we stated that in such cases, provided the Exemption 7 law enforcement purpose threshold is met, we would analyze the withholding only under Exemption 7(C), the broader of the two exemptions. See, e.g., K.D. Moseley, 22 DOE ¶ 80,124 (1992); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1991); James E. Phelps, 20 DOE ¶ 80,169 (1990); Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,109 (1990); Jerry O. Campbell, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988). Exemption 6 allows an agency to withhold information if its release would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). By contrast, Exemption 7(C) allows an agency to withhold records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, if its release could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). It is only necessary to address the application of Exemption 7(C) to these documents since all of the documents were compiled for law enforcement purposes and any document which satisfies Exemption 7(C)'s "reasonableness" standard will be protected. Similarly, documents not protected by Exemption 7(C) will be unable to satisfy Exemption 6's more restrictive requirement that they constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy.

(1) Privacy Interest

Because of the obvious possibility of harassment, intimidation, or other personal intrusions, the courts have consistently recognized significant privacy interests in the identities of individuals providing information to government investigators. Safecard Services, Inc. v. S.E.C., 926 F.2d 1197 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (Safecard); KTVY-TV v. United States, 919 F.2d 1465, 1469 (10th Cir. 1990) (KTVY-TV) (finding that withholding identity necessary to avoid harassment of individual); Cucarro v. Secretary of Labor, 770 F.2d 355, 359 (3d Cir. 1985) (Cucarro); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 at 80,556 (1991); Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,524 (1990). The Appeal claims that the conclusion of the IG investigation at issue in the present case terminates these privacy interests. This assertion is without merit. The courts have consistently held that the passage of time does not negate individuals' privacy interests in non- disclosure of their identities. See e.g., McDonnell v. U.S., 4 F.3d 1227, 1256 (3d Cir. 1993). The potential for harassment, intimidation or other personal intrusions remains present even after the conclusion of an IG investigation. Accordingly, we find that the individuals whose identities are being withheld have significant privacy interests in maintaining their confidentiality.

(2) Public Interest in Disclosure

In Reporters Committee, the Supreme Court greatly narrowed the scope of the public interest in the context of the FOIA. Justice Stevens, writing for the Court, distinguished between the general benefits to the public which may result from the release of information, and those benefits that Congress sought to provide the public when it enacted the FOIA. He found that in FOIA contexts, the public interest in disclosure must be measured in terms of its relation to the FOIA's core purpose. Reporters Committee, 109 S. Ct. at 1481-84. The Court identified the core purpose of the FOIA as "public understanding of the operations or activities of the Government." Id. at 1483. Therefore, the Court held, only that information which contributes significantly to the public's understanding of the operations or activities of the Government is within "the ambit of the public interest which the FOIA was enacted to serve." Id. The Court therefore found that unless the public would learn something directly about the workings of government from the release of a document, its disclosure is not "affected with the public interest." Id.; see also Horner, 879 F.2d at 879.

It is well settled that disclosure of the identity of individuals who have provided information to government investigators is not "affected with the public interest." See e.g., Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1205; KTVY-TV, 919 F.2d at 1469. In the absence of a compelling reason for deviating from this body of precedent we reach that conclusion in the present case.

(3) The Balancing Test

Because release of the individuals' identities could reasonably be expected to subject them to harassment or intimidation or other personal intrusions, we have found significant privacy interests. After weighing the significant privacy interests present in this case against an insubstantial or non-existent public interest, we have found that release of information revealing the individuals' identities could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Our findings are consistent with those reached by several appellate courts, that when presented with a similar set of facts, have found that the privacy interests of individuals supplying information to government investigators clearly outweigh the negligible public interest in disclosure of these individuals. See, e.g., Safecard; KTVY-TV, 919 F.2d at 1469 (finding withholding necessary to avoid harassment of individual); Cucarro, 770 F.2d at 359.

While we are strongly committed to keeping the public fully informed about the DOE, we are also concerned about preserving the privacy rights of individuals providing information to the IG's investigators. By releasing the responsive documents with only those redactions necessary to prevent identification of specific individuals, the agency has provided as much information as possible while safeguarding individual privacy rights.

III. CONCLUSION

On the basis of the facts presented and federal case law, we have found significant privacy interests in the individuals' identities. We have also determined that disclosure would not significantly increase the public's understanding of the operations and activities of the government. Accordingly, we find that this information was properly withheld under Exemptions 6 and 7(C).

It is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Ezra A. Beattie, Sr. on January 3, 1997 (Case Number VFA-0247) is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0248, 26 DOE ¶ 80,148

January 7, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Carlos Blanco

Date of Filing: December 9, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0248

On December 9, 1996, Carlos Blanco filed an Appeal from a determination issued on November 5, 1996, by the Bonneville Power Administration (BPA). The determination responded to a request for information filed under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, and the Privacy Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, as implemented by the Department of Energy (DOE) in 10 C.F.R. Parts 1004 and 1008.

The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. However, Congress has provided nine exemptions to the FOIA which set forth the types of information agencies are not required to release. Under the DOE's regulations, a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1. The Privacy Act requires each federal agency to, inter alia, permit an individual to gain access to information about that individual which is contained in any "system of records" maintained by the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.6(a)(2).

I. Background

On October 23, 1996, Mr. Blanco requested, "[u]nder the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) or the Privacy Act, whichever applies to this case," a copy of a fact-finder's report that was compiled by a paralegal specialist on behalf of the BPA Office of General Counsel (BPA/GC). Memorandum from Carlos Blanco to Veronica Williams, BPA (October 23, 1996). The fact-finder's report concerned a July 1996 incident which took place in a BPA cafeteria, and which involved, among other people, Mr. Blanco. BPA issued a determination on November 5, 1996, in which it released portions of the report, but withheld the rest of the report under FOIA Exemptions 5 and 6, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), (6). Letter from Richard A. Nelson, BPA, to Carlos Blanco (November 5, 1996). Withheld from Mr. Blanco were the body of the report, statements of witnesses taken by the fact- finder, and several exhibits attached to the report.

In his Appeal, Mr. Blanco states:

I am dissatisfied with [BPA's] determination, and wish to appeal it for the following reasons:

1. I have a right to access personal information contained in a US Government file.
2. I have a right to respond to any unfavorable information that is contained in a US Government file.
3. I have a right to correct any erroneous information contained in a US Government file.
4. I have a right to be notified when unfavorable information contained in a US Government file is given to third parties. In this case, there are no specific policies or procedures to safeguard, disseminate, and/or destroy any documents containing unfavorable information.

5. I have a right to know how the unfavorable information is/will be used internally at BPA. In this case, there are no specific policies or procedures to govern who has access to the information, or how the information is/will be used.
6. Finally, I have a right to a reasonable precaution that the unfavorable information contained in a US Government file is not misused.

Letter from Carlos Blanco to Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) (undated).

II. Analysis

A. The Applicability of the Privacy Act

As an initial matter, we note that it is the general practice of the DOE to process a request by an individual for information about that individual under both the Privacy Act and the FOIA. However, in the present case, we find for the reasons explained below that the record at issue is not subject to the provisions of the Privacy Act.

The Privacy Act requires each federal agency to permit an individual to gain access to and request amendment of information which is contained in any "system of records" maintained by the agency.(1) 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.6(a)(2), (3). A "system of records" is defined as a "group of any records under the control of any agency from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or some identifying number, symbol or other identifying particular assigned to the individual." 5 U.S.C. § 552a(a)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1008.2(m). An individual is entitled under the Privacy Act "to gain access to his record or to any information pertaining to him which is contained in the system," and has the right to request amendment of his own record. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d).

BPA/GC has informed us that fact-finder reports such as the report which is the subject of the present Appeal are typically filed by reference to the name of the person or persons whose allegations were the subject of the fact-finding. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Mary Wooldridge, BPA/GC, and Steve Goering, OHA (December 20, 1996). Because such records are retrieved by the name of an individual, they are contained in a Privacy Act "system of records." However, the fact- finder's report that was requested by Mr. Blanco was completed only recently and therefore has not yet been filed in this system of records. Thus, Mr. Blanco does not have the right under the Privacy Act to gain access to or to request amendment of the fact-finder's report. We next examine Mr. Blanco's right to access this report under the FOIA, and specifically the exemptions cited by BPA in withholding information from Mr. Blanco.

B. The Applicability of FOIA Exemptions to the Information Withheld by BPA

1. Exemption 5

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter-agency memoranda or letters which would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). The Supreme Court has held that this provision exempts "those documents, and only those documents, normally privileged in the civil discovery context." NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 149 (1975) (Sears). The three principal privileges that fall under this definition of exclusion are the attorney-client privilege, the attorney work product privilege, and the "deliberative process" privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). In the present case, BPA relied upon the attorney work product, deliberative process, and witness statement privileges of Exemption 5.

a. Attorney Work Product Privilege

The attorney work product privilege protects from disclosure documents which reveal "the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3); see also Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 511 (1947) (Hickman). This privilege does not apply to every written document generated by an attorney, but only to those prepared either for trial or in anticipation of litigation. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 865. The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure extend the privilege to documents prepared "by or for" a litigant. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3). So long as there is "some articulable claim likely to lead to litigation," id., or potential litigation has become "identifiable," the work product privilege will attach. See William Hyde, 17 DOE ¶ 80,130 at 80,570 (1988) (citing Kent Corp. v. NLRB, 530 F.2d 612, 623 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 920 (1976)).

In the present case, the fact-finder's report was prepared by a paralegal working at the request and under the direction of Joseph Bennett, a BPA attorney. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Joseph Bennett, BPA/GC, and Steve Goering, OHA (December 20, 1996). Moreover, there is no question that there was potential for litigation in July and August of 1996, when the fact-finder's report was generated. BPA/GC stated that the report was prepared in anticipation of litigation arising from an incident that was the subject of the report. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Joseph Bennett, BPA/GC, and Steve Goering, OHA (December 20, 1996). BPA/GC also informed us that Mr. Blanco has recently filed an Equal Employment Opportunity (EEO) complaint with BPA concerning the incident, which action confirms the potential for both administrative and court litigation. Id.; see Exxon Corp. v. Department of Energy, 585 F. Supp 690, 700 (D.D.C. 1983) ("administrative litigation certainly can beget court litigation and may in many circumstances be expected to do so"); cf. Williams v. McCausland, No. 90-Civ-7563, slip op. at 29 (S.D.N.Y. Jan. 18, 1994) (documents generated in connection with litigation before Merit Systems Protection Board).

It is also clear that the report in question is precisely the type of document meant to be protected by the work product privilege. In the seminal case of Hickman v. Taylor, the Supreme Court set forth the rationale behind the privilege.

Proper preparation of a client's case demands that he assemble information, sift what he considers to be the relevant from the irrelevant facts, prepare his legal theories and plan his strategy without undue and needless interference. That is the historical and the necessary way in which lawyers act within the framework of our system of jurisprudence to promote justice and to protect their clients' interests.

Hickman, 329 U.S. at 510-11. In this case, the investigator sifted relevant from irrelevant facts on behalf of the attorney, and presented her findings in the report that was withheld from the Appellant. Therefore, based on our review of the report and the circumstances present, we agree with BPA that the body of the report, the witness statements, and the exhibits are protected from disclosure by the attorney work product privilege of Exemption 5. See Martin v. Office of Special Counsel, 819 F.2d 1181, 1187 (D.C. Cir. 1987) (witness statements); Exxon Corp. v. FTC, 466 F. Supp. 771, 772-73 (D.D.C. 1978) (economist's report), aff'd, 663 F.2d 120 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Wilson v. Department of Energy, No. 84-3163, slip op. at 8 (D.D.C. Jan. 28, 1995) (consultant's report).

b. Deliberative Process Privilege

The deliberative process privilege shields from public disclosure records reflecting the predecisional, consultative process of an agency. Benedetto Enterprises, Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1989); Darci L. Rock, 13 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1985). Predecisional materials are not exempt merely because they are prepared prior to a final action, policy, or interpretation. These materials must be a part of the agency's deliberative process by which decisions are made. Vaughn v. Rosen, 523 F.2d 1136, 1144 (D.C. Cir. 1975). This privilege was developed primarily to promote frank and independent discussion among those responsible for making government decisions. EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 87 (1973) (quoting Kaiser Aluminum & Chem. Corp. v. United States, 157 F. Supp. 939 (Cl. Ct. 1958)). The ultimate purpose of the exemption is to protect the quality of agency decisions. NLRB v. Sears, Roebuck & Co., 421 U.S. 132, 151 (1975).

In order to be shielded by Exemption 5, a document must be both predecisional, i.e. generated before the adoption of agency policy, and deliberative, i.e. reflecting the give and take of the consultative process. Coastal States, 617 F.2d at 866. The exemption thus covers documents that reflect, among other things, the personal opinion of the writer rather than the final policy of the agency. Id.

BPA explained in its determination that the fact-finder's report was created to assist BPA management in determining whether a claim of alleged harassment occurred which violated BPA's Anti-Harassment Policy. Many portions of the report reflect the personal views and recommendations of its author. For example, the report contains [the fact-finder's] personal opinion of the credibility of witnesses and reliability of evidence. Release of this type of material could interfere with the candid exchange of written views in the future, thereby depriving the final decisionmaker the benefit of being able to thoroughly evaluate this matter.

Letter from Richard A. Nelson, BPA, to Carlos Blanco (November 5, 1996) at 2. We have reviewed the report and agree with BPA's characterization of it. The report is clearly both predecisional and deliberative, and therefore was properly withheld under the deliberative process privilege of Exemption 5.

c. Witness Statement Privilege

In various contexts, the courts have found that statements given by witnesses in the course of agency investigations are withholdable under Exemption 5. See United States v. Weber Aircraft Corp., 465 U.S. 792, 799 (Air Force aircraft accident investigation); Ahearn v. United States Army Materials & Mechanics Research Ctr., 583 F. Supp. 1123, 1124 (D. Mass. 1984) (Inspector General investigation). In American Fed'n of Gov't Employees v. Department of the Army, 441 F. Supp. 1308 (D.D.C. 1977), the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia observed:

[C]ommon sense dictates that a warning to witnesses that their testimony will be generally disclosable under the FOIA would discourage candor and would severely limit the effectiveness of Inspector General investigations. . . . The Court views as unrealistic plaintiffs' suggestion that the facts of each particular case be examined to determine whether nondisclosure of witnesses' statements is justified. Witnesses in future Inspector General investigations, many of which undoubtedly will concern more controversial matters than the present case, cannot be expected to rely on an uncertain assurance that a court will not require public disclosure of their testimony.

Id. at 1314.

BPA states in its determination letter that its investigation in the present case "required that those persons interviewed give candid opinions of their co-workers and/or supervisors. Release of the statements would inhibit cooperation of witnesses in future investigations for fear that such statements would be made public." Letter from Richard A. Nelson, BPA, to Carlos Blanco (November 5, 1996) at 2. Applying the same rationale used by the courts in withholding witness statements, we agree with BPA and find that the witness statements were properly withheld from Mr. Blanco. See Weber, 465 U.S. at 802 ("The legislative history of Exemption 5 . . . recognizes a need for claims of privilege when confidentiality is necessary to ensure frank and open discussion and hence efficient governmental operations."); see also Richard Joslin, 26 DOE ¶ 80,101 at 80,502 (1996) (witness statements withheld under the Exemption 5 deliberative process privilege).

d. The Public Interest in Disclosure of Material Subject to Exemption 5

As explained earlier, under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1, material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA may be released if disclosure is determined to be in the public interest. For information withheld under the attorney work product privilege, we find that the public interest is best served by non-disclosure in order to insure that government attorneys are able to prepare their clients' cases free from the kind of "undue and needless interference" cited by the Supreme Court in Hickman v. Taylor. "Were such materials open to opposing counsel on mere demand, much of what is now put down in writing would remain unwritten." Hickman, 329 U.S. at 510-11. Without the protection of the privilege, government attorneys would be handicapped from providing effective representation to agencies. Regarding information withheld under the deliberative process and witness statement privileges, we find that the public interest is served by the frank and open expression of views by agency employees and the continued candor of witnesses in matters being investigated by an agency. Therefore, we find that the public interest does not mandate release of the material withheld under Exemption 5.

We further find that the existence of tangible risks to the interests protected by the work product privilege satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard set forth by the Attorney General in 1993. This standard applies a presumption in favor of disclosure which, unless an "agency reasonably foresees that disclosure would be harmful to an interest protected" by an Exemption, should result in a determination by the agency that the public interest lies with disclosure. Memorandum from Attorney General Janet Reno to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993). Because the documents in question were created in response to a specific incident involving the Appellant, and because the Appellant has filed an EEO complaint as a result of the incident, we can reasonably foresee that release of the documents will give the Appellant "the benefit of the agency's legal and factual research and reasoning, enabling him to litigate ? on wits borrowed from the adversary.'" FTC v. Grolier Inc. 462 U.S. 19, 30 (1983) (Brennan, J., concurring) (quoting Hickman, 329 U.S. at 516 (Jackson, J., concurring)). Accordingly, the DOE cannot responsibly make a discretionary disclosure of the withheld portion of the fact-finder's report.

2. Exemption 6

Exemption 6 shields from disclosure "[p]ersonnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). The purpose of Exemption 6 is to "protect individuals from the injury and embarrassment that can result from the unnecessary disclosure of personal information." Department of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599 (1982). In order to determine whether a record may be withheld under Exemption 6, an agency must undertake a three-step analysis. First, the agency must determine whether a significant privacy interest would be invaded by the disclosure of the record. If no privacy interest is identified, the record may not be withheld pursuant to Exemption 6. Ripskis v. Department of HUD, 746 F.2d 1, 3 (D.C. Cir. 1984). Second, the agency must determine whether release of the document would further the public interest by shedding light on the operations and activities of the Government. See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Hopkins v. Department of HUD, 929 F.2d 81, 88 (2d Cir. 1991); FLRA v. Department of Treasury Fin. Management Serv., 884 F.2d 1446, 1451 (D.C. Cir. 1989), cert. denied, 110 S. Ct. 864 (1990). Finally, the agency must weigh the privacy interests it has identified against the public interest in order to determine whether the release of the record would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 762-70.

