General Comment

As a high school senior, I consider that this mega project brings with it a lot of cons, since it would not only affect the work of almost 40 million people and feed more than 100 million people, but it would also affect the attempt to conserve marine biodiversity, speaking specifically of the Pacific Ocean, better known as the world's aquarium. As a student I consider that this project would cause a great devaluation in the marine ecosystems and the lives of millions of people.
