General Comment

I respectfully and firmly reject the Saguaro project, as it poses a serious threat to one of the most beautiful and emblematic species that visits our country's coasts. This development endangers not only biodiversity, but also the delicate balance of marine ecosystems that have sustained local communities and natural life for generations.

The sea is not an empty resource to be exploited—it is a living, breathing territory that deserves protection. Any project that compromises its integrity must be reconsidered.

For the sake of the species we are meant to coexist with, for the health of our oceans, and for the dignity of future generations, I call for the cancellation of the Saguaro project.