BPA states that the witnesses who provided statements to the fact-finder in the present case "have a significant privacy interest in their statements and portions of the report that refer to their statements. The witness statements and other portions of the report contain candid comments and opinions of [BPA] cafeteria personnel and cafeteria customers that might lead to reprisals." Letter from Richard A. Nelson, BPA, to Carlos Blanco (November 5, 1996) at 2. In this respect, BPA's determination is consistent with our prior decisions and decisions of the federal courts finding that witnesses who have provided information to agency investigators have a strong privacy interest in remaining anonymous. Blumberg, Seng, Ikeda & Albers, 25 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,563 (1995); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1991); Walsh v. Department of the Navy, No. 91 C 7410, slip op. at 5 (N.D. Ill. Mar. 23, 1992). If the information in the witness statements could be released without revealing the identities of the witnesses, the privacy interests of the individual could be protected. However, it is apparent from our review of the fact-finder's report that the requester would very likely be able to determine the identities of the witnesses from the content of their statements.

The public interest in the information contained in the witness statements is not as clear. On one hand, the events that led to the fact-finding report have given rise to an EEO complaint and charges of harassment. There is an arguably strong public interest in allegations of violations of federal laws and policies at a government facility. On the other hand, the release of the information withheld in the present case would only shed light on one isolated incident at a BPA cafeteria. Thus, despite any allegations stemming from this incident, releasing the information in question would not likely shed significant light on the operations and activities of the Government. Moreover, the public interest favors the protection of identities of witnesses rather than disclosure, in order to ensure that witnesses continue to provide information voluntarily in future investigations. On balance, because the public interest does not clearly favor release of the information, and because distinctly perceptible privacy interests are at stake, we find that BPA properly withheld the witness statements and other information in the fact-finder's report that could identify witnesses.

For the reasons stated above, we conclude that BPA correctly applied FOIA Exemption 5 and 6 in withholding information from the Appellant. Accordingly, the present Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Carlos Blanco on December 9, 1996, Case Number VFA-0248, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1) As implied by the issues raised in Mr. Blanco's Appeal, the Privacy Act also imposes certain requirements on government agencies in their use of personal information, including limitations on disclosure to third parties. However, the appeal authority of the OHA under the DOE Privacy Act regulations extends only to the review of determinations issued in response to requests by individuals for access to records or amendment of records. 10 C.F.R. § 1008.11(a). Moreover, in Mr. Blanco's original request to BPA, he did not seek to amend records, but rather requested only access to records under the Privacy Act. Thus, only the first issue raised by Mr. Blanco, relating to his right to access particular records, is within the scope of the present Appeal.

Case No. VFA-0250, 26 DOE ¶ 80,153

January 15, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:I.B.E.W.

Date of Filing:December 12, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0250

On December 12, 1996, a branch office of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (I.B.E.W.) filed an Appeal from determinations issued to it by the Savannah River Operations Office (SR) of the Department of Energy (DOE) on August 9, 1996, October 10, 1996 and November 8, 1996. In those determinations, SR partially granted a request for information and denied a request for a waiver of fees in connection with a request filed by the Appellant under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, the I.B.E.W. asks that we order a new search for responsive documents and grant its request for a fee waiver.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that an agency may withhold at its discretion. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In its request for information, the I.B.E.W. sought copies of documents containing the following items:

1. An accurate accounting of all moneys, materials, time, lost productivity, etc., associated with Westinghouse Savannah River Company's (WSRC) "anti- Union" training for supervisors and informational meetings with the nonexempt employees and how WSRC passed on those expenses to the Department of Energy (DOE).
2. Any and all memos, correspondence, flyers, electronic mail etc., concerning the Union and its activities, generated by DOE or its contractor WSRC in the last eight to ten months including directives, comments, suggestions, training plans or requests for funding to conduct "anti-Union" training, including documents generated between the DOE and the contractor for Wackenhut Services Incorporated.

3.A copy of the contract between DOE/WSRC and Prime South for operating the power generating stations.

In the August 9, 1996 determination letter, SR enclosed a copy of the contract between WSRC and the DOE and a site map. Subsequently, in the October 10, 1996 determination letter, SR released to the

I.B.E.W. copies of documents responsive to Item 2 of its request (also numbered 2 above). SR stated that it did not find any documents responsive to the I.B.E.W.'s other two requests. However, in the November determination letter, SR informed the I.B.E.W. regarding Item 3 of its request (also numbered 3 above) that the DOE has no contractual relationship with Prime South. SR informed the I.B.E.W. that Prime South is a subcontractor to a private firm that leases government facilities. To verify these facts, SR provided the I.B.E.W. with a copy of the DOE's lease agreement with the private firm. In the October determination letter, SR also stated that the I.B.E.W. had earlier agreed to pay $32.58 in fees. The I.B.E.W. states that it agreed to pay this fee in order to expedite its receipt of the documents SR planned to release, but that SR allowed the I.B.E.W. to reserve its right to contest the fee at a later date.

In its appeal, the I.B.E.W. argues that additional responsive information must exist to show the amount of money WSRC spent in "anti-Union" activities and how WSRC passed this cost onto the DOE. The I.B.E.W. states that the DOE Contracting Officer for WSRC must have obtained correspondence or other documentation from WSRC to show how it financed "anti-Union" activities, including training in Charleston, S.C., and for materials and equipment used to produce training plans. The I.B.E.W. contends that the contract between the DOE and WSRC requires that WSRC provide the DOE with this information. Furthermore, the I.B.E.W. requests a fee waiver for the costs associated with processing its FOIA request. In support of this request, the I.B.E.W. states that it could channel the information it received to the local news media and wire services for distribution and that it has access to the I.B.E.W.'s international magazine, "The IBEW Journal," and the AFL-CIO's monthly magazine. The I.B.E.W. also asserts that the requested information would contribute significantly to the public's understanding of how WSRC was illegally wasting taxpayer money. Finally, the I.B.E.W. contends that it is not a commercial interest because it does not have any dues-paying members working at WSRC or the DOE and that no one will reap any financial benefit from release of the requested information.

II. Analysis

A. Adequacy of the Search

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, the FOIA requires agencies to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was adequate, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

In reviewing the Appeal, we contacted SR to ascertain the validity of the I.B.E.W.'s contention that other responsive documents must exist.(1) An official at SR informed us that they searched for documents in response to Item 1 of the request (also numbered 1 above) in a literal manner. That is, SR correctly searched for documents specifically dealing only with "anti-Union" activities. However, based on the I.B.E.W.'s appeal, it appears to us that the I.B.E.W. meant to request documents concerning the accounting of WSRC's union-related training activities. The I.B.E.W.'s narrow wording of its request effectively limited SR's search. Although it would be appropriate for us to find that SR's search was adequate, because the I.B.E.W. clarified its request on appeal, we will expedite matters and remand the I.B.E.W.'s clarified request back to SR for a further search of documents.

B. Fee Waiver

The FOIA generally requires that requesters pay fees for the processing of their requests. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(i); see also 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a). However, the Act states,

Documents shall be furnished without any charge or at a charge reduced below the fees established under clause (ii) if disclosure of the information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of the operations or activities of the government and is not primarily in the commercial interest of the requester.

5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii) (1988 ed.). The burden of satisfying this two-prong test is on the requester. Larson v. Central Intelligence Agency, 843 F.2d 1481, 1483 (D.C. Cir. 1988) (per curiam). The DOE has implemented the statutory standard for fee waiver in its FOIA regulations. See 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8). Those regulations set forth the following four factors that an agency must consider to determine whether the requester has met the first statutory fee waiver condition, i.e., whether disclosure of the requested information is in the public interest because it is likely to contribute significantly to public understanding of government operations or activities:

(A) the subject of the request; whether the subject of the requested records concerns "the operations or activities of the government";

(B) the informative value of the information to be disclosed; whether the disclosure is "likely to contribute" to an understanding of government operations or activities;

(C) the contribution to an understanding by the general public of the subject likely to result from disclosure; and

(D) the significance of the contribution to public understanding; whether the disclosure is likely to contribute "significantly" to public understanding of government operations or activities.

10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(i). Finally, in addition to satisfying these four factors, the DOE must also find that the information is not requested for use primarily in the commercial interest of the requester. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.9(a)(8)(ii).

Factor A asks us to determine whether the subject of the requested documents concerns the operations or activities of the government. A fee waiver is appropriate only where the subject matter of the requested documents specifically concerns identifiable "operations or activities of the government." See Department of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 109 S. Ct. 1468, 1481-83 (1989); U.A. Plumbers and Pipefitters Local 36, 24 DOE ¶ 80,148 at 80,621 (1994) (Local 36). The requested documents concern the DOE's oversight of a contractor and that contractor's dealings with a labor union. This oversight function is clearly a government activity, and thus, we find this request meets the conditions outlined in Factor A.

Factor B requires a consideration of whether the disclosure of information is "likely to contribute" to the public's understanding of government operations and activities. See Local 36; Seehuus Associates, 23 DOE ¶ 80,180 (1994) (Seehuus). The focus of this factor is on whether the information is already in the public domain or otherwise common knowledge among the general population. Seehuus, 23 DOE at 80,694. If the information is already publicly available, release to the requester would not contribute to public understanding and a fee waiver may not be appropriate. The information at issue here is not in the public domain and could contribute to the public's understanding of government operations. We therefore find that the requested information meets this criterion.

Factor C requires us to consider whether the requested documents would contribute to the understanding of the subject by the general public. To meet this test, the requester must have the ability and intention to disseminate this information to the public. James L. Schwab, 22 DOE ¶ 80,133 at 80,569 (1992). In the present case, the I.B.E.W. has stated that it has access to the I.B.E.W.'s international magazine (alleged circulation over 800,000) and the AFL-CIO's monthly magazine (alleged circulation in the millions). Assuming these claims are correct, we find that the I.B.E.W. has demonstrated that it has the ability to disseminate information to a significant number of people in the general public. We also find that the I.B.E.W. has demonstrated the intention to disseminate information it obtains from the requested documents to the public and thus improve the public's understanding of government operations. See Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,111 at 80,522 (1993).

In order to satisfy the requirements of Factor D, the requested documents must contribute significantly to the public understanding of government operations or activities. The Department of Justice has suggested the following test for this factor:

To warrant a fee waiver or reduction of fees, the public's understanding of the subject matter in question, as compared to the level of public understanding existing prior to the disclosure, must be likely to be enhanced by the disclosure to a significant extent.

1995 Justice Department Guide to the Freedom of Information Act 381 (1995); See Local 36; Seehuus.

In the present case, the I.B.E.W. asserts that the requested documents enable it to determine how the government spends money and whether a DOE contractor illegally wasted taxpayer funds. If the responsive documents do in fact contain such information, we believe that disclosure would likely enhance the public's understanding of these matters to a significant extent.

In view of our evaluation of the foregoing factors, we find that the I.B.E.W. has, with respect to the documents, satisfied the four factors that an agency must weigh to determine whether the requester has met the public interest requirement. In other words, the I.B.E.W. has shown that disclosure of the documents is in the public interest because this disclosure is likely to contribute significantly to the public understanding of government operations or activities. The next requirement calls for the agency to determine whether "disclosure of the information . . . is not primarily in the commercial interest of the requester." 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii).

A commercial interest is one that furthers a commercial trade or profit interest as those terms are commonly understood. OMB Fee Guidelines, 52 Fed. Reg. 10,017-18. The Second Circuit of the U.S. Court of Appeals also expounded on the meaning of "commercial" in the context of the FOIA. American Airlines v. National Mediation Board, 588 F.2d 863 (2d Cir. 1973) (AA). In AA, the Court addressed the issue of whether a division of the teamsters union had information that could be considered commercial in light of the fact that the union "does not have profit as its primary aim." The court stated, "Commercial" surely means pertaining or relating to or dealing with commerce. Labor unions, and their representation of employees, quite obviously pertain to or are related to commerce and deal with the commercial life of the country.

Id. at 870. Similarly, the I.B.E.W. or International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is a labor union that, in representing its employee members is related to commerce, and deals with the commercial life of the country. As such, we find that the I.B.E.W. has a commercial interest in the requested information.

Finally, we must balance the requester's commercial interest against the identified public interest and determine which interest is primary. If we determine that the public interest in disclosure is greater in magnitude than the requester's commercial interest, then we will grant the fee waiver. In this case, we find that the interest in the requested information is primarily the I.B.E.W.'s commercial interest. Although we recognize that the general public has an interest in the requested information, in that the information could shed light on the DOE's oversight of its contractor and its contractor's actions regarding unionizing efforts, we find that the primary interest in this information is for the benefit of the I.B.E.W.'s own membership. The I.B.E.W. membership has a much greater stake in information regarding unionizing efforts at a location where a contractor employs its members, than the general public's interest in this type of information. Although evidence of fraud, waste and abuse could grow out of release of this information, a subject important to the general public, we find, in this case, that the I.B.E.W. is more concerned with protecting its own members' union activities than informing the public. Accordingly, we must deny the I.B.E.W.'s Appeal for a fee waiver.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by the I.B.E.W. on December 12, 1996, is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Authorizing Official of the Savannah River Operations Office of the Department of Energy for a search for any documents concerning Westinghouse Savannah River Company's activities dealing with labor unions or efforts to unionize. .

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review. Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0251, 26 DOE ¶ 80,151

January 15, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

APPEAL

Name of Petitioner: Gretchen Lee Coles

Date of Filing: December 16, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0251

On December 16, 1996, Gretchen Lee Coles (Ms. Coles or the Appellant) filed an Appeal from determinations issued on September 17, 1996, by the Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque) and November 7, 1996, by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (Oak Ridge) of the Department of Energy (DOE). The determinations were issued in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require DOE to conduct a further search for documents responsive to Ms. Cole's FOIA request.

BACKGROUND

The Appellant's father, Lee H. Coles, was employed by the Atomic Energy Commission at the Portsmouth Gaseous Diffusion Plant in Ohio (Portsmouth) between 1953 and his death in 1958.(1) The Appellant contacted DOE's Office of Human Radiation Experiments seeking information concerning her father's possible exposure to ionizing radiation. The Appellant's request for information was referred to the Oak Ridge FOIA Office.

Subsequently, the Appellant submitted a formal FOIA request to Oak Ridge seeking a copy of her father's medical records, radiation exposure records, personnel records, and personnel security file. In this FOIA request, the Appellant sought to obtain documents from DOE as well as from other federal agencies that had employed her father. (2)

The FOIA/Privacy Act Officer at Oak Ridge (Oak Ridge FOIA Officer) informed the Appellant that DOE could not search for records within the control of another federal agency. The Oak Ridge FOIA Officer also advised the Appellant that she must file a separate FOIA request with each agency that employed her father to obtain all the records that she was requesting. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amy Rothrock, Oak Ridge FOIA Officer, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (January 7, 1997).

The Oak Ridge FOIA Officer forwarded the Appellant's FOIA request to Albuquerque and asked that Albuquerque search for responsive records and provide a direct response to Ms. Coles.(3) On September 17, 1996, Albuquerque issued a determination stating that:

(1) the Albuquerque Personnel Security Division (PSD) had been unable to find Mr. Cole's personnel security file. The PSD destroys a personnel security file after the file has not been active for ten years;

(2) the Albuquerque Occupational Safety and Health Division (OSHD) had been unable to find Mr. Coles' radiation exposure records;

(3) Albuquerque does not maintain medical and personnel records on former federal employees. After an employee stops working for a federal agency, Albuquerque transfers the employee's medical and personnel records to the National Personnel Records Center; and

(4) the Albuquerque FOIA Officer had sent the Appellant's FOIA request to the National Personnel Records Center for processing and the issuance of a direct response to the Appellant.

On November 7, 1996, Oak Ridge issued a determination to the Appellant stating that records responsive to her FOIA request could not be found. Attached to this determination was a letter from the Radiation Protection Program Manager at Portsmouth indicating that they had no record showing a "positive exposure" to radiation for Mr. Coles.

Ms. Coles is appealing the adequacy of the search for documents responsive to her FOIA request by Oak Ridge and by the Albuquerque PSD and OSHD.(4) In her Appeal, Ms. Coles contends that the search was inadequate. She specifically alleges that DOE had not searched for records that would reflect her father's employment at other federal agencies. Ms. Coles has set forth no reason why she believes that DOE would possess records of other agencies that relate to her father.

ADEQUACY OF THE SEARCH

We have held that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents. When we have found that a search was inadequate, we have consistently remanded the case and ordered a further search for responsive documents. E.g. Eugene Maples, 23 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1993); Marlene R. Flor, 23 DOE ¶ 80,130 (1993); Native Americans for a Clean Environment, 23 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1993). However, the FOIA requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "The standard of reasonableness that we apply to the agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985).

As detailed below, we find that Oak Ridge and Albuquerque followed procedures reasonably calculated to uncover the materials sought by the Appellant in her FOIA request. The Oak Ridge and Albuquerque FOIA Officers contacted people who would have knowledge of whether relevant documents exist, and these individuals used appropriate procedures to search for the records requested by Ms. Coles. The search for these documents was adequate.

The Albuquerque Search

In reviewing this Appeal, we contacted the Albuquerque FOIA Officer and two other employees to discuss the search conducted for Mr. Coles' radiation exposure and personnel security records at Albuquerque. They provided the following information:

(1) Radiation Exposure Records. The FOIA Officer informed us that if such records exist at Albuquerque, they would be in the Albuquerque Occupational Safety and Health Division (OSHD). See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Elva Barfield, Albuquerque FOIA Officer, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (November 6, 1996).

