General Comment

Depleting marine ecosystems (which are responsible for capturing carbon, providing a huge amount of resources, and hosting some of the most amazing landscapes) is not a sign of progress, but it certainly is a reflection of our detachment as inhabitants of the Earth. There must be intergenerational and environmental justice, and for that to happen we must avoid as much as we can, projects like saguaro: with lack of transparency, full of environmental disregard, displacement and exclusion. We have the chance of making better choices for the future, ones that can sustain for themselves and not depend on extractive, short-sighted development models that harm ecosystems and communities. THERE'S NO FUTURE WITHOUT A THRIVING OCEAN!!!
