Good afternoon Beverly,

It was a pleasure to speak with you earlier today on the phone. The application of re-exporting LNG is in IMO7/TVAC-ASME LNG Container (ISO Containers) only as stated. The reference to ocean going carrier is a term used in the standard container ship that moves on the ocean. We have no intention to export LNG from this facility in a LNG bulk carrier but will export only in ISO containers.

I hope this clears up the misunderstanding in the application language. If you have any additional questions please feel free to reach back out to me.

Have a great day,

Thank you,

Hi Greg:

As a follow up to my telephone call with you a few minutes ago, please clarify and confirm the mode of transport for the re-exports of LNG as IMO7/TVAC-ASME LNG containers (ISO containers) only, and not by bulk ocean-going carriers. Please also clarify that this is actually what Carib Energy proposes to use, and the mention of ocean-going carriers was an error in the application. You may provide any other additional information to confirm the question regarding mode of transportation.

You may clarify and confirm the mode of transporting the re-exports of LNG by response to this email, and we will proceed accordingly. Please let me know if you have any related questions, or would like to know the status, at any time. Thank you, again, and have great afternoon!

Hi Greg:

Thank you for bringing this to my attention. I indicated the wrong docket number in my email. The application for Carib Energy is Docket No. 21-99-LNG, not "101." I apologize for the mistake. Thanks again!

Good afternoon Beverly,

Our attorneys just notified me of the following and asked me to bring to your attention,

The date-stamped document we received in response to the electronic filing is 21-99-LNG. Our attorney also sent an overnight copy that included the sealed Appendix C. We want to make sure that DOE/FE has not assigned that overnight submission a separate docket number, 21-101-LNG. We assume that it should be the 21-99-LNG docket number for both?

Please let me know and thank you,