We then contacted the OSHD employee who is responsible for searching radiation exposure records at Albuquerque to respond to FOIA requests. He stated that records of radiation exposure of federal employees at Albuquerque that predate 1989 are in two safes. The first safe contains the original log of radiation exposure. This log is not arranged alphabetically. The second safe contains the same information as the log book, but the OSHD employee organized the information alphabetically. When OSHD receives a request for records that would reflect whether an employee was exposed to radiation before 1989, the OSHD employee searches the records contained in the second safe by checking whether the employee's name appears in the alphabetical listing.

The OSHD employee followed this procedure in responding to the Appellant's FOIA request, and found no responsive records. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Donald Brady, Albuquerque OSHD and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (December 23, 1996).

(2) Personnel Security File. The FOIA Officer informed us that if Mr. Coles' personnel security file were at Albuquerque, it would be in the Personnel Security Division (PSD). See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Elva Barfield and Linda Lazarus (November 6, 1996).

The administrative assistant at the PSD has the responsibility for supervising FOIA searches in the Division. She explained the process by which the Division responds to a FOIA request. She said that an employee of the PSD checks the Central Personnel Clearance Index (CPCI). The CPCI contains information on the location of personnel security files and should show whether a file is at Albuquerque. However, even if the CPCI does not indicate that a personnel security file is in Albuquerque, an employee of the PSD conducts an alphabetical search for the individual's file in the files for the relevant time.

The administrative assistant informed us that files that have been active within the past three years are kept in alphabetical order in a vault. Older inactive files are kept in secure storage in alphabetical order in other locations. Generally, the PSD destroys personnel security files after the file has been inactive for ten years. (5)

The administrative assistant further stated that the PSD conducted a search for the personnel security file of Mr. Coles following normal procedures, but no documents were found. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Margaret Todd, Administrative Assistant, PSD, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (January 2, 1997).

The Oak Ridge Search

In reviewing this Appeal, we contacted the Oak Ridge FOIA Officer to discuss the searches conducted for Mr. Coles' medical, radiation exposure, personnel and personnel security records. She provided the following information:

(1) Medical and Personnel Records. Oak Ridge does not maintain the medical or personnel records of former Atomic Energy Commission employees. Such records are sent to Headquarters or the National Personnel Records Center.(6)

Oak Ridge has jurisdiction over medical records of certain other federal and contractor employees. These records are under the control of Lockheed- Martin Utility Systems, Inc., at Portsmouth and the Oak Ridge Associated Universities. Because Mr. Coles had been identified as a former Atomic Energy Commission employee, it was unlikely that his medical records would be at these locations. Nevertheless, the Oak Ridge FOIA Officer asked that the custodians of these records search for documents responsive to Appellant's FOIA request. These custodians reported that they were unable to find any records concerning Mr. Coles.

Additionally, Lockheed-Martin Energy Systems, Inc., at Portsmouth maintains personnel records of contractor employees. Because Mr. Coles had been identified as a former Atomic Energy Commission employee, it was unlikely that his personnel records would be at this location. Nevertheless, the Oak Ridge FOIA Officer asked an employee of the personnel office to search for Mr. Coles' records. This employee reported that she had been unable to locate any responsive records.

(2) Radiation Exposure Record. Radiation exposure records are maintained in the Dosimetry Section of Lockheed-Martin Utility Services, Inc., at Portsmouth and at the Oak Ridge Associated Universities. The Oak Ridge FOIA Officer asked the custodians of these records to search for records that might reflect whether Mr. Coles had been exposed to radiation. After searching, the custodians reported that they had been unable to find any records concerning Mr. Coles.

(3) Personnel Security File. Oak Ridge does not maintain the personnel security files of former Atomic Energy Commission employees.(7)

However, Oak Ridge does maintain personnel security files of certain federal and contractor employees at the Personnel Security Clearance and Assurance Branch (PSCAB). Because Mr. Coles had been identified as a former Atomic Energy Commission employee, it was unlikely that his personnel security records would be at this location. Nevertheless, the Oak Ridge FOIA Officer asked that a search be conducted for Mr. Coles' records. No records were found.

See Memoranda of Telephone Conversation between Amy Rothrock, Oak Ridge FOIA Officer, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (December 20 and 23, 1996 and January 7, 1997).

The Appellant's Contentions Concerning The Records of Other Agencies

The Appellant also complains that the searches conducted by Oak Ridge and Albuquerque were inadequate because they failed to uncover records reflecting her father's employment at other federal agencies. Appellant's contentions are without merit. First, under the FOIA, DOE has no jurisdiction to conduct a search for documents located in other agencies. The FOIA requires only that each agency search for records within its own possession and control. See 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. Nor has the Appellant set forth facts that would show that DOE has possession or control of records of other agencies that are responsive to Appellant's FOIA request. See Gilberte Brashear, 25 DOE ¶ 80,198 (1996).

Conclusion

The Oak Ridge and Albuquerque FOIA Officers followed procedures that were reasonably calculated to uncover the materials sought by the Appellant in her FOIA request. The Oak Ridge and Albuquerque FOIA Officers contacted people who would have knowledge of whether relevant documents exist, and these individuals searched for records following appropriate procedures. The search for these documents was therefore adequate.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Gretchen Lee Coles on December 16, 1996, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of busi ness, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: January 15, 1997

(1)This statement is based on information provided by the Appellant.

(2)The Appellant has indicated that her father worked for many other federal agencies, including the Department of Interior, the Army, and the Department of Commerce.

(3)The Oak Ridge FOIA Officer had previously referred the Appellant's FOIA request to the FOIA and Privacy Act Division of the Office of the Executive Secretariat (the Headquarters FOIA Office) to conduct a search for responsive records. A FOIA/Privacy Act Specialist at the Headquarters FOIA Office (Headquarters FOIA Specialist) informed the Oak Ridge FOIA Officer that she had no reason to believe that records concerning Mr. Coles were at Headquarters. The Headquarters FOIA Specialist also indicated that, if they still exist, Mr. Coles' personnel security file should be at Albuquerque and his medical and personnel records should be at the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis, Missouri. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Verlette Moore, FOIA Specialist, Headquarters' FOIA Office, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (January 7, 1997).

(4)The Appellant also raised two additional matters. First, the Appellant asks that DOE define the term "no positive exposure" to radiation contained in the letter from the Radiation Protection Program Manager attached to the Oak Ridge determination. As a preliminary matter, it is important to note that the FOIA does not require an agency to respond to questions. Bendetto Enterprise, Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,106 (1989). Here, however, the Appellant is not asking a question concerning the definition of a term, but is raising an issue relating to the adequacy of the Oak Ridge search for documents. It is appropriate for us to address this issue. Accordingly, we contacted the Oak Ridge FOIA Officer and asked whether records concerning Mr. Coles had been located. The FOIA officer indicated the Radiation Protection Program Manager had not located any such records. The Oak Ridge FOIA Officer further informed us that the letter from the Radiation Protection Program Manager is a form letter which is used when no records concerning an individual have been located. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Amy Rothrock, Oak Ridge FOIA Officer, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney (January 8, 1997). Second, the Appellant states that she requests documents concerning the health of Atomic Energy Commission employees at Portsmouth. This request was not included within the original FOIA request and therefore is not properly part of this Appeal. We have asked the Headquarters FOIA Office to treat this matter as a new request under the FOIA and issue a direct response to Ms. Coles.

(5)There are two exceptions to this rule: First, in 1994, a moratorium on the destruction of personnel security files was imposed by DOE. Second, PSD has one box containing personnel security files that have been inactive since the 1950's which has not been destroyed. When a request is made under the FOIA for older records, a PSD employee searches this box. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Margaret Todd, Administrative Assistant, PSD, and Linda Lazarus, OHA Staff Attorney, (January 2, 1997).

(6)As detailed above, a FOIA specialist at the Headquarters' FOIA Office indicated that these records were not at Headquarters, and the Appellant's FOIA request was forwarded to the National Personnel Records Center in St. Louis, Missouri, for issuance of a direct response to Ms. Coles.

(7)As set forth in Footnote 3, based on information received from the Headquarters' FOIA Specialist indicating that Mr. Coles' personnel security file might be in Albuquerque, the Oak Ridge FOIA officer requested that Albuquerque conduct a search for records and issue a direct response to Ms. Coles. In its determination, Albuquerque indicated that it had no records concerning Mr. Coles. It also indicated that personnel security files that have been inactive for ten years are generally destroyed.

Case No. VFA-0254, 26 DOE ¶ 80,149

January 14, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Digital City Communications, Inc.

Date of Filing:December 19, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0254

On December 19, 1996, Digital City Communications, Inc. (Digital) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it by the Oakland Operations Office (Oakland) of the Department of Energy (DOE) on December 6, 1996. In that determination, Oakland denied a request filed by Digital on October 24, 1996, under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If the present Appeal were granted, the DOE would be ordered to release in its entirety the information that was withheld in the December 6, 1996 determination.

The FOIA requires that agency records which are held by a covered branch of the federal government, and which have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). In addition to this requirement, the FOIA lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In a submission dated October 24, 1996, Digital filed a Request for Information under the FOIA (Request) requesting from Oakland a copy of the manual pertaining to software known as Network Intrusion Detector (NID) and the executable code of NID (the software). The software was developed by the University of California, a DOE contractor, at the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory. Its function is to detect and analyze intrusions from individuals not authorized to use a computer, or unauthorized or suspicious activities by authorized users. In its December 6, 1996 determination letter (Determination Letter), Oakland denied Digital's request citing Exemption 4 of the Freedom of Information Act. Oakland stated that, "[t]he NID software package is currently in a development stage. Since it is also a candidate for future technology transfer possibilities, it is not available for general release at this time." See Determination Letter.

In its December 19, 1996 Appeal, Digital argues that (i) Exemption 4 is not applicable to the information at issue, (ii) Oakland's determination was vague and unsupported, and (iii) Exemption 4's applicability had been waived due to the widespread distribution of the software.

II. Analysis

As explained below, because Oakland failed to examine whether the NID software constitutes a "record" under the FOIA, and whether the manual and the software are "agency records," we are remanding the case in order that it may make those determinations. Further, Oakland has failed to adequately justify its determination that the software and manual are exempt from release under Exemption 4, as it did not provide any analysis of whether the University of California would suffer competitive harm through its release. Nor did Oakland state whether any non-exempt material could be segregated for release. Therefore, we are remanding this matter to Oakland for a new determination, for the following reasons.

Before we can consider the applicability of Exemption 4 to the withheld information, we must first determine whether that information constitutes a "record" for FOIA purposes. If the information in question does not constitute a record, the FOIA is inapplicable and we cannot mandate the release of the software and manual. For the reasons discussed below, we are unable to render a determination on this threshold issue based on the state of the record before us and will remand the case for further review and investigation. However, we are providing additional comments which are intended to guide Oakland in its new determination in this matter.

A. Records and Agency Records

In this case, we must initially consider whether the software at issue is a record, by using the guidance laid out in John Gilmore, 24 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1994) (Gilmore) and Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen & Hamilton v. Department of Health and Human Services, 844 F. Supp. 770, 781-82 (D.D.C. 1993) (Cleary).(1) Cleary held that a computer program is a record where the program is not generic word processing or prefabricated software but instead is uniquely tailored to manipulate a database so that the program is used to actually preserve information and perpetuate knowledge. See Cleary, 844 F. Supp. at 782. In Gilmore, we found that software which merely connected several geographically distant computers, allowing each user to interact with other users, was not a record. We found the software in that case to be a tool which neither contained nor manipulated information, but instead merely provided a method of access. The software did not contain a database, was not a source of information, and did not manipulate or preserve information in a database. See Gilmore, 24 DOE at 80,544.

Oakland has not made a determination in this case regarding whether the requested software constitutes a record under the FOIA. See Record of Telephone Conversation between Dawn Goldstein, Staff Attorney, OHA, and RoseAnn Pelzner, FOIA Officer, Oakland (December 26, 1996). We are remanding it for them to make a determination regarding this issue, applying the case law described above.(2)

If Oakland determines that the NID software is a record, it must then determine whether the software is an "agency record." In a two-part test, the Supreme Court defined agency records as documents which are (1) either created or obtained by an agency, and (2) under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. U.S. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-45 (1989) (Tax Analysts). The NID software and the manual appear to meet both of those criteria.

B. Adequacy of Exemption 4 Justification

Exemption 4 exempts from mandatory public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to qualify under Exemption 4, a document must contain either (a) trade secrets or (b) information which is (1) "commercial" or "financial," (2) "obtained from a person," and (3) "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765, 766 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). In National Parks, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit found that commercial or financial information submitted to the federal government involuntarily is "confidential" for purposes of Exemption 4 if disclosure of the information is likely either: (i) to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (ii) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. Id. at 770; see also

Critical Mass Energy Project v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1579 (1993) (Critical Mass). By contrast, information that is provided to an agency voluntarily is considered "confidential" if "it is of a kind that the provider would not customarily make available to the public." Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879. Because the information at issue in this case was submitted as part of a contract between the DOE and the University of California, this information is not considered to have been submitted voluntarily and is therefore considered "confidential" if it meets the test set out in National Parks. Cf. Nayar & Company, P.C., 23 DOE ¶ 80,185 at 80,710 (1994) (information submitted in response to request for proposal).(3)

Both the FOIA and the DOE regulations require reasonably specific justifications for the withholding of documents or portions of documents. Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Department of the Air Force, 566 F.2d 242 (D.C. Cir. 1977); National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Kleppe, 547 F.2d 673 (D.C. Cir. 1976); Data Technology Industries, 4 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1979). Thus, a FOIA determination that material should be withheld under Exemption 4 because its disclosure is likely to cause substantial harm must include the reasons for believing such harm will result to the competitive position of the person from whom the information is obtained. Larson Associated, Inc., 25 DOE ¶ 80,204 (1996); Milton L. Loeb, 23 DOE ¶ 80,124 (1993). In its determination letter, after Oakland explained the purpose of Exemption 4, it said simply that "[t]he NID software package is currently in a development stage. Since it is also a candidate for future technology transfer possibilities, it is not available for general release at this time." Determination Letter at 1. Thus, in this case, there was no explanation why release of the software and/or the manual would likely cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the software's creator, the University of California. (4) Alternately, Oakland could provide an explanation why the release of specific information within the proposal would impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future. See Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879.

Thus, we are remanding this case so that Oakland may give Digital a specific explanation as to why Exemption 4 applies to the information at issue in the present case. We also point out that the FOIA requires that "[a]ny reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided to any person requesting such record after deletion of the portions which are exempt . . . ." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b) (1982). See EPA v. Mink, 410 U.S. 73, 89, 91 (1973); Mead Data Central, Inc. v. Air Force, 556 F.2d 242, 259-62 (D.C. Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 927 (1978); Casson, Calligaro & Mutryn, 10 DOE ¶ 80,137 at 80,615 (1983). Segregation and release of non-exempt material is not necessary where it is "inextricably intertwined" with the exempt material so that release of the non-exempt material would "compromise" the withheld material, or where the amount of non-exempt material is small and so interspersed with exempt material that it would pose "an inordinate burden" to segregate. Lead Indus. Ass'n v. OSHA, 610 F.2d 70, 83-86 (2d Cir. 1979). Consequently, Oakland should consider whether non-exempt material can be released. (5)

Accordingly, we will remand this case to Oakland, which should promptly issue a new determination releasing any non-exempt information to the appellant. Though we are not upholding Oakland's initial determination, we still believe Oakland is in the best position to make initial determinations as to whether the information is a "record" for purposes of the FOIA. If so, Oakland should then determine whether the release of specific information within the proposal would impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the software's creator. In making the latter determination, Oakland should keep in mind that conclusory allegations of harm do not suffice to protect information from disclosure under Exemption 4. Lykes Bros. S.S. Co. v. Peña, No. 92-2780, slip op. at 13 (D.D.C. Sept. 2, 1993) (Westlaw, DCT database) (submitters "required to make assertions with some level of detail as to the likelihood and the specific nature of the competitive harm they predict"). For the reasons explained above, the present Appeal will be granted.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Digital City Communications, Inc., Case No. VFA-

0254, is hereby granted as specified in Paragraph (2) below.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the DOE's Oakland Operations Office, which shall promptly issue a new determination in accordance with the guidance set forth in the above Decision.

George B. Breznay

Director

Office of Hearings and Appeals

Date: January 14, 1997

(1)We note that the manual itself clearly appears to be both a record and an agency record under the FOIA. Therefore, the remaining issue with respect to the manual is whether Exemption 4 is applicable.

(2)Oakland should also be aware of the fact that in the opinion of the Department of Justice, one of the recent FOIA amendments, 5 U.S.C. § 552(f)(2), which takes effect March 31, 1997, appears to include software in the definition of a record. See FOIA Update at 2 (Fall 1996).

(3)DOE regulations set forth four additional criteria to be considered in determining whether information is exempt from mandatory disclosure pursuant to Exemption 4: (i) whether the information has been held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains; (ii) whether the information is of a type customarily held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains and whether there is a reasonable basis therefor; (iii) whether the information was transmitted to and received by the DOE in confidence; and (iv) whether the information is available in public sources. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(f).

(4)Oakland may also wish to determine whether other exemptions apply to the requested information. If DOE itself owns the software and could therefore suffer competitive harm through release of the requested material, Oakland may wish to consider whether the "qualified privilege" is applicable under Exemption 5. See Ball, Janik and Novack, 25 DOE ¶ 80,197 (1996). Further, it is possible, regardless of who owns the software, that it could be withheld under Exemption 2, which would prevent the release of information that could be used to circumvent a statute or agency regulations.

