General Comment

Of course the amount of money required could be used to obtain a different source of fuel and not gas that contributes to global warming. But it was obvious that they prefer to burn us all because they believe they will not pay the consequences not only for the frakin but also for the decrease in species that inhabit the region, destruction of the riverbed. Or are they still hunting whales? If they have so much time and intellectual resources to calculate that, why don't they use it for something less polluting? But of course they don't want such pollution on their beaches, so they move it to where they can dump garbage and where there's little they can do to reverse it. I hope that those who seek this do not have family, because they will have on their conscience to make things worse for their descendants. I wish you the best, hoping for a favorable response to the planet's needs. Thank you.
