General Comment

I strongly oppose the Saguaro Project due to its devastating environmental and ecological impacts.

The proposed gas pipeline through the Sierra de Chihuahua would severely disrupt one of the most biodiverse and ecologically sensitive areas in northern Mexico. This region is home to countless species—some endangered—that would face habitat destruction, displacement, and long-term ecological imbalance.

Furthermore, the project's offshore component would generate intense underwater noise pollution that poses a serious threat to marine life, especially the humpback whales of Baja California. These majestic creatures rely on the quiet, protected waters of this region to migrate, reproduce, and give birth. The noise and industrial activity caused by the pipeline would disturb their natural behaviors, potentially leading to long-term population decline and loss of critical breeding grounds.

We must prioritize environmental protection over short-term industrial gains. I urge the responsible authorities to cancel the Saguaro Project and instead invest in truly sustainable and community-supported energy alternatives.

Please protect our ecosystems, our wildlife, and the future of our natural heritage.