Moreover, the Cooperative Research and Development Agreements (CRADA) provisions of the National Competitiveness Technology Transfer Act of 1989, 15 U.S.C. § 3710a, could possibly provide additional protection to the information at issue. If that is the case, Oakland should consider the applicability of Exemptions 3 and 4 in this context.

(5)Digital also argues that because the NID software is available throughout the DOE and because DOE has released in general terms a flow-chart of how the software works, this is tantamount to public release. We do not agree. While information which is already publicly available generally may not be withheld, in this case, the software is not publicly available. DOE users must request a key from an NID client representative in order to gain access to the software. The documentation that Digital itself submitted indicates that redistribution of the software at this time is clearly limited to DOE. See Attachment to Appeal Letter. Further, release of a very general diagram of the software's workings is obviously completely different from public release of the software itself. Thus, we find that the NID software is currently not publicly available.

Case No. VFA-0255, 26 DOE ¶ 80,155

January 17, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Harold Bibeau

Date of Filing: December 23, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0255

On December 23, 1996, Harold Bibeau filed an Appeal from a determination issued to him under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) on December 4, 1996, by the Argonne Group(1) (Argonne) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In his Appeal, Mr. Bibeau asserts that Argonne failed to provide him with all of the responsive documents in its possession regarding his Request for Information (FOIA Request) dated May 28, 1996.

I. Background

In his FOIA Request, Mr. Bibeau requested from Argonne copies of documents relating to radiation or "drug-hormone" experiments conducted within the confines of the Oregon or Washington State Penitentiaries.(2) Mr. Bibeau included a list of three researchers, Dr. Carl Heller, C.A. Paulsen and Mavis Rowley, who he states were associated with these studies. Also included in Mr. Bibeau's FOIA Request was a list of individuals he claims served on various review boards, individuals who were connected with various DOE facilities during the period the experiments were being conducted, and individuals who worked for the AEC. Argonne, in its Determination Letter dated December 4, 1996, informed Mr. Bibeau that Argonne National Laboratory had conducted a search of its records but could not find any documents responsive to his FOIA Request.

In an October 12, 1996 letter to Argonne that Mr. Bibeau submitted with his appeal, Mr. Bibeau states:

Argonne was the receiving agency of Doctor Heller's published papers for archival storage. Argonne is the holder of records detailing correspondence between James Liverman and Sidney Marks in Dr. Liverman's 1975-76 attempt to establish medical follow up for the research subjects of both Dr. Heller and Dr. Paulsen's studies. Argonne was the home office of Douglas Grahn, Associate Director, Division of Biology and Medical Research. It was Dr. Grahn who solicited the assistance of Dr. Heller for the Life Sciences Committee, Space Science Board, [National Academy of Sciences/National Research Council].

To make myself perfectly clear: you have documents in your possession that are responsive to my FOIA request dated May 28, 1996.

Letter from Harold Bibeau to Argonne National Laboratory (October 12, 1996).

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. Butler, Vines and Babb, P.L.L.C., 25 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995); Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). The FOIA, however, requires that a search be reasonable, not exhaustive. "[T]he standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead, it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1485 (D.C. Cir. 1984). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was adequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To ascertain the extent of the search conducted for documents responsive to Mr. Bibeau's request, we contacted Argonne, who referred us to the personnel who conducted the search at Argonne National Laboratory. Memorandum of telephone conversation between Betty Lyon, Argonne, and Steve Goering, OHA (January 8, 1997); Memorandum of telephone conversation between Mark Masek, Manager, Publications and Record Services, Argonne National Laboratory, and Steve Goering, OHA (January 8, 1997). The lab's Publications and Record Services (PRS) searched the Argonne Records Management Database, the Argonne Publications Tracking Database, the Card Catalogue of ANL Publications, and the Center for Human Radiobiology (CHR) Box Inventory, using the keywords "Oregon, "Washington," "testic*,(3) "peni*" (for penitentiary), "human reproductive system(s)," "reprodu*," "Space Science Board," "drug," "hormone," "Grahn," "Heller," "Paulsen," and "Rowley." The Argonne Records Management Database tracks all lab records. The Argonne Publications Tracking Database tracks lab publications from 1991 to the present. The Card Catalogue of ANL Publications indexes lab publications prior to 1991. The CHR Box Inventory records the location of files in boxes received from the CHR for storage at Argonne. Based on the results of this keyword search, PRS then physically inspected the boxes, files, and publications that it thought might contain information responsive to Mr. Bibeau's request. No responsive documents were found.

The only potentially responsive documents that PRS identified but did not inspect were contained in a correspondence file in the custody of Dr. Douglas Grahn, who was mentioned in Mr. Bibeau's October 12, 1996 letter to Argonne. However, the lab's general counsel recently contacted Dr. Grahn in the process of responding to a subpoena ordering the production of "all documents relating to experimentation on prisoners at the Oregon State Penitentiary or in any prison in the State of Washington.(4) Dr. Grahn informed the general counsel that he "collected these materials in his role as a member of a committee reporting to the National Academy of Sciences and that the records became the property of that agency." Letter from Arthur Zilberstein, Esq., Argonne National Laboratories, to Kendall Zylstra, Berger and Montague (November 8, 1996).(5)

Finally, Mr. Bibeau stated in his appeal that he has documents in his possession that bear the following notation: "This document is maintained by Argonne National Laboratory. If you have any problems notify us." Appeal at 2. The appellant did not identify particular documents that contain this notation. However, in the process of analyzing Mr. Bibeau's Appeal, we searched the DOE's OpenNet Database, which tracks certain documents made publicly available after October 1, 1994, and which can be searched from internet address http://www.doe.gov/html/osti/opennet/opennet1.html. A search of this database using the query "heller" found references to 91 documents, and the query "marks AND liverman" found references to 52 documents. Many of these documents have been scanned electronically, and therefore can be viewed online. The pages we viewed containing scanned documents each had at the top the statement, "This document is maintained by Argonne National Laboratory. If you have any problems notify us." This statement may well be the source of the appellant's belief that Argonne has responsive documents in its possession. The underlined portion of the statement contained a hypertext link to a page where the user can send a message to Argonne. We sent a message to Argonne inquiring about the meaning of this statement. Argonne informed us that it does not maintain the original hard copies of these documents, but does maintain a server that houses electronic scanned versions of over 252,000 documents. Electronic mail from Michele D. McCusker-Whiting, Technical Support, Argonne, to Steven Goering, OHA (January 8 and 10, 1997). This was confirmed by information on several OpenNet pages that contained links to electronic versions of documents. These pages indicated that original documents are located at DOE's Coordination and Information Center in Las Vegas, Nevada. Although the electronic versions of the documents are likely subject to the FOIA, Argonne is not required to search through the electronic versions for responsive documents as they are publicly available through the OpenNet database at the internet address cited above. See Salomon, Inc., 18 DOE ¶ 80,125 at 80,573 (1989) (quoting Tax Analysts v. Department of Justice, 845 F.2d 1060, 1065 (D.C. Cir. 1988), aff'd 492 U.S. 136 (1989) ("agency need not respond to a FOIA request for copies of documents where the agency itself has provided an alternative form of access"); Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 150 (1989) (rejecting "argument that an agency has not ? withheld' a document under its control when, in denying an otherwise valid request, it directs the requester to a place outside of the agency where the document may be publicly available") (emphasis added). Of course, if Mr. Bibeau has difficulty accessing the OpenNet database, he may seek the assistance of the DOE in accessing the database, and if necessary the DOE can provide hard copies of documents to the appellant.

III. Conclusion

Based on the information provided to us, we have no doubt that Argonne conducted a search reasonably calculated to uncover material responsive to Mr. Bibeau's request. Accordingly, the present Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Harold Bibeau on December 23, 1996, Case Number VFA-0255, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0257, 26 DOE ¶ 80,156

January 23, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Cascade Scientific, Inc.

Date of Filing:December 24, 1996

Case Number: VFA-0257

On December 24, 1996, Cascade Scientific, Inc. (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on November 21, 1996 by the Richland Operations Office (Richland) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, Richland withheld information identified as responsive to the Appellant's November 13, 1996 Request under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA). This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information which may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

On November 13, 1996, the Appellant submitted a FOIA request to Richland seeking information relating to Request for Proposal No. 310769 (Proposal). (1) Specifically, Appellant requested documents containing specific pricing and equipment model numbers submitted by Sorvall and Beckman, the two firms that were selected under the Proposal.

In its November 21, 1996 Determination Letter (Determination Letter), Richland released two documents. The first was a purchase order for the Beckman class 1 centrifuge system and was released in its entirety. The second document was a redacted purchase order for the Sorvall centrifuge systems (Purchase Order). Richland deleted the unit costs for the class 2, 3, 4 and 6 centrifuge systems contained in the Purchase Order along with the total Shipping and Handling charge. (2) In its Determination Letter, Richland stated that disclosing the withheld information would allow a competitor to gain insight into Sorvall's unique pricing strategy and thus place Sorvall at a competitive disadvantage. The Determination Letter further stated that if specific pricing information were released to competitors, the government's ability to obtain the most favorable terms in future procurements would be impaired since companies would be less willing to risk disclosure of their bid information.

On December 24, 1996, the Appellant filed the present Appeal in which it contends that Richland's refusal to release the withheld information was improper. Appellant asserts that Sorvall's "unique pricing strategy" may result from violation of its General Service Administration Contract Agreement (GSA Contract Agreement). Consequently, without release of the withheld pricing information, Appellant argues that it has no way to evaluate whether the contracts awarded under the Proposal were proper and whether it was put at a competitive disadvantage due to Sorvall's violation of the GSA Contract Agreement.

II. Analysis

Exemption 4 exempts from mandatory public disclosure "trade secrets and commercial or financial information obtained from a person and privileged or confidential." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(4). In order to qualify under Exemption 4, a document must contain either (a) trade secrets or (b) information which is (1) "commercial" or "financial," (2) "obtained from a person," and (3) "privileged or confidential." National Parks & Conservation Ass'n v. Morton, 498 F.2d 765 (D.C. Cir. 1974) (National Parks). In National Parks, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit found that commercial or financial information submitted to the federal government under non-voluntary conditions is "confidential" for purposes of Exemption 4 if disclosure of the information is likely either: (i) to impair the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future or (ii) to cause substantial harm to the competitive position of the person from whom the information was obtained. Id. at 770; see also Critical Mass Energy Project v. NRC, 975 F.2d 871, 879 (D.C. Cir. 1992), cert. denied, 113 S. Ct. 1579 (1993) (Critical Mass). By contrast, information that is provided to an agency voluntarily is considered "confidential" if "it is of a kind that the provider would not customarily make available to the public." Critical Mass, 975 F.2d at 879. Information submitted in response to a request for proposal is not considered to have been submitted voluntarily and is therefore to be considered "confidential" if it meets the test set out in National Parks. See Nayar & Company, P.C., 23 DOE ¶ 80,185 at 80,710 (1994).

DOE regulations set forth four additional criteria to be considered in determining whether information is exempt from mandatory disclosure pursuant to Exemption 4: (i) whether the information has been held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains; (ii) whether the information is of a type customarily held in confidence by the person to whom it pertains and whether there is a reasonable basis therefor; (iii) whether the information was transmitted to and received by the DOE in confidence; and (iv) whether the information is available in public sources. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.11(f).

As an initial matter, we do not have any jurisdiction to hear contract claims and thus can not consider Appellant's arguments regarding the alleged illegality of Sorvall's prices. (3) See Painters District Council No. 55, 24 DOE ¶ 80,149 (1994). However, because Appellant's Appeal also challenges the correctness of the application of Exemption 4 to the withheld information, we have conducted a review of the withheld material.

In the present case, the portions of the Purchase Order withheld by Richland under Exemption 4 consist of the unit price for each of the centrifuge systems along with the total charge for shipping and delivery of the systems. This information is clearly "commercial" within the meaning of Exemption 4, and this information was obtained from a "person," since the definition of "person" includes corporate entities. 5 U.S.C. § 551(2). The issue to be determined therefore is whether the withheld information is confidential. (4)

In support of its determination, Richland and Battelle argue that because the centrifuge industry is relatively small and that the general prices of centrifuge systems are known, release of the unit prices of individual centrifuge systems and the shipping and delivery charges in the Purchase Order would allow a competitor insight into Sorvall's pricing strategy and thus cause competitive harm to Sorvall. See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Kyle Wright, Contract Specialist, Battelle, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (December 31, 1996). We agree with Richland and Battelle on this issue. Courts and executive agencies applying the National Parks test have long recognized that information which reveals pricing strategy can be withheld under Exemption 4. See, e.g., Burke Energy Corp. v. Department of Energy, 583 F. Supp. 507, 512 (D. Kan. 1984). In a competitive environment with relatively few competing firms, release of such information could enable rival firms armed with detailed information about the submitters' pricing strategy to undercut the submitters' bids and eliminate these firms from effective competition. Cf. Manuel J. Blanco, 14 DOE ¶ 80,116 (1986) (total revenue figures for companies in a small and highly competitive industry withheld because given other industry knowledge revenue figures could be used by a firm to undercut a competing firm's bid). Given the facts before us, we therefore find that release of the unit prices in the Purchase Order could cause competitive harm. (5)

The DOE regulations provide that material exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is permitted by federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1. However, in cases involving material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under Exemption 4, we do not make the usual inquiry into whether release of the material would be in the public interest. Disclosure of confidential information that can be withheld pursuant to Exemption 4 would constitute a violation of the Trade Secrets Act, 18 U.S.C. § 1905, and is therefore prohibited. See, e.g., Chicago Power Group, 23 DOE ¶ 80,125 at 80,560 (1993). Accordingly, we may not consider whether the public interest warrants discretionary release of the unit prices and other information properly withheld under Exemption 4. Consequently, Appellant's appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Cascade Scientific, Inc. on December 24, 1996, Case Number VFA-0257, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)1/ The Proposal was a solicitation issued by Battelle, the DOE contractor which operates Pacific Northwest Laboratories (PNL), to provide various centrifuge equipment to PNL. Two firms, Sorvall Instruments (Sorvall) and Beckman, Inc. (Beckman), were selected to provide equipment under the Proposal. Beckman was selected to provide a class 1 centrifuge system and Sorvall was selected to provide one class 2, one class 3, one class 4 and one class 6 centrifuge system.

(2)Richland released the total price listed in the Purchase Order for the Sorvall centrifuge systems.

(3)The DOE's Inspector General's Office may have jurisdiction to investigate the Appellant's claim that Sorvall's bidding practices regarding Request for Proposal No. 310769 were improper.

(4)The Determination Letter did not claim that the withheld information was subject to any privilege. Consequently, we need not consider whether the information could have been subject to any recognized privilege.

(5)In light of our finding of competitive harm, we need not determine whether the government's ability to obtain necessary information in the future would be harmed by disclosure of the withheld information.

Case No. VFA-0258, 26 DOE ¶ 80,159

January 31, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Eugene Maples

Date of Filing: January 2, 1997

Case Number: VFA-0258

On January 2, 1997, Eugene Maples of Hopkins, South Carolina, filed an Appeal from a determination issued on November 25, 1996, by the Office of the Inspector General (OIG) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination denied in part Mr. Maples' request for information submitted pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to release the withheld information.

The FOIA requires that agency records that are held by a covered branch of the federal government, and that have not been made public in an authorized manner, generally be released to the public upon request. 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(3). The FOIA also lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(1)-(b)(9); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(1)-(b)(9). The DOE regulations further provide that documents exempt from mandatory disclosure will nonetheless be released to the public if the DOE determines that disclosure is not contrary to federal law and is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

BACKGROUND

In 1993, Mr. Maples provided information to OIG regarding the State of South Carolina's alleged misuse of funds maintained by the Department of Energy. The monies were Petroleum Violation Escrow funds collected by the federal government from oil companies for violations of petroleum pricing regulations from 1973 to 1981. Funds not needed for direct restitution to injured persons are used to provide indirect restitution to overcharged customers. For this purpose, the states implement energy-related programs that benefit the general public. OIG investigated the allegations and submitted a report to the Department of Justice for appropriate action. The Department of Justice decided not to take any action on OIG's report and the case was closed.

Mr. Maples requested a "copy of the final report issued by the Inspector General's Office on the investigation of the misuse of Oil Overcharge funds by the State of South Carolina." Request Letter dated May 7, 1996 from Eugene Maples to Jane A. Payne, FOIA Officer, OIG. OIG released the report and its exhibits, but withheld almost all names and identifiers within those documents. Determination Letter dated November 25, 1996 from William H. Garvie, Assistant Inspector General for Investigations, OIG, to Eugene Maples. Portions of the documents were withheld because "[n]ames and information that would tend to disclose the identity of certain individuals have been withheld pursuant to Exemptions 6 and 7(C)" of the FOIA. Id. Mr. Maples appeals all of the withholdings, claiming that release of the information is in the public interest.

ANALYSIS

Both Exemptions 6 and 7(C) allow the withholding of information dealing with personal privacy. The former permits the non-disclosure of "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). Exemption 7(C) applies to a much narrower class of cases but has a less exacting standard that gives it somewhat more expansive coverage. Under Exemption 7(C), agencies may withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information . . . (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of a personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). Both of these exemptions require balancing the interest in personal privacy in the withheld information against the public interest in the same information. There are, however, two significant differences between Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Under Exemption 7 (C), the information must have been compiled for law enforcement purposes. In addition, because information may be withheld where there is only a reasonable expectation of an "unwarranted invasion of a personal privacy," there is a lower threshold of privacy interest employed in Exemption 7(C) than in Exemption 6, where the balance calls for information to be withheld only if there is a "clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy" (emphasis added). Because, as we find below, the documents at issue in this case meet Exemption 7's threshold (complied for law enforcement purposes), we need only examine the withholding under the standard of Exemption 7(C). See, e.g., Burlin McKinney, 25 DOE ¶ 80,149, at 80,620 (1995); K.D. Moseley, 22 DOE ¶ 80,124, at 80,550 (1992).

Applying these standards to the records in this case, we find that the information involved in this Appeal(1) were compiled for a law enforcement purpose. OIG was investigating whether South Carolina misused funds that were maintained by the DOE. The courts have held that where Inspectors General are investigating potential criminal activity, they are engaged in law enforcement activities for the purposes of Exemption 7(C) even if they conclude there was no criminal wrongdoing. Ortiz v. Department of Health and Human Services, 70 F.3d 729, 732-33 (2d Cir. 1995), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 134 L.Ed.2d 546, 116 S.Ct. 1422 (1996). We also have made extensive examinations of the Inspector General's activities in this area and found that they are law enforcement activities. See, e.g., Stoel Rives, LLP, 25 DOE ¶ 80,189, at 80,723 (1996); Robert Burns, 19 DOE ¶ 80,134, at 80,596-97 (1989). In this case, the investigation into potential criminal activity clearly demonstrates a relation "to the enforcement of federal law and ... a rational connection between the investigative activities and the agency's law enforcement duties" that meets the Exemption 7 threshold test. Western Journalism Center v. Office of the Independent Counsel, 926 F. Supp. 189, 191 (D.D.C. 1996).

Once the material meets the threshold standard in Exemption 7, we consider whether release of the withheld material would result in one of the harms listed in Exemption 7. Ferguson v. FBI, 957 F.2d 1059, 1065 (2d Cir. 1992). In this case, OIG believes release would harm the personal privacy of certain individuals, and it invoked Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Thus, the agency must perform the balancing test noted above. The OIG Determination Letter divided the withheld material into two categories: (1) names and (2) other information which might disclose individual identity. We will follow OIG's categories in this examination.

1. Names

OIG withheld all of the names in the report and its exhibits, except those of OIG employees, the Governor of South Carolina, President Bush, Vice President Gore, and FBI special agents. All other names in the report and its exhibits were withheld. As we have stated previously, a name by itself does not create a privacy interest that can be protected for the purposes of FOIA exemption analysis. The News Tribune, 25

DOE ¶ 80,181, at 80,700 (1996). Rather, the privacy interest exists when a name is linked with information which reveals something personal or private about an individual. Id. at 80,699.

In this case, most of the names in the report and its exhibits are witnesses who were interviewed in the course of the OIG investigation into Mr. Maples' allegations. We have found that witnesses and sources have a strong privacy interest in remaining anonymous. James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117, at 80,556 (1991); Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE ¶ 80,109, at 80,524 (1990); Jerry O. Campbell, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132, at 80,576 (1988). Linking a person with a potential criminal investigation could result in harassment and certainly would involve considerable embarrassment. Manna v. Department of Justice, 51 F.3d 1158, 1166 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, ___ U.S. ___, 133 L.Ed.2d 405, 116 S.Ct. 477 (1995); Wichlacz v. Department of the Interior, 938 F. Supp. 325, 333 (E.D. Va. 1996). The same is true for those who were interviewed during the investigation. Id.; McDonnell v. United States, 4 F.3d 1227, 1255 (3d Cir. 1993); Jon Berg, 22 DOE ¶ 80,140, at 80,587 (1992).

Conversely, the public interest in this information in this case is minimal. For Exemption 7(C), the Supreme Court has constructed a narrow public interest standard. Information falls within the public interest for the purposes of the FOIA only if release of the information is likely to contribute "'significantly to public understanding of the operations of the government.'" Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 775 (1989) (quoting 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(A)(iii)); see Department of Defense v. Federal Labor Relations Auth., 510 U.S. 487, 494-95 (1994). Release of the names in this case would add little to the public's knowledge about governmental activity. Rather, it is the information dealing with what happened, the government's investigation and conclusions, which serve the public need for insight into the workings of government. James L. Schwab, 21 DOE at 80,557. Thus, under the circumstances of this case, knowing the names of those who were interviewed regarding the alleged misuse of the oil overcharge funds would not appreciably assist the public understanding of government. In fact, both this office and the courts have found that withholding the names of witnesses better serves the public interest by allowing those witnesses to speak freely to government investigators without fear that their identities will be disclosed and that they will be subject to possible harassment. Kiraly v. FBI, 728 F.2d 273, 278-79 (7th Cir. 1984); Holy Spirit Ass'n for the Unification of World Christianity v. FBI, 683 F.2d 562, 564-65 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (per curiam); Lloyd R. Makey, 20 DOE at 80,523-24; The Die-Gem Co., 19 DOE ¶ 80,124, at 80,569 (1989).

Turning to the balancing test on these names, we find that in the present case there is little or no public interest in the additional information to be gained by release of the names. On the other side of the scale there is a considerable privacy interest in not being linked with allegations of potential criminal conduct (particularly when OIG has determined there was no criminal act). There is also a strong privacy interest in not being identified as a person interviewed in a criminal investigation. Thus, on balancing these facts, we find that the privacy interest of these individuals outweigh the public interest and that release of the names would pose an unacceptable breach of personal privacy. See, e.g., L&C Marine Transp., Ltd. v. United States, 740 F.2d 919, 922-23 (11th Cir. 1984) (witnesses); Southwest Resource Dev., 24 DOE ¶ 80,164, at 80,654 (1995). Accordingly, we find that OIG properly withheld these names under Exemption 7(C).

Notwithstanding these factors, Mr. Maples contends that there is a strong public interest that outweighs any intrusion into the privacy of the persons whose names were withheld. In particular, he states that "the material withheld should be made public in order that any and all false, fraudulent, and misleading statements can be refuted through 'sworn statements' by all individuals involved." He claims that "the personnel involved should not be concerned with releasing their names and their records if the information they provided is truthful and based upon the law or court decisions." Appeal Letter dated December 24, 1996, from Eugene Maples to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals, DOE.

We do not accept this argument. There is no evidence of fraud in the record of this FOIA appeal. Absent some special circumstance not apparent in this case, where the OIG finds no fraud or criminal violation, the privacy interest outweighs the public interest in the release of the names of persons investigated, and the public interest is satisfied by release of the facts and conclusions of the investigation. Robert E.

Caddell, 20 DOE ¶ 80,103, at 80,508-09 (1990).

Although we find that OIG properly withheld the names of witnesses it contacted in the course of its investigation, there is another set of withheld names that should be released. As we stated, OIG withheld almost all names mentioned in the report and its exhibits. For example, the name of the attorney at the Department of Justice to whom the original OIG oral report was made was withheld. We have previously held that federal employees carrying out their official duties have no privacy interest in having their names linked with their work-product unless it reveals something personal or private about that individual or there are other special circumstances. The Cincinnati Enquirer, 25 DOE ¶ 80,206, at 80,769 (1996); William H. Payne, 25 DOE ¶ 80,190, at 80,727 (1996). In another instance, the name of a person with knowledge of the Stripper Well funds was withheld, although the name appeared in the documents merely because Mr. Maples mentioned that he had spoken with him. Also, the name of the owner of a private, minority owned company was withheld. These people do not appear to be sources or subjects of the investigation. Based on our limited review of the documents, we believe that OIG may have improperly withheld these and possibly other names from the version of the report and its exhibits it provided to Mr. Maples. Therefore, we believe that the best course is to allow OIG, which is most familiar with the report and its exhibits, to determine whether any additional names that were withheld may be released. The names of persons that do not appear to be sources or subjects of the investigation, should be released unless OIG is able to provide a more detailed justification for its withholding of the names of those other than witnesses.

2. Other Information

OIG also withheld other information. This includes, but is not limited to, job titles, consisting of the office and department in which the individuals worked, and pronouns. None of this material has an inherent privacy interest. Under Exemptions 6 and 7(C), names and other information that would tend to disclose the identity of certain individuals may be withheld. Although job titles in general do not constitute personal information, in some situations, a specific, unique job title may identify an individual. Southwest Resource Development, 24 DOE ¶ 80,164, at 80,654 (1995). But, where OIG determines that release of the name is appropriate, the job title should be released as well. We have previously stated that a pronoun which grammatically takes the place of the name of a person, but which does not name the person itself, is not personal information even when the name itself may be withheld. James E. Phelps, 20 DOE ¶ 80,169, at 80,703 (1990). However, in unusual and limited situations, might describe with a degree of certainty some individual (for example, if there was only one woman in an office) the pronouns could be withheld.

CONCLUSION

This Appeal will be remanded to OIG to determine whether any additional names that were withheld may be released. The names of persons that do not appear to be sources or subjects of the investigation should be released. In addition, OIG should release job titles where it determine the release of a name is justified. Finally, OIG should review the report and its exhibits to determine where pronouns can be released. If OIG determines that release is not warranted, it must provide a more detailed justification for its withholding of the names of those individuals who are not witnesses.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Freedom of Information Act Appeal filed by Eugene Maples of Hopkins, South Carolina, OHA Case No. VFA-0258, is hereby granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Office of the Inspector General which shall release the information previously withheld, or issue a new determination in accordance with the above Decision.

Case No. VFA-0260, 26 DOE ¶ 80,160

February 18, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Acadian Gas Pipeline System

Date of Filing: January 13, 1997

Case Number: VFA-0260

On January 13, 1997, Acadian Gas Pipeline System (Acadian) filed an Appeal from a determination issued to it on November 26, 1996, by the Department of Energy's Strategic Petroleum Reserve Project Management Office (SPRP). That determination was issued in response to a request for information that Acadian submitted on October 25, 1996 under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, Acadian asserts that SPRP failed to provide it with documents in its possession that are responsive to its request.

I. Background

On October 25, 1996, Acadian filed a request for information in which it sought "all records regarding the DOE's sale of certain Strategic Petroleum Reserve property, specifically, 67.2 miles of 36-inch pipeline identified as the Weeks Island Crude Oil Pipeline located in Iberia Parish, Louisiana and the attendant rights-of-way, servitudes, and easements." See Letter from Acadian to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) (January 9, 1997) (Appeal Letter). On November 26, 1996, SPRP issued a determination which stated that it was enclosing a complete file regarding "DOE's Capline Commercialization Project." See Letter from Durinda L. Robinson, SPRP to Acadian (November 26, 1996) (Determination Letter). However, SPRP indicated that certain portions of this document were withheld pursuant to Exemption 4 of the FOIA. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(4). Id. at 2. SPRP categorized the withheld portions as the "rental cost of the throughput rate." Determination Letter at 1.

On January 13, 1997, Acadian filed the present Appeal with the Office of Hearings and Appeals. In its Appeal, Acadian challenges the adequacy of the search conducted by SPRP.(1) Specifically, Acadian contends that immediately after reviewing the documents provided by SPRP, it became apparent that SPRP had omitted responsive documents in addition to the "throughput information" identified in the Determination Letter. Appeal Letter at 3. Acadian maintains that SPRP omitted appraisals assessing the fair market value of the Weeks Island properties, as well as other information. Id. Further, Acadian maintains that SPRP failed to provide it with a Vaughn index listing the documents withheld and a basis for withholding each document. Id. Based on these assertions, Acadian asks that the Office of Hearings and Appeals direct SPRP to conduct a new search for responsive documents and to produce a Vaughn index.

II. Analysis

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. Following an appropriate request, agencies are required to search their records for responsive documents. We have stated on numerous occasions that a FOIA request deserves a thorough and conscientious search for responsive documents, and we have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Hideca Petroleum Corp., 9 DOE ¶ 80,108 (1981); Charles Varon, 6 DOE ¶ 80,118 (1980). In cases such as these, "[t]he issue is not whether any further documents might conceivably exist but rather whether the government's search for responsive documents was inadequate." Perry v. Block, 684 F.2d 121, 128 (D.C. Cir. 1982) (emphasis in original).

To determine whether an agency's search was reasonable, we must examine its actions under a "standard of reasonableness." McGehee v. CIA, 697 F.2d 1095, 1100-01 (D.C. Cir. 1983), modified in part on rehearing, 711 F.2d 1076 (D.C. Cir. 1983). This standard "does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985). Furthermore, the determination of whether a search was reasonable is "dependent upon the circumstances of the case." Founding Church of Scientology v. National Security Agency, 610 F.2d 824, 834 (D.C. Cir. 1979).

As stated above, Acadian alleges that SPRP omitted responsive information in addition to the "throughput information" identified in its Determination letter. Appeal Letter at 3. Acadian asserts that it was only after reviewing the documents released to it by SPRP that Acadian discovered the probable existence of other responsive documents. Appeal Letter at 3. In reviewing the present Appeal, we contacted officials at SPRP to ascertain the extent of the search that had been performed. Upon receiving Acadian's Request for Information, the Realty Officer at SPRP conducted a manual search of her files. She located a complete file containing information regarding the DOE's Capline Commericalization Project. SPRP released some of this information to Acadian, but withheld the throughput information described above, under Exemption 4 of the FOIA. However, SPRP has informed us that other responsive documents, namely the appraisals referenced in Acadian's Appeal letter, do exist, and were among the withheld information but were not identified. Based on our conversation with SPRP, it is not clear whether further additional responsive documents now exist.

Under these circumstances, we find that this FOIA request has not been subjected to a search sufficiently thorough and conscientious to meet the established standards of reasonableness. See David Hackett, 24 DOE ¶ 80,166 (1995); Robert Heitman, 24 DOE ¶ 80,152 (1995). Since SPRP failed to identify the existence of other responsive documents, we cannot at this time find that the search has been adequate. Consequently, we will remand this matter to SPRP so that it may conduct a new search consistent with the guidance provided in this Decision. SPRP should issue a new determination which identifies all responsive documents and justifies any withholdings. Acadian may, if it wishes, appeal the new determination.

In addition to a new search, Acadian requests that it be provided with a Vaughn index, i.e. an index identifying each responsive document, the exemption under which it is being withheld and an explanation of why that exemption is applicable. On previous occasions, we have stated that, although such an index may be required when an agency is in litigation with a FOIA requester, this degree of specificity is not required at the administrative stages of a FOIA request. See, e.g., Rockwell International, 21 DOE ¶ 80,105 at 80,527 (1991); Natural Resources Defense Council, 20 DOE ¶ 80,145 at 80,627 (1990). At the administrative levels, determinations need only include a general description of the withheld material, and a statement of the reason for withholding each document. Therefore, we reject Acadian's request for a Vaughn index. However, as stated above, in its new determination SPRP should provide Acadian with a general description of all withheld information and the reasons for any withholdings.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Acadian Gas Pipeline System on January 13, 1997, is granted as specified in paragraph (2).

(2) This matter is remanded to the Department of Energy's Strategic Petroleum Reserve Project Management Office so that it may issue a new determination regarding any documents that may be responsive to the Acadian Gas Pipeline System's October 25, 1996 FOIA Request.

in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0261, 26 DOE ¶ 80, 162

February 20, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: STAND of Amarillo, Inc.

Date of Filing: January 22, 1997

Case Number: VFA-0261

On January 22, 1997, the Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) received an Appeal filed by STAND of Amarillo, Inc. (STAND) from a determination issued to it by the Freedom of Information Officer at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Albuquerque Operations Office (hereinafter referred to as "the Officer"). The Officer's determination was issued in response to a request for information that was submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. The FOIA generally requires that documents held by the federal government be released to the public upon request. The Appeal, if granted, would require the Officer to release 91 documents to STAND and to conduct a further search for documents responsive to its request.

I. Background

On November 2, 1995, STAND (Serious Texans Against Nuclear Dumping) filed a FOIA request with the Albuquerque Operations Office (DOE/AL). In that request, STAND sought access to 96 specifically described documents that Mason & Hanger Corp. (formerly Mason & Hanger - Silas Mason) (M&H) produced during the discovery phase of a licensing proceeding before the Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission (TNRCC). M&H is the Management and Operations contractor for the DOE's Pantex facility near Amarillo, Texas. In this proceeding, the TNRCC considered applications for hazardous waste and water quality permits submitted in connection with the operation of the Pantex plant. (1)

In its response to STAND's request, DOE/AL determined that the requested documents were not "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA because the documents were part of M&H's legal files and by the terms of the Management and Operations contract were the property of M&H. In a Decision and Order issued on February 12, 1996, we found that the DOE/AL's determination was premature and we remanded the matter to that Office to complete the search for responsive documents. STAND of Amarillo, Inc., 25 DOE ¶ 80,167 (1996) (STAND I).

The DOE/AL completed its search and issued a second determination to STAND. In that determination, DOE/AL stated that one of the 96 requested documents had been located in the DOE's Amarillo Area Office, and that four additional documents remained in M&H's legal files, but had either originated with or had been received by DOE officials. These five documents were provided to STAND in their entirety. With regard to the remaining 91 documents, DOE/AL reiterated its previous determination that these materials are not agency records because they are part of M&H's internal legal files, which under the terms of M&H's contract with the DOE are the property of the contractor.

In response to an appeal by STAND, the OHA issued a second Decision and Order in this matter on August 9, 1996. STAND of Amarillo, Inc., 26 DOE ¶ 80,105 (1996) (STAND II). In that Decision, we found that circumstances had changed since the request was filed. The TNRCC permits had been issued. We cited a letter dated February 2, 1996 from Karen Richardson, M&H's Chief Counsel, to STAND. We said that pursuant to the provisions of the letter, "once the [hazardous waste and water quality] permits have been issued, both DOE and Mason & Hanger would review STAND's request ?in terms of what documents would have been available under the FOIA absent the ... [TNRCC] case proceeding.'" 26 DOE at 80,105, citing M&H's February 2 letter. Because we believed that such a review could result in the release of the requested documents to STAND, we remanded this case to the DOE/AL.

In a determination issued to STAND on December 12, 1996, the Officer stated that after our August 9 remand, another search for responsive documents was performed. The Officer added that no additional documents were located, and that the 91 documents remained in M&H's legal files and were therefore not subject to the FOIA.

On January 22, 1997, STAND filed the current Appeal. In its submission, STAND contends that the material it requested is subject to the FOIA because the DOE has either possession of, or control over, the 91 documents, and that copies of these documents in the DOE's possession were not located because of an inadequate search.

Because the record in this proceeding was unclear as to the results of our August 9 remand, we contacted DOE officials in Albuquerque and Amarillo. We were informed that the review by M&H and DOE officials that was discussed in STAND II had not occurred. Apparently the review offered in the February 2, 1996 letter from the M&H Chief Counsel to STAND was intended by M&H to be part of a proposed agreement by which STAND was to provide M&H with certain documents in STAND's possession. Because STAND did not provide these documents or otherwise respond to M&H's letter, M&H declined to perform the review discussed in STAND II. See telephone memoranda of February 4, 1997 conversation between James Snyder, DOE/AL and Robert Palmer, OHA Staff Attorney, and February 6, 1997 conversation between Clinton Fitts, DOE Amarillo Area Office and Mr. Palmer.

II. Analysis

A. Adequacy of the Search

In responding to a request for information under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990) (Truitt). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. The fact that the results of a search may not meet with the requester's expectations does not necessarily mean that the search was inadequate. Robert Hale, 25 DOE ¶ 80,101 at 80,501 (1995). Instead, in evaluating the adequacy of a search, our inquiry generally focuses on the scope of the search that was performed. See, e.g., Richard J. Levernier, 25 DOE ¶ 80,102 (1995).

Given the totality of the circumstances in this case, including the fact that a number of searches were performed, we find that STAND has received an adequate search for documents responsive to its request. As previously stated, in STAND I we remanded this matter to the DOE/AL so that Office could perform a more complete search. As a result of that remand, five of the 96 requested documents were identified as responsive and provided to STAND. After our remand in STAND II, a second search was performed. That search included the offices of the Assistant Area Manager for Projects & Environmental Management. The request was also referred to M&H officials at the Pantex facility. See memorandum of February 13, 1997 telephone conversation between Mr. Fitts and Mr. Palmer. There is nothing in the record to indicate that a third search would result in the identification and release of additional responsive documents. We therefore reject STAND's claim that the search for responsive documents was inadequate.

B. Agency Records

STAND also claims that the 91 documents in the possession of M&H are subject to the FOIA as agency records because they are under the control of the DOE. As support for this argument, STAND contends that the DOE produced these documents for STAND's examination during the discovery portion of the TNRCC regulatory proceeding.

The appropriate test of whether a document is an agency record for purposes of the FOIA was set forth by the U.S. Supreme Court in United States Department of Justice vs. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-45 (1989). In that decision, the Court stated that documents are "agency records" for FOIA purposes if they (1) were created or obtained by an agency, and (2) are under agency control at the time of the FOIA request. The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch..., or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). In addition, where an agreement between the DOE and a prime contractor provides that documents relating to work under the contract shall be the property of the government, such records shall be subject to disclosure under the DOE regulations. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e)(1).

M&H, which is a privately owned and operated corporation, is clearly not an "agency" as that term is defined in the FOIA. Moreover, the language of the contract between M&H and the DOE supports the Officer's determination that the 91 documents are not subject to disclosure under the FOIA. That contract provides, in pertinent part, that:

(a) ... [e]xcept as provided in paragraph (b) of this clause ... , all records acquired or generated by the Contractor in performance of this contract shall be the property of the Government and shall be delivered to the Government ... as the Contracting Officer may from time to time direct ....

(b) ... The following records ... are the property of the Contractor and not within the scope of paragraph (a) above:

(6) [p]rivileged or confidential Contractor financial or legal information....

(7) Internal legal files;

STAND contends that the term "internal legal files" should be interpreted as including only documents that are subject to the attorney-client or the attorney work product privileges. As described in STAND's initial request, the 91 documents appear to consist of internal communications between M&H employees concerning waste disposal and other environmental issues.

We do not find STAND's interpretation of clause b(7) of the contract to be convincing. Instead, clause b(6) of the contract must be considered in order to interpret clause b(7) properly. Clause b(6) is the one that includes documents that are subject to the attorney-client and the attorney work product privileges. Because we do not believe that the parties would intentionally include a redundant clause in the contract, we do not agree with STAND that clause b(7) applies only to privileged legal documents. Moreover, the record does not support STAND's assertion that the 91 documents were produced by the DOE in conjunction with the TNRCC regulatory proceeding. Instead, we conclude that the records were and are M&H's records and were and are in the sole possession of M&H. When M&H's attorneys produced the documents during discovery, those documents were removed from the contractor's environmental files and placed in its legal files. See memorandum of February 13, 1997 telephone conversation between Mr. Fitts and Mr. Palmer. We find that, at the time of the request, the withheld documents resided in M&H's legal files and nowhere else, and were therefore not owned by the DOE under the contract.

Finally, STAND argues that because the 91 documents discuss environmental and health issues, they should be determined to be subject to disclosure under the DOE regulations. In support of this claim, STAND cites 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e). That regulation states, in pertinent part, that "(1) [w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. 552(b)....(3) The policies stated in this paragraph: ... (ii) Will be applied by DOE to maximize public disclosure of records that pertain to concerns about the environment, public health or safety ...."

We do not agree with STAND's interpretation of this regulatory provision. Absent specific language in this provision to the contrary, we do not believe that in enacting § 1004.3(e)(3)(ii) the DOE intended to alter the terms of its contracts concerning what documents are the property of the DOE and what documents are the property of the contractor. Instead, we conclude that when a contract provides that records involving environmental or safety concerns are the property of the government, § 1004.3(e)(3)(ii) directs the agency to make those records public unless they are exempt. As stated above, the 91 documents are not the property of the government under the terms of the contract. We therefore reject STAND's contention that the documents are subject to disclosure pursuant to 10 C.F.R. § 1004.3(e).

III. Conclusion

STAND has failed to demonstrate that the DOE's search for responsive documents was inadequate or that the 91 documents are subject to release under the FOIA or under DOE regulations. For the reasons set forth above, we will therefore deny STAND's appeal. (2)

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by STAND of Amarillo, Inc. on January 22, 1997 is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are located, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0262, 26 DOE ¶ 80, 161

February 20, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

APPEAL

Name of Petitioner:William H. Payne

Date of Filing: January 22, 1997

Case Number: VFA-0262

On January 22, 1997, William H. Payne (Payne or the Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on December 4, 1996, by the Albuquerque Operations Office (Albuquerque) of the Department of Energy (DOE) in response to a request for information submitted under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In his Appeal, Payne requests that we direct Albuquerque to (1) release legal invoices it withheld under Exemption 5 of the FOIA, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5), on the grounds of the attorney work-product privilege; (2) search for certain records responsive to the Appellant's FOIA request in the legal files of a government contractor; and (3) identify and produce records that would indicate whether a named former DOE official had been charged with sexual harassment or had been the subject of a "security clearance action."

The FOIA requires that documents held by federal agencies generally be released to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that may be withheld at the discretion of an agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552 (b). DOE regulations further provide that a document exempt from disclosure under the FOIA shall nonetheless be released to the public whenever DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

BACKGROUND

On October 16, 1996, the Appellant submitted a FOIA request seeking access to the following:

(1) invoices submitted by private law firms to Sandia National Laboratories (Sandia National Laboratories and Sandia Corporation will both be referred to as "Sandia") (1) for the defense of a sexual harassment lawsuit involving Sandia employees;

(2) investigative reports concerning the plaintiff's allegations of sexual harassment in the Sandia litigation; and

(3) records indicating whether a former DOE official had been accused of sexual harassment or the subject of a "security clearance action."

On December 4, 1996, Albuquerque issued a determination letter responding to this FOIA request. In response to the Appellant's request for legal invoices, Albuquerque provided the names of two law firms that Sandia had retained to defend the sexual harassment law suit and provided the dollar amount paid to these firms. The actual invoices were withheld in their entirety under Exemption 5 of FOIA on the grounds of attorney work-product privilege.

Albuquerque indicated that there were no agency records of investigative reports concerning the allegations of the sexual harassment complaint. Albuquerque further stated that such records are maintained in the legal files of Sandia, and that these files are not owned by DOE.

Based on Exemptions 6 and 7(C) of the FOIA, Albuquerque refused to confirm or deny the existence of records that would indicate whether a former DOE official had been accused of sexual harassment or the subject of a "security clearance action." Albuquerque supported this position by stating that:

Lacking evidence of an individual's consent, an official acknowledgment of an investigation by the agency, or an overriding public interest in the information, even to acknowledge the existence of such records pertaining to any named individual could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy.

Payne has appealed this determination on three grounds. First, Payne alleges that invoices prepared by private law firms and directed to a government contractor are not internal government records and are therefore not withholdable under Exemption 5 of the FOIA. Second, he claims that records concerning an investigation of allegations of harassment located in the files of a government contractor are subject to the FOIA and should be released as a matter of public policy. Finally, Payne contends that records that would indicate whether a DOE official had been accused of sexual harassment or the subject of a security clearance action are not withholdable under Exemption 6 or Exemption 7(C) of the FOIA.

ANALYSIS

As detailed below, we have determined that Albuquerque (1) properly withheld portions of legal invoices based upon the attorney work-product privilege recognized under FOIA Exemption 5, but failed to segregate and release non-privileged portions of the documents; (2) correctly asserted that records in the possession of a government contractor were not releasable under the FOIA because they were not agency records or under the control of DOE; (3) correctly refused to confirm or deny the existence of records that would indicate whether a former DOE official had been accused of sexual harassment or the subject of a "security clearance action."

I. The Attorney-Work Product Privilege under Exemption 5 of the FOIA

Albuquerque withheld in their entirety monthly billing invoices issued by private law firms for work performed defending a sexual harassment law suit for Sandia under the attorney work-product privilege of Exemption 5. The Appellant claims that Exemption 5 does not apply because they were not government documents. As detailed below, contrary to the Appellant's position, these invoices are intra-agency documents and portions of these statements were properly withheld. However, these invoices also contain non-exempt material that must be segregated and released to the Appellant.

A. The DOE's Role in Litigation Involving Sandia

Sandia is the contractor responsible for managing the Sandia National Laboratory for DOE. The contract between DOE and Sandia provides procedures for the defense and settlement of claims against Sandia. Under these procedures, Sandia must inform DOE when a suit has been filed against it arising from its performance under the contract. Absent special circumstances, DOE must reimburse Sandia for the costs and expenses of litigation, including judgments, court costs and attorneys' fees. The contract permits DOE to direct the litigation or substitute government counsel for the contractor's private counsel. To make informed decisions concerning the litigation, DOE reviews and evaluates the billing statements of Sandia's private counsel.

B. The Invoices

The monthly billing invoices at issue were prepared by two private law firms retained by Sandia to defend the sexual harassment law suit. The invoices were sent to Sandia for payment. The sample invoices that we examined set forth the date of the services provided, the initials of the attorney providing the services, a brief description of the nature of the services provided, and the daily number of hours billed by each attorney. At the end of the statement, the attorneys whose initials appear in the statement are identified and the total number of hours billed by each attorney are then multiplied by the particular hourly rate charged for each attorney's services. The monthly billing statements also state the amounts charged for various administrative services such as photocopying.

C. Exemption 5

Exemption 5 of the FOIA exempts from mandatory disclosure documents that are "inter- agency or intra-agency memoranda or letters that would not be available by law to a party other than an agency in litigation with the agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(5). A prerequisite for invoking Exemption 5 is that the document at issue be an inter-agency or intra-agency document. When documents have been created outside of an agency but pursuant to agency initiative, courts have held that such documents are intra- agency documents. See Soucie v. David, 448 F.2d 1067, 1078 n.44 (D.C. Cir. 1971); Joyce E. Economus, 23 DOE ¶ 80,182 (1994) (Exemption 5 is applicable to documents prepared by outside contractors).

Here, the invoices are intra-agency documents because of the relationship between DOE, Sandia and the private law firms. Pursuant to the DOE-Sandia contract, DOE generally reimburses Sandia for the cost of litigation, settlement and judgment. DOE may also exercise substantial control over the litigation. The billing records are used by DOE to monitor the litigation and determine whether it is necessary to impose additional controls. As DOE uses these invoices as part of its decision-making process, they are "intra-agency" documents within the scope of Exemption 5. The fact that these invoices were generated by private law firms retained to defend Sandia does not destroy the intra-agency aspect of these documents. See Rio Grande Sun, 15 DOE ¶ 80, 132 (1987) (Exemption 5 applies to invoices prepared by law firm representing DOE contractor); Tri-City Herald, 18 DOE ¶ 80,115(1989), (work-product documents of DOE contractor constitute intra-agency documents under Exemption 5).

D. The Attorney Work-Product Privilege

Exemption 5 of the FOIA encompasses documents covered by the attorney work-product privilege. Coastal States Gas Corp. v. Department of Energy, 617 F.2d 854, 862 (D.C. Cir. 1980) (Coastal States). The attorney work-product privilege protects from disclosure documents which reveal "the mental impressions, conclusions, opinions, or legal theories of an attorney or other representative of a party concerning the litigation." Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(b)(3); see also Hickman v. Taylor, 329 U.S. 495, 511 (1947). This privilege is limited. It does not extend to every written document generated by an attorney. In order to be afforded protection under the attorney work product privilege, a document must have been prepared either for trial or in anticipation of litigation. See, e.g., Coastal States at 865.

It is well settled that attorney fee information is normally not privileged. Indian Law Resource Center, 477 F. Supp. 144, 149 (D.D.C. 1979) (Indian Law). However, information contained in billing statements is privileged when it reveals litigation strategy, the thoughts or impressions of the attorneys, or the specific nature of the services provided by attorneys, such as research into particular areas of the law. Indian Law; C.D. Varnadore, 24 DOE ¶ 80, 123 (1994). See also Rio Grande Sun.

Applying these principles to the present case, we find that the invoices contain both privileged and non-privileged material. The non-privileged information contained in these documents includes the attorneys' identities, the hourly rates charged by each attorney, the total fees charged for the litigation, and the cost of expenses such as photocopying, reporting services and mileage. The privileged information contained in these documents consists of the descriptions of the specific services, the dates on which legal services were provided by each attorney, the monthly and daily totals of hours billed by each attorney, and the total monthly dollar amount charged for each attorney's services. This information is privileged because it would provide opposing counsel with insight into Sandia's litigation strategy by revealing the timing and intensity of the provided services. Rio Grande Sun.

E. The Public Interest in Disclosure

Under 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1, material determined to be exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA may be released if disclosure is determined to be in the public interest. We find that the public interest is best served by non-disclosure to insure that attorneys representing the government or government contractors are able to prepare their clients' cases free from the kind of "undue and needless interference" cited by the Supreme Court in Hickman v. Taylor. "Were such materials open to opposing counsel on mere demand, much of what is now put down in writing would remain unwritten." Hickman, 329 U.S. at 510-11. Without the protection of the privilege, attorneys representing the government would be handicapped from providing effective representation. Moreover, as detailed below, release of the work-product information is not in the public interest because it would impede the government's ability to monitor and control the cost of contractor litigation. Therefore, we find that the public interest does not mandate release of the material withheld under Exemption 5.

We further find that disclosure of this material would cause a tangible risk of harm to the interests protected by the work-product privilege. An individual who reads the privileged portion of these invoices will obtain information concerning Sandia's litigation strategy that is generally unavailable to a party in litigation. Future litigants with access to the privileged portion of the invoices will have an advantage over Sandia. Moreover, Sandia will be reluctant to provide privileged documents (including detailed invoices) to DOE if DOE releases these documents to the public. Thus, release of the work-product information would cause direct harm by impeding DOE's ability to monitor and control the cost of contractor litigation. See C.D. Varnadore, 24 DOE ¶ 80,123 (1994) (information contained in legal invoices issued by law firm representing DOE contractor is confidential under Exemption 4 because disclosure would impair DOE's ability to obtain such information in the future). This finding satisfies the reasonably foreseeable harm standard set forth by the Attorney General in 1993. Memorandum from Attorney General Janet Reno to Heads of Departments and Agencies (October 4, 1993).

F. Segregation

The FOIA explicitly mandates that "any reasonably segregable portion of a record shall be provided . . . after deletion of the portions which are exempt [from disclosure]." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b). Although the billing statements contain some information that may properly be withheld under Exemption 5, Albuquerque's blanket application of the privilege was improper. While the attorney work-product privilege applies to both facts and opinions, it does not apply to all information within a document. In the instant case, the invoices contain non-privileged information such as the attorneys' identities, the hourly rates charged by each attorney and the cost of expenses such as photocopying. Our cases have required segregation and the release of such non-privileged materials. See Oxy USA, Inc., 23 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1993).

In view of the foregoing, we shall grant the present Appeal to the extent that we will remand this matter to Albuquerque and require that it issue a new determination concerning these invoices. Before issuing this determination, Albuquerque shall review the invoices withheld in their entirety and delete under the attorney work-product privilege of Exemption 5 only those portions of the invoices that we have found properly withheld. Albuquerque shall then release any reasonably segregrable non-exempt information.

II. Agency Records

In his FOIA request, the Appellant sought investigative reports of the plaintiff's allegations in the Sandia sexual harassment lawsuit. Albuquerque responded by stating that there were no agency records responsive to this request, but that Sandia had records of investigations in its legal files. Albuquerque further indicated that DOE does not own these records.

The Appellant claims that he is entitled to obtain records in the possession of a contractor under the FOIA and that records concerning sexual harassment should be public as a matter of policy. The Appellant's position is without merit. As detailed below, the records at issue are not subject to the FOIA because (1) they are not "agency records" and (2) the contract between DOE and Sandia provides that Sandia own the records. Because DOE does not own or control these records, it does not have the authority to order their release.

The FOIA requires the release of non-exempt "agency records" in response to a FOIA request. To determine whether a document is an "agency record," we must resolve (1) whether the organization is an "agency" for purposes of the FOIA. and if not, (2) whether the requested material is nonetheless an "agency record." See, e.g., B.M.F. Enterprises, 21 DOE ¶ 80,127 (1991); William Albert Hewgley, 19 DOE ¶ 80,120 (1989); Judith M. Gibbs, 16 DOE ¶ 80,133 (1987) .

The FOIA defines the term "agency" to include any "executive department, military department, Government corporation, Government controlled corporation, or other establishment in the executive branch . . . , or any independent regulatory agency." 5 U.S.C. § 552(f). The courts have identified certain factors to consider in determining whether an entity should be regarded as an agency for purposes of federal law. In United States v. Orleans, 425 U.S. 807 (1976), a case that involved a statute other than the FOIA, the Supreme Court defined the conditions under which a private organization must be considered a federal agency as follows: "[T]he question here is not whether the . . . agency receives federal money and must comply with federal standards and regulations, but whether its day- to-day operations are supervised by the Federal Government." Id. at 815. In other words, an organization will be considered a federal agency only where its structure and daily operations are subject to substantial federal control. See Ciba-Geigy Corp. v. Matthews, 428 F. Supp. 523, 528 (S.D.N.Y. 1977). Subsequently, the Supreme Court ruled that the Orleans standard provides the appropriate basis for ascertaining whether an organization is an "agency" in the context of a FOIA request for "agency records." Forsham v. Harris, 445 U.S. 169, 180 (1980) (Forsham). See also Washington Research Project, Inc. v. HEW, 504 F.2d 238, 248 (D.C. Cir. 1974), cert. denied, 421 U.S. 963 (1975) (degree of independent governmental decision-making authority considered); Rocap v. Indiek, 539 F.2d 174 (D.C. Cir. 1976).

Under its contractual relationship with DOE, Sandia is the prime contractor responsible for maintaining and operating the Sandia National Laboratory. While DOE obtained Sandia's services and exercises general control over the contract work, it does not supervise Sandia's day-to-day operations. We therefore conclude that Sandia is not an "agency" subject to the FOIA.(2) Thus, the records do not qualify as "agency records" under the test set forth by the federal courts. See Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 145-46 (1989); see also Forsham, 445 U.S. at 185-86; Kissinger v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136, 150-51 (1980).

Even if contractor-acquired or contractor-generated records fail to qualify as "agency records," they may still be subject to release if the contract between the DOE and that contractor provides that the document in question is the property of the agency. The DOE FOIA regulations provide that "[w]hen a contract with DOE provides that any records acquired or generated by the contractor in its performance of the contract shall be the property of the Government, DOE will make available to the public such records that are in the possession of the Government or the contractor, unless the records are exempt from public disclosure under 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)." 10 C.F.R. 1004.3(e)(1).

We therefore next look to the contract between DOE and Sandia to determine the status of such records. Clause H-18 establishes the ownership of records relating to work performed under the contract. This clause provides that, as a general matter, DOE owns the records acquired or generated by Sandia in the performance of the contract. However, the contract specifically provides that Sandia owns, inter alia, personnel records of individual employees, records relating to allegations, investigations and resolution of employee misconduct (including charges of discrimination), and internal legal files.(3) We find that any documents in Sandia's possession that would reflect investigations of allegations of sexual harassment would fall within the categories of documents described above owned by Sandia under the contract. Therefore, unless such documents are submitted to the DOE, these records would be contractor's records, which are not subject to release under the DOE regulations. Accordingly, we find that the records relating to an investigation of allegations of sexual harassment are neither "agency records" within the meaning of the FOIA, nor subject to release under DOE regulations.

III. Albuquerque's Refusal to Confirm or Deny the Existence of Records Regarding a Named Individual

Relying upon Exemptions 6 and 7(C) of the FOIA, Albuquerque refused to confirm or deny the existence of records that would indicate whether a former DOE official had been accused of sexual harassment or had been the subject of a security clearance action. The Appellant contends that information concerning such matters is not withholdable under Exemptions 6 or 7(C). As detailed below, Appellant's position is without merit.

A. Glomar

An agency's statement in response to a FOIA request that it will neither confirm nor deny the existence of records is commonly called a "Glomar" response.(4) A Glomar response is justified when the confirmation of the existence of certain records would itself reveal exempt information. See Antonelli v. F.B.I., 721 F.2d 615 (7th Cir. 1983).

A Glomar response must be used consistently to protect the privacy of individuals who are the subject of FOIA requests as other responses will reveal exempt information. For example, if Albuquerque had admitted that documents responsive to the Appellant's FOIA request exist, but claimed that these documents were exempt from disclosure, it would have revealed the existence of records indicating that the named individual had been the subject of a sexual harassment complaint or a "security clearance action." Moreover, if Albuquerque provides a Glomar response only when exempt records exist, FOIA requestors will soon note the pattern and will be able to infer that Albuquerque only refuses to confirm or deny the existence of exempt records when such records actually exist. This would compromise the privacy rights of individuals who may be the subjects of third party FOIA requests in the future.

B. The Appellant's Contentions

The Appellant alleges that a named former DOE official had been charged with sexual harassment by sixteen women and that his security clearance had been revoked. Payne implies that the revocation of the individual's security clearance, and the individual's subsequent resignation, were connected to the charges of sexual harassment. Payne has submitted no evidence corroborating these facts. Nor has he alleged the existence of a criminal or civil investigation involving the named individual. The Appellant appears to be seeking records that would indicate whether this former DOE official had been the subject of sexual harassment complaints and security clearance actions to confirm his suspicions.

C. Exemptions 6 and 7(C)

Both Exemptions 6 and 7(C) allow the withholding of information dealing with personal privacy. The former permits the non-disclosure of "personnel and medical files and similar files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(6). Under Exemption 7(C), agencies may withhold "records or information compiled for law enforcement purposes, but only to the extent that the production of such law enforcement records or information . . . (C) could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of a personal privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(C); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(7)(iii). Both exemptions require a balance of the interest in personal privacy in the withheld information against the public interest in the same information.

There are, however, two significant differences between Exemptions 6 and 7(C). Under Exemption 7(C), the information must have been compiled for law enforcement purposes. In addition, because information may be withheld where there is only a reasonable expectation of an "unwarranted invasion of a personal privacy," there is a lower threshold of privacy interest employed in Exemption 7(C) than in Exemption 6 where the balance calls for a "clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy" (emphasis added). Because, as we find below, the documents at issue here meet Exemption 7's threshold test, we need only examine the withholding under the standard of Exemption 7(C). See, e.g., Burlin McKinney, 25 DOE ¶ 80,149 at 80,620 (1995); K.D. Moseley, 22 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,550 (1992).(5)

1. Law enforcement purpose

Information may be withheld under exemption 7(C) if an agency compiled such information as part of or in connection with a law enforcement proceeding. FBI v. Abramson, 456 U.S. 615, 622 (1982). An agency's enforcement of a civil statute is considered performed for a "law enforcement" purpose under Exemption 7. Rural Housing Alliance v. Department of Agriculture, 498 F.2d 73, 81 (D.C. Cir. 1974). Exemption 7 applies to records generated during a background security investigation performed in connection with federal employment, see e.g. Mittleman v. OPM, 76 F.3d 1240, 1241-43 (D.C.Cir. 1996), and to documents gathered by an Equal Employment Opportunity Office during an investigation of allegations of discrimination. Raytheon Company, 25 DOE ¶ 80,156 (1995). Thus, records that would indicate whether a former DOE official had been accused of sexual harassment or had been the subject of a security clearance action would fall within the scope of Exemption 7.

2. The balancing test

In determining whether the disclosure of law enforcement records could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy, courts have used a balancing test, weighing the privacy interests that would be infringed against the public interest in disclosure. Department of Justice v. Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 762 (1989) (Reporters Committee); Safecard Services, Inc. v. Securities and Exchange Commission, 926 F.2d 1197 (D.C. Cir. 1991) (Safecard); Lesar v. Department of Justice, 636 F.2d 472, 486 (D.C. Cir. 1980). This standard also applies when determining whether the disclosure of the existence of law enforcement records could reasonably be expected to constitute an unwarranted invasion of personal privacy. See Antonelli v. F.B.I., 721 F.2d 615 (7th Cir. 1983).

a. The privacy interest

An individual has a strong privacy interest in the non-disclosure of the existence of records that would indicate that he has been the subject of a sexual harassment investigation because of the stigma associated with being investigated. See Fund for Constitutional Government v. National Archives & Records Service, 656 F.2d 856, 865 (D.C. Cir. 1981); James L. Schwab, 21 DOE ¶ 80,117 (1991). The D.C. Circuit has acknowledged that investigation subjects possess substantial privacy interests because they may be embarrassed and suffer harm to their reputations if others learn that they are the target of a law enforcement investigation. Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1205.

An individual also has a strong privacy interest in the non-disclosure of records that would indicate that he has been the subject of a security clearance action.(6) Although being the subject of a security clearance action is not always stigmatizing, the disclosure of this fact may lead to harassment or embarrassment. If an individual has been the subject of a security clearance action, it increases the likelihood that this individual was granted a security clearance or denied a clearance after an investigation. If the fact (or the increased likelihood) that an individual has a security clearance were disclosed to the public, this individual could be targeted by terrorists or spies who might harass or threaten the individual to obtain access to classified information. It is well settled that an increased risk of harassment and annoyance constitutes an invasion of personal privacy. See Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1491 (D.C. Cir. 1984); See also Hemengway v. Hughes, 601 F. Supp.1002 (D.D.C. 1985) (information regarding citizenship of persons accredited to attend State Department briefings exempt from disclosure because disclosure could place an individual in jeopardy). Moreover, if an individual had been denied a security clearance, the disclosure of this information would be stigmatizing.

The Appellant implies that the named individual waived his privacy interest because he was a high-level DOE official. This position is without merit. A person does not forfeit his or her right to privacy simply by accepting employment as a government official. See Baez v. Department of Justice, 647 F.2d 1328 (D.C. Cir. 1980); Bast v. Department of Justice, 665 F.2d 1251, 1255 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (government officials do not surrender right to personal privacy although individual's position may increase the public interest in disclosure).

The Appellant further implies that the named individual has no privacy interest in the non- disclosure of these records because of the public nature of his alleged misconduct. This argument is also without merit. The named individual's privacy interest is not destroyed because the requester may have some knowledge of the facts contained in the requested records. Weisberg v. Department of Justice, 745 F.2d 1476, 1491 (D.C. Cir. 1984); L & C Marine Transp. Ltd. v. United States, 740 F.2d 919, 922 (11th Cir. 1984) (privacy interest is not lost because information may be discovered through other means). See also Davis v. Department of Justice, 968 F.2d 1276 (D.C. Cir. 1992) (requester has burden of proving that the specific material he seeks has been officially acknowledged or is in the public domain).

b. The public interest in disclosure

Having established the existence of a privacy interest, the next step is to determine whether there is a public interest in disclosure of documents of the type requested by Payne. We have held that the public interest in disclosure is measured not by the degree of the requester's interest in disclosure, but rather by "the right of the public to obtain the same information." The Die-Gem Co., Inc., 19 DOE ¶ 80,124 at 80,569 (1989) (quoting Nix v. United States, 572 F.2d 998, 1003 (4th Cir. 1978)). The Supreme Court has held that information that does not directly reveal government operations or activities "falls outside the ambit of the public interest that the FOIA was enacted to serve." Reporters Committee, 489 U.S. at 775. If a public interest is identified, then it must be determined whether the public interest in disclosure outweighs the privacy right of the individual.

Here, the Appellant apparently claims that the public interest in disclosure relates to the fact that he is trying to expose governmental corruption. Appellant claims that the named individual was formerly a high level DOE official who has been guilty of misconduct. We agree that there is a strong public interest in the disclosure of official misconduct. Here, however, there has been no proof of official misconduct. The Appellant's allegations concerning the named individual are unsubstantiated. The Appellant has failed to demonstrate (or even allege) the existence of a formal proceeding or criminal case against the named individual. Courts have held that unsubstantiated allegations of official misconduct do not establish a public interest in disclosure. See McCutchen v. HHS, 30 F.3d 183 (D.C. Cir. 1994); Beck v. Department of Justice, 997 F.2d 1489 (D.C. Cir. 1993) (no public interest absent evidence of employee wrongdoing or public investigation); William H. Payne, 26 DOE ¶ 80,144 (1996) (no substantial public interest in disclosure of information concerning possible investigation when allegations of official misconduct are unsubstantiated).

c. Balancing the interests

When an individual who has not been formally charged with a crime or other misconduct would be exposed as a target of a law enforcement investigation, the public interest in disclosure must be very strong to overcome the invasion of privacy. Fund for Constitutional Government, 656 F.2d at 866. Here, as detailed above, the public interest in disclosure of unsubstantiated allegations of official misconduct is weak. Thus, the public interest in disclosure of these records does not outweigh the privacy interest of the individual. Accordingly, if records indicating that the named individual was accused of sexual harassment or the subject of a security clearance action exist, the fact of the existence of these records may be withheld under Exemption 7(C).(7)

D.. The Glomar Response Was Appropriate

We find that Albuquerque was justified in providing a Glomar response to the Appellant's FOIA request because the confirmation of the existence of such records would itself reveal exempt information. Accordingly, we will deny the portion of the Appeal that relates to Albuquerque's refusal to confirm or deny the existence of enforcement records concerning a named individual.

CONCLUSION

In view of the foregoing, we shall grant the present Appeal in part. This matter will be remanded to Albuquerque with directions to issue a new determination. Before issuing this determination, Albuquerque shall review the legal invoices from the law firms that represented Sandia in the sexual harassment law suit and delete under the attorney work- product privilege of Exemption 5 only the descriptions of the specific services, the dates on which legal services were provided by each attorney, the monthly and daily totals of hours billed by each attorney, and the total monthly dollar amount charged for each attorney's services. Albuquerque shall release any segregable, non-exempt information. We will deny the remainder of the Appeal.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by William H. Payne on January 22, 1997, is hereby granted as set forth in Paragraph (2) below, and is in all other respects denied.

(2) This matter is remanded to the Albuquerque Operations Office to issue a revised determination concerning the legal invoices withheld in their entirety. In this revised determination, Albuquerque shall release any segregable, non-exempt information. Under the attorney work-product privilege of Exemption 5, Albuquerque may delete only the descriptions of the specific services , the dates on which legal services were provided by each attorney, the monthly and daily totals of hours billed by each attorney, and the total monthly dollar amount charged for each attorney's services.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(a)(4)(B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of busi ness, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)Sandia is the contractor responsible for managing the Sandia National Laboratory for DOE. Contract

No. DE-AC04-94AL85000. Under the contract, DOE exercises general control over the work performed at Sandia, but does not supervise day-to-day operations. The contract specifically details many aspects of the relationship between DOE and Sandia, including the ownership of records and procedures for the defense and settlement of claims against Sandia.

(2)Although Sandia is not an agency for the purposes of the FOIA, Sandia records could become "agency records" if they were obtained by DOE and were within DOE's control at the time the FOIA request was made. Department of Justice v. Tax Analysts, 492 U.S. 136, 144-46 (1989); see Kissinger v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 445 U.S. 136 (1980); Forsham, 445 U.S. at 182. In this case, the documents in question had not been obtained by the DOE and were not in the agency's control at the time of the Appellant's request. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Karen Griffith, Attorney, Office of Chief Counsel, Kirkland Area Office, DOE and Linda Lazarus, Staff Attorney, Office of Hearings and Appeals (February 19, 1997).

(3)The section of Clause H-18 that sets forth the categories of documents that belong to Sandia under the contract contains an exception for records contained in certain enumerated Privacy Act Systems of Records (Privacy Act records). These records belong to DOE. After examining the categories of Privacy Act records enumerated in this exception, and speaking to two Albuquerque employees, we are convinced that Albuquerque performed an adequate search for records responsive to the Appellant's FOIA request in these Privacy Act records and that no records were found. Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Ron O'Dowd, Office of Chief Counsel, and Linda Lazarus, Staff Attorney, Office of Hearings and Appeals (February 19, 1997); Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Elva Barfield, FOIA Officer, Albuquerque, and Linda Lazarus (February 19, 1997).

(4)"Glomar" refers to the first instance in which a Federal court upheld the adequacy of such a response. Phillippi v. CIA, 546 F.2d 1009 (D.C. Cir. 1976) (agency responded to a request for documents pertaining to a submarine-retrieval ship named the Hughes Glomar Explorer by neither confirming nor denying the existence of any such documents).

(5)Although it is unnecessary to reach this issue, Exemption 6 also permits the withholding of records concerning these issues. See Hunt v. U.S. Marine Corps,, 935 F. Supp. 46 (D.D.C. 1996) (information concerning an individual's security clearance withholdable under Exemption 6); Schonberger v. National Transp. Safety Board, 508 F. Supp. 941, 944-945 (D.D.C. 1981) (Exemption 6 protects identity of federal employees accused of wrongdoing).

(6)We understand the term "security clearance action" used by the Appellant in his FOIA request to include an action which involves the grant, denial, revocation or continuation of an access authorization.

(7)It is important to note that we could reach the same result by relying on those cases that hold that names of private individuals appearing in an agency's law enforcement files are "categorically" exempt from disclosure under Exemption 7(C). Safecard, 926 F.2d at 1205-06.

Case No. VFA-0263, 26 DOE ¶ 80, 163

February 24, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson

Date of Filing:January 24, 1997

Case Number: VFA-0263

On January 24, 1997, the law firm of Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson (Fried) filed an Appeal from a determination by the Albuquerque Operations Office (AO) of the Department of Energy (DOE) on December 24, 1996. In that determination, AO partially granted a request for information issued to the Appellant made under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. In its Appeal, Fried asks that we order AO to release the withheld material.

The FOIA requires that federal agencies generally release documents to the public upon request. The FOIA, however, lists nine exemptions that set forth the types of information that an agency may withhold at its discretion. 5 U.S.C. § 552(b); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b). The DOE regulations further provide that the DOE release to the public a document exempt from mandatory disclosure under the FOIA whenever the DOE determines that disclosure is in the public interest and not contrary to other laws. 10 C.F.R. § 1004.1.

I. Background

In its request for information, Fried sought copies of documents related to the DOE Request for Proposal No. RFP DE-RP04-96AL89607 (RFP). Specifically, Fried sought copies of the complete proposal submitted by Burns and Roe Enterprises, Inc., all responses to DOE questions provided by Burns and Roe, the initial and final "Best and Final Offer" submitted by Burns and Roe, and a complete copy of the contract awarded as a result of the RFP, including all modifications and supplemental agreements to the contract as of October 1, 1996. In the determination letter, AO enclosed a copy of the contract between Burns and Roe Enterprises, Inc. and the DOE. AO, pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3) (Exemption 3) and citing Subtitle B, Section 821 of the National Defense Authorization Act of 1997 (NDAA), P.L. 104-20, withheld the proposal and related information. AO stated that Section 821 of the NDAA bars release of the Burns and Roe proposal because it states that a proposal may not be made available to any person under Section 552 of Title 5 of the United States Code (the Freedom of Information Act) when the proposal has not been set forth or incorporated by reference in the contract.(1) AO stated that since the Burns and Roe proposal has not been set forth or incorporated by reference in the contract, it must withhold the remaining requested information.

In its appeal, Fried argues that AO should release the Burns and Roe proposal because the contract that AO awarded incorporated it by reference. Fried cites the following four examples of instances where the final contract incorporated elements of the Burns and Roe proposal:

(a) All Representations, Certifications, and other statements of offeror are explicitly incorporated by reference at Paragraph H.01, page (57) of the material disclosed (page references, unless otherwise noted, are to handwritten page numbers on the bottom, middle of each page);(b) Section J, Attachment B, page (127) et seq., "Work Breakdown Structure" (Part of the Contract Work Statement, see Paragraph C.01) bears the original RFP Number and appears to be taken directly from the Burns and Roe proposal;© Section J, Attachment F, page (173) et seq., "Small Business Plan" incorporates the Burns and Roe proposal (note parenthetical heading on page (173), "Contractor's Plan is incorporated herein");(d) The Statement of Work ("SOW") Section J, Attachment A, beginning at page (90), contains numerous revision bars not present in the RFP and must represent changes from the Burns and Roe proposal.

Fried also argues that the DOE has the discretion to release the requested material. With this in mind, Fried maintains that the FOIA is a disclosure statute and that discretionary decisions not to disclose must have a rational basis. Finally, Fried states that the contract the DOE released to it contains references to a contract modification numbered 001, and an "Exhibit B," both of which the DOE did not include in the copy of the contract it sent to Fried. Fried also states that the contract is missing pages 1 through 40 and page 168. Fried requests that we order release of these missing portions of the contract.

II. Analysis

As an initial matter, AO informed us that it mistakenly did not include the contract modification number 001 when it released a copy of the contract to Fried. Accordingly, we find that AO should release the contract modification numbered 001 to Fried. AO also clarified the confusion regarding the other missing pages and "Exhibit B" not included in the contract sent to Fried. AO informed us that "Exhibit B" referred to in boxes 15c/15d/15e of Standard Form 26 is actually "Section B" included in Attachment A, Statement of Work. Fried has received this document. Finally, AO informed us that the alleged missing pages were proposal instructions from the RFP and were never a part of the final contract. Since these proposal instructions were not part of the final contract, AO informed us that these pages were not actually missing from the copy Fried received from AO. At the very least, we find that this unusual numbering system in a final contract, in which there are different handwritten and typewritten numbers on the same page, to be very confusing. Since these pages contain only proposal instructions, AO should review these pages and either release them to Fried or provide an explanation as to why they are exempt from release.

Exemption 3 of the FOIA, cited by AO, allows agencies to withhold information if specifically authorized by another federal statute. However, the withholding statute must meet strict statutory guidelines. An agency properly invokes Exemption 3 only where the withholding statute "(A) requires that the matters be withheld from the public in such a manner as to leave no discretion on the issue, or (B) establishes particular criteria for withholding or refers to particular types of matters to be withheld." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3); 10 C.F.R. § 1004.10(b)(3). A statute falls within the Exemption's coverage if it satisfies either of its standards.

As stated above, Fried contends that the final contract incorporates the Burns and Roe proposal and, therefore, pursuant to the provisions of Section 821 of the NDAA, the DOE should release the proposal. In fact, AO confirmed that the awarded contract probably incorporates some proposal information. See February 20, 1997 Record of Telephone Conversation between Leonard M. Tao, OHA Staff Attorney, and Sam Espinosa and Terry Apodaca, AO. Because Section 821 of the NDAA does not bar the release of proposal information that has been incorporated into a contract, Exemption 3 does not apply in this case as a reason to withhold the proposal in its entirety. Therefore, we will remand this case to AO to either release the proposal information incorporated into the awarded contract or provide a detailed explanation for withholding any such information, including the examples Fried cites, and why Exemption 3 is applicable to them. Finally, on remand, AO may consider the applicability of other FOIA exemptions to the requested information.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson on January 24, 1997, is hereby granted as set forth in paragraph (2) below, and is denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Freedom of Information Authorizing Official of the Albuquerque Operations Office of the Department of Energy to either release copies of documents responsive to Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson's September 24, 1996 request for the proposal submitted by Burns and Roe Enterprises, Inc., related to the DOE Request for Proposal No. RFP DE-RP04-96AL89607 or provide a detailed explanation for withholding any responsive information. Finally, the Freedom of Information Authorizing Official must release the contract modification numbered 001 to the appellant.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review. Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

Case No. VFA-0264, 26 DOE ¶ 80, 165

February 25, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner: Lois Blanche Vaughan

Date of Filing: January 27, 1997

Case Number: VFA-0264

On January 27, 1997, Lois Blanche Vaughan filed an Appeal from a determination issued to her on May 3, 1996, by the Oak Ridge Operations Office (DOE/OR) of the Department of Energy (DOE). That determination concerned a request for information submitted by Ms. Vaughan pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA), 5 U.S.C. § 552, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1004. If the present Appeal were granted, DOE/OR would be required to conduct a further search for responsive material.

I. Background

Ms. Vaughan was employed by Tennessee Eastman Corporation (Eastman) in Kingsport, Tennessee from 1948 to 1956.(1) Eastman operated two sites at Oak Ridge from 1943 to 1947. From 1966 to 1968, she was employed by Holston Defense Corporation (Holston), a subsidiary of Eastman also located in Kingsport. Ms. Vaughan alleges that Eastman performed experiments for unknown agencies of the United States government at various times during her employment. See Letter from Laurie D. Mitchell, Esq., to Director, Office of Hearings and Appeals (OHA) (January 27, 1996) (Appeal Letter). Ms. Vaughan contends that she was exposed to radiation from several sources, including the shipment of radioactive material between DOE/OR and Eastman, while she lived in Kingsport. (2) On August 23, 1995, she filed a request for all records that referred to her alleged occupational exposure to radiation at Eastman or to radiation research conducted on Eastman employees. See Letter from Lois Vaughan to Privacy Act Officer, DOE/OR (August 23, 1995). On May 3, 1996, DOE/OR issued a determination informing Ms. Vaughan that no responsive documents could be located.(3) On January 27, 1997, counsel for Ms. Vaughan filed an Appeal with OHA contending that the search for documents was inadequate. See Appeal Letter.

II. Analysis

In responding to a request for information filed under the FOIA, it is well established that an agency must "conduct a search reasonably calculated to uncover all relevant documents." Truitt v. Department of State, 897 F.2d 540, 542 (D.C. Cir. 1990). Accord Oglesby v. Department of the Army, 920 F.2d 57, 68 (D.C. Cir. 1990); Master v. F.B.I., 926 F. Supp. 193, 196 (D.D.C. 1996) (Master). "The standard of reasonableness which we apply to agency search procedures does not require absolute exhaustion of the files; instead it requires a search reasonably calculated to uncover the sought materials." Miller v. Department of State, 779 F.2d 1378, 1384-85 (8th Cir. 1985) (Miller); accord Truitt, 897 F.2d at 542. We have not hesitated to remand a case where it is evident that the search conducted was in fact inadequate. See, e.g., Glen Milner, 17 DOE ¶ 80,132 (1988).

In reviewing the present Appeal, we first contacted the DOE/OR FOIA Officer to ascertain the scope of the search. Because Ms. Vaughan was never employed by DOE/OR, the FOIA Officer informed us that her employment records would not be found there. Nonetheless, the FOIA Officer searched for records by the requester's Social Security number, but did not find any responsive records. Because Ms. Vaughan attributed her alleged radiation exposure to the shipment of radioactive material between Oak Ridge and Kingsport, the FOIA Officer searched the DOE/OR Records Holding Area (7000 cubic feet of classified and unclassified records) for "any documents pertaining to the subject shipments as well as any reference to the Holston Defense Corporation, the Holston Valley Hospital, or Kingsport." Determination Letter at 1. The FOIA Officer then searched the files of the Oak Ridge National Laboratory Chemical Division. However, in accordance with DOE Records Management regulations, documents over six years old pertaining to shipments of radioisotopes have been destroyed. After seeking guidance from the requester, the FOIA Officer then contacted personnel at the Holston Army Ammunition Plant (formerly Holston Defense Corporation). Plant personnel referred DOE/OR to Department of Army officials at Rock Island, Illinois, who maintain historical information. These officials stated that to their knowledge, no radioactive materials were used at the Holston plant. Id. at 2.

DOE/OR did not perform a physical search for shipment records, labeling such an effort "burdensome." Shipment records at DOE/OR, if they exist, would be scattered throughout three plants, one of which has 300 buildings. There is no central files location, no index, and no database of these records.(4) In addition, DOE offices are not required to maintain records dating back 30 to 50 years, and thus it is not likely that such old records still exist. Therefore, we conclude that were we to order a search through thousands of unindexed files for records that likely do not exist, it would impose an unreasonable burden on DOE/OR. See Nation Magazine v. U.S., 71 F.3d 885, 892 (D.C. Cir. 1995) (concurring with the district court's determination that a request to search 23 years of unindexed files would impose an unreasonable burden on an agency)

We find that DOE/OR followed procedures that were reasonably calculated to uncover the material Ms. Vaughan requested. Miller, 779 F.2d at 1384-85. The fact that the search did not uncover documents alleged to be in the possession of DOE does not mean that the search was inadequate. See Master, 926 F. Supp. at 197. In addition, the requester has not provided us with any evidence that responsive documents exist. See Memorandum of Telephone Conversation between Laurie Mitchell, Esq., and Valerie Vance Adeyeye, OHA Staff Attorney (February 12, 1997). Personal belief is not a sufficient basis to support a finding that a search was inadequate. Glen Milner, 25 DOE ¶ 80,215 (1996). Accordingly, the Appeal should be denied.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed on January 27, 1997, by Lois Blanche Vaughan, OHA Case No. VFA-0264, is hereby denied.

(2) This is a final Order of the Department of Energy from which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552 (a) (4) (B). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.

(1)Kingsport is located approximately 100 miles northeast of Oak Ridge, Tennessee.

(2)Ms. Vaughan originally filed her request for information with the DOE Office of Human Radiation Experiments. That office forwarded her file to DOE/OR after investigation determined that her exposure may have been occupational and not experimental.

(3)With the determination letter, DOE/OR sent Ms. Vaughan documents explaining the agency's efforts to comply with the President's Executive Order regarding Human Radiation Experiments, and recommendations for compensation to the subjects of identified experiments.

(4)DOE/OR has offered to provide the requester an index of documents available in its reading room that pertain to a state-conducted study on environmental radiation dose reconstruction. This information may assist the requester in determining the level of radiation exposure of the population of Tennessee.

Case No. VFA-0265, 26 DOE ¶ 80, 164

February 25, 1997

DECISION AND ORDER

OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

Appeal

Name of Petitioner:Martha J. McNeely

Date of Filing:January 28, 1997

Case Number: VFA-0265

On January 28, 1997, Martha J. McNeely (Appellant) filed an Appeal from a determination issued on December 26, 1996 by the Richland Operations Office (Richland) of the Department of Energy (DOE). In that determination, Richland stated that it was unable to locate documents responsive to the Appellant's December 3, 1996 request under the Privacy Act of 1974, 5 U.S.C. § 552a, as implemented by the DOE in 10 C.F.R. Part 1008. This Appeal, if granted, would require the DOE to conduct another search for responsive documents.

I. Background

On December 3, 1996, the Appellant submitted a Privacy Act request to Richland seeking copies from the DOE of her medical and dental records along with any existing bone and tissue samples obtained from her. In her request, the Appellant stated that her parents had worked at the DOE's predecessors' facility at Hanford, Washington, and that she had received medical treatment at Kadlec Hospital and possibly other government facilities during the period 1946 through 1954. (1) The Appellant provided Richland with the names of her parents, her social security number and her date of birth. In its December 26, 1996 Determination Letter (Determination Letter), Richland stated that it had conducted a search for Appellant's medical and dental records using her name, date of birth and social security number but were unable to locate any responsive records. (2)

On January 28, 1997, the Appellant filed the present Appeal. In her submission, the Appellant argues that the search for documents was inadequate. The Appellant cites a number of studies that she believes she may have been involved in as a child in Hanford, Washington, and thus her involvement in these studies would have created medical records. Specifically, the Appellant asserts that she was a student at Lewis and Clark Elementary School in Hanford, Washington during 1948 through 1953 and believes that she was one of "an identified group of irradiated schoolchildren and children of Hanford workers." The Appellant also asserts that she may have been involved in an experiment named "Project Sunshine" which may have been connected with an entity referred to as the "Strontium" unit. The Appellant also asserts that she may have participated in "Project Gabriel," a study she asserts involved the uptake and retention of strontium and cesium in humans. The Appellant also apparently claims that she may have been involved with a study described in a "1951 report from St. Louis" which referenced a nationwide appeal for "tens of thousands of baby teeth." Nevertheless, the Appellant contends Richland provided no information concerning any of the above projects. Finally, the Appellant argues that the fact that Hanford discovered that her parents' medical records were transferred to DuPont indicates that her own medical records are still in the possession of Hanford.

II. Analysis

The Privacy Act requires, inter alia, that each federal agency permit an individual to gain access to information pertaining to him or her which is contained in any system of records maintained by the agency. 5 U.S.C. § 552a(d). DOE regulations define a system of records as "a group of any records under DOE control from which information is retrieved by the name of the individual or by some identifying number, symbol, or other identifying particulars assigned to the individual." 10 C.F.R. § 1008.2(m). (3)

We inquired as to the search that was conducted for records the Appellant requested. (4) See Memorandum of telephone conversation between Angela Ward, Richland, and Richard Cronin, OHA

Staff Attorney (January 31, 1997); Memorandum of telephone conversation between Yvonne Sherman, Richland, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (February 7, 1997). We were informed that a DOE contractor, the Hanford Environmental Health Foundation (HEHF), has possession of all of the available systems of records which could contain responsive material. HEHF possesses medical records on Hanford employees from the time period specified by the Appellant along with medical records from Kadlec Hospital, where Hanford employees and their families were treated. The Kadlec Hospital records are stored by the patient's date of birth, and a search was conducted using the Appellant's date of birth. No records were found. A search was also made of the Hanford employee medical records in HEHF's possession using the Appellant's and Appellant's parents' names and the Appellant's social security number. No records regarding the Appellant were found but evidence was discovered indicating that the Appellant's parents' employee medical records were among those that had been transferred by DuPont to Wilmington, Delaware.(5)

With regard to the Appellant's assertions regarding the studies in which she may have participated, a Richland official informed us that she had no knowledge of any documents existing in Richland regarding "Project Sunshine" or "Project Gabriel." See Memoranda of telephone conversation between Yvonne Sherman, Richland, and Richard Cronin, OHA Staff Attorney (February 7, 1997). Further, the only records in Richland regarding screening of elementary school children were whole body counts for background radiation performed beginning in 1963, which was after the period during which the Appellant reported that she lived in Hanford. Thus, no search was made regarding these records. The official further stated that she did not have any knowledge of agency records regarding any studies involving baby teeth. In addition, the official had knowledge of only one study using strontium at Hanford and that the study involved two male researchers as subjects.

Given the facts presented before us, we believe that Richland made a reasonable search for responsive material. However, given the Appellant's assertions regarding her possible involvement with human radiation studies, we believe that other DOE facilities may possess relevant human radiation documents. Since DOE Headquarters is best equipped to search for these records, we will remand this matter to DOE Headquarters so that it may conduct a search for responsive records which possibly may exist at other DOE facilities. (6) The Appellant's Appeal will therefore be granted in part.

It Is Therefore Ordered That:

(1) The Appeal filed by Martha J. McNeely on January 28, 1997, Case Number VFA-0265, is granted in part as set forth in Paragraph (2) below and denied in all other respects.

(2) This matter is hereby remanded to the Department of Energy's Headquarters Freedom of Information and Privacy Group so that a broader search may be made for medical and dental records regarding Martha J. McNeely.

(3) This is a final order of the Department of Energy of which any aggrieved party may seek judicial review pursuant to the provisions of 5 U.S.C. § 552a(g)(1). Judicial review may be sought in the district in which the requester resides or has a principal place of business, or in which the agency records are situated, or in the District of Columbia.
